It seems very desirable that the good work, so well commenced, should not be allowed to languish for want of any effort on the part of God's people. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." S. C.

NEW YORK STATE TENT.

Dear Brethren and Sisters of the New York State Conference:—Our new tent is in new fields this season. Bro. Phelps and other brethren are at work preaching the gospel of the kingdom. Opposition on every hand. The Lord is blessing their labors. We must remember that these faithful laborers with the tent have families at home dependent upon them. Are we all doing our duty? Do we inquire after their wants? Let me say to you, as one who knows something about their wants, they are receiving but very little pay in these new fields. Let us all send to our Treasurer, R. C. Brown, So. Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., from one to ten dollars, so that we may have a fund to draw upon to keep those faithful men in the field. The Lord is soon coming.

Let us look well to the matter. Our tent enterprise must be well sustained. See to it, dear brethren, that we all do our duty in this respect. O that the Lord would help us to see the truth in these last days.

D. COGSWELL.

☞ IF Bro. I. C. Wellcome will come to Lyle Station, Mower Co., Minn., and inquire for Asahel Whitford, he will be gladly welcomed. We have a large school-house in which he could hold meetings, and we trust the Lord will open the hearts and purses of his hearers, so that he shall lack for nothing.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

WM. B. HERRON, Sec'y Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

LETTER FROM SR. C. TULLER.

Brethren and Sisters:—I again desire to tell you of the goodness of my heavenly Father, in giving me strength and sustaining me in my humble work. The school which I commenced in the spring, four miles from West Point, I closed two weeks since, to give time to pick berries and help on the farms during the busy season; and expect to commence again in a week, to continue five or six weeks, and then re-open at the Point. My effort at this place I trust will result in a little good. Had but fifteen scholars, but they are a bright, interesting class, and have felt blessed every day in teaching them. The Testament I always make a class book, soon as they can spell out words, and it is cheering to witness their interest and pleasure in learning to read the word of God, and in catching ideas so new to them. My little every-day sermons are listened to with earnest looks, and I still find it a delightful occupation to watch the development of mind in these poor folk, and a visible improvement in character and general deportment. I have had three young women, partially broken down by hard work, who have given me much comfort by their earnest effort. Six of my scholars lived too far to walk, so brought their food and cooked it in the school-room, and slept in a room adjoining mine. I love them all, and trust that my teaching will not cease with dull mortality, but beneath the evergreen bowers of paradise, with angel guides, hope to help lead them onward still, for even in that deathless world, there will be something to do. Labor will be doubly sweet, methinks, when weary frames shall be divested of disease and decay, and immortal youth become the inheritance of the believer in Christ.

The heat has become severe, but my school-house is of heavy logs, also my dwelling, and they keep out much of the heat. Besides, the water is pure, gushing from the crevices of a huge lime-stone rock, a never-failing fountain, cool and invigorating. These rocks and rills and woods and templed hills look very pleasant, but there is such a lack of moral and christian influence, that I should be lonely indeed if I did not feel that here is my "little corner." But God has here and there, I trust, some faithful witnesses. I lately listened to two discourses from a proscribed member of the Baptist Association, cast out for preaching open communion and fellowship with christians north or south, black or white. His words had in them the true ring, and for once since I have been in Ky., I was feasted.

Since my last communication to the Crisis, my heart has been deeply moved with gratitude and humility at the tokens of God's favor upon my weak efforts. You will all recollect that I came out last fall without any pledged salary. By the sale of books, and gifts of home friends, my needful expenses were met, both personal and for my school; and when I have really needed any help, some one's heart has been moved upon, and the aid has come. I can do all for myself and child that is needed, and help many a poor one, on a common teacher's salary. That paid by the American Missionary Association is $15 per month, and all expenses paid. Aside from board, I have now received equal to that. By doing my own work, and living frugally, the little sums received for tuition have helped, and I am comfortable. I have no homage to pay at the shrine of fashion, and no desire for expensive luxuries. All that I have, or receive, I endeavor to use in the fear of God, with his judgment in view. To be made an humble instrument of good to his poor, is my highest ambition.

The papers and tracts sent by friends are gradually performing their mission. As I go out to visit the colored people, I take them with me, and often give to white people; and I hope to feel still greater boldness. I took, a short time since, a quantity of tracts, and copies of the Young Pilgrim, and books, into a white Sabbath school; gave them to the preacher, and was most happily disappointed in seeing him distribute them. Rode eight miles the other day, and attended the burial of a child, and visited the home of one of my scholars. Had a good time in distributing tracts, and at the grave of the little one in reading the word and pointing that poor people to the gospel hope. As I came home, had sweet thoughts of the friends who sent the tracts. May their earnest prayers go with them, that some benighted wanderer may be guided to the light. For me too, friends, raise an earnest petition that I may be guided. I would not have you think that I claim to be doing great things, for I am not.

When I read of the great good being done by others, I feel very small, and ofttimes of no account in the vineyard. Yet the thought sometimes comes that Jesus uses humble instruments about his work, and may bless even me. Thus encouraged, I look up and try to keep heart. Earth is dark and dreary; but to the pure in heart a brighter day will dawn ere long.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—D. D. Reed, $10. Miles Grant, $5. A. M. Sunderland, Hyde Park, Mass., $10. A friend, New Britain, Ct., $2. Chas. Green, M. D. Phila., $1. Sr. Stokes, 25 cts. Bro. B——, 25 cts. Hope, $1.10. A friend in Mass., $2.50. Mrs. A. R. Mann, $1. E. S. Brigham, $2. Also, the Crisis weekly, the Christian monthly, Woman and her Work, and several packages of papers and tracts, on which I could find no names.

For the encouragement of those weak in faith, and who, like myself, are trying to lead a life of trust in the All Father, I would say, "Trust in the Lord, and do good." I was in need personally a little, and also to help two poor families. I was thinking of going home and selling books again, although I felt that I could do more good by staying here through the summer. So I told the Lord about it. Then the gifts came. I was overwhelmed. I did not expect such bounty. Now I can go on, teaching all that come, until fall, with or without their ten cents per week, which is all the tuition I take, from the best to do.

I especially ask prayers that I may have boldness to scatter the leaves you send here, and that I may so follow the guiding Spirit, as to be ready for every good word and work. O how I want to meet you all at Springfield, but may God grant that I may be found among you at the final gathering.

West Point, Ky., July 7th, 1871.

THE SECOND ADVENT.
L. BOUTELL.

The doctrine of the Lord's coming "the second time without sin unto salvation," seems to still have a charm in it with a certain class of individuals we find as we go from place to place with the Tent. And when the true light shines on the subject of this gospel of the soon coming kingdom, their heads are uplifted, knowing redemption is near. When the signs are given showing the Savior must soon come, they hope it is so, and joyfully welcome every Bible indication of its truthfulness; and it awakens in them a sweet, earnest anticipation that the glory will soon be revealed, with their eternal rest.

On the other hand, we find the multitude of christians, or professors of religion (so claimed), dislike the Bible message, and choose to hear nothing upon the subject, especially the when, and have a prejudice against the doctrine and those that proclaim it, closing every avenue to this heaven-revealed message. Is this dislike, this prejudice against this doctrine, or the manner of its advocacy? or has the time come when they will not endure sound doctrine? Has not the time come when the love of the greatest number has grown cold? Why is it that as soon as we believe the second coming of Jesus, and that then the unbelieving will be destroyed with everlasting destruction; while the righteous will be exalted to inherit the earth with eternal life,—why is it that as soon as we confess openly and freely that we are looking for "that very same Jesus," we are looked upon with suspicion and called "Second Adventists," passed by and disfellowshiped by the great body of "christians"? If all christians believe in the second coming of Christ our Savior, why this casting off and setting us aside? Is it not because we are looking for our coming Lord as other christians do not? Why is it that we have to build chapels, in which to worship the God of our fathers and call men to repentance? Why is it that we feel the necessity of spreading the canvas in places as many as possible, to blow the trump of alarm and cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," if the golden message was welcomed by the christian community?

We do not love to put our hands into our pockets to build chapels, and pitch tents, and run them, by thus making a sacrifice, better than others. But this crowning message with its relative truths must be told, and a place must be had to tell them. So we are compelled to this course, or give up the truth adapted to this generation, or these times. And for this reason they call us Second Advent believers, or "Second Adventists." The name I think appropriate, because we are looking for Jesus as other christians are not. It identifies us. Let us patiently wear it a little longer, and bear the reproach, and not say by it, "Stand off, I am holier than thou," but with a meekness that becomes the most meek, let us extend the heart and hand of charity to all the disciples of our blessed Master, and labor for the salvation of all men, working with all christians who will let us have a place among them, always rendering good for evil.

Let us, dear brethren, lift the standard high. Christ is coming! His advent is nigh. It is the very same Jesus. Do not be afraid of Bible argument for the time of his advent. I know the burned child dreads the fire, and our danger is that we shall neglect or think too little of the prophetic lines of prophecy. It is high time to awake out of sleep and cry, "Behold He cometh," bringing his reward with him; and I doubt not we shall preserve our identity and retain the approbation and smiles of Him whose coming we welcome, by saying, "We have waited for him"; and he will say, Come, good and faithful, enter the city, walk the streets of gold, the inheritance incorruptible and unfading is yours eternally.

THE MAINE MISSION TENT.

We closed our tent meetings at Buckfield Sunday evening, July 16th. We had meetings afternoons and evenings through the week, and all day on Sundays. Notwithstanding the meetings were held in the busy season of haying, they were well attended, and were marked with candor and interest to hear, and were orderly and quiet. The people treated us very kindly, and seemed glad to have us come among them with the tent. Several expressed their regret that the tent could not remain longer with them, though they did not agree with us in some things preached. Bro. J. A. Libby and others were with us and helped preach the word the last of the meetings.

Bro. Wellcome was at Buckfield with the tent some three years ago, I believe, and awakened an interest in the minds of some to hear on the truths we advocate. We trust the efforts made in Buckfield may prove a lasting benefit to some. May the Lord of the harvest bless the word spoken, that it may take root, spring up, and bear fruit unto everlasting life. A. W. TAYLOR.

Harrison, Me., July 24th, 1871.

BRO. S. TENNEY writes:—"I find some where I go who love the truth, but the mass 'care for none of these things.' There are a few good, faithful children here in Lewiston and in Auburn (Me.), who are loving Jesus, and are waiting for his return to take the kingdom and give us eternal life. Now and then one decides to leave the service of sin and Satan and serve Jesus. Praise his name. Truly it is the gleaning time."

Obituaries.

THOMAS. Died in Salem, Mass., August 4th, 1871, Mary Eliza Thomas, aged twenty-seven years, one month, and twenty-two days.

Her sufferings were severe, but the grace of God abounded, and her patience and resignation were remarkable.

Sr. Thomas leaves a husband and two little ones. May the God of all grace shield them, guide them, and save them in his kingdom.

Remarks by the writer from 1 Thess. 4: 13.

C. E. BARNES.

SLEEPER. Died in Springfield, July 12th, 1871, Bro. David Sleeper, aged ninety-two years.

Bro. Sleeper became a believer in Christ a number of years since. He has been a faithful soldier. In 1866 he heard a discourse on the second coming of Christ, and fell in love with the doctrine, and that of the sleep of the dead. A discourse was preached from John 11: 25, the text selected by the deceased.

J. C. MOORE.

PILLSBURY. Died in Springfield, N. H., July [illegible]th, of consumption, my wife, Susie M. Pillsbury.

We verily expect to meet her soon in the kingdom, if faithful; for during our union she has given the very best evidence of a faithful walk with God; and while storms have raged around, we have found her by our side to sympathize and advise. A funeral discourse by Bro. J. Young, from Rev. 14: 13.

J. P. PILLSBURY.

MCKEEN. Died in Stow, Me., March 22d, 1871, my father, Henry McKeen, Jr., aged fifty-seven years, three months, and sixteen days.

Seldom do we see one so resigned and so willing to depart as was our dear parent. May God comfort and sustain us in our bereavement. Words of comfort were spoken to the mourning circle by Eld. E. B. Pike, from Ps. 55: 22.

S. HOWARD.

VICKERY. Fell asleep in Jesus, at West Hartland, Martha Vickrey, wife of B. B. Vickery, aged thirty-three years and six days.

Sr. Vickery rests in hope of a glorious victory over death and the grave at the voice of the last trump.

N. J. SMITH.

TARBOX. Died in Saco, Me., April 27th, 1871, Diana Tarbox, aged forty-seven years.

She leaves a large circle of friends to mourn their loss, but she is at rest. Services by Wm. H. Mitchell.

A. P. HYDE.

BACON. Bro. Daniel Bacon fell asleep in Jesus, in the fifty-sixth year of his age.

Bro. B. died in hope of a resurrection to life when Jesus comes.

A. C. NEWELL.

MITCHELL. Died in Clarendon, D. Mitchell, aged forty-nine years.

Funeral services by the writer, A. C. NEWELL.

Married.

LORD—PINKHAM. In Boston, August 3d, 1871, by Eld. John G. Hook, at the residence of the bride's parents, Bro. CHARLES J. LORD and Sr. EDITH E. PINKHAM, both of Boston.

PARKINS—RICHARDS. In Boston, August 6th, 1871, by Eld. John G. Hook, Bro. THOMAS PARKINS, of England, and Sr. SARAH A. RICHARDS, of Boston.

Summary of News.

CHOLERA IN EUROPE—Its Ravages Extending. The London Times of July 21, says of the cholera plague:

"If we may credit the accounts we receive from every quarter, a terrible and subtle enemy is approaching our shores by an accustomed and well marked track. For some time past cholera has been ravaging Persia, where famine has contributed to nourish the pestilence. It has crept on slowly through the steppes of Southern Russia, until it has grasped Poland, and has made its appearance in a virulent form in the eastern provinces of Prussia. We are well acquainted with the history of all recorded epidemics of Asiatic cholera. They have never taken us unawares. They have always given warning of their death-dealing approach, and have allowed us ample time, if we chose, to set our house in order before their coming. In tropical Asia, among a teeming population to whom sanitary precautions are unknown, cholera has a permanent home. A correspondent, recently returned from India, called attention, a day or two ago, in our columns, to the state of things by which the disease is propagated in the East. In India there is no system of drainage, no purified water supply, except in the great cities. The germs of disease are never destroyed or removed; they are transferred by water or wind from one household to the other, and allowed to fester freely in the filthy, close and darkened habitations of the natives. When an unhealthy season causes a particularly virulent outbreak of cholera in India, the epidemic rapidly crosses the Himalayas, spreads among the nomad tribes of Central Asia, whose primitive habits do not tend to check the pestilence; makes its way steadily along the shores of the Caspian into Souther Russia, is nurtured among the miserable peasant population of that region, and finally penetrates, by way of Poland and Pomerania, into the heart of Western and civilized Europe.

This fatal drama has been repeated several times within the memory of the present generation. Four times we have seen the approach of cholera, by regular gradations, from the East; we have watched it coming upon us, and, until we were actually wrestling with the epidemic, we took no measures to avert the threatened devastation. Yet we know what a horrible scourge it is. The outbreak of 1848 carried off 56,000 lives; the milder epidemic of 1851, 20,000; the latest visitation, in 1866, was disastrously felt in all the pauperized quarters of the metropolis. Against such a danger as this it has been our practice to take no general precautions, although medical science, almost powerless to cope with the disease when it has once appeared, has demonstrated that its ravages can be absolutely averted, or, at all events, restricted within the narrowest limits, by most simple preventive measures.

A NEW ROLE FOR PRUSSIA.—Curious enough are the combinations of European politics at present. It is now considered almost certain that the Italian Government counts on the aid of Prussia in case France should make some effort to re-establish the temporal power. "Bismarck," says the Roman correspondent of a German paper, "convinced that there is no longer any need of a Catholic party, has cast aside the mask and now sustains the Italian pretensions. He will not consent to any entombing of Italy, of which power he wishes to avail himself as a perpetual menace against Austria. On the other hand, the Government of Victor Emanuel hopes, by Prussian alliance, to arrive at the possession of the Italian Tyrol and of Istria." So that France can hardly interfere in favor of the Pope, and Italy can disdainfully accuse the hated French of intrigue without fear of their vengeance.

ANTIPATHY TO THE JEWS.—The decree of M. Crémieux, in October last, when he naturalized all the Jews (his co-religionists) in the French colony of Algeria, has produced a great ferment there. The National Assembly has been petitioned to repeal the decree, and at Milianah the people have gone so far as to sign a protest by which they engage not to vote or present themselves at any election, local or general, so long as the Jews shall remain on the same footing of equality. The Arab populations are at the same time forming a league to establish everywhere native stores in which all Mussulmans will be forced to make their purchases, in order to complete the ruin of the Jewish traders.

HALIFAX, N.S. Aug. 1. The steamer Delta, from Bermuda, arrived last evening, bringing intelligence of a fire at Point a Petri, Guadaloupe, on the 18th ult. Nearly the whole town was destroyed, and thirty thousand persons left without shelter. The only buildings that escaped were a church, theatre, Tribunal buildings and a hospital. Many wharves were burned and the sugar ready for shipping destroyed. The fire commenced in the middle of the town, and the wind being very high, the flames spread in all directions. The town was rebuilt entirely of wood after its destruction by an earthquake in 1843. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

In Brief.

—— The Congregationalist says that "the announcement comes from Brazil that the prestige of Romanism in that country seems to be gone; the Government entertains kindly feelings toward Protestant missionaries, the people are eager for instruction, and the gospel is preached without opposition." ——Rev. Peter Cartwright, the veteran pioneer preacher, is confined to his rooms near Springfield, Ill., by sickness. His strength, it is feared, is failing rapidly.——M. Thiers has completely changed his mind concerning the transfer of the Assembly to Paris, and indicates that he thinks now it had better remain where it is.——There will be a full gathering of ambassadors to the Italian and the Papal Courts at Rome in November.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the camp-ground, beautifully located about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Saturday, August 19th, and continuing till August 28th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, August 27th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fares.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Albany $4.35, Pittsfield $2.35, Worcester $2.50. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, at Boston, Natick, South Framingham, Milford, Southville, Worcester, and the stations to Pittsfield. Also at North and South Adams, Cheshire, Chatham, Hudson, and Albany.

On the Hartford and New Haven R. R. fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Middletown, Hartford, Windsor Locks, and Thompsonville.

On the Conn. R. R. fare is reduced one third from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from August 10th to August 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the roads operated by the

comprising Vermont Central, Vermont and Canada, Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly, Montreal and Vermont Junction, Sullivan, Og. and Lake Champlain, Missisquoi, Rutland, Vt. Valley, Montreal and Plattsburgh, Whitehall and Plattsburgh Railroads, the friends will purchase regular tickets at the several stations, for the nearest point on the Conn. River Road to South Vernon or Greenfield, at which place they will be sure to go to the ticket office and get a CAMPMEETING ticket for Springfield, which they will present to the Secretary on the camp-ground to be countersigned; and they will then be furnished with a free return pass—good from South Vernon to the places they came from on any of the roads run by the Vermont Central Railroad.

On the Vt. and Mass. R. Road, Troy and Greenfield R. Road from Hoosac Tunnel, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield. At Greenfield they will go into the ticket office and call for Campmeeting Tickets for Springfield. All such when they go to the Secretary on the camp-ground to have their tickets countersigned, will be furnished with a free return pass from Greenfield to Athol, Fitchburg, or any place on the Vermont and Mass. R. R., or Troy and Greenfield R. R., that they may come from —provided twenty-five passengers shall have come over the Vt. and Mass. Rail Road to the meeting.

Passengers coming from North of South Vernon, unless provided with return tickets, should purchase only to South Vernon, and then purchase to Springfield and return. The same rule will apply also to passengers coming from East of, or in the vicinity of Greenfield.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R. Road, friends from Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.70 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. Passengers by this boat arrive in Springfield at 10.51 noon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed P. M. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the accommodation, which leaves New Haven at 8 A. M.; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the R. R. to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to the Secretary, or the camp-ground.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, 8½ and 9 A. M.; and at 3, 4½, and 9 P. M.

Arrangements with any other roads that may be made, will be noticed hereafter.

Tent Meeting in Suncook, N. H.

The Lord willing, the Mass. Advent Mission Tent will be pitched in Suncook Village, N. H., Wednesday, Aug. 9th. Meetings afternoons and evenings for eight days. We hope that the brethren and sisters in adjoining towns will make an effort to come out to this meeting, and help in the good work. Christ is soon coming, and we have but a little while longer to labor. Let us be in earnest to get the truth before the people.

LUTHER BOUTELL.

Maine Campmeeting.

The annual campmeeting at Pittsfield, Me., will be held in Hathorn's Grove, at Pittsfield, commencing Sept. 4th, and continue over the following Sabbath. This is a beautiful grove, about half a mile or less from the depot, in a quiet and orderly village. It is easy of access, and pleasant for situation. Everything will be done to make it a pleasant and profitable meeting. Provisions for boarding and housekeeping will be provided on the ground, at very moderate charges, and straw and boards for beds and tents will be on hand. The "Maine Mission Tent" will be in attendance, and afford shelter for sleeping purposes. All who can, bring family tents. There will be a good well, and pasturage for horses if desired.

This meeting has the sympathy and co-operation of the "State Conference," and represents the interests of the people that love Jesus and his coming. Now, brethren and sisters, arise, and come to this feast of tabernacles. Come with two points in mind: to get good, and to do good in the name of the Lord.

Tent-Meeting.

If the Lord will, the New Hampshire Mission tent will be pitched near Wells Beach, Me., on land of Charles Boston, the meeting to commence Sabbath, Aug. 27th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Brs. James G. Smith, W. H. Mitchell, Geo. W. Brown, and other able speakers, will be present to preach the word.

JAMES G. SMITH.
For the brethren, JOHN C. SHOREY.
DARIUS J. DOW.

P. S.—Will not the preaching brethren from the West and New York, who contemplate coming to the Springfield and Alton Bay campmeetings, arrange so as to spend the week between the two meetings with us at our tent meeting? Brethren coming from the West will take the 7.30 A. M. 12 M., and 3 o'clock trains, and stop at Wells Depot. Brethren coming from the East will understand what trains to take. Fare from Wells Depot to the tent, 75 cts.

D. J. DOW.

Tent Meetings.

The Iowa Mission Tent will be pitched, if the Lord will, as follows:—Tama City, Tama Co., Iowa, Aug. 17th, and over Lord's day. Bell Plain, Benton Co., Iowa, Aug. 23d, and over Lord's day. On the Little Cedar, ten miles northeast of Charles City, near Bro. Rowe's, Floyd Co., Iowa, Aug. 31st, and over Lord's day. C. C. Ramsey will be expected to attend these last two meetings.

THOS. S. W. DRUG, Missionary.

The Advent Christian Association.

This Society will hold its annual meeting at the Springfield camp-ground, commencing on Monday, Aug. 21st, at 4 o'clock P. M. Let every church send a delegate. None should forget the importance of the business to be done at these annual meetings. Every church is entitled to one delegate and one additional delegate for every twenty-five members above the number of fifty members. An assembly of worshipers, though few in numbers, constitutes a church.

H. F. CARPENTER, Secretary.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the A. C. A. will meet at the Springfield camp-ground on Monday, August 21st, at two o'clock P. M.

Notice about Tents.

For the benefit of those who have no tents, I would say there are ten or fifteen good new tents, twelve and fifteen feet when pitched, sufficient to accommodate ten or twelve persons, that can be hired through our meeting for $5 each, brought on to the ground Monday, Aug. 21st, and taken on the ground the following Monday by the owner. This will save the trouble of taking down and transporting away. The tents are made of the best thick drilling. Address me soon at Chicopee Falls, Mass., so that I may secure them, or a part of them. Those writing me on campmeeting matters, who expect answers, please send a stamp.

HIRAM MUNGER.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held at Springfield, on the National Advent camp-ground, commencing Thursday, Aug. 24th, at 9 o'clock A. M.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association are members of the A. A. M. Society.

Vermont Campmeeting.

After examining various localities, the committee have decided to locate our annual campmeeting once more upon the old ground of last year. We can find no other so beautiful and commodious as this, with such improvements as we can make. Good water can be supplied freely upon the ground, and board at 85 cts per day, at boarding tent. Those coming to this meeting can come over any R. R. controlled by the Vt. Central R. R. for fare one way. You will buy a regular ticket, and pay full fare to Bethel, and receive a free return pass from the camp committee. All trains will stop at Bethel, Vt., from which place teams are engaged to carry all passengers, with all their baggage of every description, to the ground, at 25 cts each; children under twelve, half price. Inquire for Wilson's teams, and go with no other. Bro. Wilson keeps the depot house at Bethel, and will entertain all who wish at low rates. Lodgings can be had in private houses on reasonable terms; but let all bring bedding, as these places may be full before you come. To enjoy the meeting most richly, every family should have a family tent. We want a Graham boarding tent upon the ground for ministers, invalids, and those who do not wish to become invalids. Who will volunteer to take charge of such an one? Write me at once.

Now, ye lovers of Jesus, and all others, come, from York State, New Hampshire, and from all parts of Vermont, and from far and near, to our annual feast at Bethel, Vt., to commence Sept. 2nd, and to continue till Sept. 11th. We are hoping that Bro. Couch, and others from abroad, will be present to help us.

H. F. CARPENTER, for the Committee.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so.

The campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 9th, and hold over the Sabbath, the 17th.

For the Committe, J. COUCH.

Notice.

Will our brethren who want lumber to build tents on the Alton Bay camp-ground, send in at once, that we may know how much to engage? Those wishing to locate tents, may address me at Farmington. Be sure and get your tents built before the meeting commences.

J. G. SMITH.

P. S. There are a number of good rooms, with good beds, near the camp-ground, to let for a dollar a day through the meeting, if any wish.

Board Tent.

For sale, at Alton Bay, one half of a double tenement house, next south of Strafford tent, containing two rooms, sleeping apartment up stairs large enough for two beds, with piazza and balcony. For particulars inquire of J. G. Burnham, No. 37 Friend street, Lynn, Mass.

Annual Meeting.

The Women's Christian Association will hold its annual meeting at Springfield, Mass., August 23d, 1871. It is desirable that all members of the Association should be present.

E. S. JENNINGS, President.

New York Conference.

The Lord willing, the next quarterly session of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held with the church at South Butler, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 7th, and holding over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all. It is hoped that every church will send delegates, and quarterly collections for conference fund. Teams will be in waiting at Savannah, four miles distant, on the direct road between Rochester and Syracuse. Take the 2.55 train from Rochester; no other in the P. M. stops. From Syracuse, take the express, about two o'clock, for Clyde, one station beyond, where you meet the other train which will bring you back. Please remember directions, and as far as possible come Thursday. Bro. W. J. Hobbs will give the opening address. Homes will be provided for all.

D. COGSWELL, Pres.
WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

Grove Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Mr. C. Moulton's grove, in Buxton Centre, Me., Sunday, Aug. 13th. The grove is only a few rods from the depot of the P. and R. railroad, and easy of access to all. A cordial invitation is extended to all God's saints in these regions to meet with us, and assist in the work of the Master. Come and help us.

E. S. MOULTON.

Conference.

The Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held at Frankfort, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Aug. 17th, at 7½ o'clock, and continue over the Sabbath. Ministers and people are invited to come and unite in this feast. Provision will be made for all who come.

For the brethren, F. A. BAKER.
J. RIDLEY.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a two days' meeting at the Card school-house, on Troupe' Creek, Steuben Co., N. Y., six miles above Knoxville, commencing Friday evening, August 11th, to continue over the Sabbath following. Preaching brethren and all others are cordially invited to come and help us. For the Bro.,

E. H. EGGLESTON.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Eastern District of Wisconsin will be held at Merrimack, Sauk Co., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 22nd, 1871, and hold over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general rally of ministers and members, not only to enjoy the feast, but to labor for the perishing. Friends from the adjoining districts are also cordially invited to meet with us.

GEO. THOMSON.

Notice.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched at Harrison Village, Wednesday, Aug. 9th, and remain over the following Sunday, and longer if thought best, and the Lord will. Meetings afternoons and evenings through the week, and three times Sunday. Bro. W. H. Mitchell will be present to assist in preaching the word.

A. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

I see, by my letters, some read the tent-notice wrong. Each one hiring a tent for $5, must put up their own tent. The man only delivers them on the ground Monday 21st, and takes them from the ground the following Monday. Perhaps I could hire them put up, or furnish a hand to help at a reasonable price.

H. MUNGER.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting, the Lord will, at Rawsonville, Vt., Aug. 19th, and hold over Sunday, the 20th. Eld. O. H. Fletcher is expected to be with us, with others, to preach the word. All that love the Lord are invited to come and labor for the salvation of our fellow men.

Z. T. WOOD.

Campmeeting at Belfast, Me.

The campmeeting proposed to be at Pittsfield, or Belfast, is appointed to be held one mile and a half north of Belfast, on the Swanville road, near the paper mill, commencing Aug. 28th. It is motioned and seconded, that we have an old-fashioned meeting, such as Bro. Grant says we used to enjoy twenty-eight years ago, when we knew no sect nor party, but were one in Christ, and had not left our first love. If this be the mind of all concerned and interested, far and near, to enjoy such a meeting, let them signify it by coming in the name of the Lord, committing all strife and contention to the fate of the chaff of the summer's threshing-floor, and bring an offering that shall be acceptable unto God, even the sacrifice of a broken and contrite spirit. Provision will be made as far as practicable to make the season one of gospel labor, rather than a place of merchandise. We expect a big tent for the accommodation of the meeting. All who possibly can will bring family tents, with bedding and provisions, as there will be no boarding tent on the ground. Arrangements are being made for the reduction of fare on the boats and cars from the different points of compass. Those coming on the Maine Central, from either point, will stop at Burnham, and take cars for Belfast. Come all as one, who love our Lord and his appearing.

W. COUSINS.
I. DAMMAN.
A. W. WALKER.

Grove Meeting.

The annual meeting of the church of God (called Adventists) will commence, the Lord willing, Thursday, August 31st, on the old ground, two miles and a half west of Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa., and continue over two Sundays. Friends from the east and west will leave the Atlantic and G. W. R. R., or Erie Railway, and Philadelphia and Erie R. R. at Union, Pa., and take the Union and Titusville R. R. to Lincolnville. Three trains leave Union and Titusville each way daily. Teams will be at Lincolnville on Saturdays to take friends to the ground; also at other times, by writing in time to the subscriber. Come, brethren and sisters, to the meeting, filled with the Spirit of God, and much prayer that the blessing of God may attend the meeting. Hearts, houses and barns open and free.

For the Committee,
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Notice.

By request of the friends in this section of the country, Bro. C. F. Sweet will commence a series of meetings in Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Thursday evening, Aug. 10th, and hold over the following Sunday. Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings following, at Hickory Corners. Thursday evening, Aug. 17th, at Sutton's Corners, about six miles southwest of Meadville, on the Great Western R. R. As Bro. Sweet has given me liberty to use another week of his time in this section, if there are any who desire his labors, they will please correspond with me at Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

WM. M. DARROW.

The R. I. and E. Ct. Campmeeting.

Brethren, our campmeeting this year will (D. V.) be held at Green Station, on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R. It will commence on September 2nd, 1871, and hold till the 9th inst. We shall be happy to meet the brethren from "all the neighborhood round about." Those who have tents, or can procure them, are requested to bring By arrangements made with the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. Company, "five persons at any station on their lines can buy a ten-passage ticket (i. e. a return ticket each) on which they might together go and return at 20 per cent less than regular rates."

For the camp committee. W. KELLAWAY.

Connecticut Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting in the beautiful grove occupied for that purpose last year, near Plainville, Ct., commencing Sept. 2nd, 1871, and holding till the 11th inst.

The fare is reduced one half on the N. H. and N. R. R., same as last year. Regular tickets must be bought to Plainville, and free return passes will be furnished on the camp-ground. The committee have been unable to effect a reduction of fare on the H. P. and F. R. R. Mr. T. F. Clark will convey passengers from Plainville to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. Provision will be made for those coming with horses. It is desirable that all who can, bring tents and bedding, especially the latter.

We shall endeavor to provide wholesome food for all who may wish, at reasonable rates, and trust that, together with our brethren and sisters, we may exercise sufficient faith in God, coupled with good works, to dispel the fear of financial embarrassment, which so cripples the religious enterprises of the day, that their votaries are withering from spiritual drouth, the result of too much anxiety for money, and too little knowledge of faith in God. The Lord is soon coming, and we feel the need of a higher standard of holiness, and the deep inwrought work of the Holy Spirit. Let us walk humbly before the Lord, making this meeting the subject of prayer, beseeching our heavenly Father to breathe the Holy Spirit upon the entire encampment, that wanderers may be reclaimed, and sinners converted.

B. HITCHCOCK,
GEO. L. WHITE,
WM. J. RIPLEY,
O. D. WOODRUFF,
} Committee.

Southern Wis. Campmeeting.

This campmeeting is to be held at Monticello, Wis., beginning Sept. 23d, and to hold over two Sundays, as Bro. Barber and others may arrange. Particulars in time.

G. G. GODFREY.
WM. SHELDON.

Tent Meeting.

A tent meeting will be held (as Bro. Thomson may arrange) at Arena, Wis., beginning Sept. 9th, to hold over two Sundays, and the intervening time.

WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

A grove and basket meeting will be held in Boscawen, N. H., where we had the fourth of July meeting, commencing Saturday, Aug. 12th, and holding over the Sabbath. Bro. C. W. Sargent, and others, will be with us to help preach the word. Come, brethren, and labor for sinners.

SIMEON ROBY.

The American Life and Advent Union Campmeeting.

This association of Advent believers will hold their annual campmeeting upon their new and beautiful ground in "Carew's Grove," at Springfield, Mass. (distant about one and one-fourth miles from the railway station), commencing Sunday, Aug. 13th, and continuing over Sunday, Aug. 20th. The campmeeting committee desire to say to the friends that nature has done much for our camping place. We have an area of six acres of fine, level, dry tenting-ground, dotted over with grand old trees, bestowing grateful shade. To these natural advantages, through the liberality of kind brethren, have been added all the accessories which thought could suggest as necessary to the comfort and convenience of all. Let all, then, far and near, from north and south, from east and west, turn aside from the dusty, weary way, and come in to this consecrated spot to rest and refresh awhile.

DEDICATION. The public services of the meeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 13th, at 1.30 A. M., at which time a dedicatory sermon will be preached by Geo. Storrs, of New York.

FARES. Fare on the Boston and Albany R. R. is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices between Boston and Worcester at Grantville, Holliston, Natic, Westboro, Milford, and Southville; beyond Worcester at the usual stations. On the Hartford and N. H. R. R. fare is reduced one third. Tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Middletown, Berlin, and New Britain, Hartford, Thompsonville, and Windsor Locks. On the Conn. River R. R. fare is reduced one third from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary of the campmeeting. Remember this. Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.70 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M. connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. Passengers by this boat arrive in Springfield at 10.51 P. M. The other boat which leaves New York at 11 P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the accommodation, which leaves New Haven at 8 A. M.; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the H. and N. H. R. R. Tickets for the R. R. to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket,* which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the campground. Omnibuses will be found in readiness at the Springfield depot to convey all to the ground. Fare 15 cents.

BOARD. Good board will be furnished at 80 cents per day. Those intending to board themselves will find a choice and constant supply of groceries, provisions and fruits for sale upon the ground at regular market rates.

T. B. WEAVER, Sec. of the Campmeeting Com.

* The confusion [illegible] in regard to return tickets by the boats, will not occur again.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon, otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

THE FIRST FRUITS.

Deut. 26: 2-10; 1 Cor. 15: 23.

Just as the Hebrew priest received
The first sheaf from the reaper's hand,
And to the Lord, whom they believed,
Offered the harvest of the land,
So Jesus, risen from the tomb,
Where love had laid him gently down,
Came to the altar, in the bloom
Of that new life which won his crown.

"Christ the first fruits!" the first ripe sheaf
Of the wide world's great harvest field;
The perfect pattern, type, and chief,
Of all the treasures death shall yield.
So let the precious seed be sown
In every furrow of the earth,
Beneath the seas, in graves unknown,
Till Christ shall send the reapers forth.

Lord of the living and the dead,
Who art alive forevermore,
Thy sleeping saints await their Head,
Like Mary at the open door.
They shall come with thee in that hour
When, without sin, thou com'st to save;
They shall be like thee, by thy power
To conquer death and spoil the grave.

Break, break, O morning fair and bright!
Wake all the sleepers of the tomb;
O sun of glory! with thy light
Flood the dark vale, dispel its gloom.
Wave thy ripe sheaf, O Prince of life,
In the great house not made with hands,
And at thine altar end the strife
With death and sorrow in all lands.

"Christ the first fruits!" and afterward
They that are Christ's when he shall come;
The best sheaf lifted heavenward,
Then the full garnered harvest-home.
Then shall our harvest-joy arise,
When all thy sheaves are safe at home,
Singing the hymn of paradise,
"Thy will is done!" "Thy kingdom come!"

SOCIETY UNDER THE SIXTH TRUMPET.

"And the rest of the men who were not killed by these plagues, repented not from the works of their hands, that they should not worship the demons, and the idols of gold, and silver, and copper, and stone, and wood, which can neither see, nor hear, nor walk; and they repented not out of their murders, nor out of their sorceries [or use of drugs], nor out of their fornication, nor out of their thefts."—Rev. 9: 20, 21.—Revised Text.

The apostle Paul assures us, that as time advances toward its conclusion, "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." 2 Tim. 3: 13. We have also repeatedly quoted his startling description of the "perilous times" which will come "in the last days." 2 Tim. 3: 1–5. Paul was not alone in these gloomy anticipations. Peter and Jude likewise speak of them. Nor were these statements without full warrant in the utterances of the Savior himself, who particularly and often admonished his disciples, that the gigantic iniquities and sensualities of the days of Noah and Lot would repeat themselves as the end approached, and that the judgments of the great day would be pre-eminently deserved by the generation then living. It would, hence, be strange, if, in the visions of those terrible adjudications, we were to find no corresponding notices of the bad state of morals then prevailing. And when such notices are found, as in the words before us, it would be contrary to the tenor of the Scriptures on the subject, to take them as mere poetic exaggerations, or as anything other than a literal and true portraiture of the world at that time. Taking the words, then, as they have been written for our learning, we here have an account of the moral state of mankind in the period of the sixth trumpet.

1. It is a period of abounding demon worship. What demons are, is to some extent an unsettled question. Justin Martyr, and some other Christian fathers, regarded them as the spirits of those giants who were born of the sons of God and the daughters of men in the days preceding the flood. John of Damascus considered them the fallen angels. According to Plutarch, Hesiod, as he himself, held demons to be "the spirits of mortals when separated from their earthly bodies." Zoroaster, Thales, Pythagoras, Plato, and the heathen authors generally, viewed them as spiritual beings, intermediate between supreme Deity and mortals, and mostly the souls of heroes and distinguished persons who had departed this life. Lucian makes his dialogist ask: What is man? Answer: A mortal god. And what is a god? Answer: An immortal man. This gives the common heathen doctrine on the subject. Philo says: "The souls of dead men are called demons." The account which demons themselves mostly give of themselves, according to those who have most to do with them, is the same. Josephus gives it as the orthodox Jewish opinion, that demons are none other than the spirits of the wicked dead. With very few exceptions, the Christian fathers were of like opinion. Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Tertullian, Origen, Augustine, and the vast majority of early Christian writers, regarded demons as the souls or spirits of the unsanctified dead. And the burden of evidence and authority is to the effect, that demons are the souls of dead men, particularly the spirits of those who bore a bad character in this life.[*]

It is acknowledged, both in Scripture and in the classics, that the "immortals" whom the heathen adored, were once men; and Paul assures us that the sacrifices of the Gentiles made to these "immortals," were sacrifices to demons, and that their sacred feasts were in honor of demons. 1 Cor. 10: 20, 21.[†] This would seem to give us scriptural authority for believing that demons are what the Jews and early Christians believed them to be. They are, at any rate, invisible spiritual beings, unholy in character, belonging to the kingdom of evil, and having a vicious and pernicious penchant to interfere in the affairs of mankind in the flesh. The Greeks often applied the name of demons to what they considered good spirits; but the Scriptures always use the word with reference to unclean and wicked spirits only. There is no such thing known in the Bible as a good demon. The Scriptures everywhere distinguish demons from "the devil" Satan; but our English translators continually call them "devils," a name which fitly describes them.

Among the Jews, in the Savior's time, these wicked spirits incorporated themselves between the soul and the nervous organism, getting possession of man's physical powers, measurably superseding the wills of those affected, so as to speak and act by means of human organs.

Among the Gentiles, many of the persons thus affected were accepted as inspired prophets and prophetesses; and it had become a regular science to know how to induce such connections with demonic powers, and how, at option, to bring their influence to bear, whether for religious or for secular purposes.

There always have been ways of coming into communication with these unclean spirits, of consulting them, and securing their aid. Hence the scriptural allusions to those who have familiar spirits, enchanters, wizards, witches, magicians, soothsayers, diviners, necromancers, and the like. Long before the time of Moses we read of consultations of the spirits of the dead, and the veneration of demons as helpers and guides, to whom it was the custom to resort. Special statutes were given against it in the laws of Moses, as great unfaithfulness and sin against God. The assumption all the way through is, that there was reality in what was pretended in these instances, and a very dangerous iniquity. The lying prophets whom Ahab followed to his ruin was really inspired by wicked spirits. Paul encountered a girl at Philippi, whose keepers got great gain from her extraordinary powers, resulting from being possessed of an evil spirit. He cast out the demon, and her peculiar power was gone, and Paul was thrust into prison for interfering with the men's business. This case explains the whole system of heathen oracles and mantology, as the heathen writers themselves explained it.

Modern spiritism, or so-called Spiritualism, is but a revival of the same thing—a branch of the same iniquity. There doubtless is some reality in it; and it is confessedly a system of intercourse with the dead, whose spirits are invoked in various forms and methods, to teach wisdom; to dictate faith, religion, and life; to comfort and help in trouble and necessity; and to serve as saviors and as gods. It is demon-worship brought to life again. It claims to have vast multitudes of adherents, even among the baptized and nominally christian. It is influencing whole communities of men and women, who are prepared to commit themselves body and soul, for time and eternity, into the care of these lying demon guides. It has made inroads upon people of all classes, and is received by many as a distinct and the only true religion. Its oracles are loud and hopeful in the prediction that it will soon enlist to itself the governments and reigning classes of the whole world. The word of God also forewarns that it will be vastly successful. "The Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils,[*] speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron, forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats." 1 Tim. 4: 1–3.[†] Instead of fearing, loving and trusting in God above all things, people will bestow their loving confidence upon unclean spirits, invoking them for guidance, and placing religious dependence in their impious falsities. Having no relish for the saving gospel of Christ, God will send them strong delusion that they may believe a lie, and be visited with the damnation their perverseness deserves. And at the time this sixth trumpet sounds the prevailing religion of the world will be this self-same worship of demons, and following of demons' doctrines.

In connection with this demon-worship will be the revival of idolatry. It is itself idolatry; but with it, idols of gold, and silver, and copper, and stone, and wood, which can neither see, nor hear, nor walk, will again command the genius of men for their construction, and be set up to please their demon-lords, to facilitate spiritual intercourse, and to help out the foul devotions of the infatuated people.

It may appear too disparaging to the understanding of this enlightened age to entertain the possibility of a return to the ancient worship of images. People may feel insulted at the thought. But the way for it is opening, and the process to effect it is already going on. The minds of anti-christian religionists everywhere are fast relapsing into the old heathenish philosophies, and I know not what is to hinder their acceptance of the religions with which those philosophies are conjoined. Modifications of them may be made to conform them somewhat to the requirements of an altered condition of the public mind and taste; but idol-worship will again become, as it even now becoming, the religion of some who claim to be among the most enlightened and the very illuminators of mankind. Socrates had his demon-guide, and Socrates approved idolatry; and if men accept the Socratic philosophy in preference to the religion of the Bible, and submit to be taught by demons as their most trust-worthy oracles, what is to prevent them from becoming philosophic idol-worshipers, especially if their spirit-friends should so dictate, and accompany those dictations with the power of working wonder? A little further on in this book we read of a "false prophet" who teaches the dwellers upon earth to make an image, to which he gives the power of utterance, so that it both speaks and causes all who refuse to worship it to be put to death. Rev. 13: 14–16.[‡]

All this is simply the culmination of the system already in vogue, showing a base, persecuting, and murderous idolatry, also the source and manner of its introduction. The symptoms and tendencies are even now strongly in this very direction. What is Planchette but a household god to many who resort to it as a means of spiritual communion, and speak to it, interrogate it, and reverently seek unto it for light, consolation, and guidance? What are the numerous and various inventions constructed and constructing to please the spirits, and meant to serve as material forms and instruments through which the demon-gods are to manifest themselves, and hold communion with their devotees? Is not much of the best science and mechanical skill of Spiritualists now employed in answer to spirit-bidding, fashioning implements for closer and easier commerce with these invisible powers? Do not such machines and images of gold, and silver, and copper, and stone, and wood, already exist? And are they not kept in devoted places as holy things, made the centres of circles of people gathered around them for intercourse with devils as with the world of hope and blessedness, consulted with pious affection, and guarded and revered with all the awe, and sometimes tearful devotion with which the ancient heathen approached the oracles and images of their gods? Only let all this grow and mature in the line in which it has begun and is growing, and bold image worship will soon live again in what claims to be the enlightened society of modern times, and men and women of boasted intelligence will everywhere be found paying their adorations at the shrines of devils, as to gods. And just this is one of the leading features of the time when the sixth trumpet sounds.

3. And corresponding with the heathen character of the dominant religion, will then be a heathen state of morals also.

Murder will be among the commonest of crimes. Sensual and selfish passion will make sad havoc of human life, with no serious thought about it on the part of the leaders of public sentiment. Fœticide, infanticide, homicide, and all forms of sin against human life, will characterize society, and be tolerated and passed as if no great harm were done. And well would it be for us, if such were not largely the state of things even now.

Sorceries, impure practices with evil agencies, and particularly with poisonous drugs, is also given as one of the dominant forms of vice and sin in those days. The word specially includes tampering with one's own or another's health, by means of drugs, potions, intoxications, and often with magical arts and incantations, the invocation of spiritual agencies, the putting under influences promotive of sins of impurity both bodily and spiritual. We have only to think of the use of alcoholic stimulants,[*] of opium, of tobacco, of the rage for cosmetics and medicaments to increase love attractions, of resorts to the pharmacopœia in connection with sensuality—or of the magical agents and treatments alleged to come from the spirit-world for the benefit of people in this—of the thousand impositions in the way of medicines and remedial agents, encouraging mankind to recklessness in transgression with the hope of easily repairing the damages of nature's penalties—of the growing prevalence of crime induced by these things, setting loose and stimulating to activity the vilest passions, which are eating out the moral sense of society—for the beginnings of that moral degeneracy to which the seer here alludes as characteristic of the period when the sixth trumpet is sounded.

And interlinked with these sorceries, and reacting the one on the other, will also be the general subversion of marriage and its laws, and the deluging of society with the sins of fornication and adultery. The apostle uses the word "fornication" alone, as embracing all forms of lewdness, but as if to intimate that marriage will then be hardly recognized any more. And already we hear the institution of legal wedlock denounced and condemned as tyrannical, and all rules, but those of affinity and desire, repudiated as unjust. Already, in some circles, we find the doctrines of free love put forth and defended in the name of right, a better religion, and a higher law. And it would be strange indeed, if the revival of the old heathen philosophies and religions, which justified, sanctioned, and sanctified promiscuous concubinage, did not also bring with it a revival of all these old heathen abominations. So also has the holy apostle written, that "in the last days . . . men shall be . . . incontinent." And here the seer enumerates "fornication" as one of the outstanding features in the social character of those times.

And last in the catalogue stands the statement of general and abounding dishonesty, the obliteration of moral distinctions, the disregard of others' rights, and the practice of fraud, theft, and deceit wherever it is possible. Pollock makes his ancient bard of earth tell of a time when ——"Blood trod upon the heels of blood;

Revenge, in desperate mood, at midnight met
Revenge; war brayed to war, deceit deceived
Deceit; lie cheated lie, and treachery
Mined under treachery, and perjury
Swore back to perjury, and blasphemy
Arose with hideous blasphemy, and curse
Loud answered curse; and drunkard, stumbling fell
O'er drunkard fallen; and husband husband met
Returning each from other's bed defiled;
Thief stole from thief, and robber on the way
Knocked robber down; and lewdness, violence,
And hate, met lewdness, violence and hate.
And mercy, weary with beseeching, had Retired behind the sword of justice, red
With ultimate and unrepenting wrath."

And that time, with just this condition of things, will have come, when this sixth trumpet sounds. We need not wonder, therefore, that it brings a plague of horror and judgment upon mankind, exceeding all that yet have been known.—Prophetic Times.

[*] Doctrines suggested by demons; doctrines engendered by the operation of evil spirits. The sense of this passage has been wrongly given by Mede and many others, in understanding the genitive as objective, as if it meant doctrines concerning demons. The true and only tenable exegesis is, not that men shall apostatize by accepting doctrines about demons, but that they will decline from the true mystery of godliness by taking into their confidence doctrines which demons teach.—See Wordsworth, Alford, Conybeare and Howson, etc.

[†] For an exposition of this text in its application to modern "Spiritualism," see Prophetic Times, vol. 2, pp. 158, 174, 185; vol. 3, pp. 14, 30, 46, 62, 75; vol. 5, p. 124. On the general subject, see the writer's monograph, entitled "The Wonderful Confederation." Epiphanius, as given and translated by Mede (p. 627), thus paraphrases the passage: "Some shall apostatize from the sound doctrine, giving heed to fables and doctrines of demons; for they shall be worshipers of dead men, as they were worshiped in Israel."

[‡] In describing these idols, in verse 20, John says that they "can neither see, nor hear, nor walk;" but he specially refrains from saying that they cannot speak or give out oracles; for here he tells us that [illegible] speak, so as to give intimation of the will of the gods who communicate through it. Grotius relates out of an ecclesiastical writer, that there was a statue of the notorious magician, Apollonius, which spake, being actuated by some assisted demon.

[*] Mathesius, Apocalypse Expounded, says: "It is remarkable that the sin of drunkenness is not among those here enumerated." He is entirely mistaken. The Greek word . . . directly embraces indulgence in intoxicating potions. It is a generic term including drunkenness among its leading species.

THEOLOGICAL ODDS AND ENDS.

GEO. THOMSON.

AN INFLATED IMMORTAL SOUL.

A preacher was recently called upon to attend the funeral of a little child in a neighborhood largely occupied with Advent believers. As is sometimes customary under similar circumstances, he felt it his duty to "pitch in" and annihilate the heresy. He asserted that "there were some superstitious enough to believe that the dead sleep in their graves until the resurrection"; but he adds—"There is not a passage of Scripture in the whole Bible that teaches so; and further, it is absurd to suppose that even the immortal soul of this little child, which is capable of expanding through all the universe, could be confided within this little coffin"!

THE LATEST OBJECTION TO IMMERSION.

A zealous advocate for sprinkling, or pouring, recently advanced the following objection to immersion: In the case of the eunuch, who went down into the water to be baptized by Philip—"It is not reasonable to suppose that the eunuch would go home with his wet clothes on"!

SINGULAR LOGIC.—Perhaps the following may be a hint to those who may be seeking evidence from the Bible to overthrow the Advent faith. The following advice was given by a friend to a person who was investigating the truths we advocate: "If you want to find evidence in the Bible against their views, you must not search or read the Bible with that object in view; if you do you will fail; but if you read your Bible without any intention or purpose of finding evidence against them, you will find plenty." The dear sister thus advised succeeded in finding an abundance of evidence, not to overthrow the truth, but to substantiate it, and is now rejoicing in it.

DETERMINED TO GO.—A vigorous opponent of the Bible doctrine that the saints "shall inherit the earth," notwithstanding the declaration of our Savior—"Whither I go, ye cannot come," evides his determination to go, by declaring that he has a warrantee deed for heaven. One brother very justly, I think, questions the validity of said deed, because it has not been recorded in heaven's record of deeds.

A WORK OF GRACE.

O. R. FASSETT.

God is signally blessing the people in this State (Minnesota). A little more than three years since, a young married man, Bradford Hall (a son of widow Hall, an Adventist, formerly from the East), came for me to this city (Minneapolis) to visit his town and preach to the people the Kingdom of God. At the time appointed, three years last March, I journeyed by railroad about twelve miles, to the then terminus of the Pacific R. R., western branch, where I found Bradford Hall, then an unconverted man, with two horses under saddle, one for himself, and one for me, to ride the distance of about fifteen miles to an evening appointment, at his residence. I found a room filled with an attentive audience, and at the close of my sermon some questions were asked designed to confound me; but, as the Lord would have it, they were answered to the confusion of the inquirers. Meetings were appointed for four successive evenings in the village of Rockford, a distance of three miles from Mr. Hall's, and though the roads were exceedingly bad, and the maple sugar season was in full progress, yet the brethren Hall conveyed by horses and sleigh their families each evening to that meeting. If you could have seen Bro. Fassett at that time, you would have found him in the sugar camp during the day, aiding in gathering sap in a sugar orchard of about six hundred trees, or keeping the fires to boil the sap, and preaching in the evening the word of life to the people.

Our first meeting was a success. Prejudice gave way, the eyes of the people were opened to see new and great truths in the Bible, and some decided to be christians, while others became willing to identify themselves with the Adventists in faith. Succeeding meetings at certain intervals have gathered a living and consistent church, in the town of Independence, first called "The Rockford," now "The Independence church." There has been from the start a state of revival, and the church has had an influence "sounding out" all through the region. I have visited there by way of the railroad, which is now completed through the town, or by private conveyance, sometimes riding with Bro. Alger, who has often conveyed me in his "go-cart" (a two-wheeled vehicle made of the two hind wheels of a lumber wagon, attached to an axle, with a seat set upon ox-bows for springs drawn by a small French pony. There ought to have been a photographer engaged to have taken the picture of Bro. Alger and the Advent preacher, with their rig "flying through the midst of heaven," with their great and glorious message of the coming kingdom of God!

Mrs. Fassett, who has been restored to health, in the providence of God, by her removal to this State, has assisted me of late to fill my numerous calls, and has had monthly appointments with this church, who have held meetings in a new neighborhood in the town, by request of the citizens. A glorious and blessed revival is now in progress, and has been for some time. The whole town feels the reformation, and converts are multiplied. Some of the chief men and women of the town have been converted to God, and the work of grace is reaching all classes, both old and young. On Saturday, May 20th, I preached to a large congregation gathered to hear a discourse on baptism, preparatory to the administration of that ordinance. To witness so large an audience, on a week-day, all leaving their secular occupations, in the midst of the spring work, to hear the word of God, and to witness the baptism, was evidence of the great religious interest which pervaded the community. There were double horse teams, mule and ox-teams, with wagons loaded with people. Men and women on horseback, and mothers with side-saddles, had their children astride the horse behind them, after the primitive style; and numbers on foot of both sexes and of all ages.

At the close of the sermon, we all repaired to Pioneer Creek, an outlet of Lake Independence, a most romantic, wild, and beautiful spot in the native forest, which was in its virgin foliage, where we buried in baptism into Christ seventeen happy souls. In this blessed company were four men and their wives, four men heads of families, and five young persons. This sacred spot was near the place where, the Saturday previous, my companion with others came near being killed, and the place made a Bochim. Bro. Mills had taken his wife and Mrs. Fassett and Sr. McKee, with others, to see a sick man at the point of death. On their return, they came to this creek to cross upon a bridge. The embankment being steep of descent, Sr. McKee and others walked down it, while Bro. Mills and wife and babe, and Mrs. Fassett, remained in the wagon. The strap holding the neck-yoke of one of the horses broke, and the wagon rushed upon the heels of the horses, frightening them, when they ran down the hill in one direction, and the wagon in another. The wagon was upset, precipitating those in it into the creek, among logs and trees, at the left of the bridge, and the horses loosed from the wagon rushed over the bridge, upon which Sr. McKee was crossing, who, not having time to cross, threw herself flat upon it, while the wild, furious, and frightened horses passed over her, with swinging neck-yoke and bounding whiffletrees. The whole party was providentially delivered by the angel, without a bone broken, or hair of their head harmed, save a few bruises received in the fall, a good bath in the creek, and the horses treading upon Sr. McKee's dress. These were two eventful Saturdays; and they were followed by a most lovely and beautiful Sunday, in every particular.

Another congregation convened on the Lord's day, at ten o'clock, to hear the word, larger than the day previous, in the midst of these forests. After the discourse, thirteen were received into the church, receiving the right hand of fellowship. The Lord's table was spread in the centre of the large schoolhouse, the stove being removed, and twenty-two sat down at the table, which being filled was repeated by another of the same number, making forty-four in all. It was a season never to be forgotten. The Lord was there. A second congregation convened at three o'clock P. M., when the Lord impressed hearts with deep conviction of the truth of his word, and of the guilt of sin and unbelief. The revival interest in Independence continues, and we hope it will until the whole region is blest with the refreshing from on high. There is great joy in that town. I wish all the churches could witness it, or have like refreshing in their midst.

CHRISTIANITY.

[illegible]

What will christianity do? It will love all, and do evil to none. At the same time it detests evil in all its forms, whether in the church or in the family. Christianity lifts a high standard, and lays a correct foundation for every man to build on. It takes men from the mire, all stained with guilt, and elevates them to the high position of nobility. It arrests men with tempers unrestrained, and makes them childlike and pleasant. It finds dishonest rogues, and teaches them to do as they would be done by. It will lead them never to contract bills when they have no means to pay them. It will not make christians show vinegar when called to settle an old account; neither will christianity make men rave and murmur when rebuked for their wicked works, or their inconsistent faith; it will take the evil spirit out of them.

This is the elevating work and the heavenlike attribute of christianity. O that it might abound in every church, and in every family. Yea, more than this, in every heart which professes to be christian. We are satisfied the day is not far distant that will test every man's foundation, whether he is built upon the rock, or on the sand.

Gems.

— He enjoyeth the sweetest liberty, that hath a quiet conscience.

— Silence is more safe than speech, when our enemies be the auditors.

— The things that be most scant to be gotten, are most dear of price; and things seldom spoken of, are most desired.

— The often repeating of our faults to ourselves in private, causeth more care in our actions in public.

— Write injuries in dust, but courtesies in marble.

— It is more commendation for a man to be silent, than to make repetition of his good deeds performed.

— It were better for a man openly to be hurt with his enemy's sword, than secretly to be wounded with evil speeches.

— There is no sufficient recompense for an unjust slander.

— These three chief points are necessarily belonging to a counsellor; to be bold, plain and faithful.

— To know well, and to do well, are the two points belonging to virtue.

— As golden pillars do shine upon the sockets of silver; so doth a fair face with a virtuous mind.

— As a ship, having a sure anchor, may lie safe in any place; so the mind that is ruled by perfect reason, is quiet everywhere.

— As the green leaves outwardly show that the tree is not dry inwardly; so good works openly testify the zeal of the heart inwardly.

— As after great storms the air is clear; so after the floods of repentant tears, the conscience is at quiet.

— Those that boast most, fail most; for deeds are silent.

— Sophistry is like a window-curtain; it pleases as an ornament, but its true use is to keep out the light.

— Many, like Ezekiel's hearers, with their mouth show much love, but their heart goeth after covetousness.

— Irritability urges us to take a step as much too soon, as sloth does too late.

— In the conduct of Christ, we see that we are never to go aside either to meet or to miss our cross.

— The fact that men have misinterpreted the Bible, is no more argument against it than the fact that men have misinterpreted nature is an argument against a true science.

— The devil, too often, persuades otherwise good people that "evil surmisings" are divine intuitions, supernatural revealments, semi-inspirations.

— If we are Israelites indeed, in whom is no guile, we shall be severe towards ourselves and candid towards others.

WHAT AILS THE EARTH?

The present year appears to be a good one for earthquakes. It was only the other day that New England was violently shaken up. Precise Portland and bombastic Boston were very much shocked, and the church bells were rung in Concord as they were rung a hundred years ago over a Boston massacre. A vessel picked up the same earthquake out at sea a month earlier and was toppled about by it like a toy.

Not within the memory of the "oldest inhabitant"—even the one hundred year-old gentlemen who shuffled off his almost immortal coil out in Kansas City, the other day—has there been such a year for convulsions of one sort or another. Far and wide the earth has been tottering; sulphurous cavities have broken out in peaceful mountain tops here and there, geysers have tipped their unfamiliar fountains under astonished skies, and simoons have swept away forests and desolated villages in every direction.

Hence the question very naturally arises, "What is the matter with the earth?" There is probably no danger of an immediate collapse of the planet; but it is evident that she is in one of her most vicious and unamiable moods. It is an established scientific theory that the earth is a hollow sphere—so hollow, indeed, that the crust is only some fifty miles thick, bearing about the same relation to the whole that an egg shell bears to an egg. We stand on a thin platform of granite and vegetation which we call soil, and under it seethes and roars and rages the vast internal molten ocean.

This crust has been often broken by its contraction under the constant cooling process to which it is subjected, throwing up islands, continents and mountains at the points of greatest resistance. It is now believed that an earthquake or a volcano at the surface is the signal of a storm on the rebellious sea of lava within; so that, as the planet cools and acquires greater solidity, these shocks will be less and less frequent, until at last they cease altogether. If the reader doubts the correctness of this theory he can make his own explanations.—Phila. Star.

WOLVES IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.

That is, appearing to be a harmless, innocent sheep, when in reality the character is wolfish, destructive, sanguinary. Parents should be on their guard as to the characters of the newspapers, magazines and books which come into their families, just as it is their duty to be on their guard to prevent unwholesome, decayed, or poisonous provisions from being placed on their tables.

However valuable and well conducted any publication may be in the main, if now and then articles are admitted which ridicule the Bible, its religion, its ministers, and its Sabbath, or call their truth in question, even indirectly, such publication should be banished from the house. Poison is not the less fatal because it is developed in sugar candy; the more able the publication is, the greater mischief it is capable of doing, if it uses the influence it has gained over its readers in a way to undermine their faith in the christian system. When that is done as to a daughter, it is but the taking hold of her hand to lead her into the street; and the average life of the street-walker is less than five years! When you undermine your son's faith in religion, he takes his first step towards the street, toward late hours, evil associations, the theater, the club-house, the billiard-room, and the card-table; then follow intemperance, disease, a squandered fortune, and an early death.

The influence of the daily papers of the largest cities, as a class, are antagonistic of Bible religion; the writers for them being, to too large an extent, young men of education from England and Ireland, who have thrown off parental restraints, and, in the ambition to rise in the new world, sacrifice on that altar virtue, temperance, honor, and religion.—Ex.

THE CHRISTIAN MINISTRY.

ALBERT S. BURNHAM.

The highest position on earth, in view of its usefulness, is to be really called of God to the work of the ministry. How great the honor. While the minister should be humble, let him magnify the office. If some think too much respect was demanded by them in the past, let them not go to the opposite extreme, and lower themselves in the eyes of others. Theirs is a glorious mission—the ambassadors of God. In the age in which we live, the people do not treat the ministry with the respect they should; even the people of God. If they are absent from the Sabbath service, without sufficient cause, it is not treating the Master, or his servant, with proper respect. If absent from the stated place of prayer, it injures the cause, and the feelings of the minister.

The preacher has great trials, more to bear than any of the people. He needs all the prayer and sympathy of the people. No people should pass a day without praying for their pastor; and pray while he is preaching. The people need often to be stirred up on these things. They do not mean to neglect them, but they do.

☞ No human sympathy is so deep and precious, and productive of so divine results, as that by which we enter into the fellowship of another's sufferings. So also they who drink of the cup that Christ drinks of, and are baptized with the baptism that he is baptized with, who enter with him into the holy fellowship of sorrow, shall enter with him into that secret inner fellowship which brings to the soul the sweetest, truest, and most abiding joys. O blessed Christ, admit us to the fellowship of thy sufferings, that thou mayest also receive us into the fellowship of thine unspeakable enjoyments.

☞ WHEN the last of the apostles went home to his rest, what a different world this was from that which they encountered when they passed through the gates of Jerusalem, and went down among the vast masses of humanity! They grandly vindicated the confidence of their Lord. They encountered hunger, nakedness, buffetings, and were treated as the offscouring of the world; but their rule is more lasting than dynasties or kingdoms, for it will endure forever.

☞ A SMALL congregation of serious hearers, who demand and expect weighty and well-considered instruction, is infinitely more useful to Christ's cause and the prospects of society than a mob of busy idlers, attracted by a crowd, who bring itching ears, and go away with the idea that the gospel and religion are not very serious or grave concerns after all.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

SECRET OF A WHOLESOME LIFE.

Under the heading, "Secret of a Wholesome Life," a writer in the Herald of Health says:—

I believe that the real secret of a healthful life is a temper quiet, cheerful, and serene. For one who possesses such a mind naturally avoids extremes, and is temperate in diet and all the habits of life. By living in the atmosphere of peace, which a quiet and contented mind always makes for itself, the constitution acquires a certain elasticity which enables it to throw off the pernicious effects of some bad habit, like the daily use of a harmful article of food or stimulant. Perhaps it might not be too much to say, that the constitution even acquires a certain strength by having some evil to resist, in the same way that a man who has a daily temptation acquires by its daily resistance a moral strength that is far more valuable than the virtue of that man who is never tempted and never needs to resist. . . .

Why is it that the state of vitality among the American people is so low that diseases, especially of the nerves, are so common, and that as a nation we are short-lived? Is it not because we are the most restless people on the face of the earth? And yet we never try to calm down this feverish restlessness, but rather encourage it. The little boys in our public schools are urged to greater diligence by being told that they may become Presidents of the United States some day. Our rich and glorious country holds in its hands so many prizes for all who will work for them, that our little children become ambitious, even before they know how to spell the word. So long as we educate them to be restless instead of quiet, and bring them up in this utter disregard of the one great fundamental law of health, can we expect that any amount of strict attention to lesser rules of diet and exercise will confer upon them this greatest of all earthly blessings?

NECESSARY RULES FOR SLEEP.

There is no fact more clearly established in the physiology of man than this, that the brain expends its energies and itself during the hours of wakefulness, and that these are recuperated during sleep. If the recuperation does not equal the expenditure, the brain withers—this is insanity. Thus it is that, in early English history, persons who were condemned to death by being prevented from sleeping, always died raving maniacs; thus it is also that those who are starved to death become insane; the brain is not nourished and they cannot sleep.

The practical influences are three: 1st. Those who think most, who do the most brain work, require the most sleep. 2nd. The time "saved" from necessary sleep is infallibly destructive to mind, body, and estate. 3d. Give yourself, your children, your servants, give all that are under you, the fullest amount of sleep they will take, by compelling them to go to bed at some regular, early hour, and to rise in the morning the moment they wake; and within a fortnight, Nature, with almost the regularity of the rising sun, will unloose the bonds of sleep the moment enough repose has been secured for the wants of the system. This is the only safe and efficient rule; and as to the question how much sleep any one requires, each must be a rule for himself—great Nature will never fail to write it out to the observer under the regulation just given.—Ex.

CHILBLAINS.—The remedy consists of a hot foot bath only; but the water must be as hot as can possibly be endured, and the feet, after having been kept in from fifteen to twenty minutes, must be immersed into cold water, to prevent catching cold. An instant relief will be experienced from the burning and itching sensation.

TO RELIEVE COUGHING.—The paroxysm of coughing may often be prevented or cured by using a little dry salt as a gargle. Let those who doubt, try it. It will relieve the tickling in the throat.

☞ PEOPLE are constantly rushing about in the hot sun complaining of headaches and giddiness, when all they need for safety and comfort is a wet handkerchief in the crown of the hat.

THE CONDUCTOR.

A. L. ADAMS.

DEAR CHILDREN:—Not long ago I was riding in the cars which run between New York and Philadelphia. A small boy came into the car in which I was sitting, singing out, "Apples, oranges, five cents apiece." A stout looking man arose, and took the boy's basket, without liberty or right, and tossed the contents about the car, some of the passengers greedily eating and pocketing the same. Now do you think that boy sat and cried when he saw his fruit going, and he not receiving any pay? No. He said, "I'll go and tell the conductor." And he went. The conductor came and pleaded the boy's case successfully. Several of the passengers were ready to take the boy's part, if the good conductor had not.

This little incident struck me forcibly as a good illustration of what all "big" as well as "little children" should do when in trouble. If you are abused and treated unkindly, you can tell your friends; they may help you; but you had better go directly to the Conductor. He will plead your case successfully. You may say, "We are not always on a train of cars, and it will be no easy thing to find a good conductor." True, we are not on the lightning express, or any other railroad train; but we are on a faster train—the train of life, and Jesus Christ is the conductor. Go to him, in prayer, if you would have your troubles attended to. The great Conductor says, "Him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out." This same Conductor took little children in his arms and blessed them, more than eighteen hundred years ago, and said "of such is the kingdom of heaven." Children, go to the Conductor if you would make a safe passage and reach heaven.

THE BOTTLE OF OIL.

Once upon a time there lived an old gentleman in a large house. He had servants and everything he wanted, yet he was not happy; and when things did not go as he wished, he was cross. At last his servants left him. Quite out of temper, he went to a neighbor with the story of his distresses.

"It seems to me," said the neighbor, "it would be well for you to oil yourself a little."

"To oil myself?"

"Yes, and I will explain. Some time ago one of the doors in my house creaked. Nobody therefore liked to go in or out by it. One day I oiled its hinges, and it has constantly been used by everybody since."

"Then you think I am like your creaking door," cried the old gentleman. "How do you want me to oil myself?"

"That's an easy matter," said the neighbor. "Go home and engage a servant, and when he does right praise him. If, on the contrary, he does something amiss, do not be cross; oil your voice and words with the oil of love."

The old gentleman went home, and no harsh or ugly word was heard in his house afterwards. Every family should have a bottle of this precious oil, for every family is liable to a creaking hinge in the shape of a fretful disposition, a cross temper, a harsh tone, or a fault-finding spirit.

NEVER LATE.

"How is it that you are never late at Sabbath school, Edwin?"

His Sabbath school began at a quarter before nine in the morning, and I concluded many of the children found it hard to be prompt, as they came straggling in all through the beginning exercises. Edwin never; he was always on time.

"How is it, Edwin?"

"Oh, I always plan to come," said Edwin. "I put the shine on my boots over night. I find my Bible, and question book, and library book, and put them together in a safe place beforehand. I brush and put on my Sabbath clothes before breakfast. So after breakfast and prayers I have nothing to do but just go to school, and I start in season to get there before the superintendent rings the school to order."

"And you don't lag by the way?"

"Never! said Edwin. "It is better to be five minutes too early than one too late."

Ah, boys, see how it helps one along to have a plan.

☞ A LITTLE BOY, more thoughtful than boys generally are, but not more so than they should be, on being tumbled into the mud by a comrade, was asked why he did not serve his abuser in the same manner, when he replied: "If I should, there would be two suits of clothes to clean."

☞ A YOUTH who starts out in life with an earnest determination to be honest, upright, faithful to all trusts, punctual, attentive, and, above all, God-fearing, has a promise of abundant success. Though he be without money, or wealthy friends, he will be sure to gain all that he most desires.

☞ LOOK out for the first stain, young friends. A single drop of ink seems a very small thing, yet dropped into a tumbler of clear, pure water, it blackens the whole.

ZION'S SOLDIERS.

The holy war is raging,
And the foe is gathering round,
To capture Zion's soldiers,
Or drive them from the ground.
CHORUS.—Don't you know that Zion's soldiers
Drop fairly from the mold,
And the more you melt them over,
The purer is the gold?

The alien army's moving
In terrible array,
With their swords of lying wonders,
They're bound to gain the day.

The foe steps quick and sprightly,
Like a spirit is their tramp;
But the roar of Judah's lion
Throws terror in the camp.

We see the shining armor
Of the soldiers in the field,
And the holy courage on their brow
Seems to say they will not yield.

We read upon their banners,
In words of living light,
That one can chase a thousand,
And two ten thousand fight.

THE END AT HAND.

JOHN COUCH.

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations; and then shall the end come."—MATT. 24: 14.

(Concluded.)

(3) Has that work been done? A class of Christian teachers have arisen within the last century, and presented arguments to prove that the predictions of the prophets, apostles, and Christ, have been fulfilled; showing that the end of the world is near, and the kingdom of God at hand.

The first one who proclaimed this message according to the Bible specifications, was Joseph Wolfe, in 1820. Irving, of London, began to preach the same in 1823, since which, many of different nations and classes have arisen, and proclaimed to the world that the divine tokens clearly show the pre-determined time is near, when earth's last king will take the reins of universal government, and extend his dominion "under the whole heavens."

This message and preaching fills every part of the prophetic mould; presenting every line of the foreshadowing picture. It comes at the very point designated upon the stream of time.

Four ships of state were to sail upon its waters, before the kingdom of God should appear. The Gentile ships were Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia, and Rome; after which, Heaven's Royal Ship appears, bearing Immanuel's kingly ensign, spangled with the constellation of glory, fluttering in the life-giving breezes from Mount Zion.

The nations under Babylonian rule could not be notified that the kingdom of God was near, to take the government out of their hands, for the Medo-Persian rulers were destined to do that work. Neither could the testimony be given to the Persians, or Grecians, that God's Son would claim and occupy the territory of their nations from henceforth. Nor yet on the Pagan Roman, or even Papal heads of Roman governments, would the notice be served; but on the governments succeeding the seventh head of papal dictation, which will be "partly strong, and partly broken," i. e., partly confederated, and partly antagonistic; for "in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom."

The seventh head of the papal power (France) was broken and dislodged from its dictatorial position in 1814, and the arbitrating political power of the world, since that time, has been exercised by the European Alliance, made up of the great powers of Rome: professedly allied, but who have been constantly plotting and scheming to override each other, and crush the aspiring members of the great confederacy.

Never were divine predictions more perfectly fulfilled, than have been the prophecies referred to, by these nations since 1815. Therefore it is plain, that the nations who have occupied the prophetic territory of earth for the last fifty years, are the very nations to whom the gospel of the kingdom is due. It is also a fact, that for that period of time, they have been hearing from the mouth of professed servants of Christ that "the time is fulfilled; the kingdom of God is at hand."

The arguments used have rested mainly on the predictions of Christ, which he himself called the gospel of the kingdom.

The preaching of this message has been signally approved by the manifestation of di-divine power, and the Holy Spirit. It has penetrated the hardest hearts, and corrected the most profligate lives. It has caused the atheist to confess his God, the infidel to accept Jesus, and the skeptic to receive the Bible as divine authority. It has lifted the gloom of earth from many a desponding heart, and presented near at hand a glorious morning of rest and eternal peace.

The typical picture has been duplicated, in all its minutiæ, on a grand and sublime scale.

John the Baptist, a Jew, introduced the first judgment message, and was followed by many others proclaiming the kingdom of heaven at hand. The second message was introduced by Joseph Wolfe, also a Jew, and he has been succeeded by others who have been, and still are, proclaiming the kingdom of hand.

The first proclamation was made to the Jewish nation, in which indubitable evidence was given, that the predicted time had come for the Messiah to make his first advent to this world. The second proclamation has been made "to all nations" that the time of the second advent has come.

The leaders who controlled the first nation did not receive the divine testimony, because they mystically interpreted the predictions relating to that coming; and consequently rejected the signs which God had given them, indicating the approach and presence of their Messiah. So have theological leaders of all the Gentile nations rejected the signs upon which the authority of this second message rests, by allegorizing the passages predicting the omens of Christ's second coming, and the end of the world.

The first message was received with much favor and sympathy at first, but when its tendencies and results were more fully known, it was rejected by nearly all, leaving but few true friends and advocates at its termination. So has it been with this proclamation in every nation and place where it has been published kindly and judiciously; it has drawn the great heart of the people after it; but invariably when the leaders have found that their previously established opinions were disproved, and their personal interests jeopardized, they have drawn the multitudes out in opposition, and left it with but few advocates.

The first was made disreputable because of the caste to which its teachers belonged. They were carpenters, fishermen, and plebians; therefore the higher classes would not follow their teachings, notwithstanding it was of divine origin.

How exactly has this feature of the picture been duplicated in this last proclamation. The arguments presenting the signs of the times which indicate Christ's speedy coming, are considered by the masses as unworthy their attention, because advocated and embraced by few, excepting the unlearned and lower classes. Many say, If the gospel age is about to end, why do not our most learned teachers understand and preach it? and because they do not, they consider themselves safe in making no preparation for the event. The same argument was used by the Jews, and fatally ensnared them.

The first proclamation was an unbroken series of sermons and addresses, showing from the fulfillment of the Scriptures, that the time had come for the Messiah to be manifested, their dispensation to end, and a more glorious one to be established. The specific work of those who have preached this message for the last fifty years, has been to show from the fulfillment of the prophecies the kingdom of heaven at hand.

The first testimony was given to the Jewish nation, presenting divine authority to show that their appointed national times were about to end, and entreating them to voluntarily yield the reins of government into the hands of God's royal heir. But they rejected the offer, for which cause he sent "his armies" and destroyed them nationally, "and burned up their city." The same witness has been given to the Gentile nations, and every one of them have rejected it, as the Jews did, upon the same principles, and by the same rules.

Is it not very remarkable that, having rejected all the signs of their times published to them in their message, they should be internally divided, exactly as the Jews were, and also fearfully anticipating a great war in which their national existence will be threatened?

There cannot be found in the annals of history such strife and universal threatening among factions parties, as has existed with all the nations for the last twenty-five years. Surely God's word is being fulfilled before our eyes in a most convincing manner.

The Jewish worship, among those who rejected the gospel of the kingdom, became uninteresting and irksome. Having lost the divine presence and approval, they lacked the attractive influence of holy devotion to draw them to the house of prayer; and to supply this deficiency they introduced financial speculations, and unlawful traffic, thus trying to induce the multitude to assemble around the sacred altar as of old. The Savior, to draw the last line of that part of the picture, came to the temple and "cast out all them that sold and bought, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves, and said unto them, It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves."

Jesus did and said these things in connection with pronouncing their national doom and the destruction of their city, giving as a reason, "Because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation."

The Jews did corrupt their worship, by associating with it wicked schemes for unlawful gains, while the gospel of the kingdom was being preached to them, and it was typically ended and destroyed by the Savior. The same manifestations must be expected during the preaching of the second message.

Have any such circumstances marked the last fifty years as differing from former times?

Forty years ago there was hardly such a thing known as church speculations, and financial schemes, in which articles were bought and sold in the house of God before the christian altar; but now such scenes have become very general and frequent, and are connected with worship.

How wonderfully striking is the likeness between the picture and its realities, although seperated by nearly eighteen hundred years. Surely God has surrounded this last message of gospel truth with many divinely appointed tests, and scriptural proofs of its heavenly origin and final triumphant fulfillment. It has made its circuit around the earth, witnessing to all nations, by incontrovertible proof, that their time to rule this world is nearly ended, and that a Prince of heavenly birth is about to take the universal throne and reign in righteousness forever.

The people of Europe, Africa, and America, have heard the assuring utterances that the end is at hand. The Orientals, far towards the sun-rising, Chinamen, and Japanese, have heard the startling sound of coming judgment.

Its heaven-commissioned messengers, pale with a sense of awful responsibility, have tremblingly gone forth from the shepherd's fold, the blacksmith's anvil, the statesman's hall, and the theologian's sanctum, unitedly to proclaim, in the name of the carpenter's son, a speedy change of earth and earthly scenes. Then Armageddon's battling legions shall sink beneath war's last reddened wave, and death's charnel-house open, as the sainted hosts come forth, clad in royal robes of heavenly splendor.

Its sweet tones of promise, and thundering notes of warning, have mingled, as they rolled through palace and temple, over snow-capped mountains and sunny plains, amid palm branches and olive groves, warning alike kings and slaves, thrilling the heart of this generation with glorious hope and terrible fear. It bears the seal of heaven's court, stamping the impress of divine assurance upon every righteous forehead.

O swift-winged angel, carrying the last message of mercy "to every nation and kindred," still mercifully hover over us, and send forth the mighty truth, "The hour of his judgment is come"!

O careless, heedless generation, warned of God through this last edition of divine truth, made clear and impressive by the power and wisdom of Jehovah, how will ye escape the coming judgments of God?

Hark! ye Bride of Jesus, has not your ear caught the sound, "Behold he cometh"? Then turn your eyes from earth's dark plague-spot, where wickedness and deadly blood-stains are ever before you. "Look up!" See the blue curtain over you. Wait its rending. Then shall you see the glorious face of your espoused Lord and Lover coming to embrace you; yes, coming to receive you unto himself. Then shall dawn upon this shaded earth an eternal Sabbath, when wearied ones shall rest together, and Immanuel's praise shall wake the golden harp to eternal melodies.

O, then, hasten thy returning, blessed Jesus; cut short thy tarrying, and speedily come to redeem thy tempted, hated, praying Bride. "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus."

L. BOUTELL.

It is lamentably true that there is a wide departure from holy living among all classes and sects of religionists, and some among them seem to be alarmed, and strongly desire to see a reformation commence with the return of that joy and peace in believing that is above all price. And they begin to weep between the porch and the altar, crying for help to bring about the desired result. Now the question arises, What can be done? The answer comes, We must be sanctified, set apart, seek entire consecration. This is right, and this we must have. But the important question is, How can we secure it? Heaven makes no claim upon us but what it makes ample provision for us to fulfill. And his word, by the agency of the Spirit, is the means of our justification, sanctification, and redemption. His sacred word is a sure guide to holiness, or sanctification. "Therefore being justified by faith." How justified? "By believing." Believing what? The word. "He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." "Without faith it is impossible to please him." So there must be living faith, or belief in Christ and his word, which is the first step towards sanctification. Jesus says, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." "And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they might be sanctified through the truth." John 17: 17, 19.

Again, John 15: 3—"Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken to you." Also 2 Thess. 2: 13—"Because God hath from the beginning chosen you through sanctification and belief of the truth." Many other quotations might be made of the same kind, all showing the simple process of justification and sanctification, or entire consecration, which is so necessary to salvation, and so desirable to give happiness here, and an assurance of life eternal in the world to come.

I know not how to expect sanctification, or consecration, by simply praying the Lord for it, without having a mind and heart to receive the word by believing it. I can conceive and well understand the principle, how a company of persons with any kind of religious belief can get together, and pray and labor till the affinity is such that all feel alike, because the same spirit predominates, and all are one, and they may be in harmony and in affinity with the word of God, or they may not. The spirit is to be tried. How tried? By the word of God. So in order to know whether we are sanctified by the Spirit, and that our assurance is saving and will insure life eternal at Christ's coming, it must be tried and tested by the written word of Christ. The sanctified soul will find itself in affinity with the word of God, without any effort to do so; consequently the truth, or word, is the means through which the end is obtained.

First, truth is presented by the Spirit, which always attends Christ's word rightly spoken, finding a hearing ear; if it is received and heartily believed, it brings a corresponding blessing, lifts the believer to a higher life, and he feels well blessed, and hungers and thirsts for more; seeks it at the same living fountain, the word of Christ; by faith, drinks another draught, is lifted higher still; thus, by the Spirit, truth presents itself, he grasps it with his whole heart, it elevates him, and he rises just as fast as his faith in the word of God increases; and when truth lifts him he stays lifted, the word abides in him, and he in the word. There is no condemnation, because while walking after the Spirit, he continues in obedience, growing in knowledge; and his works correspond with his faith and prayers. Joy unspeakable is his. Thus he is in a sanctified state. As Jesus says, "Now ye are clean through the word"; or, "seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth."

This, beloved, is the only way I know experimentally, philosophically, or biblically, of being sanctified, or set apart. There is self-denial in obeying the word of Christ, but it only sanctifies the faster. It kills a man to honor, the love of the world, ambition, pride, and all its bubbles; and brings him into sweet fellowship with Christ, so he can say, Thy will, not mine be done.

WHO IS THE BRANCH?

Zech. 6: 12-13.

HE SHALL RULE, AND BE A PRIEST ON HIS THRONE

J. B. COOK.

The context names Joshua. The careless reader may confine the application to Joshua, but the Bible answer, in view of the whole subject, leads to the greater than Joshua—Jesus the Messiah. The proof seems plain and positive on this point.

First, Joshua is not named as "the branch," nor can he be referred to in this connection in several texts where "the branch" is noted. Furthermore, Joshua had not a throne; because "the diadem" had been taken off, and the throne of David removed about one hundred years before (Ezek. 21: 25-27); and cannot be restored till it shall be taken by Christ, the King immortal, the Branch from the roots of the stem of Jesse, in the royal line of David. Isa. 11: 1. The Bible "branch" being one quite beyond Joshua and his time, and "the throne" of prophecy belonging to the Messiah alone, we cannot confine these terms to Joshua with any consistency.

Second. "The Branch" is the special designation of the coming King, who shall sit on David's throne, of which throne he is the only heir. Hence the throne and THE BRANCH, and the rule on his throne, and the lofty titles of king and priest, are the terms appropriated, through the Bible, as the actual belongings of the Lord Jesus Christ. But these prophetic terms are never appropriately and connectedly applied to Joshua, or others, who may have borne some official and typical position in forming this pictured prophecy of the great King who shall sit and rule on his throne.

Three leading prophets give "the branch" as the shoot from David's withered root, or of Jesse, his honored father. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous BRANCH, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute justice and judgment in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is THE NAME whereby he shall be called—the Lord our Righteousness. Jer. 23: 5-6. This is repeated. Jer. 33: 15-16. "And there shall come forth a rod from the stem of Jesse [David's father], and a BRANCH shall grow out of his roots." The rod of judgment he shall hold, and the blessing of covenant promise he shall dispense. Isa. 11: 1-10. "Hear now, O Joshua, . . . thou and thy fellows, . . . behold, I will bring forth my servant, THE BRANCH." Zech. 3: 8.

Here we have four witnesses to prove that we give the right answer to the question, "Who is the Branch"? It is Christ. Amen. The name and work of Joshua, however honored, cannot exalt him to the "rule" or "name" of Christ. Ps. 72 presents the king, David, and the king's son, Solomon, primarily, verse 1. Yet the Psalm belongs to David's Lord, the greater than Solomon. Amen. Thus we demonstrate and illustrate our answer, that "the branch, the throne, the priest, and the rule on the throne," apply beyond Joshua to our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

WHAT SHALL WE THINK?

E. M. RIPLEY.

How often we hear the expression, "As a man thinketh, so is he." The expression is derived from Prov. 27: 7, and reads: "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." It is a passage often quoted by a certain class of superficial thinkers, who are dogmatical in argument, ignorant of logic, and who attempt to maintain their positions, when (to use a common term) they are whipped—"Well, as a man thinketh, so is he." And off he starts with the air of one that must think as he does, if he is damned for it. Such men are "one-idea men," marked by limited perceptiveness, and a great degree of positiveness. It is true, however, that after due investigation and deliberation on a given subject, our opinion must be governed by the result of such investigation; but never should we assume positive opinion on a disputed question, previous to a proper inquiry into the matter.

Some say, "We cannot help our belief." It would be better to say, I can believe no different with my present knowledge of the matter. And for this reason, man is progressive in his nature; and as his mental capacities mature and enlarge, his comprehension of finite, or revealed matters of the Infinite, will be complete; hence he is better able to form definite conclusions. There are men who say the earth is not spherical, but flat, and they rest their conclusion upon the evidence of the external sense; but it would produce a smile if such a person should assert that he had investigated the matter.

Why should we be dogmatical, when a fellow-man approaches us in sincerity with an argument, that assumes we are in the wrong? Am I more than mortal, that I should claim superior judgment above my fellows? Nay. Then in view of our mutual finite condition, we are bound to listen with respect, and decide with candor, on all questions of debate. There are facts that are not debateable, self-evident, as the existence of God, the certainty of death, etc. Neither is it to be supposed that a question already settled is open to debate, unless some new evidence can be adduced to overthrow it; and then the weight of evidence rests on the attacking party. How much man loves his own opinion. And yet he is but a worm of the dust, dependent for all he has, and helpless, without a helper. But of all men, the christian should be the first to set the example of careful investigation, prior to a positive expression of his opinion. And if such must differ in their conclusion, let them exhibit the spirit of Christ in their differences, and not assume that all others are wrong because they reach a different conclusion than their own.

Observation teaches us that mankind cannot think alike on all questions; the reason of which is evident; for truths are elicited only by patient searching and controversy. Hence the differences of opinion should only incite to careful study. A great cause of the infidel tendency of the present is this lack of patient inquiry, combined with the desire to have it so; that they may corrupt their ways on earth without fear of judgment. It is the offspring of superficial thought, and evil desire of the heart. Then let us be careful in our decisions, and not condemn hastily, or credit rashly that which is to us new. Let our thoughts be governed by sound judgment, based upon correct principle, and witnessed to by a clear conscience; remembering the while that He who said, "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts" (Isa. 55: 9), has promised wisdom to them that look for it on high.

How precious is truth! how carefully and diligently ought we to search for it. It is of more value than gold; yea, than fine gold, and it abideth forever. It entereth into judgment: "For he cometh to judge the earth; he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth." Ps. 96: 13. "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." John 17: 17. "In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my soul." Ps. 94: 19.

FAITH.

M. J. P. GILBERT.

What is saving faith? This is a very important question, and much depends on a right understanding of the term; for the apostle Paul says, "Without faith it is impossible to please God." All belief is not saving faith; and as we are to be saved through faith—"For by grace are ye saved, through faith" (Eph. 2: 8),—then it must be of great importance to every one of us to rightly understand all that is implied in the term saving faith. Now let us look at some things that are called faith, yet are not saving faith. Simply to believe a thing or person has, does or will exist, is not saving faith. For example: to believe that George Washington or Gen. Grant have existed, or do exist, or that Queen Victoria reigns, or her son will reign; this may be acknowledged, but is not saving faith. We may also believe there is a God, and yet not have saving faith, for devils believe this, and tremble. James 2: 19. To believe that Jesus once lived, and was crucified, is not saving faith. Nor is it saving faith to believe that Jesus was the Son of God; for we see in Matt. 8: 29 that the devils recognized and acknowledged him to be the Son of God, to whom they must bow. Neither is a belief in baptism or a resurrection from the dead, nor yet in a restitution; in fact, a belief in the whole Bible is not sufficient to save us. Yet we are to be saved through faith.

The question, then, will naturally arise, What must we believe in order to be saved? Ans. It is necessary to believe all that you understand of Bible teachings; yet, a mere belief in it all is not saving faith. Now let us see if we can find out what is required. What is true and saving faith? Heb. 11: 1 says: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen"; in other words, faith is confidence in the evidences of things hoped for, and yet not seen. Now mark; a confidence in the evidences of things not seen is not saving faith, for the important words "hoped for" are left out. Then we see we are not only to have confidence in evidences that there is a God, and that God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life; and that Jesus died and rose again for our justification, and will come again to restore all things spoken of by the mouth of all his holy prophets; I say, we are not only to have confidence in the evidences that these things are true, but we are to hope for them. We are to both believe and hope. We believe many things that we do not hope for.

Hope is made up of expectation and desire. A prisoner may believe and expect to be taken out of prison at a certain hour and executed; but he does not hope for it, because he does not desire it. Again, he may desire to be taken out and liberated, but does not hope for it, because he has no evidence to believe or expect it. But suppose abundant evidence is brought to him that he has been pardoned, and is to be taken out at a stated hour; then he expects and desires; now he hopes. We will suppose again this prisoner's liberation depends, first on acknowledging the pardon to apply to himself. Second, to show his faith in it by getting up and going out when the doors are thrown open, and commence his labors and duties like a freeman. No one would expect to have to argue or plead with him to induce him to accept of liberty on these terms. If he hesitated, he would be thought insane. Now in this we see faith and true confidence. As sinners, we must apply the pardon to our own case; accept it, get right up and act upon it, just as a prisoner would. We must accept of pardon for our own personal transgressions, and have confidence in, and hope for, salvation through Christ as recorded in the Bible.

Faith, then, is confidence in the evidences, and hope for the event. This faith must work by love. We must not only believe there is a God, and he will do all he has promised, but we must love to have it so. Some will say, How can I love God? I will answer by an illustration. Suppose you had never heard of George Washington, or Abraham Lincoln, until to-day. You now hear men talking about them, how much they love them for the good they have done, the nobleness and kindness of their characters. You would not ask, as you do of God, How can I, too, love these men? No, no. You would say, Who are these men? where can I find a record of their acts and characters? Give me the book. As you read, you would look around and see tangible evidences that these men have existed in the liberty, law and privileges of our own free America, although perverted from its original simplicity and purity. You need not ask yourself if you love these men, as you read and hear of their self-sacrificing acts, their love of mercy, as well as of justice. Your swelling heart will tell you that you love and admire them. Ask the southern freedman if he loves Abraham Lincoln; and although utterance may be choked, his dancing, swimming eyes, his glowing face, shining teeth, and agitated form, tell more than words could tell how deeply and fervently he loves the man he never saw. Why is this? O, it is because he believes the record, and loves to have it so. He grasped at the least shadow of evidence that this man was working out his liberty. He received and acted upon it without pleading or argument; but what would you have thought of one of these slaves that still hugged his chains, and groaned, and sweat, and died, because he would not believe the proclamation of freedom was for him? You would say he ought to suffer and die. In so saying, dear friend, you have passed sentence upon yourself. This is exactly your case.

Now I ask you, in the light of this illustration, do you love God? and have you faith? 1 John 5: 9-11—"If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater; for this is the witness of God, which he hath testified of his Son. He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life." A moment's reflection will bring us to feel the truth brought to view in this scripture. We often find ourselves inclined to believe many things spoken by men, concerning the things of this world, with but little evidence, when we love to have it so. This shows how much capacity, or ability we have to believe. Then why are we so unbelieving about things spoken by God? There can be but two reasons: either because we do not understand aright, or because we do not love the truth. Now if we love not the truth, when understood, it is because we have pleasure in unrighteousness, and love that better. This is a fearful thing, for God says he will send a strong delusion, that they may believe a lie, that they all may be damned. 2 Thess. 2nd chap. Such are lost because they receive not the love of the truth.

Again, a belief and love of the truth will produce a character corresponding with the truth, and it is written in Rom. 8: 9, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his"; and in Gal. 5: 22, 23, "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."

As I finished writing these last words, my hand involuntarily drew back, and I cried out, "My God! who then can be saved of the present generation? As I get a view of the character which the combination of these qualities would form, I look around, and ask, Where is it to be found in these days? The only answer I get is, it rests upon every individual to settle this question alone with his God, and each one should ask himself the question, Do I love the Lord? Is love to my fellow-beings the moving motive of all my acts and words? Does joy and peace expressed in word and look cheer all around me? Does my long-suffering and gentleness with the tardy and slow reprove the impatient, and win some to Christ? Does goodness comfort and bless the suffering and needy around me, as far as it is in my power to do for them, and thereby recommend the religion I possess? and does my faith raise me far above the level of what is now called christian society, above the object and aim of worldlings? Do I prove by daily walk, business and conversation that my treasure is not here, but like Abraham I am looking for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God? Do I look to the Bible in all trials and dangers for a promise on which to lean, and feel in my heart that I know that "all things work together for good" to me, because I "love God"; and thereby find that peace "which passeth all understanding"? In meekness, do I bear contradiction and reproach; and when reviled revile not again, but say, Father, forgive them? Do I, by my temperate habits in all things at home and abroad, set an example worthy of imitation? such an example as I should like to see my children and friends follow? and above all, that I should look back upon with pleasure, as I view its effects from the high and unerring stand-point of the eternal state, when the effect of my influence for weal or woe has terminated? Now, friends, let us be true to ourselves, and true to our God, for we have but little time to correct errors. Time is short; a mistake now will be fatal.

THE BOOK OF REVELATION.

J. B. CLARK.

Some have supposed this book sealed, but this is not true. The first verse reads—"The Revelation of Jesus Chris." to his servants. Verse 3—"Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein, for the time is at hand." How are we to keep the things written therein, if this is a sealed book, and we cannot understand it?

The scenes of this book are all located upon this earth; it illustrates the living action of the actor by bold and vivid scenery. The wisdom of the Almighty has disclosed the scenes of this book with solemn, yet beautifully wrought drapery.

The book of Revelation is not only interesting in its symbolical and mystical descriptions, natural scenery, and figurative language, but it is rich in truth, and the communication of events then hid under the vail of futurity, and would only be unfolded to the natural visions of men many ages to come.

John has written this book after the laws of nature; that is, he has copied after some of the richest scenes in nature's laws. In his illustrations he speaks of the beauties of nature, the lustre of colors, the brilliant retinues of shining angels, and the sound of mighty waters, and the mighty warriors with their gleaming weapons and blood-stained banners, the tramp of armies, and the rush of victors. Wonderful things are revealed in this book. It is the book for these times; and if you will carefully read this book, and learn the meaning of its symbols and figurative language, your heart will bound with joy, and your eyes will be astonished in beholding the mighty scenes that are transpiring, and in viewing the near proximity of the last great day. How important the era in which we live. What vast and important events must soon be realized.

This book is full of light and truth. Yet many who profess to be wise—the leaders of the people—will tell you this is a sealed book, and cannot be understood. The book of Revelation brings to view a glorious time to come, when "The skies no more shall lower with storm,

Nor darkness gather hideous form,
But all shall be as bright as morn,
And Jesus reigns, all to adorn.

HONOR FROM GOD.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

There is a wily foe, that, like a concealed serpent, is often near the pilgrim, and often causes darkness and barrenness, where there seemed to be large promise of light and fruitfulness. This foe is called the love of praise. It inclines us to seek the applause of men, and leads us to "receive honor one of another." Then faith is wrecked, purity sullied, progress hindered, and darkness and doubt fill the heart, where love and light should reign; and that because we do not "seek that honor that cometh from God only." Those who seek the praise of men, rather than the praise of God, are usually found to be ashamed of Jesus. I will try to give you an illustration.

During the progress of the late war, a soldier professed to be earnestly engaged in the work of preparation for the final day, and the letters received from him by his pious mother were a source of encouragement and consolation to her. She fondly believed that her son was indeed a christian. For some time after his return, at the close of the war, she still cherished this belief. The Bible and religious books seemed to be his choice, and he was constant in his attendance upon public worship, and in many respects he appeared to "run well for a season." But evil influences were at work, and among these we count the love of applause. His Bible was turned so as not to show its title to those who looked at the shelf where it was kept, and religious books received the same treatment. He was apparently ashamed to have his dissolute comrades know that he took an interest in the doctrines and precepts of the Bible, and he preferred the applause of man rather than favor of God. He was evidently ashamed of Jesus.

Is this the case with any who read this sketch? Are you ashamed of Jesus? Are you afraid of the reproach and scorn of your associates? Do you feel embarrassed when seen by them with the Bible in your hand? Reflect. You must not only "crucify the flesh, with its affections and lusts," but you must also bear the scorn of the world, renounce its favor and its praise, and be satisfied with "the honor that cometh from God." The reproach and contempt of the world, together with its vain applause, is but for a little while, and will soon be gone forever. But if you obtain honor from God, you will also have "glory, honor, immortality, eternal life." This is the glory that never fades, and the honor that can never be tarnished.

NO TIME TO WASTE.

I. C. McINTOSH.

As we near the close of probation, how precious does the time seem to us. Every day, every hour, seems involved with new and unspeakable interest and importance. No one, who views these things aright, can sleep over the subject. A flood of light is thrown upon prophecy, and shines with a bright radiance upon our pathway. If ever a people were thoroughly warned, we are that people. For many years light has been steadily increasing, and now we realize that probation is about to a close.

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 16, 1871.

☞ Please Remember!
☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Take Notice!
☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable in Advance, at the rate of $2.00 a year.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Campmeetings are about to be held in all of the New England States, throughout which there are many subscribers to the Crisis, who are owing for the same—some largely in arrears. We purpose to have an Agent at the several meetings to receive the dues on the paper, as also to receive the names of new subscribers. And we do earnestly request those who are owing to make a special effort to pay at these meetings. Those who do not go themselves, will please send a portion, at least, of what they owe, by some one of their friends who may be going, and thus do your duty in this matter, and help the office. At any rate, let every one owing for the Crisis for one, two, three, or more years, do something without any further delay.

THE S. N. A. CAMPMEETING.
Vermont Central R. Road.
FARE REDUCED.

Our friends living on the line of the roads operated by this company, will see by reference to our notice in another column in this paper, that this year they have an opportunity to attend our meeting at a less rate than ever before. Let there be a general rally of the friends in Vermont, Northern New York, the Canadas, etc.

THE CRISIS.

As there is a large amount due the Crisis, we hope our Brn. and Srs. will arrange to pay up as soon as convenient. It will be a good time to do so at the campmeeting. What is due for the Crisis is as truly and honestly so as for any other object received. We need the money, for our bills must be paid. The paper maker will not give us the paper, the printers, compositors, and others who labor in preparing it cannot afford to give their labor. We think the readers will enjoy their paper better when it is paid for in advance. We very well know that some are not able to pay when the subscription is due, on account of unexpected expenses for sickness, or other things. We do not wish to worry them, or crowd such in the least. Do the best you can.

As we approach the great day of the Lord, we hope to be able to make "our paper" still more interesting and useful to every reader. Continue to pray for us, that we may have special wisdom and strength to do all to the glory of God.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

The time is drawing near when our great annual gathering at Springfield is to begin. It will be a meeting of great importance to us as a people. Let each christian who attends, do what he can to make it the most profitable of all our annual gatherings. Let those who cannot be present, remember the meeting by special prayer, that it may result in the salvation of many sinners, and the reclaiming of many backsliders. Let us all make this the special object of the meeting. If we do, great blessings will fall upon us from the Most High, and we shall go away refreshed in the Lord, and better prepared for his coming and kingdom. This is the time for earnest work; and without it we cannot expect to see much accomplished. If only one is saved as the result of the meeting, it will pay for all the trouble and expense attending the whole encampment.

Dear reader, should you be there, will you try to persuade at least one to come to Jesus? How blessed it will be to find even one in the kingdom, who was persuaded to be a christian by your feeble efforts. But few have any idea how much influence they may exert in persuading others to come to Jesus, till they make an effort. Let us all begin anew, and entreat the Lord to help us to win souls to Christ. Probationary time is nearly ended, and soon we must be present in the judgment scene. Will the King say, "Well done?"

Let this campmeeting have a special place in our daily prayers, that it may be the means of giving a new zeal and earnestness to all who may attend, and that every preacher may go forth from that great gathering to do more than ever, if possible, to save men from destruction. Let this be the burden of our prayers, Lord, fit us to work in the vineyard; to do thy will in all things, and to keep "unspotted from the world." Let us consecrate ourselves anew to the Lord before we go to the meeting; so that when we get there we shall be ready to enter at once into the work of trying to save others. Again we entreat every professed follower of Jesus, who is interested in the National Campmeeting, to make it a subject of special prayer, that it may accomplish more good than any other meeting ever held by those looking for the coming of Jesus. The dear Savior is able and willing to make it the best, if we will co-operate with him. Let us forsake all that that will tend to prevent such a glorious result.

THE NEW BOOK, proposed at our National Conference in 1869, is in press, and will be out soon. We have some expectation that it may be ready for the National Campmeeting. It is hoped this will be just such a book as every friend of Christ will love to read, and that it may be scattered very widely.

HOW TO ENJOY A CAMPMEETING.

It often happens that persons go to campmeeting expecting to receive great benefit, but go home sadly disappointed. Why is this? It may not be because the meeting was not good, but because they neglected to do what was necessary in order to secure a blessing. Those who attend campmeetings expecting to receive good without taking an active part in the prayer and conference meetings, will generally go away feeling more leanness than when they came. It is a poor place to act the part of a spectator, if one wishes to get spiritual strength.

If one wishes to enjoy a campmeeting, and the same is true of other meetings, he should take the earliest opportunity to express his sympathy with Jesus by taking a part in some prayer and conference meeting. It is well for each one to select some tent in which to attend the daily prayer-meetings, instead of floating where it happens.

Another important matter that should have special attention, is secret prayer. It often happens that this is most sadly neglected at campmeetings. Let no day begin or end without it. One should have the courage to bow down in the tent where he spends the night, and have a sweet season of prayerful communion with the Lord before retiring. We do not see how a professed child of the Lord can think of doing less than this. We think they must be in a starving condition when they do not this much.

PREPARATION FOR CAMPMEETING.—Those who have never been to campmeeting, and purpose to attend this year, may be glad to receive advice in relation to what they will need for their comfort.

Bring one or two bed-quilts, a warm shawl, rubbers, pillow, or a pillow-case which can be filled with straw or leaves; wear plain clothing that is not too good for a seat on the straw; bring towels, soap, comb and brush; and each tent's company will probably need hammer and nails, some twine, looking-glass, matches, lantern, lamps; and if they can bring an axe, spade, augers and a crow-bar, they will find them useful in pitching their tents. Leave family and business cares all at home; bring abundance of long-suffering, kindness, forbearance, brotherly love, and love for Jesus and his coming. When a company of such meet on the camp-ground they will have a precious feast in the Lord, and sinners beholding them, will wish they were christians.

FAMILY PRAYER.—Besides the secret prayer of every christian on the camp-ground, there should be family prayer in every tent. This is often sadly neglected at campmeeting. None but those who attend to this know its value. This year we hope every tent will have an altar. We go to campmeeting for the express purpose of receiving spiritual strength and comfort. Shall we be less particular than at home? There is a special need of cultivating our devotional feelings. If prayer is neglected, we soon grow cold and indifferent, and lose our interest for the salvation of others, and of ourselves. Spiritual consumption takes place, and death soon follows. If such come to campmeeting, let them apply in prayer for the healing balm, and begin anew in the service of the Lord. Think of the worth of "eternal life." None can afford to lose it. Let us secure that first.

☞ COME EARLY to the National Campmeeting, if you would get the greatest benefit. The first Sabbath is usually a very pleasant one. We are expecting a precious meeting this year. Keep praying for it, that it may surpass all others in good results. Let us meet for no other object but to worship the God of heaven, and to consecrate all to him through Jesus Christ our Lord; to be his now and for ever.

TENT-MASTERS.—Every tent should appoint a tent-master to look after the welfare of the tent, and the interests of those who occupy it, and to see that the devotional exercises receive proper attention. No tent should be without a family altar. Let every professor of religion, who attends the campmeetings this year, go there expressly to worship the Lord of hosts, and to do all the good possible. The Lord is coming, and it is time we were all ready for "the marriage of the Lamb."

CONVEYANCE TO CAMP-GROUND.—Those who go to the National Campmeeting at Springfield, and wish to be carried to the ground, will inquire at the depot for Collins' campmeeting team, as usual. Fare ten cts.; common trunk ten cts.; smaller baggage free. There will be a team at the depot on the arrival of the noon train on Thursday, Aug. 17th.

NEWBURY.

The meeting in Newbury, Vt., commencing Tuesday evening, Aug. 1st, and closing Aug. 6th, resulted in much good. We held meetings in four places: the Methodist church, Seminary Hall, Ox Bow school house, and the R. R. depot, in the large woodshed. All the meetings were seasons of special interest to those present. Several requested prayers, backsliders returned to Christ, saints were greatly strengthened, and led to seek the perfect love that casteth out all fear.

The subject of holiness met a hearty response in many hearts. The most devoted are beginning to feel deeply that they must consecrate all to Christ in order to be ready to meet him. We found a number who were truly hungering and thirsting after righteousness; expressing a willingness to trust all in the hands of Jesus, now and forever. Brethren and sisters came quite a distance to the meeting, to help worship the God of our fathers. We left a very interesting feeling in the community. A prayer-meeting was appointed at the Ox Bow school house for the next evening. We shall look for good news from Newbury.

THE FAST.—We earnestly request all interested in the great gathering at Springfield, to remember Friday, August 18th, as a day of fasting and prayer. Dear brethren and sisters, is it not time for all who are looking for the coming of Jesus to be more awake on this subject, and to be more entirely consecrated to the Lord, if we expect to be ready for "the marriage supper of the Lamb"? Let us be in earnest.

APPOINTMENTS.—As our paper will go to press earlier campmeeting week, it will be necessary for all to send their appointments so that we can get them by Saturday, Aug. 19th.

CERTIFICATES FOR DELEGATES.

It is necessary that the delegates from the churches* to the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, to be held at the National Campmeeting, in Springfield, should bring certificates showing that they were duly appointed. The following form will answer:

This is to certify that ——— was duly appointed by the church in ——— as a delegate to the annual meeting of the A. C. A., to be held on the National Campground, in Springfield, Mass., Aug. 21st, 1871.

[To be signed by the Elders, Clerk, or deacons of the church, or Chairman of the meeting called to appoint the delegates.]

This matter of choosing delegates should be attended to at once, in order that those appointed may have time to make suitable arrangements to be present. Every church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every fifty members over the first twenty-five. Let every church be fully represented.

* A church is understood to be any number of christians who meet together for the worship of the Lord.

A FIRE.—Bro. J. K. McLean, editor of the Rutland Independent, had his house burnt Wednesday night, July 26th. Besides the house, he lost most of his beds, bedding, clothing, provisions, table and kitchen furniture. During our late visit at Rutland, we found a pleasant home in his family. The fire (without doubt) was the work of an incendiary. Bro. McLean's paper is a large, well-conducted weekly. He has had the courage to speak against the glaring sins of society, which are leading men to destruction. Had he been willing to bow to iniquity, he might have remained in his quiet home. In his notice of the disaster he says: "We have pluck left yet; and so, we shall prick and begin anew, in nothing terrified by our adversaries."

NEW TRACTS.

Just published by the A. C. P. Society, Symbolization of the World's Eventful Crisis, by O. R. FASSETT.

An excellent tract of 16 pages, showing that we are living amid the events occurring under the opening of the "sixth seal"; that "we are witnessing them, and are far down in their history, and close upon the end of this world and the solemn judgment scenes."

Price, single, 2 cts.; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail.

"THE TWO-HORNED BEAST."
A TRACT OF 12 PAGES.

Being a new and interesting exposition of Rev. 13: 11. By Eld. John Couch. Price 2 cents single; postage 2 cts.; 15 cts. per dozen; $1.00 per hundred.

"THE END AT HAND."
A TRACT OF 24 PAGES.

Showing that the "Gospel of the kingdom" has been "preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations"; and that the end of this dispensation is at hand, and the Lord about to appear in his glory. By Eld. John Couch. Just the thing to scatter by the thousands. Let it have a wide circulation. Price single, 3 cents; postage 2 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $2.00 per hundred by mail.

THE ADVOCATE OF HOLINESS.—We take pleasure in recommending to our readers "The Advocate of Christian Holiness," published at No. 3 Cornhill, Boston. Price 75 cts. a year. It is "a monthly, exclusively devoted to the spread of primitive Christianity." It is edited by Bro. W. McDonald, and should be in the hands of every friend of Jesus. It is "under the auspices of the National Association for the promotion of holiness." It is filled with valuable reading, well adapted to lead the church to seek purity of heart, without which she will not be ready to meet our coming King. Each number contains a choice piece of music. This monthly and the "Guide to Holiness" we consider the best two monthlies we have ever seen.

CHRISTIAN PERFECTION.—Those who wish to read a cheap treatise on the subject of Christian perfection, will find Wesley's "Plain account of Christian Perfection" a most excellent work. It can be obtained in tract form, price ten cents, postage two cents. For sale at this office. He presents the subject in a very clear and practical manner. He was evidently raised up specially to live, write, and preach the doctrine of holiness. We recommend all who desire to live the "higher life" to read the work above named.

"THE HERALD OF SALVATION" is the title of a new monthly magazine, edited and published by Bro. W. Kellaway, Fairhaven, Mass. Price $1. We welcome the Herald of Salvation as an unsectarian magazine, filled with wholesome food for the friends of Jesus.

"GEAR'S ILLUSTRATED ADVOCATE" is the title of a new monthly, just issued at 56, 58, 60 and 62 Sudbury Street, Boston. It is for the special benefit of manufacturers and purchasers of machinery. One dollar a year.

ARE THERE TWO HEAVENS?

The Scriptures so clearly prohibit an entrance of man into heaven, the antitype of the most holy place, where Christ is officiating as the antitype of the High Priest, the claim is sometimes made that there are two departments to heaven, represented by the two departments in the old tabernacle arrangement, as "the [common] priests went always into the first tabernacle, ... but into the second went the high priest alone once every year" (Heb. 9: 6, 7); and it is supposed that these prohibitions against entering heaven simply deny an entrance into the department occupied by Christ, as antitypical High Priest, leaving us full liberty to enter the other department of heaven. Two facts negate this claim:

1. The antitypical holy place, to which Christ has gone to officiate as High Priest, is "heaven itself" (Heb. 9: 24), instead of being merely one department of heaven.

2. In the type, there were not only two tabernacle departments, but also two classes of priests to officiate in them; the ordinary priests to officiate in the first department, called the "worldly sanctuary," and the high priests to officiate in the second department, called the "most holy place."

Having learned that "heaven itself" is the department prefigured by the holy place, where the antitypical High Priest has gone to officiate, some other realm must be foreshadowed by the typical department, called the "worldly sanctuary," where the antitype of the ordinary priests may be found; because (1) no part of heaven can answer to a "worldly sanctuary," and (2) Christ is the only priest officiating there.

When we allow the "worldly sanctuary" to typify the church of Christ in this world, all is plain; for Peter speaks of christians as "an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices," and also styles them "a royal priesthood" (1 Pet. 2: 5, 9). Here we find the antitype of the "worldly sanctuary," containing its antitypical ordinary priests, while the High Priest officiates in the most holy place, which is "heaven itself," and is inaccessible to man.

These considerations not only negate the modern theory of entering heaven at death, but also show the incorrectness of the supposition that Enoch and Elijah may be in one corner of heaven somewhere, though not where Christ is officiating. The statement, "No man hath ascended up to heaven but the Son of man which is in heaven," shows that wherever Enoch and Elijah may be at the present time, they are not in heaven, though they were conveyed through the atmospheric heaven when translated to some realm, for some purpose unexplained.

We are sometimes inquired of, if our view of the holy place would not shut the angels out of heaven? Certainly not, for angels were allowed in the type, there being no law against their entrance, and there were "the cherubims of glory overshadowing the mercy-seat"—a species of angels—expressive of the fact that these cherubims had a real existence in the realm here typified, which is "heaven itself," which "no man can approach unto." But soon the High Priest will come out, and pronounce upon us the blessing of "life evermore," and receive us unto himself.

NOTES ON PROPHECY.—No. 7.
EZEKIEL'S PROPHECY.

God saw fit to impress the mind of Ezekiel with the wonderful ravages of death, by causing him to look upon a "valley which was full of bones"; and to awaken in his mind the thought of the future life, by raising the question, "Can these bones live?" Human wisdom would have given a negative reply. Nevertheless, God proceeded to show the prophet how he could do seeming impossibilities by miraculously transforming those lifeless bones into an army of living men, by bringing bone to his bone, by placing sinews and flesh upon them, and infusing the breath of life into them. Then the prophet is commanded to utter this thrilling prophecy: "Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and you shall live." Ezek. 37: 1–14.

Thus the material forms of the sleeping saints are to be quickened into life, and "they shall not be hurt of the second death," but live on through the cycles of coming eternity. Nor can the force of this prophecy be broken by the claim that the resurrection here described is figurative, for God would not have used the resurrection as a figure, if the doctrine of the resurrection had no existence. Besides, the resurrection is here given to explain a figure—the valley of bones. Figures are not explained by figures.

W. S.

THE SEVEN DEACONS.

We often hear remarks about the "seven deacons," among whom Stephen and Philip are mentioned. Though this claim has passed current for many years, we boldly deny that the Bible mentions a word about "seven deacons," or speaks of Stephen or Philip as being deacons in the church. Out of this incorrect theory has grown two incorrect impressions:

1. It has been supposed by various denominations that as these "seven men" served tables, that it is the duty of deacons in the church to serve at the Lord's table; hence, the incorrect practice of sending the deacons around with the bread and wine.

2. Others, like the Episcopalians and Methodists, supposing that these "seven men were so many deacons, and observing that Philip, one of their number, both preached and baptized, have come to the conclusion that deacons are an order of preachers. When the fact is made apparent that these men were not deacons, the argument for the service of deacons at the celebration of the Lord's Supper, and the argument for the order of ministerial deacons, both lose their force. What are the facts? The record reads: "In those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables. Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word." Acts 6: 1–4. Then the seven were chosen.

1. They are not called deacons in this record, nor elsewhere in the Bible.

2. They were not chosen to serve at the celebration of the Lord's Supper, but "in the daily ministration," where "they had all things common"—in a colony; and no reference is made to the Lord's Supper, for the apostles pronounced it unreasonable that they should "serve tables," which can not refer to the Lord's table; nor is the Lord's Supper a "daily ministration." These "seven men" were appointed "over this business," serving breakfast tables, dinner tables, and supper tables for that colony. If serving at a dinner table constitutes a man a church deacon, I fail to understand it. Though Philip served tables, he also preached; but that does not make a deacon a preacher, for there is no proof that Philip was a deacon. Where, then, is the proof that deacons were appointed to serve at the Lord's table, or that they were a class of preachers?

W. S.

TOO MUCH PROOF.—When we present the strong proof that the New Earth, instead of a sky-kingdom, is the promised home of the saints, we are often met with the claim that we cannot know about what is in reserve for the faithful, as it is said—"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Cor. 2: 9. Thus by an effort to prove that none yet understand what "God hath prepared for them that love him," proof is unwittingly adduced that none have yet experienced it, for "eye hath not seen" it, and "ear hath not heard" it, nor has it been realized by "the heart of man,"—all of which would be untrue if heaven is the promised home, and already the abode of millions of saints. This is too much proof for our opponents to bring. It disproves a present residence in heaven, and fails to prove that we cannot understand what things God hath prepared for us, for the next verse reads: "God hath revealed them unto us."

GLOUCESTER, MASS.

Our third tent-meeting, under the direction of the Advent Mission Board, was pitched July 15th. We found but few who were in sympathy with our faith, or with our effort to get the gospel of the kingdom before the people. When I arrived, Bro. Morrill had the tent up, and in partial readiness for the meeting. At the time of the first service, there were a few believers, with quite a company of children, which made up the congregation. We commenced with the children, and soon made them feel at home with us under the tent, and they soon brought their parents with them. The interest and congregations soon began to increase, specially in the evening. We had meetings every afternoon and evening while we stayed, with as many as six meetings Sundays. With Bro. Morrill, we did the best we could to enlighten and instruct in the all-important plan of redemption, not shunning to declare the coming of our Lord, with the signs of his speedy advent.

Many availed themselves of the privilege of coming under the spread canvas to hear what was spoken. Sunday was a specially good day. The people came out with a deep interest, seemingly, to hear and know the truth. The best order prevailed. Brn. J. B. Cook and J. G. Smith came to our help after Sunday was over. The meeting progressed in interest as we preached, prayed, sang, and taught the children from day to day. Some of like precious faith came from abroad, adding their testimony, which gave new life and interest to the meeting, as is always the case when we are toiling in new places. After the first Sunday, it became apparent that some were seeking the Lord in earnest, and found joy and peace in believing. Saturday, Bro. L. T. Cunningham and some of his family came, and their help was appreciated. Bro. C. put up his "big chart," spoke twice in the afternoon from it, illustrating and enforcing by the fulfillment of prophecy the nearness of Christ's coming. This, with a sermon in the morning after the love-feast, children's meeting at six, and preaching in the evening, made it a busy and profitable day. The tent was well filled with attentive hearers, and it became evident that the Lord was at work by his Holy Spirit, convincing of sin and a coming judgment.

Our brethren of other denominations came in, and took part in the meeting, and the angels as well as we were made to rejoice over returning prodigals and repenting sinners. Bless the Lord, it was a good place under the old tent. We could say, Glory to God in the highest, and good will to men. We concluded to hold on another week. I had to be gone three days the first of the week, but the interest was kept up, by the goodness of God, through the agency of Sr. Julia Buzzell, Brn. Leavitt and Smith. Returning, I found the cause of Christ and his truth prospering. All seemed delighted with the tent-meeting. The doctrine was new, but it took strong hold of the thinking part of the community. Some were brought from darkness to light, one was baptized, others were about ready, and a goodly number will, I doubt not, be found in the kingdom as the result of the tent-meeting. The meeting grew more interesting till the close. Sr. Susie Cunningham rendered much service in the children's department.

Sunday, the 30th, was a blessed day for the cause of Christ. It was our last Sunday meeting under the tent. The people came in crowds. The tent was full, and all around they were standing during the preaching, and all seemed interested. I could but pray that the seed sown might spring up and produce an hundred-fold. The best of order prevailed throughout the entire meeting of seventeen days. To God be all the glory. Monday, the meeting continued. Tuesday, Aug. 1st, the tent was taken down to be sent to Soncook for another meeting; but the meeting adjourned to a hall for future meetings. We left Bro. J. G. Smith and Sr. Julia to feed the church over which the Holy Ghost hath made them overseers, hoping still to hear of more glorious results.

MCCULLOCK'S CREDIBILITY OF THE SCRIPTURES.—Bro. Grant:—I think if our brethren knew the worth of "McCulloch's re-cast of the Credibility of the Scriptures," that many of them would not be without the work. Bro. Jacob Blain, of Buffalo, N. Y., has the work for sale at $1.60 for the two volumes, which is very cheap.

D. COGSWELL.

☞ LUTHER, enumerating the qualities of a good preacher, gives as one of them, "that he should know when to stop."

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

MORE ZEAL NEEDED.
C. E. BARNES.

It is common to see in new converts to christianity a zeal and simplicity characterizing their actions, which is not commonly witnessed in those who have been longer on the way. When first converted, realizing the great change wrought in them, and the abounding love of Christ, it seems to be their desire to let others know what has been done for them, and to urge them to likewise "taste and see that the Lord is good." It was this new-born love and heavenly fervor that led to such zeal as is mentioned in Acts 2: 41–47; "continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house," being recorded as characterizing the converts to christianity on the day of Pentecost. It was this same zeal that possessed the Galatians. When the light of the gospel first dawned upon them; when they first awoke to a new life in Christ, they received Paul as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus," being willing, had it been possible, to have plucked out their own eyes, and to have given them to him. Gal. 4: 14, 15. And it was a zeal closely allied to this that characterized the Advent people in their early history, when the main thought with them was the soon coming of Jesus; when the main topic of conversation with them was the soon coming of Jesus; when their Bibles were always with them, and most read in those portions which related to the soon coming of Jesus. At that time, when the light had first been given them, they possessed a zeal and earnestness which we fail to see manifested now, i. e., universally. The zeal and love are not entirely gone, thank God, nor the daily reading of the Scriptures and meditations thereupon; but as a body there has been a decline.

There is not that burning interest that once there was; there is not that faithfulness in exhorting others that once there was; there is not that living faith in the doctrine that used to, and ought now to characterize our people. We need a fresh baptism of the Spirit; a new consecration to God that will lead to a greater earnestness in promulgating this great truth. In a word, we need to have the missionary spirit again; and it is to be obtained just as it was originally: by believing in the heart these truths of which we are intellectually convinced. Believing with the heart produces action, always; believing with the intellect only, does not; and if we have merely an intellectual belief that the Lord is coming, without having it rooted and grounded in our hearts, then we may treat exhortations with indifference, and go about our pursuits as if we were to continue in this mortal state a hundred years longer; but if we do believe this truth in our hearts, it cannot fail of leading to a corresponding action.

That which leads a christian to admonish his fellow-men, is a realization, in a measure, of their danger. That which leads young men, and young women too, to leave home and friends and their native land, to spend their lives in a foreign missionary country, is a belief of the fact that without Christ, men will perish. And that which will beget again in us this missionary spirit, is a belief and realization of these same truths also.

Oh! truly these are the days when iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold. And we need not go very far from home to notice a decline in spiritual things either. It is quite common to point to what are called the "popular churches" to there see a fulfillment of Jesus' words; but what need of going so far for proof, when we have it in abundance within our own borders? Is it not true that there has been a departure from the "first love" experienced by the Advent people? Where are those spirited prayer-meetings? Where are those persons who could go to the house of prayer after their day's work and get rested? Where are those brethren and sisters whose desire to meet together was so strong that a cloudy sky, or a stormy night, was no hindrance at all? Where are those men and women who would go and return, so full of christian joy and peace, that they would forget all about the storm? Where are these people? And "echo answers, 'Where?'"

The prayer-meeting now is not looked upon as a place of rest; people get too tired through the day to meet for social worship at night. And somehow, a cloudy sky or stormy night seems to have a much more depressing effect than it used to have, so that the meetings at such times are thinly attended. To be sure, if it is advertised that a certain noted man is to preach, instead of having a prayer-meeting, why, then we see these brethren and sisters; what but is a query to many is, How does it happen that they get too tired to attend a prayer-meeting, and yet are always on hand when some "big gun" is expected to preach? If it is not owing to a lack of interest in sustaining the prayer-meetings, then what is it owing to?

I fear that by many the doctrine is held merely as doctrine; merely as theological dogmas, instead of great and vital truths, and what we need now are not new truths, are not fresh arguments, but a realization of the old truths, and then a corresponding action on our part, which will lead us to do that which devolves upon us in sustaining the prayer meetings and the other interests of Christ's cause.

Christian readers, remember the zeal you had when first you received pardon; remember your former confidence, and then too remember that in order to be a partaker of Christ, it is necessary to hold the beginning of your confidence steadfast unto the end. Heb. 3: 14.

MEETINGS AND PARTINGS.

Last Sabbath evening closed the grove meeting that was held near our house. It was truly a time of refreshing to poor me, who, although unable to attend the meeting, had the blessed privilege of seeing the dear saints, and uniting with them as they sat by my bedside. We talked of our blessed home soon to be gained, and the good Lord granted me one sweet season, that of hearing our dear good sisters Barnes and Hemenway speak to the edification of the hearers. It being rainy Friday afternoon, the meeting was held in our house. I felt to praise God for it. As our dear sisters spoke of the soon coming of Jesus, when no more pain nor distress could rack our mortal bodies; and as they sung that sweet verse—"No chilling winds," I felt very thankful and glad in God that I had ever given up all for Jesus, and was an heir to that heavenly inheritance that is so soon to be given to the saints of the Most High. I felt almost impatient to be there in that "beautiful world of light." I felt as if I could endure anything for Jesus and his cause; and although my life is one of continual pain, suffering, sorrow, privation and toil, yet I feel that "I am blest, I am blest."

How often I thought, while the dear ones were here, and it was so blessed to meet with them, that if their society was so good here, what must it be when we all are made immortal, free from sin, pure and holy. I am glad that nothing wicked and vile can ever enter there.

The hour for parting came, and as the dear ones came to my bedside and asked a blessing upon me; as they clasped the hand and said, "Good bye," oh! how sad I felt; but hope bids me look beyond this vale of tears to that bright home where adieus are sounds unknown, and none are kept away by sickness. O Lord, hasten the time. There may we meet soon, is the earnest prayer of your sister,

THERIA B. WEAVER.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Geo. A. Streeter.

BRO. GRANT:—Our grove-meeting closed Sunday evening, August 6th. There was a great interest to hear. Never were there so many out to a meeting in this place before; and although none confessed publicly the truth, many said it alone. Conviction rested on the people, and the inquiry by some is, When are you going to have more meetings? while others were stirred, or the theological waters were stirred, as the light reflected on the darkness. We hope that some seed has fallen on good ground, in good and honest hearts, and will yet bring forth fruit to the glory of God. The way is open for a larger meeting at some future day, if the Lord will. There was preaching by Elds. Hemenway, Munger, Pike, and Sr. Barnes.

O how much there is to do in the vineyard! and when I see the work that needs to be done, my heart yearns to do it; but where shall I go? where can my poor feeble talent be of some use? I wait for a door to open, willing to go anywhere, in new or old fields. The harvest is great; the fields are all ready for the harvest. O God, here I am, send me. "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." Brethren and sisters, pray for us, that in all things we may be able to do all that is required of us, so as to be ready for the great gathering of the saints, when Jesus comes. God bless you all, is the prayer of your humble servant and Bro. in Christ.

No. Dana, Mass., Aug. 7th, 1871.

From Bro. E. Morrill.

BRO. GRANT:—After staying at Gloucester with the tent one week longer than we expected (the Lord blessing all the while), we intended to take the tent down Monday morning, July 31st; but in consequence of the rain Saturday night, we saw Sunday evening that the tent would not be dry enough, and so we gave an appointment for Monday afternoon and evening, as usual, and, thank the Lord, we had one of the best meetings I was ever in. Salvation's waters run freely. Seven made a start to serve the Lord, and the Lord's blessing rested upon us. Meeting was then adjourned to the hall, which Bro. Smith hired. We had meetings Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings, also on Sunday. We hope our preaching brethren will remember the people of Gloucester, and go and help them.

BRO. SNYDER.—Resolutions of condolence to the memory of the late Rev. Henry Snyder, by his afflicted congregation.

At a regular meeting of the members of the German Christian Church, May 20, 1871, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from our midst our beloved brother, founder and minister of this church, on the 24th of May, 1871; and,

WHEREAS, Although humbly submitting to the all-wise decree of the Most High, we desire to express our deep felt sorrow for the great loss we have sustained in the death of our friend and brother; therefore,

Resolved, That in the deceased we have been deprived of a most worthy, zealous and efficient worker in our congregation; and who, as one of the original founders, ever remained a most faithful advocate of the interests of his people.

Resolved, That while it was the constant endeavor of our deceased pastor to cultivate the heart, he was always ready to help on the cause of progress whenever and wherever advanced in behalf of the rising generation.

Resolved, That it is hoped the moral and true Christian character may serve as a worthy example to all who would live a life of piety, strict probity, and with a desire to cultivate the finer affections of the heart.

Resolved, That wherever benevolence and Christian charity were heeded, he was the first to bestow, and in dying, his last request to his beloved congregation was, that love and harmony should ever dwell in their midst.

Resolved, That we, as a church, express to the family of our beloved counsellor our deep felt sympathy, with the sincere desire that he who protects the widows and the orphans may comfort and console this family in their great affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family of the deceased; that they be embodied in the records of our proceedings, and that they be published in the Advent Christian Times and in the World's Crisis.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

London, Aug. 10. Special information from a correspondent in Salzburg says that military organization in Russia is being pushed vigorously on the Prussian system. Compulsory service is being vigorously carried out without exception. In consequence of the enormous extent of the country, provincial depots are to be established. Officers, examining the frontiers and reporting to the Government, are trying experiments to see how soon a corps d'armee, advancing, can lay a line of railway for forwarding supplies. If such is the chase, everything politically promises well, for Austria's making an alliance with Germany, which is apprehensive of an alliance between France and Russia.

This is the chief question of discussion between the Emperors of Austria and Germany at Gastein. They meet at Ischl to-morrow.

Aug. 11. The Pope has written a letter to the committee who have offered him the title of Pius the Great and a throne of gold. He refused to accept the proposed honor during his lifetime, and suggests that the money subscribed for the throne be employed in procuring the exempting of students of Catholic seminaries everywhere from military service.

Paris, Aug. 12. The City Council has voted to raise a loan of 350,000,000 of francs to be used for the rebuilding and repair of the edifices destroyed or injured during the reign of the Commune.

Opposition to the prolongation of M. Thier's term of office is said to be growing rapidly both in the Assembly and among the people.

The Municipal Council of Paris, having adopted a resolution expressive of the desire for the removal of the capital to Paris, a deputation of that body waited upon Thiers and begged him to exert his influence in favor of the change. Thiers, in his reply to the Committee, said that the decision of the question rested with the Assembly, and should not be trammeled by any action on his part.

London, Aug. 14. A dreadful calamity has visited the small island of Tagolanda, in Malay Archipelago, about fifty miles northeast of the island of Celebes. An outburst of the volcano of Ruwang, accompanied by a convulsion of the sea and a wave forty yards in height, swept all the human beings, cattle and horses from the island. The number of persons who perished was four hundred and sixteen.

DOMESTIC.

Chicago, Aug. 8. A terrific tornado, moving from east to west, passed over Winneconne, Wis., last night.

The booms on Wolf river, five miles above Winneconne, containing fifty million feet of logs, were broken up.

The steamer Star was capsized, and the captain, Geo. Smith, and one raftsman, were drowned.

Half the houses were blown over and completely demolished, and thousands of window panes were broken.

Thirty chimneys blown down, the grain in shocks scattered over the fields, and all the corn is flat.

The Roman Catholic church in Granville was destroyed by the storm.

The Italian Demonstration in New York.—The coming celebration of Italian unity in New York will, it is said, possess some novel features. Besides the procession, which, it is believed, will be of considerable magnitude, as there are about 15,000 Italians in and around New York, the programme for that part of the day to be spent at East Park embraces the singing of hymns composed for the occasion, addresses by distinguished Italians and others, dancing, feats of marksmanship, salvos of artillery, balloons, pyrotechnic displays, festive games, and a race between males dressed in quaint costume with pails of water on their heads. In the procession will be three triumphal cars, which are described as below:

"One of the cars will carry a lady representing Ancient Rome as the mistress of the world, escorted by twelve men dressed as Roman cavaliers of the period. Another car will carry a lady representing United Italy, seated upon a throne, and dressed in the robes of a Queen, with a crown upon her head and bearing a sceptre. At her feet will be seated another lady, dressed to represent Modern Rome, with broken chains hanging from her arms. The car will be escorted by the Italian Colombo Guard of this city, dressed in the uniform of Bersaglieri. A third triumphal car will appear, shaped like a pyramid, and will carry one hundred young girls, dressed in white, with green garlands on their heads and tri-colored sashes over their shoulders. Each will carry a small flag, bearing the coats of arms of the principle cities in Italy, the one at the apex holding the flag of Rome, with its legend of Romulus, Remus and the wolf."

Mechanic Falls Campmeeting.

This meeting will commence Aug. 28th, and continue one week. Our ground is enlarged, with more seats, and is beautiful. Our stable is built, and board for horses will be furnished as cheaply as may be. We shall prepare to supply the wants of the people, according to our ability, with plain, wholesome food, at reasonable prices. Arrangements are being made with the railroads that lead to the meeting, and we trust the fares will be satisfactory. We hope our preachers will come burdened with a sense of their mission, and the people assembling be blest with salvation.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in South Bristol, in Mr. Barnes' orchard, commencing Saturday, Aug. 26th, and holding over the Sabbath. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting, filled with the Spirit of the Master, and help contribute to make it a success. Preaching to commence on Saturday, at two o'clock p. m. Bro. Newell is expected to help preach the word.

Eld. C. P. Greenman.

Grove Meeting.

The annual meeting of the church of God (called Adventists) will commence, the Lord willing, Thursday, August 31st, on the old ground, two miles and a half west of Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa., and continue over two Sundays. Friends from the east and west will leave the Atlantic and G. W. R. R., or Erie Railway, and Philadelphia and Erie R. R. at Union, Pa., and take the Union and Titusville R. R. to Lincolnville. Three trains leave Union and Titusville each way daily. Teams will be at Lincolnville on Saturdays to take friends to the ground; also at other times, by writing in time to the subscriber. Come, brethren and sisters, to the meeting, filled with the Spirit of God, and much prayer that the blessing of God may attend the meeting. Hearts, houses and barns open and free. For the Committee,

John T. Ongley.

Notice.

At the campmeeting last year, a committee was appointed for the present year, but they have failed to act, for some reason unknown. We, therefore, the Second Advent church at New Milford, will hold, the Lord willing, a four days' meeting in the grove, known as Dr. Taylor's woods, commencing Thursday, August 24th, and hold over the Sabbath. This will be considered as a basket meeting. Come one, come all.

H. Hecock.
H. Gregory.

Grove Meeting.

There will be preaching at the Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 10th, by Eld. A. Ross. If stormy, the meeting will be in the hall at the grove. Mr. Smith, the proprietor, will furnish refreshments for man and beast to all who wish. S. O. Welch.

Notice.

As I shall be at the Belfast campmeeting till Friday, the Mechanic Falls campmeeting on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, and Alton Bay after Tuesday, I hope that the friends owing me for hymn books will arrange to pay me at these meetings; or, if needing books, will apply to me as above from Aug. 20th to Sept. 15th.

I. K. Lombard.

Received.—From F. D., Boston, Mass., $5.00. "Sidewalk," Worcester, Mass., $3.00. Many thanks, and may "the blessing of the Lord that maketh rich" rest upon the givers.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the camp-ground, beautifully located about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Saturday, August 19th, and continuing till August 28th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, August 27th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fares.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Albany $4 35, Pittsfield $2.35, Worcester $2.50. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, at Boston, Natick, South Framingham, Milford, Southville, Westboro, Worcester, and the stations to Pittsfield. Also at North and South Adams, Cheshire, Chatham, Hudson, and Albany.

On the Hartford and New Haven R. R. fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Middletown, Hartford, Windsor Locks, and Thompsonville.

On the Conn. R. R. fare is reduced one third from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from August 10th to August 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the roads operated by the

comprising Vermont Central, Vermont and Canada, Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly, Montreal and Vermont Junction, Sullivan, Og. and Lake Champlain, Missisquoi, Rutland, Vt. Valley, Montreal and Plattsburgh, Whitehall and Plattsburgh Railroads, the friends will purchase regular tickets at the several stations, for the nearest point on the Conn. River Road to South Vernon or Greenfield, at which place they will be sure to go to the ticket office and get a Campmeeting ticket for Springfield, which they will present to the Secretary on the camp-ground to be countersigned; and they will then be furnished with a free return pass—good from South Vernon to the places they came from on any of the roads run by the Vermont Central Railroad.

On the Vt. and Mass. R. Road, Troy and Greenfield R. Road from Hoosac Tunnel, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield. At Greenfield they will go into the ticket office and call for Campmeeting Tickets for Springfield. All such when they go to the Secretary on the camp-ground to have their tickets countersigned, will be furnished with a free return pass from Greenfield to Athol, Fitchburg, or any place on the Vermont and Mass. R. R., or Troy and Greenfield R. R., that they may come from—provided twenty-five passengers shall have come over the Vt. and Mass. Rail Road to the meeting.

Passengers coming from North of South Vernon, unless provided with return tickets, should purchase only to South Vernon, and then purchase to Springfield and return. The same rule will apply also to passengers coming from East of, or in the vicinity of Greenfield.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R. Road, friends from Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.70 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 p. m., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. Passengers by this boat arrive in Springfield at 10.51 p. m. and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed p. m. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 p. m., reaches New Haven in time for the accommodation, which leaves New Haven at 8 a. m., but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the R. R. to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have free return passes by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, 8½ and 9 a. m.; and at 3, 4½, and 9 p. m.

Arrangements with any other roads that may be made, will be noticed hereafter.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so.

The campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 9th, and hold over the Sabbath, the 17th.

For the Committe, J. Couch.

Notice.

Will our brethren who want lumber to build tents on the Alton Bay camp-ground, send in at once, that we may know how much to engage? Those wishing to locate tents, may address me at Farmington. Be sure and get your tents built before the meeting commences. J. G. Smith.

P. S. There are a number of good rooms, with good beds, near the camp-ground, to let for a dollar a day through the meeting, if any wish.

Tent-Meeting.

If the Lord will, the New Hampshire Mission tent will be pitched near Wells Beach, Me., on land of Charles Boston, the meeting to commence Sabbath, Aug. 27th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Brn. James G. Smith, W. H. Mitchell, Geo. W. Brown, and other able speakers, will be present to preach the word. James G. Smith.

For the brethren, John C. Shorey.
Darius J. Dow.

P. S.—Will not the preaching brethren from the West and New York, who contemplate coming to the Springfield and Alton Bay campmeetings, arrange so as to spend the week between the two meetings with us at our tent meeting? Brethren coming from the West will take the 7.30 a. m., 12 m., and 3 o'clock trains, and stop at Wells Depot. Brethren coming from the East will understand what trains to take. Fare from Wells Depot to the tent, 75 cts. D. J. Dow.

Notice.

As the Lord yet spares my life, and gives me strength to travel, I hope to be at the Springfield campmeeting again this year, with my work to sell cheap to preachers, as heretofore; also McCulloch's work for $1.60, less than half price. I shall also have a work just printed, on the wisdom and goodness of God in permitting sin and woe for (to him) a speck of time, and by ending them, will be glorified, and the universe be made the happier forever. I have been three years preparing it, and it contains 192 pages, twelve pages more than Death not Life, and of the same size; has more Bible than that, and the texts mostly written out. It has some new views, but as they are based on the Bible, and not on speculation, they are worthy of examination. Not being stereotyped, it costs me twice as much as "Death not Life," yet I shall sell it at 80 cents at retail. What little is due me for books, I hope brethren will send by friends, if not coming themselves to the campmeeting. J. Blain.

Tent Meeting.

Eld. Wm. Sheldon will hold a series of meetings in the large tent at Arena, Iowa Co., Wis., commencing Sept. 9th, 1871. We shall expect a large gathering. Let all who can attend. All who come will be provided for. Come in the spirit of the dear Master, to labor for the good of our fellow men. The night cometh, and the morning will soon dawn. Arena is on the Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien R. R., about thirty miles west of Madison. Geo. Thomson, For the church.

The Advent Christian Association:

This Society will hold its annual meeting at the Springfield camp-ground, commencing on Monday, Aug. 21st, at 4 o'clock p. m. Let every church send a delegate. None should forget the importance of the business to be done at these annual meetings. Every church is entitled to one delegate and one additional delegate for every twenty-five members above the number of fifty members. An assembly of worshipers, though few in numbers, constitutes a church.

H. F. Carpenter, Secretary.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the A. C. A. will meet at the Springfield camp-ground on Monday, August 21st, at two o'clock p. m. H. F. Carpenter, Sec.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held at Springfield, on the National Adv. camp-ground, commencing Wednesday, Aug. 23d, at 8 o'clock a. m.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association are members of the A. A. M. Society. A. W. S.

Tent Notice.

I would say that the twelve tents advertised to let have all been taken up, as follows, according to the dates of their letters: J. B. Waite, Anpanaug, R. I.; Moses Merrill, So. Vernon, Vt.; H. D. Sharp, New Britain, Ct.; G. A. Hawkins, Putnam, Ct.; S. G. Mathewson, Castleton, Vt.; John Hutchinson, Rutland, Vt.; Sybil Bushnal, Pownal, Vt.; Hiram Smith, Square Pond, Ct.; Porter J. Smith, Munson, Mass.; Asa Twigg, Palmer, Mass.; Stephen Hitchcock, Great Bend, Pa. These tents are engaged for the people here named, and if any thing happens you don't want either of them, notify me at once, as there are more calls than tents. Recollect, you all have your own tents to pitch. H. Munger.

Vermont Campmeeting.

After examining various localities, the committee have decided to locate our annual campmeeting once more upon the old ground of last year. We can find no other so beautiful and commodious as this, with such improvements as we can make. Good water can be supplied freely upon the ground, and board at 85 cts per day, at boarding tent. Those coming to this meeting can come over any R. R. controlled by the Vt. Central R. R. for fare one way. You will buy a regular ticket, and pay full fare to Bethel, and receive a free return pass from the camp committee. All trains will stop at Bethel, Vt., from which place teams are engaged to carry all passengers, with all their baggage of every description, to the ground, at 25 cts each; children under twelve, half price. Inquire for Wilson's teams, and go with no other. Bro. Wilson keeps the depot house at Bethel, and will entertain all who wish at low rates. Lodgings can be had in private houses on reasonable terms; but let all bring bedding, as these places may be full before you come. To enjoy the meeting most richly, every family should have a family tent. We want a Graham boarding tent upon the ground for ministers, invalids, and those who do not wish to become invalids. Who will volunteer to take charge of such an one? Write me at once.

Now, ye lovers of Jesus, and all others, come, from York State, New Hampshire, and from all parts of Vermont, and from far and near, to our annual feast at Bethel, Vt., to commence Sept. 2nd, and to continue till Sept. 11th. We are honing that Bro. Couch, and others from abroad, will be present to help us.

H. F. Carpenter, for the Committee.

☞ Remember

to mark every piece of your baggage—Bethel, Vt. camp-ground. And also remember that, to save expense, you should come prepared to board yourselves. H. F. C.

Maine Campmeeting.

The annual campmeeting at Pittsfield, Me., will be held in Hathorn's Grove, at Pittsfield, commencing Sept. 4th, and continue over the following Sabbath. This is a beautiful grove, about half a mile or less from the depot, in a quiet and orderly village. It is easy of access, and pleasant for situation. Everything will be done to make it a pleasant and profitable meeting. Provisions for boarding and housekeeping will be provided on the ground, at very moderate charges, and straw and boards for beds and tents will be on hand. The "Maine Mission Tent" will be in attendance, and afford shelter for sleeping purposes. All who can, bring family tents. There will be a good well, and pasturage for horses if desired.

This meeting has the sympathy and co-operation of the "State Conference," and represents the interests of the people that love Jesus and his coming. Now, brethren and sisters, arise, and come to this feast of tabernacles. Come with two points in mind: to get good, and to do good in the name of the Lord.

New York Conference.

The Lord willing, the next quarterly session of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held with the church at South Butler, commencing Thursday evening, Aug. 31st, and holding over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all. It is hoped that every church will send delegates, and quarterly collections for conference fund. Teams will be in waiting at Savannah, four miles distant, on the direct road between Rochester and Syracuse. Take the 2.55 train from Rochester; no other in the p. m. stops. From Syracuse, take the express, about two o'clock, for Clyde, one station beyond, where you meet the other train which will bring you back. Please remember directions, and as far as possible come Thursday. Bro. W. J. Hobbs will give the opening address. Homes will be provided for all.

Connecticut Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting in the beautiful grove occupied for that purpose last year, near Plainville, Ct., commencing Sept. 2nd, 1871, and holding till the 11th inst.

The fare is reduced one half on the N. H. and N. R. R., same as last year. Regular tickets must be bought at Plainville, and free return passes will be furnished on the camp-ground. Mr. T. F. Clark will convey passengers from Plainville to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. Provision will be made for those coming with horses. It is desirable that all who can, bring tents and bedding, especially the latter.

We shall endeavor to provide wholesome food for all who may wish, at reasonable rates, and trust that, together with our brethren and sisters, we may exercise sufficient faith in God, coupled with good works, to dispel the fear of financial embarrassment, which so cripples the religious enterprises of the day, that their votaries are withering from spiritual drouth, the result of too much anxiety for money, and too little knowledge of faith in God. The Lord is soon coming, and we feel the need of a higher standard of holiness, and the deep inwrought work of the Holy Spirit. Let us walk humbly before the Lord, making this meeting the subject of prayer, beseeching our heavenly Father to breathe the Holy Spirit upon the entire encampment, that wanderers may be reclaimed, and sinners converted.

B. Hitchcock,
Geo. L. White,
Wm. J. Ripley,
O. D. Woodruff, } Committee.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

On the N. H. and Vt. R. R. the 6.50 a. m. train from New Haven, and the trains which leave Plainville going south at 8.20 a. m., and 7.14 p. m., will stop opposite the Conn. camp-ground, between Southington and Plainville, to accommodate those coming to this meeting.

Those coming from the north will buy regular tickets to Southington, and those from the south to Plainville; and be sure to tell the conductors you want to stop at the campmeeting, otherwise the trains will not stop. Only the above named trains stop at the camp-ground. Those coming by the other trains must stop at Plainville. Please remember this.

The H. P. and F. R. R. Co. have agreed to the following arrangement: Passengers from Hartford and New Britain will buy regular tickets to Southington; and those from Bristol, Terryville, and Waterbury, to Plainville, and then to Southington (on the trains that stop near the ground.) Those from the above named stations on this road can get return tickets on the camp-ground, at twenty-five per cent discount from regular fare. Any who occupied tent-ground last year, who do not expect to this, will please notify the committee at once, as applications are being made for lots.

O. D. Woodruff, for Committee.

Notice.

The Maine Mission Tent will remain at Harrison Village through this week, and over Sunday, Aug. 20th, if the Lord will. We hope brethren and sisters in the vicinity will come to this meeting to labor with us. A. W. Taylor.

Southern Wis. Campmeeting.

This campmeeting is to be held at Monticello, Wis., beginning Sept. 23d, and to hold over two Sundays, at Bro. Barber and others may arrange. Particulars in time.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing Saturday, Sept. 9th, and continue over the Sabbath, Sept. 17th. Ample provision will be made for board and horse-keeping. Board at 80 cents per day. Single meals—breakfast or supper—30 cents. Dinner 50 cents. Horse-keeping (hay and grain) 85 cents per day. The boarding department is under the charge of the committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Arrangements have been made with the railroad and steamboat companies, as follows:—Boston and Maine R. R. trains leave Boston for the meeting 7.30 a. m., 12 m., and 3 p. m.,—half fare. Purchase regular tickets at Boston, of Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover Street, for Alton Bay, and at all intermediate stations, beginning at Lawrence.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R.; trains leave Concord at 10.30 a. m. and 3.25 p. m. for the Wiers. Trains leave Lancaster for the Wiers,—half fare. Those coming from Concord, Lancaster, and Plymouth, can go through to the camp-ground the same day. The fare on the steamboats one way.

Connecticut and Passumpsic River R. R.; trains leave Derby at 7 a. m. for Wells River, Plymouth, Wiers, and Alton Bay.—half fare, if twenty-five passengers. Passengers will purchase regular tickets, and receive free return checks on the camp-ground, signed by the Secretary of the meeting. If any of our friends wish, they can come for the same a week before the meeting.

Eastern R. R. half fare. Purchase regular tickets at the several stations, and receive free return passes on the camp-ground, signed by J. Couch.

Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth R. R.; trains leave Portland at 6.15 a. m., 8.40 a. m., and 2.55 p. m., for Dover and Alton,—half fare.

Concord Road and branches; campmeeting tickets can be purchased at Concord, Suncook, Hooksett, Manchester, Nashua, Candia, New Market Junction, Greenland, and Portsmouth,—half fare. Tickets good on these roads from Sept. 8th to the 18th inclusive.

Let all be careful to purchase Campmeeting Tickets, as none will be furnished with return passes only upon those roads advertised.

We may be accommodated by other roads; if so, we shall advertise in the future.

The meeting is unavoidably appointed later than was desired, on account of R. R. accommodations.

Campmeeting at Belfast, Me.

The campmeeting proposed to be at Pittsfield, or Belfast, is appointed to be held one mile and a half north of Belfast, on the Swanville road, near the paper mill, commencing Aug. 28th. It is motioned and seconded, that we have an old-fashioned meeting, such as Bro. Grant says we used to enjoy twenty-eight years ago, when we knew no sect nor party, but were one in Christ, and had not left our first love. If this be the mind of all concerned and interested, far and near, to enjoy such a meeting, let them signify it by coming in the name of the Lord, committing all strife and contention to the fate of the chaff of the summer's threshing-floor, and bring an offering that shall be acceptable unto God, even the sacrifice of a broken and contrite spirit. Provision will be made as far as practicable to make the season one of gospel labor, rather than a place of merchandise. We expect a big tent for the accommodation of the meeting. All who possibly can will bring family tents, with bedding and provisions, as there will be no boarding tent on the ground. Come all as one, who love our Lord and his appearing. Those coming on the Maine Central, from either point, will stop at Burnham, and take cars for Belfast.

W. Cousins.
I. Damman.
A. W. Walker.

Reduction of Fare.

We have made arrangements by which the fare will be reduced on Steamer City of Richmond, between Portland and Bangor, also on Steamer running between Ellsworth and Belfast. Fare from Ellsworth to Belfast and return, $3 00.

Steamer City of Richmond will leave Bangor every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, at 6 o'clock; returning, leave Portland same nights, at 10 o'clock, or on arrival of express train from Boston. Fare on M. C. R. R. will be reduced from Dexter, Pittsfield, Unity, Thorndike and Brooks, and from all other stations on the road where eight or ten will notify me of their intention of going before the 25th inst. One fare for round trip. All tickets good from Aug. 25th to Sept. 4th.

☞ Please call for Campmeeting Tickets.

A. H. Walker, Richmond, Me., for Com.

The R. I. and E. Ct. Campmeeting.

Brethren, our campmeeting this year will (D. V.) be held at Green Station, on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R. It will commence on September 2nd, 1871, and hold till the 9th inst. We shall be happy to meet the brethren from "all the neighborhood round about." Those who have tents, or can procure them, are requested to bring By arrangements made with the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. Company, "five persons at any station on their lines can buy a ten-passage ticket (i. e. a return ticket each) on which they might together go and return at 20 per cent less than regular rates."

For the camp committee, W. Kellaway.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting, the Lord will, at Rawsonville, Vt., Aug. 18th, and hold over Sunday, the 20th. Eld. C. H. Fletcher is expected to be with us, with others, to preach the word. All that love the Lord are invited to come and labor for the salvation of our fellow men.

Z. T. Wood.

Annual Meeting.

The Women's Christian Association will hold its annual meeting at Springfield, Mass., August 23d, 1871. It is desirable that all members of the Association should be present.

E. S. Jennings, President.

The American Life and Advent Union Campmeeting.

This association of Advent believers will hold their annual campmeeting upon their new and beautiful ground in "Carew's Grove," at Springfield, Mass. (distant about one and one-fourth miles from the railway station), commencing Sunday, Aug. 13th, and continuing over Sunday, Aug. 20th. The campmeeting committee desire to say to the friends that nature has done much for our camping place. We have an area of six acres of fine, level, dry tenting-ground, dotted over with grand old trees, bestowing grateful shade. To these natural advantages, through the liberality of kind brethren, have been added all the accessories which thought could suggest as necessary to the comfort and convenience of all. Let all, then, far and near, from north and south, from east and west, turn aside from the dusty, weary way, and come in to this consecrated spot to rest and refresh awhile.

Dedication. The public services of the meeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 13th, at 1.30 a. m., at which time a dedicatory sermon will be preached by Geo. Storrs, of New York.

Fares. Fare on the Boston and Albany R. R. is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices between Boston and Worcester at Grantville, Holliston, Natic, Westboro, Milford, and Southville; beyond Worcester at the usual stations. On the Hartford and N. H. R. R. fare is reduced one third. Tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Middletown, Berlin, and New Britain, Hartford, Thompsonville, and Windsor Locks. On the Conn. River R. R. fare is reduced one third from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary of the campmeeting. Remember this. Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.70 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 p. m. connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. Passengers by this boat arrive in Springfield at 10.51 p. m. The other boat which leaves New York at 11 p. m., reaches New Haven in time for the accommodation, which leaves New Haven at 8 a. m.; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the H. and N. H. R. R. Tickets for the R. R. to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket,* which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the campground. Omnibuses will be found in readiness at the Springfield depot to convey all to the ground. Fare 15 cents.

Board. Good board will be furnished at 60 cents per day. Those intending to board themselves will find a choice and constant supply of groceries, provisions and fruits for sale upon the ground at regular market rates.

T. R. Weaver, Sec. of the Campmeeting Com.

* The confusion experienced in regard to return tickets by the boats, will not occur again.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A Colporteur's Notes, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. Ad'v.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. Life and Death Theology: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. Immaterialism: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. Death and the Dead, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. The Coming Judgment: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

HE DOETH ALL THINGS WELL.

A. R. FOWLER.

Oftentimes our griefs may blind us
To the trials, woes and cares;
To the marks of deep set anguish
Which the child of sorrow wears.

Stay thou, then, thy course of sorrow,
Deem as naught thy lesser grief;
Seek the weary and heart-broken,
Cheering them, thou 'lt find relief.

Let thy grief no longer blind thee,
Haste to those who are sad, oppressed;
Give them of thy life the sunshine,
Tell thou to the Lord the rest.

Wars that threaten to o'erwhelm us,
Only serve to wash away
All the obstacles that hinder
And obstruct us in the way.

Though through fires the pathway lead us,
They are meant in mercy sent,
Cords to burn, and bands to sever,
Which all else had not unbent.

These may blight earth's brightest prospects,
And seem to human hearts a knell;
But they 're in our Father's keeping,
He who doeth all things well.

BAPTISMAL INCIDENTS.—No. 1.

H. R. PARRETT.

Three winters ago I was called to review Dr. Quigley, a Methodist Presiding Elder in this State (Minnesota), on the subject of immortality. There was present at the review an intelligent physician who had retired from business, formerly of the city of St. Paul. He became interested, and in a series of meetings following became convicted he was a sinner and needed salvation. I rode one evening to meeting with him, in his own conveyance, as he called on the way at the brother's where I put up. During the meeting I saw his wife unexpectedly present, and as at the close of the service he came to the desk where I stood, I remarked, not observing that he was under conviction,

"Dr., I perceive you have a load to carry home," referring of course to his wife, and designing to add, "I will seek another way to return." But ready and apt in his reply, and being more deeply affected than at first I perceived, putting his hand upon his heart, and betraying a deep anxiety he had not before exhibited, he said,

"Yes, I have," and left me for the night, not able to say more.

Soon after Dr. Jarvis was converted to God, a great change being wrought in his whole behavior, though advanced in life. He desired baptism, and living near the Mississippi river, he pioneered a few of us down upon the frozen stream, where he thought the water would be of suitable depth to cut the ice for this purpose. The next day had been appointed for the administration of the ordinance. He went to two of his unconverted neighbors and informed them what he intended to do, and to request them to be his assistants at the water side. They consented to do so, and were on the spot. A large procession of sleighs filled with spectators, and others on foot, gathered upon the ice around the open, watery grave. After singing and prayer, the Dr. went to the sleigh wherein his wife was seated, and bade her "farewell," and so he did the whole sleigh's company, which was a most affecting scene, and certainly most appropriate, as he was about to bury the "old man" forever.

Stepping down first into the water to make an inspection of the bottom to the further end, before inviting the candidate, the Dr. slid down quietly behind me, as he afterward said, having pity on me, not to let me stay in the cold too long. Turning around I discovered to my surprise the Dr. already in the water, and remarked,

"Well, Dr., you are here."

"Yes," he said, "I am here."

I then baptized him. His two neighbors stepped forward and assisted him out of the water, and then extended the same kindness to me. They then accompanied the Dr. to his residence, both taking him by each arm, and assisted him also in the change of his clothing.

In the evening, at the close of my discourse, I gave an invitation to any and to all in the house who wanted to be saved to arise, and thus testify to the desire. One of these assistants was the first to arise. Then others followed in every part of the house, and it was a most solemn and heart-searching time. The Dr. was sitting by the side of the other of his assistants, who was trembling under the cross. At last Mr. Libby spoke out audibly, so that all could hear—

"Dr., I assisted you out of the water to-day, and now I want you to help me to stand up before this congregation."

"I will," immediately responded the Dr., and took him by the arm and both rose to their feet before the audience. Mr. Libby then remarked—

"Neighbors and christian friends: I know the eyes of you all are upon me; and more, I know the eye of God is upon me also"; and these words were said as if God was searching him through and through. He then confessed himself a sinner before the congregation, and before God, and needed mercy, and sat down amid the tears of the congregation, mingled with joy on the part of believers.

These two men, Dr. Jarvis and Mr. Libby, are to this day beloved brethren in the Lord, waiting for God's Son from heaven and the kingdom of God.

THE EFFECTS OF ONE SIN.

"Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, is guilty of all.—James 2: 10."

From this we are to understand that the divine law is to be regarded as one total and entire law; the breaking of one precept, the whole (being a collection of precepts) is broken. It is a perfect chain; the breaking of one link breaks the whole chain.

A late expositor says, "The apostle does not say that this, in fact, ever did occur; but he says, that if it should, and yet a man should have failed in only one particular, he must be judged to be guilty." The apostle means to say, according to this commentator, that whosoever shall perform an impossibility, i. e., keep the whole law, and shall fail in one point in performing what is impossible, he shall be adjudged guilty of failing to do what it is impossible to do. This is the logic of this kind of theology.

Are there not the same reasons for turning from every sin that there are for turning from any one sin? Do we turn from any one sin because God has forbidden it? Why, for the same reason, should we not turn from all sin? He who turns from any one sin, because it is a dishonor to God, a reproach to Christ, a grief to the Spirit, a wound to religion, is under obligations to turn from all sin for the same reason. One sin has done much harm. Only one sin stripped the fallen angels of all their dignity and glory. One sin—only one—robbed our first parents of all their purity and power. One thief may rob you of all your treasures. One disease may deprive you of all your health. One dagger, plunged to the heart, kills as effectually as ten. One spark explodes the whole magazine. If a ship springs a leak in three places or ten, and all are stopped but one, that one leak will sink the ship.

We cannot take one sin into our bosom, and shut all the rest out. They come in swarms, at the bidding of the lone occupant. A little thief, put in at the window, will open the door for fifty much larger and stronger to enter.

We should remember that a holy God will never share honors with an unholy devil. He approves of neither halting nor halving. He will not allow us to divide our hearts between holiness and sin, between Christ and the world. We cannot swear by God and Baal. We are required to abandon our covert as well as our open sins; our loved, as well as our loathed lusts; our baby iniquities, as well as our giant-like provocations. Gideon had seventy sons and only one bastard, and yet that one bastard managed to destroy all the rest; so that evil disposition which leads us to venture upon a violation of one of God's precepts, were it not for some sinister motive, would lead us to break any and every commandment, when it should serve our turn to do so. The precepts of the Almighty are one beautiful string of pearls, strung by the divine band; break the string in any place, and all the pearls fall to the ground.

Let us not conclude, therefore, that, because we are guilty of but one sin, we are less exposed to ruin than those who are guilty of many. Whatever sets a soul in conflict with God, unless abandoned, will prove the ruin of that soul. One sin will do that as surely as many. Satan will make his nest in the smallest sin, and unless expelled, will very soon hatch all manner of wickedness. A sinful emotion, if it be not at once rejected, will procure consent; and consent will break forth into acts; and acts will ripen into habit; and habit will blind conscience; and conscience, when blinded, will permit the soul to practice the basest sins unreproved.

Why not, then, abandon every sin? Why not expel every base intruder? Why not proclaim universal freedom? If we have harbored a single foe to our King, let us out with it, and forever bolt the gates against its return. Let us seek that we may find, and find that we may enjoy, and enjoy that we may impart the precious gift.—Advocate of Holiness.

PIC-NIC RELIGION.

"Sitting down to eat and drink, and rising up to play.'

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD—CHRIST AND BELIAL.

"1. They are directly contrary to all the examples given us by Christ and the apostles.

"2. They practically educate the people in impiety. Pure religion requires not merely right actions but right feelings. It would seem as if Satan has so contrived it, that the church is systematically trained to perform her most pious acts from selfish motives. The punctuality of the children in the Sabbath schools is rewarded by a pic-nic or festival. The lessons are learned, not that the scholars may be made wise unto salvation, but that they may win a prize, and receive public commendation. Church pride, family pride, and personal vanity are strongly appealed to, to swell the contributions for the missionary cause. Revivals are sometimes sought to be promoted, that the pecuniary burdens of those who sustain the church may be lessened.

"3. They seek to unite Christ and Belial. They would join together in loving harmony, what God has put forever asunder. They obliterate the distinction between the church and the world. Their avowed object is to bring worldlings under the influence of christianity. To accomplish this end, christians spread a banquet, which the veriest libertine can enjoy, and sit down with him, with apparent gratification, to the sumptuous repast. To attempt to lead men, in this way, to 'deny themselves, and take up their cross and follow Christ,' is as wise as would be the effort to reform a drunkard by giving him wine. Boys are not trained to habits of sobriety by feeding them sugar, saturated with brandy. The appetite thus created or revived, will soon demand stimulants of a stronger character. As long as theatrical performances are countenanced in the Sabbath-school, professing christians will quite likely attend the full-grown theatre. If Christ has no concord with Belial why then this persistent effort to keep up an unhallowed alliance between the children of God and the sons of Belial?

"4. They grieve the Spirit of God. Where that dwells, there is solemnity. Many a conviction has been dissipated by the levity prevailing at the social gatherings of the church. Many a hopeful convert has taken the first step toward backsliding in the donation which followed the revival in which he was converted. You cannot have the Spirit of God and feast and frolic with the world.

"5. They practically deny Christ. Has he not said to his true disciples, 'Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world?' If Christ is with his church, will he not, if his followers are faithful, so assist them that they will not need to go to the world for help? Christ's church is dear to him. He cares for all its interests, and it grieves him that the church should throw off all dependence upon him, and 'go down to Egypt for help.' She is his bride; and what would a bridegroom think of his betrothed, if she should, when his aid was freely proffered, go to his enemies for assistance? Look at the spiritual death that prevails, and see how large a share the practices complained of have had in producing it. See how many ministers—once mighty men of God—have been shorn of their locks, and have lost their power in the lap of this modern Delilah, and are now sightless giants, toiling upon the tread-mill of lifeless ceremonies. See how wide is the departure from apostolic usage; how the young and old are educated to be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; how Christ is dishonored and denied, and the Holy Spirit grieved.

Never countenance them with your presence. Let not love for your pastor, nor desire for pleasing your brethren, nor dread of singularity induce you to assist in attempting to force Christ into an alliance with the world which he utterly abhors.

"We are living, we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time;
In an age on ages telling,
To be living is sublime."

CONFORMING TO THE WORLD.—TESTIMONIAL No. 1.—From Rev. B. T. Roberts: "That the church is rapidly conforming to the spirit and pleasures of the world none can deny. The most alarming feature is that prominent preachers lead the way, and the people blindly follow. The New York papers contain an account of

"A TIN WEDDING.—Tuesday evening being the tenth wedding-day of the Rev.——, of the —— church, he gathered his friends together, to the number of over eight hundred, in the spacious lecture-room of his new church. Rev. and Mrs. —— began to enjoy the sport. On some unusual or valuable article in the tin line being given, the Reverend gentleman would feel impelled to make a speech. His remarks would call out replies, which were listened to with great good-humor by all present, who enjoyed the keen sallies of lay or clerical wit. The evening passed away merrily." May we not say devilishly? "We know that God's Spirit writes on truly awakened hearts," the necessity of avoiding evil of every kind.

[NOTE.—Touching the disgraceful scenes of this tin wedding," in Brooklyn, N. Y., the half has not been told. Those familiar with the facts in the case, assure us that the whole proceedings were ridiculous in the extreme, shockingly disgusting, enough to cause angels to weep, and Satan to blush. How is the gold become dim! how is the most fine gold changed! . . . The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold, how are they esteemed? as earthen pitchers.—ED.]

What would John Knox or Jonathan Edwards have thought of a scene like this in the house of God? The Chicago Tribune gives a full report of a

"BANQUET TO BISHOP ——. The supper given to Bishop —— at the Sherman House, Chicago, Ill., attended by upwards of one hundred of the ministers, laymen, and other prominent members of the —— church of this city." The evening was filled out with toasts and responses.

In respect to this affair, a beloved minister, in the traveling connection, writes us, "My soul sickens within me at the sight and the terrible consequences that must follow from such examples."

"Would not John Wesley have denounced, far more strongly than we are capable of doing, the conduct of a Bishop and popular minister in consenting to a banquet being given to honor him in a genteel rum-selling, gambling hotel, where hundreds of our young men are ruined, and that two in the neighborhood of his own house?"

[NOTE.—Think of it, reader, grave bishops, elders, teachers of the meek and lowly Jesus, assembling at a rum-selling, gambling hotel, feast to repletion, drink toasts, crack jokes, make funny speeches, have a jolly time! Could anything please Satan better? —ED.]

Hear St. Peter: "For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries."

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.—1. "Are we to renounce all mirth, be dull and melancholy?" Answer.—Seriousness and solid happiness are inseparable. "I said in my heart, go to now, I will prove thee with mirth, therefore enjoy pleasure; and behold this also is vanity. I said of laughter it is mad, and of mirth what doeth it?" Ecc. 2: 1, 2. "Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful, and the end of that mirth is heaviness." Prov. 14: 13.

2. "Is there not time for all things? Answer.—There is no time for sin and folly.

OBJECTION 3d.—Young people love sport, worldly excitement, fun and frolic, and these they will have more or less, why not then seek something to gratify this natural propensity less objectionable than the theatre, the ball-room or opera-house, choose the least of two evils? Answer.—That is, do evil that good may come," meet the tempter half way. Commit a little sin, to prevent a greater. Serve Satan a little to keep our children from serving him a great deal! What doctrine is this? Whence is it? "If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him." 1 Kings, 18: 21. "Wo to them that call evil good and good evil."

But why is it, friends, that your sons and daughters are thus given to these unholy propensities, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God? slaves to lust, passion, and appetite? Is not the secret of this downward course to ruin owing to parental neglect? The sin of omission in not obeying God in training them "in the way they should go," in the fear and wisdom of God? Children rightly disciplined from early infancy, on Bible principles, will have no relish whatever for these carnal festivities, unholy excitements, fun and frolic, but will turn from them with perfect hatred and disgust.

"The love of God flows just as much
As that of ebbing self subsides."

OBJECTION 4th.—Says one, "We will have a decent or respectable festival, tea, or strawberry party, to raise funds to meet our necessities in the church and Sabbath-school. It shall be opened and closed with religious exercises, reading the Scriptures and prayer. Everything objectionable shall be excluded, foolish talking and jesting, the post-office, grab-boxes, ring-cakes, lotteries, gambling, nightly revellings, intemperance of every kind."

Answer.—"Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard his spots?" "Can a man take coals in his bosom and his clothes not be burned?" Why not talk of a decent or respectable theatre as a "fancy fair?" The thing is wrong in itself. No good cause can ultimately prosper or succeed that is not founded on christian principle, the authority of the Most High. "Wo to them that go down to Egypt for help." The Religious Herald says:

"The fact that 'fairs' make the procurement of means to pay for a house of worship or to purchase a Sunday-school library, simply a matter of buying and selling, resolves itself into a weighty objection to their propriety. They are departures from the New Testament method of meeting the pecuniary necessities of the church, and so far forth must operate against the spirit of self-denial, liberality, and faith which that method calls into action.

"2. Whatever is done by a church, or by a portion of the members for it, should be so done as neither to sacrifice nor to obscure that which distinguishes the church from the world. How totally fairs, festivals, or tea-parties fail to meet this requirement, we need not tarry to depict. They are scenes of mirthfulness and levity, in which men can trace nothing that distinguishes the church from the world."

Besides, the precedent of making God's house a house of merchandise is a dangerous one. When we see the whole world on fire with sin and Satan, shall we add fuel to the flame by our example? "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

"The course of evil
Begins so slowly, and from such slight source,
An infant's hand might stop the breach with clay;
But let the stream get deeper, and philosophy,
Aye, and religion too, shall strive in vain
To turn the headlong current."

"Abstain from all appearance of evil."

CAMPMEETINGS.

BRO. GRANT:—Not many days since, my eyes rested on a piece in an old Crisis of 1864, headed, "Campmeetings," written by Sr. Hastings. Although seven years have passed away, yet I felt as the time is drawing near for campmeetings, it might be a good idea to stir up the minds of the brethren and sisters, by way of remembrance, in re-printing the piece once more in the Crisis. I think it is too good to be lost; too true to be laid aside. The Lord bless the reading of it to the many thousands who read the Crisis, and may there be a reformation in all who read it, for truly we need it in these times of peril. Your sister in the faith of the gospel, looking for the rest that remains for the people of God. SUSAN E. TEEPLE.

Hotchkissville, Ct.

I want to say a few words about campmeetings, as there are to be several of them this season. Our meetings for the last six years have been losing in interest, and but little has been done for the advancement of the Lord's cause. Brethren and sisters come to these meetings from a distance, that they may be benefited; but instead, go home sad, and depressed in spirits, thinking they will never attend another meeting. The question is, What can be done? "Well," says one, "what is the matter?" There are a good many things in the way. Why do we not see the same brotherly love manifested that we did years ago? Let God's word answer. "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." Where does iniquity abound? I reply, everywhere; in the church as well as in the world.

Let us go back and compare the present with the past, and perhaps we can reach the sequel of the whole matter. We heard a message going through the land, "Behold the Lord cometh." The church was awakened; sinners felt their danger; the church lost its selfish interest; meetings were appointed in every direction; and with one united effort they went to work for the Lord, and for the salvation of their fellow-men. We heard no murmuring, no fretting, no hiding of talents, and saying, "Lord, I cannot;" but "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" All seemed anxious and ready to work. Then, campmeetings were a blessing.

The ministering brethren did not spend half their time at the meetings in settling old difficulties, and business matters, for all things were settled up at once, or else there were no troubles. At any rate, they were quiet about them, and did not vex the little flock. All earth's petty trials sank into insignificance before the glorious doctrine of the coming of the Lord. Every prayer and exhortation was so earnest; so full of meaning; so deep with love; so real and heartfelt. O! what confidence in each other; the preaching so powerful, so pure, so honest. And while the man of God was expounding the word, the whole congregation lifted up their hearts in prayer for him. The preacher felt their influence and was strengthened. They did not preach for filthy lucre; they loved not their lives unto death; they were willing to lose their reputation and become the offscouring of all things for Christ's sake.

What was the result of such a course? Why, sinners came flocking to the anxious seat, and the tears rolling down their cheeks, showed there was a deep sorrow for sin within. Sobs and sighs were heard from every quarter from the penitent soul. Ere the morning sun had risen, fervent, earnest prayers were heard from every tent. Then after breakfast the class meetings. The preachers, of course, were among the first to attend these meetings, setting an example for the little flock to follow. At noon it was understood by all, that a general prayer-meeting was to be held at the stand to pray for sinners. Then, you would see the brethren and sisters looking up the lost sheep. The anxious seat was placed before them, and all the sincere and humble came forward. But alas! a great change has come over the church. Preachers have backslidden from God, and gone after the things of the world.

Years have passed, and the Lord tarries, and the church slumbers. God's servants say in their hearts, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and have begun to beat their fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken, mingling with the worldling on terms of equality with him.

So when we come together for a campmeeting it is not with the united purpose of honoring God and saving souls. Some have one object and some another. They feel but little interest for poor sinners, or in the welfare of each other; but think more of having a pleasant, social time, or of riding some questionable hobby, or of wasting God's opportunities in singing popular pieces, than they do of weeping over the judgments, fast coming upon the world.

O! how I have been grieved for my brethren when I have seen the time taken up on the camp-ground in singing. It was impossible under such circumstances to make sinners feel they were lost; impossible to get up a prayer-meeting; for so bewitching is music, that unless it is carried on by the Spirit of the gospel, it is very dangerous to come under its influence. Indulging in this concert singing on the camp-ground drives away the Spirit of God, both from our own hearts, and that of the poor sinner. Our exhortations have no love of God in them; our prayers are faithless and powerless.

These are facts which have been observed by many for more than five years. It is almost impossible to get up a prayer-meeting at the stand, or to make any extra effort to save the sinner. May God preserve us from these things which threaten our ruin, is the prayer of a pilgrim. H. B. HASTINGS.

REST.

C. CASE.

How sweet to the tired, weary, tempest-tossed pilgrim is the word rest. Says the youth, who is under parental restraint, "I shall be so happy when I become of age, and can do as I please." When that time arrives, with it come cares, and the same state of unrest. Then the language of the heart is—"I will settle in life, have some one to help bear life's burdens; then I shall be happy." But is there not, to a great extent, the same feeling of unrest? Over against a fair, prosperous day, is there not placed a foul, stormy one? So it proves to be. But still the vain idea of rest here is lurking within. A change of place is sought, some other locality supposed to be more congenial to happiness is tried, but still the same unrest. Paradise is not restored yet. Says the invalid, who suffers year after year—"O, if I could only regain a comfortable degree of health, how happy I should be." There is no unalloyed happiness here, dear, suffering one; but there is resting by and by, just in the future. There is rest from pain, suffering, disappointment, sorrow, and all other ills of life. There will be no more tears.

Some seek happiness in wealth. Does that insure perfect happiness? It adds to our comfort, but does it not also, oftentimes, add to our cares and sorrows? Some seek happiness in pleasure. Is unalloyed happiness found there? Ask the pleasure-seeker, and he invariably answers, No. Some seek it in honor. Is it to be found there? Never. Their state of mind may be anything but peaceful and happy, while receiving great honor from men. Where shall it be found? Not in this sin-cursed earth; but how hard it is to learn this lesson. Shall we give up in despair, thinking it never can be obtained? Jesus says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

How many times, since I commenced this short article, have I thought of Sister L. B. Weaver in her affliction, from whom just at this present time I received a letter saying she was still suffering excruciating pain, sighing for rest, longing for home. Only a little longer to suffer, dear sister. The long, dark night of weeping is almost ended. She also stated Sister Streeter's health was very poor. Let us remember them in their affliction, remembering Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, . . . ye have done it unto me."

BRINGING IN SHEAVES.

D. N. SMITH.

BRO. GRANT:—I saw an article from Bro. Munger in relation to the campmeeting, and I wish to make a few more suggestions. As he intimates, it is evident that the vitality which characterized these gatherings in former years is now wanting. I can remember when nothing less than a hundred conversions would be considered a successful meeting. The cause of this decline is apparent. In some meetings there is too much show, worldly policy and fashion; in others, too much talking and arguing upon doctrinal subjects; in others, long prayers and exhortations, having no point or definite aim; in others, a want of interest in the welfare of the unconverted. Many professors go to the meeting mainly to rest and get blessed, having no special burden or desire for those out of Christ. Many other causes might be named; but let us come to the point heading this article.

We know that bringing in sheaves from the harvest field is the main cause of the time of rejoicing, when in the harvest-home songs the reapers gather together and look upon the bountiful harvests. But supposing they had folded their arms in the harvest day, and let the sheaves stand in the field ungathered, they would have to cry leanness in the soul, leanness in the garner. There would be no harvest-home song, no time of rejoicing. Now this is a true figure of the harvesters in the Lord's vineyard. There are many christians who wish to be blessed, and enjoy communion with God; but forget that the conditions upon which God blesses his people are, that they try and bless others, and in no other way can they retain their vitality and communion with him; and what is true of an individual christian is also true of a church or campmeeting. Let the watchword of the meeting be salvation, free and full, for saint and sinner; no side issues, no long sermons or prayers or exhortations; no gossiping, or much visiting; but a settling down into the will of God, and entire consecration to him. When the people of God make this consecration, the car of salvation moves easy. The unconverted come almost of their own will, needing but little urging.

In conclusion, we would say to all who are intending to go up to this feast, have a definite object in view, and let it be the salvation of sinners; then all will go home singing with a glad heart, bringing sheaves with them. If this was the key-note of all the labors of the church through the year, we should not hear so much complaint about divisions and trouble with brethren and sisters. Gather in the sheaves before the storm which is gathering bursts upon the world and they be left in the field to perish.

CORRECTION.

In the report of the Council held in Portland, June 28th, the original resolve (5th) read as follows:

"Resolved, That the two parties have both erred in steps taken to effect a union."

The resolution was made "milk and water" after the Council had dissolved and the larger number had left the city. As one of the Council, I did see much that was wrong, and I do not believe it was wholly accidental.

LITTLE LEAKS.—"An occasional absence from church or the prayer meeting, a little shortening of private devotions, a trifle less for religious duties, will do me no harm," reflected a youthful christian. But in a few months she mourned,

THE LITTLE NEWS-BOY.

One evening, after the tidings of a victory had filled the city with excitement, and created a brisk business among the news-dealers, a little fellow about seven years old came into the sitting-room of the hotel to sell his papers.

"Papers, sir? Papers?" said he.

A man sitting by seemed to fancy his intelligent looks, and said, with an oath,

"Come here, my lad, you are a fine boy. Let me have a paper," drawing the boy to his side.

The paper was furnished, and an extra price given for it, the man swearing again that he was a fine boy, and asking him:—

"What is your father's name?"

"My father is dead," said the boy.

"Well," said the man, "I must take you as my boy," and again he swore. "I'll make a man of you," said he.

The boy made no answer, but still seemed rather shy of his new-found friend.

"Say, my fine fellow," said the man, who kept swearing almost every sentence:—"How would you like to come and live with me, and be a great man some day?"

"I think," said the boy, quietly, "that I should not like to live with a man that swears so."

The man was silent;—what could he say? And the little boy went on to sell his papers.

The fatherless boy was wise; for a man who curses and swears is a poor person to train a little boy for usefulness or happiness in this world or the next.

A little Swedish girl in Maine left the place where she had been at work. She liked the people, and they were very kind to her, but she would not stay in a house where they did not pray.

A godless house is a poor home for a little child. It is better to have poverty with Christ than riches with those who blaspheme his name.—The Little Christian.

ONLY ONE.

Little Emily was knitting a tidy for her grandmother. The stitch was new to her, and it required strict attention not only at the beginning but all the way through. Emily was doing it very nicely; but she stopped to look at her little brother Eddie playing with his new ball, and she knit one stitch wrong. But it was one stitch, so Emily thought it would not do any harm, and she would not rip it out; so she kept on knitting. But still she could not make it come out right. She had to take more wrong stitches; but it would not do. That one wrong stitch was at the root of it all. It was almost done. But it must be ripped out. If Emily had only stopped when she first saw the evil, she would have very little to rip out; and all would have been well.

It is just so in life, dear children. "One false step demands another." If you tell one lie, you may be sure it will not stop at that. You must tell another to hide that one. Do not think, "Well, it is only one; it won't harm to tell one." Rip it out at first; or, what is better, "never begin."—Temperance Banner.

DANGERS OF FLESH-EATING.

Mr. Seth Hunt, of Northampton, Mass., who has been a consistent vegetarian for a quarter of a century, communicates the following article to the Northampton Free Press:—

"It has long been known that a malignant poison lurks in dead flesh at a certain stage of its ever swift movement toward decay. The prick of a needle which had been in contact with an anatomical subject has been known to prove a deadly wound. And who can determine that unseen point at which putrefaction begins? The recent developments at Brighton make the nature of dead flesh a live question, or rather re-open what should always be a matter of vital concern to mankind. Although there are many other reasons why flesh is not the proper food of man, yet I consider the fact of its tendency to rapid putrefaction is of itself a good reason for abstaining from its use as food. Flesh, if eaten, should be quickly digested; and if not thus digested, should be speedily ejected from the system. And it is, in view of these facts, it seems to me, that nature has made the alimentary canal of the flesh-eating animals much shorter than that of the vegetable-eaters. Man has an alimentary tube of great length, adapted to the nature of vegetable food. Now, if man, or any other vegetable eating animal, eat flesh, and that flesh is imperfectly digested, or retained too long in the alimentary canal, it will putrefy and become the source of malignant disease. Vegetable food, particularly the grains, is slower to decay than flesh; and, when putrefied, is not so poisonous as decayed animal matter."—Health Reformer.

EATING WITHOUT APPETITE.

It is wrong to eat without appetite, for it shows there is no gastric juice in the stomach and that nature does not feed food; and there not being any fluid to receive and act upon, it would remain there only to putrefy, the very thought of which should be sufficient to deter any man from eating without an appetite, for the remainder of his life. If a "tonic" is taken to whet the appetite, it is a mistaken course; for its only result is to cause one to eat more, when already an amount has been eaten beyond what the gastric juice supplied is able to prepare. The object to be obtained is a larger supply of gastric juice, not a larger supply of food, and whatever fails to accomplish that essential object fails to have any efficiency toward the cure of dyspeptic diseases; and as the formation of gastric juice as directed is directly proportioned to the wear and waste of the system, which is to be the means of supplying, and this wear and waste can only take place as the result of exercise, the point is reached again that the efficient remedy for work—out door work—beneficial and successful in direct proportion as it is agreeable, interesting, and profitable.—Sel.

BUTTER AND WORMS.—There is no doubt that the larvæ of the various worms which infest the alimentary canal of children, and, frequently, too, of adults, are taken in with the food. Greasy substances are apt to abound with them. In a late German medical journal, a Dr. Huber relates many experiments he has made on this subject, and he comes to the conclusion that no article used by man as food, especially during childhood, is so prolific a cause of intestinal worms as butter. The use of butter serves also for the introduction of various insects, as well as worms; and as American children seldom eat bread without a thick coating of butter, the general prevalence of intestinal worms need not be wondered at.—Health Reformer.

REMEDY FOR THE TOOTHACHE.—The following application is said to be a prompt and generally efficient remedy for toothache, or neuralgic affections arising from teeth in any state of decay: Saturate a small bit of clean cotton with a strong solution of ammonia, and apply it immediately to the affected tooth. The pleasing contrast instantaneously produced in some cases causes a fit of laughter, although a moment previous extreme suffering and anguish prevailed. A correspondent of the Scientific American says he has used the remedy for over one year, and obtained sufficient proof of valuable results to warrant its publication.

"I KNOW THY WORKS, AND THY LABOR, AND THY PATIENCE."—Rev. 2: 2.

Go, labor on! spend and be spent,
Thy joy to do thy Father's will;
It is the way the Master went,
Should not the servant tread it still?

Go, labor on! 'tis not for nought,
All earthly loss is heavenly gain!
Men heed thee not, men praise thee not,
The Master praises,—what are men?

Go, labor on! while it is day,
The long dark night is hastening on;
Speed, speed thy work—up from thy sloth;
It is not thus that souls are won.

See thousands dying at thy side,
Your brethren, kindred, friends at home;
See millions perishing afar;
Haste, brethren, to the rescue come!

Toil on, toil on; thou soon shalt find
For labor rest, for exile home;
Soon shalt thou hear the Bridegroom's voice,
The midnight cry, "Behold, I come!"

IMMORTALITY BROUGHT TO LIGHT; HOW?

C. E. BARNES.

"Our Savior Jesus Christ . . . hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." 2 Tim. 1: 10.

A thing that is lost to us, that is completely hidden from our view, and then is afterward found, may be properly spoken of as having been brought to light. And the term "brought to light" can be properly used upon no other occasion. If a thing be not wholly lost to us, not wholly hidden from our view (however dimly we may see it), if afterward it is more clearly seen by us, we could properly say that light had been cast upon it, but not that the thing itself had been brought to light, as it was already perceived by us, though but dimly. I think it important that this difference between bringing a thing to light, and the casting of light upon an already dimly perceived object, should be clearly apprehended, and then we shall stand a fair chance of getting a correct idea of the meaning of Paul's words above.

Suppose it to be true, what many affirm, that "the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is the foundation of the christian religion"; then of course Jesus must have taught it. Further, these same theologians tell us, at least some of them do, that there is no future life revealed in the Old Testament; its promisings and threatenings, say they, relate solely to this life, and that it was reserved for Jesus to bring to light the great truth of man's immortality. But if this be the meaning of Paul's words, that Jesus brought life and immortality to light by teaching the immortality of the soul, then he was surely mistaken about Jesus bringing it to light, for the Egyptians taught it centuries before Christ, and from them it was borrowed by the Greeks and others, until at the time of Christ's advent the notion was quite extensively held. How, then, could it be properly said that Christ brought it to light? If he said aught in reference to it, would it not be more correct to say that he made the doctrine to be more clearly seen? that although it had been believed in prior to his time, still it was but dimly perceived, and that he cast great light upon it? Surely, it would not be true to say that Christ brought the doctrine to light, when it had been believed in and taught by heathen philosophers for years.

The only true hope and sure basis of a future life and immortality is found in the gospel of Christ. It is the only system that gives any hope beyond the grave; and Paul so thought when he spoke of "others," in his letter to the Thessalonians, as sorrowing with "no hope." Chap. 4: 13. A man with the knowledge Paul had must have known that the heathen did profess to believe in a life beyond death, and that they based their expectations upon the belief that what they supposed to be the real man, the spirit, survived the dissolution of the material organism. Now if this doctrine of the survivance of the spirit in consciousness be true; and further, if it be the "foundation of christianity," how could Paul consistently say that they had "no hope," when their belief was based upon this very "foundation of christianity"? And by his words of consolation in the ensuing verses, wherein he directs their minds to the resurrection, is it not plainly to be seen that he wholly ignores this belief of man's surviving death, when he says that those who believe it have "no hope"? Would our orthodox teachers, who hold this to be a fundamental truth, so speak of a sect that did believe it, although they might reject all notions of the resurrection? No, they would not. Paul, [illegible] with them this doctrine, ignored by while wh[illegible] the foundation of christianity, [illegible] urrection—is really its main pillar—[illegible] ary importance. [illegible]ed to be of only second-

Christianity is not [illegible] teaches a future life; [illegible] agan religion that [illegible] Mohammedanism teaches it; [illegible] teaches it. But while all agree thus far, they do so no further. The corner stone of Paganism is—what? It deifies its dead heroes, and teaches its devotees to pray to and worship them. What is its corner-stone? Their belief in the immortality of the soul. Strike that from under it, and the whole system falls.

What is the main pillar of Spiritualism? This same doctrine, that death is the gate to life. Disprove it, and Spiritualism falls. And what is the basis of the gospel hope? On what does it depend? Is it this same doctrine that is the underlying principle of Paganism and Spiritualism? No! but it is a doctrine that is peculiar to christianity, and which the others set aside, namely, the resurrection of the dead. Let it be proved that man is mortal, and these other systems can give him no hope; but in the gospel we find a doctrine that does give hope, even to mortal men; let it be proved that death causes men to die, and the gospel still makes provision for them; let it be proved that "David is not ascended into the heavens" (Acts 2: 34); let it be proved that all those worthies mentioned in the epistle to the Hebrews "died in faith, not having received the promises" (chap. 11: 13); and their hope is yet good, for they trusted not in their own immortality, "but in God which raiseth the dead." 2 Cor. 1: 9.

And this is the truth that Christ demonstrated to the world: that dead men can be made alive again. This is the truth that has been brought to light through the gospel; this is a truth that natural religion could never have revealed; this is a truth that unaided reason could never have found out. And this is the truth that dispels the mist of uncertainty, and demonstrates with clearness that beyond the valley and shadow of death, there is life; that

"Beyond life's raging fever,
Beyond life's troubled dream,
Beyond death's surging river,
Beyond that sullen stream;
Beyond this land of sighing,
Where countless tears are shed,
Beyond the sick and dying,
Beyond the mouldering dead;
Beyond earth's weary burden,
The cross, the scourge, the rod,
The saints shall dwell in glory,—
The saints shall dwell with God."

To say that Christ brought to light the doctrine of inherent immortality is not true; but he did bring to light life and immortality through the gospel, by teaching the doctrine of a resurrection from the dead, and by himself dying, and resuming life after three days.

JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"We see Jesus."—Heb. 2: 9.

The true christian sees nothing else. Wherever he goes, in whatever business he engages, whether in the crowded streets, or in the lovely field, whether tossed on ocean's waves, or quietly gathered in the home circle, still he sees Jesus. Jesus is his theme. Jesus first, Jesus last. Jesus all the time. Jesus, Jesus, Jesus.

O what blessed thoughts spring up at the sound of that dear name. How delightful the remembrance connected with it. How fragrant its associations.

"Jesus all the day long
Was my joy and my song;
O that more his salvation might see;
Thou hast loved me, I cried,
Thou hast suffered and died,
To redeem such a rebel as me."

What a privilege it must have been to associate with Jesus when he was on the earth. How blessed to see his face, to hear his voice, to travel with him, to be loved by him, to follow him, to be in his immediate presence; to go with him to Bethany, to Olivet, to Galilee, to Jerusalem, to wander with him through the fields and o'er the hills of Palestine, as he went about "doing good." O how heavenly, how exalted such a privilege. Well might Jesus say to his disciples, "Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see; for I tell you that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them." Luke 10: 23, 24.

From the earliest times, Christ had been promised. Patriarchs, kings, prophets, and holy men prophesied and sung in hopeful strains concerning him who was to come. They saw Jesus. Their faith laid hold of the promises, and they rejoiced in sweet anticipation of coming deliverance. From Genesis to Malachi, the Old Testament is full of Jesus. He was seen in types and shadows, in promises and predictions. Jesus in shame, and Jesus in glory; Jesus suffering, and Jesus reigning; Jesus coming to save, and Jesus coming in kingly beauty, was the theme of the prophets' meditations. The Holy Spirit, which was in them, testified beforehand concerning the "sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." They watched and waited, and hoped and prayed, but died without beholding the Blessed One. At length, however, the dawn appeared. Lo, and behold, in the east this star arises. Wise men follow its guiding rays until it halts above the manger, and there in poverty and humility, with wonder and unspeakable joy, they gaze upon the heavenly babe. It is Jesus. But hark! all heaven is alive with rapture. See, yonder, wheeling in glittering ranks o'er the plains of Bethlehem a multitude of the heavenly host. Listen, hear them sing. "Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace, good will to men." The long expected Savior has come, and a new era has dawned upon the world. "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." From Bethlehem's manger, we see Jesus fulfilling, in the various events of his life and experience, all the jots and tittles of prophecy, which have a bearing upon his first advent; demonstrating, beyond the possibility of a doubt, that he was the Son of God.

O what a lovely and wonderful being is Jesus. Who does not love to trace his history as sketched in the gospels. We see him in yonder garden and on the cross. O how intense his agony! See, depicted in his countenance, all the sad emotions of his heart. See the bloody sweat, the purple robe, the crown of thorns, the gory cross. Hear the groans of agony, as the heavens gather blackness, and God forsakes his only begotten Son, while he dies on the accursed tree. Behold him in these tragic scenes.

Well might the sun in darkness hide,
And angels lay their harps aside;
Rocks rend asunder, mountains shake,
While Jesus doth atonement make.

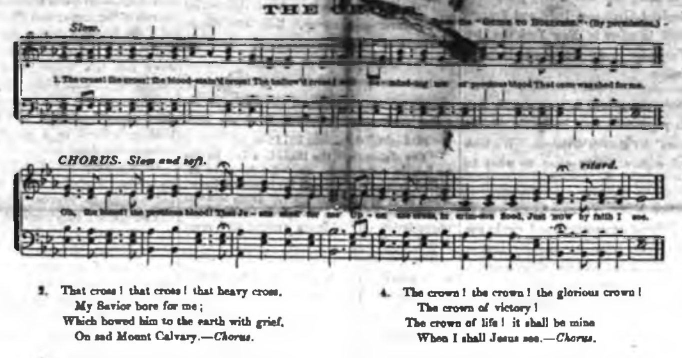
I have sometimes imagined that if ever the devils rejoiced it was at this hour, when the Savior died, and was locked in Joseph's tomb. But, thank God, their triumph was but momentary. On the morning of the third day we see an angel flying from the courts of glory, robed with light and power. He rolls the stone away, and sits upon it; and, behold, Jesus comes forth a victorious conqueror to die no more. Glory to God, Jesus lives again. He shows himself to his disciples by many infallible proofs, and instructs them in the things concerning the kingdom of God; and now the hour has arrived for him to depart. He leads them out a little way to Mount Olivet, and lifting his hands and pronouncing his parting blessing, he ascends to his Father's right hand. See those disciples gazing after their departing Lord. How they loved him. But angels are there to comfort their hearts with the assurance that he shall come back again, in like manner as they had seen him go.

Now, says the apostle, we see Jesus crowned with glory and honor. He has tasted death for every man. He has conquered his foes, and ascended in triumph to his Father's house on high. My fancy pictures him there before the throne. Gaze upon him yonder, crowned with glory and honor.

"Majestic sweetness sits enthroned
Upon the Savior's brow;
His head with radiant glory's crowned,
His lips with grace o'erflow."

Christian, let Jesus be the object of your contemplation. Run the race with patience, looking unto him. Let him fill the vision of your mind. Gaze upon him until your heart is melted, and you are transformed into his image. Minister, preach Jesus. Humble self, and exalt Jesus. Hold him up as the Savior of men. Have your heart full of his love, and if you meet occasionally with some who are anxiously saying, "We would see Jesus," point them to him, saying with the beloved John, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world"; and soon that other announcement will be realized, "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him." "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

THE [illegible]



Slow.
1. The cross! the cross! the blood-stain'd cross! The hallow'd cross I see! Re-mind-ing me of precious blood That once was shed for me.
CHORUS. Slow and soft.
ritard.
Oh, the blood! the precious blood! That Je-sus shed for me Up-on the cross, in crim-son flood, Just now by faith I see.

2. That cross! that cross! that heavy cross,
My Savior bore for me;
Which bowed him to the earth with grief,
On sad Mount Calvary.—Chorus.

3. How light! how light! this precious cross!
Presented to my view;
And while, with care, I take it up,
Behold the crown my due.—Chorus.

4. The crown! the crown! the glorious crown!
The crown of victory!
The crown of life! it shall be mine
When I shall Jesus see.—Chorus.

5. My tears, unbidden, seem to flow
For blessings from above,
Which guide me through this world of woe
To one of peace and love.—Chorus.

"BEHOLD THE MAN."

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

"Jesus cried and said, he that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me. And he that seeth me, seeth him that sent me. I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness."—John 12: 44, 45, 46.

Among those who came up to worship at the feast, were certain Greeks who desired to see Jesus. Finding Philip, they made known this desire to him, saying, "Sir, we would see Jesus."

What other person that has lived on earth since the creation, is, or can be, so desirable for mortals to see as Jesus? And the desire to see him was great, almost universal, at the time he was on earth. Shepherds left their flocks to go and see him. Wise men came from afar to see the young child, and they found the babe lying in a manger." Luke 2: 16. And when he began his public ministry, and the fame of his woodrous works was spread abroad, multitudes thronged him, pressed upon him "to hear the word of God," and to be healed by him of their diseases. The "common people heard him gladly," and "many among the chief rulers believed on him." One came to him by night, another climbed a tree to see him, and even Herod "was desirous to see him," and when he saw him "he was exceeding glad." Luke 23: 8. Then Herod asked him many questions, but Jesus did not reply. Herod being angry, "set him at nought," with his men of war, and arrayed him in a gorgeous purple robe, and sent him again to Pilate. The soldiers also made a crown of thorns and put it on his head. Then Pilate brought him forth to the people, and said, "I find no fault in him." "Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man!" Soon afterward he says, "Behold your king!"

Who that reads or hears this, will look to Jesus now. Who is in need of a physician? Let all such look to Jesus. Who is in need of help in any way? Look to Jesus. Believe on him, trust in him, obey him, and surely it shall be well with you. Backsliders, turn from your ways, and look to Jesus.

All ye who love life, and desire to see good days, look to Jesus. Ye who are seeking for peace and rest, look to Jesus. He says "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation" for you. Then behold the man!

There is no other name under heaven, given among men, whereby you can be saved. Then look to Jesus now; look and live, for soon it will be too late. For "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." Are you quite ready for that day? If you are pure in heart, and holy in life, then you may lift up your head and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh. But if there is any defect, any fault, any bitterness, any sin unpardoned, any stain that is not washed away, repent and look to Jesus. "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." Look unto him, and be ye saved; for there is salvation in no other.

SPIRIT, WHAT IS IT?

WM. A. FENN.

The grand theological blunder of the world arises from a misapprehension of the above question. The innate desire for life, which characterizes man and beast, has been the source of very great speculation in the human family. The darkness of the confines of death chills the very blood of all who stop to think that, sooner or later, worms will riot in our very beings; and the dread caused from such a view of what awaits us has taxed the genius of heathen philosophers, with the civilized world, in striving to evade this dark and unwelcome destiny. The changes which reduce us back to dust have been watched with intense interest by all men, in all ages of the world.

The condition of man in death seemed the all-absorbing matter of study. The various conclusions arrived at, however, were the result of conjecture, or opinion, which was by no means founded upon any scientific basis. The ability which characterizes the physiology and anatomy of the nineteenth century, was not the condition of things when the popular view of man's state in death was conceived. The science of astronomy anciently could see no further into the solar system than to conclude that the earth was the grand centre of God's universe, and sun, moon and stars were all tributary to this centre, and each performed its revolutions around the earth once in twenty-four hours.

The system of circulation of the blood, in the ages of undeveloped science, was anything but correct. Science can push her investigations into heaven itself, and point out each and every body in our solar system, and traverse every avenue of man's being, and with the scalpel and microscope the minutest particles are laid open to view; and all cheerfully submit to the verdict she brings in, although her researches expose long established errors.

Why should we sit so well at ease relative to man's religious views, while they are the developments of days of ignorance and barbarism? No divine of the present day takes the stand in defense of the popular view of spirit nature, without plunging at once into Egyptian mummery and Platonic superstitions; and then the whole force of heathendom is marshaled in the train, each and all bearing witness to the heathen dogma of man's spirit nature, and in favor of an uninterrupted consciousness to all eternity.

Science may change its base of operations at option, and all bow in humble reverence to its claims. Heathen ideas in that direction do not go down with the masses. But let her dare to question the claim that man's composition favors the heathen idea of inherent immortality; and sage and poet, the wild barbarian, and the civilized philanthropist, with Pope, bishop, priest and layman, each and all are in battle array at once, ready to contest this soul-stirring interest to the last. Why is it? We answer, because of the dread of death. The future, by way of a resurrection, looks so dark and uncertain, that the weakness of faith fills the mind with doubt, and unless men can see some type, or centre, around which God himself can build a future existence for them, they shut their eyes to truth, and rush into infidelity, Spiritualism, and every other inconsiderate remedy for their despairing hearts. Let the divine decree sound in our ears, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was"; let the faithful researches of anatomy and physiology reiterate the sayings of holy writ, and thus prove the truth of man's mortality; and the vain hope after some sunny land in the spirit-world will turn pale and shudder at the thought of death. Let the attention be arrested, and the thoughts turned into another channel, and we become wild with enthusiasm, as facts come crowding in to the support of the unwelcome truth, that "man is of the earth, earthy."

Even when we are hurled from our old platform of faith by the irresistible power of incontrovertible truth, we clamber for a foothold upon its rotten foundation; and, amid sighs and tears, we feel for the horns of the altar, and in an agony of soul plead for strength of faith to believe in a future existence, by way of a resurrection from the dead. The very reluctance with which we relinquish our old ideas seems to convert itself into a weapon of defense against the advance of new ones. We construe our feelings of opposition into evidence against the thing brought for our adoption. We grasp, as a drowning man, the least atom that strikes our darkened vision, and hold on to it till the grappling irons of truth bring us to the surface, where the sunlight of gospel day illumines our vision, so that we begin to exercise confidence in the hand that has rescued us.

The force of a mother's words, when she told us we were immortal, seem to ring in our hearts, even after they were proven false by the most obstinate facts. The seemingly intuitive convictions that we are not to end our conscious state at the door of death, are rather the fruits of early training, than the spontaneous developments of untutored mind. The heathen, in his dread of death, has grasped the thought that the something that is wanting to constitute animation, after the body is inanimate, is a rational spirit. He has changed its form and capacity to suit his vain imaginations. At one time he would imagine it an immaterial essence, and at another time it would appear to his mind to be possessed of all the propensities of corporeal being.

The diversity of views relative to the origin of this spirit-entity, which characterizes the speculative productions of modern divines, seems almost a parallelism with the heathen dogmas relative to man's state in death. How often we hear it said, "I could never bear the thought of lying in the grave till the resurrection." From this very dread, the vain hope that by some way we shall escape death, has crept into the heart. The chances were no less favorable, of course, to such an idea, when light and knowledge were vastly less than they are now. We need not argue that this idea was embraced by the heathen, if they did not first conceive it; and when so flattering an idea is once established, it is not an easy matter to root it out, although every shade of evidence to sustain it may be completely annihilated. Like the inebriate, with the fact of certain ruin fully before him, we will hope against hope, and turn our eyes from the realities of our being, and on the wings of fancy float amid the groundless fields of air castles.

The stretch of imagination will conform to almost any extravagance that desire may picture or hope gild. Its elasticity defies confinement to truth and realities, and away we fly to mines of gold, or beds of pearls, or halls of regal honor; and as it paints in such rainbow colors the beautiful and fairy scenes of its wild ramblings, the heart in its folly swells with rapture, and up springs hope and flatters us that, because we desire all this, it is therefore for us to obtain. In short, "because we desire immortality, it is therefore an evidence that we have it."

Thus reasons the modern divine, and thus reasoned the ancient barbarian. No more absurd argument could be raised, however, as it is really an argument against the claim it is used to back; as we are disposed to strive for and desire what we have not, rather than what we have.

The first experience of the speculator is characterized by the most glowing visions of success, even of that which proves an utter failure. The faculty of hope impels us on, when the most obstinate forces of opposition to the object for which we are striving meet us at every step. If we fail, we struggle for a foothold again, even in matters which are open to our natural vision, and which, from their very nature, forbid success. Much more would we naturally cling to the unseen matters of faith, when once the heart embraces them. The eye of the child lights up with joy, as his imagination paints in glowing colors the objects his childish heart desires. This is not a freak of childhood, strictly speaking; but a freak of humanity. It is the foundation of every ambitious engagement in the fruitless enterprises of the world. It no less forms the basis of each and every groundless expectation, and is the cause of every unwarranted anticipation. The joy anticipated relative to a simple fancy, never to become a reality, is no less in the anticipation than when we anticipate a real thing.

Upon this principle, we see how the mass of the christian world are passing along with nothing but an imaginary hope, so far as time and place of reward are concerned. They have embraced a wrong view of spirit-nature. They have converted that which is but a principle into an entity; and hence each passage of Scripture, in which they find spirit-element or force connected with man, they grasp as an evidence that they are to have what they desire, and have conceived to be true, before coming to the Bible. The hope of being transported to the realms of glory at death found its way into the heart before we learned how to read the Bible. A mother, or father, or some friend, led our minds in that channel in early life. The common-place idea is that we received such and such views from the Bible; but it is a mistake; and the source of most of our early religious training is the channel of tradition.

Let the reader endeavor to recollect at what time of his life he learned the popular claim that he possessed an immortal soul, or spirit; and he will find that the thought was among the earliest of his recollections. Then let him consider that this thought has received constant cultivation through every avenue of civil and religious life, and no longer wonder that it has become a second nature to him to believe it without a doubt.

In the relinquishment of the favorite dogma of man's inherent immortality, we have to encounter a formidable foe. The dignity of institutions of learning are terrible to overcome. The lesser dignity of the pulpit, mingled with the universal support of the laity, presents a front that is well calculated to render the honest conviction of our hearts dormant, and deter us in our most sanguine efforts. The grand work of human redemption, which characterizes the religious world of to-day, is far from being calculated to expose internal errors. The grand centre of their faith is taken for granted, and the work performed is more of a transmissive nature than evolutionary. On minor points, each successive denomination has thought to be instrumental of light. But the groundwork of the hope of Christendom is the same the world over; and the doctrine of man's inherent immortality constitutes the warp, filling, and coloring of the entire fabric. Take this element from their hymns, and the poet's wings are clipped at once. Take it from their literary productions, and they would suddenly collapse. Dismantle the pulpit orator of this pet idea, and he finds nothing upon which to soar to worlds of etherial fancy. Deny the ignorant but honest christian this imaginary spring of life, and he looks into the dark grave hopeless.

Let Christendom come down to the simple fact of a resurrection of the dead, as the only hope of a future being, and seven-tenths would rush to the ranks of infidelity. The grand secret of the tenacity with which all cling to this darling spirit-hope is to be found in their lack of faith. A future existence is a matter of necessity with the popular idea of man's nature; hence, faith is left out of the question only so far as it pertains to place of existence. Why cannot all see that spirit is a principle, not a being? It is used in the same relationship that we use the term breath, air, etc.

We have no more authority to personify it than we have breath. "His breath goeth forth," etc. Ps. 146: 4. "Thou takest away their breath, they die." Ps. 104: 29. The same original word (ruach) is rendered breath in the 29th verse, and spirit in the 30th verse. The simple idea is, that through the spirit, or breath, we are rendered animate; not that the breath or spirit is an animate creature, but an animating principle. Let these few thoughts find a place for due reflection in our hearts, and we are relieved of a monstrous error.

PIC-NIC RELIGION.

"Sitting down to eat and drink, and rising up to play."

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD—CHRIST AND BELIAL.

(Concluded.)

Annual Fairs, Agricultural.—Are these promotive of temperance and virtue? Are they not frequently if not always gotten up by speculators, selfish, money-loving men? A beloved minister of the gospel in Madison county, New York, informs us that these fairs are exceedingly corrupting and demoralizing. And strange to say, not a few professing christians lend their hands in sustaining this iniquity in high places—intemperance, licentiousness, Sabbath desecration, and gambling in various forms. Hear this beloved minister in his own words:

"Dear Bro. N.——There is a very great and popular evil in our midst, which you and other good men, it seems, have failed hitherto to expose. I allude to annual fairs in nearly every county town. They are the curse of the land. Their demoralizing influences are shocking—God-defying. The people are gulled, many of them swallow a sugar-coated pill of Satan, greedily and in some cases innocently. Above all, I regret to inform you that church-members unite in sustaining these fairs, gotten up chiefly by rum-sellers and gamblers to line their own pockets. I care not how pure the motive in the outset with which these annual gatherings may have been introduced, they are now mainly in the hands of ungodly men. Drinking to drunkenness, gambling, horse-racing, circus-ridings, puppet-showings, lewdness, and profanity are the order of the day—go hand in hand. I beseech you, in the name of God, raise your voice like a thunder-clap against this increasing abomination."

What are we coming to?—The amount of peculation, embezzlement, and fraud committed in our cities, much of which is kept from the public eye, is perfectly enormous. High living, fast teams on Central Park, flashy jewelry, novels and romances, costly wardrobes, the opera and restaurants use up our young men, and in the morning of their life they become bankrupt in character and purse, and their sun goes down while [illegible] day.

Says the Earnest Christian: "The emissaries of Satan are doing all they possibly can, by means of the thousand-tongued printing-press, to scatter the seeds of moral desolation and death everywhere throughout the breadth and length of the land. They appear in the form of novels, licentious tales, obscene books, pamphlets and papers; also in periodicals professedly devoted to the promulgation of Bible truth, but which are thoroughly impregnated with deadly theological errors—errors that will insure the damnation of all those who embrace them. This pernicious literature is thrust upon the people in all possible ways, and in all possible places. And the very worst feature in this case is, that many prominent ministers and members of Protestant denominations, as well as Catholics, are actually engaged in the spread of the soul-damning publications. Henry Ward Beecher, one of the most popular preachers, writes a novel, and for a large sum of money allows it to be published in a paper devoted to the pampering of the corrupted tastes of lost sinners; and then with his clerical robes still wrapped around him, allows it to be dramatized and acted in the principal theatres of the country, thus lending his great influence to aid on the work of soul destruction, while he still claims to be a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ! And then, to cap the climax of this absurdity and wickedness, the book is advertised for pay, and offered as a premium for subscribers, by some of the principal religious papers of the country!* Various other novels, vicious in tendency, are unblushingly advertised in these same religious papers (?), as if there was no sin in such advertisements.

Serving two masters; like priest, like people.—"During the past summer we have seen ministers in high standing play hours at croquet, and at evening, before the people, lead the social prayer-meeting. We have seen three doctors of divinity, and one promising candidate for that honor, playing nine-pins at the same alley. We have seen leading ministers of different denominations, in a large parlor, lead the assembly in 'amusement' at charades, conundrums, and other like sports, and with no misgivings preach and administer communion a Sabbath after. We are growing in the wisdom that attains flowers without thorns, and without fruit. We are adopting a cross disarmed of its nails and wreathed with roses, a flowery bed of ease, whereon to be carried to the skies. In absence of the music of heaven, we are lulled and charmed by the music of the opera. The sword of the Spirit, 'sharp and piercing to the dividing asunder of joints and marrow,' is muffled with flowers of poppy, a wand of sensuous soothing and spiritual numbness."

New Year's Visitations.—The custom of visiting from house to house on the first day of the new year, partaking to surfeiting rich and costly dainties, whence is it? Whence these unwholesome viands spread out temptingly to the lust of the eye, to the gratification of the carnal appetite, from above or from beneath? Aside from the enormous expenditure on these pernicious condiments, worse than lost, look at the frequent accompaniments, the intoxicating bowl, the sparkling death and distilled damnation! How many young men see (when too late) this stratagem? How many date their downward course to ruin from these New Year's visitations, become dissipated sots, and go down prematurely to a drunkard's grave.

"Who sows to winds, the whirlwind reaps,
And life's great end confounds;
Then be, ye stewards, wise to escape
The wrath that knows no bounds."

This mischievous custom of eating and drinking to excess, this criminal waste of God's bounty, is not confined to the world or to the men of the world, but to very many professing godliness. "Wo to him that giveth his neighbor drink." Who suffers like woman from intemperance? Who drinks to the dregs the cup of bitterness like the drunkard's wife but the delicately reared daughter of her who controlled the fashions, and would have wine at her parties? There is not a lady who sets before young men the intoxicating cup, concerning whom we may not say, "Father, forgive her, she knows not what she does." When the destinies of men are unfolded, in the final day, how many of the lost will reflect with anguish on female influence!

"O shun the bowl, as thou wouldst leave
The poisoned spot where reptiles tread,
Lest widows' hearts for thee should grieve,
For thee unlikely tears be shed."

In Conclusion—We are commanded not to love the world, neither the things of the world. "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed." "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." "Ye are the salt of the earth." "A city set on a hill." "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people." Lively stones; a spiritual house to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God." "Be ye holy, for I am holy."

* This same clerical gentleman advocates public billiard tables, the work of Satan, for the amusement of the rising age!

GOD is every day estimating churches. He puts a great church into the scales. He puts the minister, and the choir, and the grand structure that costs hundreds of thousands of dollars on the same side. On the other side of the scales he puts the idea of spiritual life that the church ought to possess, or brotherly love, or faith or sympathy for the poor. Up goes the grand meeting-house, with its minister and choir. God says that a church is of much worth only as it saves souls; and if, with all your magnificent machinery, you save but a handful of men when you might save a multitude, he will spew you out of his mouth. Weighed and found wanting!

☞ BEWARE of that fatal distinction between the man as a christian and the man as a citizen—the man as a man of business, which has grown out of the misunderstanding of the principle laid down by our Lord. Christian saint, christian worshiper, christian citizen, christian merchant, christian parent, be christian wholly. Refuse to touch a thing in any department of your activity which will not square with your christian ideas and aims.

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 23, 1871.

☞ Please Remember!
☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Take Notice!
☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable in Advance, at the rate of $2.00 a year.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Campmeetings are about to be held in all of the New England States, throughout which there are many subscribers to the Crisis, who are owing for the same—some largely in arrears. We purpose to have an Agent at the several meetings to receive the dues on the paper, as also to receive the names of new subscribers. And we do earnestly request those who are owing to make a special effort to pay at these meetings. Those who do not go themselves, will please send a portion, at least, of what they owe, by some one of their friends who may be going, and thus do your duty in this matter, and help the office. At any rate, let every one owing for the Crisis for one, two, three, or more years, do something without any further delay.

AG'T.

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

There is much interest being awakened throughout Christian nations on the subject of the immediate and personal coming of Christ. Those who have been hitherto uninterested in this important and sublime event are now examining it with special attention, and are astonished at the amount of evidence in favor of the doctrine. Candid people, who love Christ, have only to look over the vast amount of strong evidence found in the prophecies of the Scriptures, in connection with the history of the past, the signs of the times, and the leadings of the Holy Spirit, to be satisfied that we are very near the glorious day when we can see our dear Savior face to face, and be glorified with him in his coming kingdom.

We believe the time has come for all christians to make a full, entire consecration of their all to Christ, then lift up their heads and rejoice because their "redemption draweth nigh." We have passed through the symbolical imagery of Daniel and John, which represents the history of the four great monarchies of earth, the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman, until we have arrived among the last jots and tittles, the last pencilings of the prophets concerning the Papal power. This anti-christian, politico-ecclesiastical system was to lose its "dominion" a short time before the coming of Christ. And just before the loss of its "dominion," and its being "given to the burning flame," it was to speak "great words." Dan. 7: 11. In the summer of 1870, it spoke "the great words," and declared its "infallibility." In the following September, it lost the last vestige of its dominion. In a late Consistory, the Pope is reported to have said:

> "We can hope for no help from any quarter. King Victor Emanuel will be here in a few days, and will be attended by the ministers of the catholic states. We have done all that was in our power, but our efforts have failed. All is lost. You will tell me to hope—therefore I still hope in France; but France can do nothing; she is going through a frightful crisis, which may be succeeded by others yet more dreadful. I repeat that all is lost, and only a miracle can save us. Pray, then, to the Almighty, and seek his interposition from ruin."

With what remarkable exactness has the prophetic word of the Lord been fulfilled. Is it reasonable to suppose that the very small portion now unfulfilled will be a failure? What candid person can come to such a conclusion? Had we received a chart pointing out the prominent objects on a long journey to a distant city, should we not be warranted in believing that the one who originated the chart was familiar with the way? And suppose we should travel many days with that chart for our guide, and should find every object described in the chart corresponding fully with the description, and had passed the last one before reaching the city, would it then be reasonable to conclude that we were all wrong, and that we were not nearing the city? But one reasonable answer could be given. From the fulfillment of the sacred prophecies relating to the history of this planet, we believe the evidence warrants our being still more certain that Jesus is soon coming to set up his kingdom, and overturn all existing governments.

Are we ready to welcome his return? Are our hearts "free from sin," from hatred, pride, lust, selfishness, love of the world, variance; are our tongues free from backbiting, slander, evil speaking, fretting, scolding, joking, and filthy conversation? In short, are we "pure in heart?" "filled with the Spirit?" Are we cleansed "from all sin?" "from all unrighteousness?" Are we "dead indeed unto sin?" Is "the body of sin . . . . destroyed?" Have we "put off the old man with his deeds," and clothed ourselves with the righteousness which is in Christ? If not, what is our ground of hope for salvation? Eternal interests are at stake in this matter. Shall they be secured now? Please consider, and give an answer. Say yes, NOW I will give ALL to Christ for ever. Then will follow perfect peace, and a blissful rest in the loving embrace of our precious Savior.

Come, let us sing:—

"My all to Christ I've given,
My talents, time, and voice;
Myself, my reputation,
The lone way is my choice.
O Jesus, Jesus, Jesus,
My all-sufficient Friend:
Come, fold me to thy bosom,
E'en to the journey's end."

CHANGES AT ROME.

Protestantism has now much liberty at Rome; such as has not been known before for over a thousand years. The papal power is obliged to submit, and allow the free circulation of the Bible among the people. It is a great change. There are four Protestant organizations now at work in undermining the Papacy. A correspondent from Rome says:—

> "Books have been distributed on the Piazza of St. Peter's, notwithstanding the opposition made. One day, about three months since, the Rev. Mr. Cote with an English friend went to St. Peter's and commenced offering the Gospels upon the steps. Presenting one to a gentleman who came out of the Vatican, he simply glanced at it, and then cursed Mr. Cote for scattering 'bad books;' instantly a crowd collected, and beginning to make demonstrations in various ways, asked Mr. Cote what he wanted there. One of the crowd pointing to the man from the Vatican, called out, 'He's a Jesuit, don't have him here.' At the word Jesuit all turned upon him, and forcing him to leave, took the books with an eagerness which was only increased by the opposition of the so-called Jesuit." More than thirty-five thousand portions of God's word have been scattered among the people, and the police not only permit this work to be carried on but even encourage it. A municipal guard said one day to a colporteur, 'You are doing a good work; go on, and we will protect you."

During the last eight months the London Bible Society has been scattering Bibles in Rome, and has depositories there, where the Bible in all languages may be obtained. Their agents are selling Bibles and Testaments in all parts of the city without hindrance. Such things show that the Papal power is very feeble. Its spirit is not changed, but its dominion is taken away, in harmony with the prophecy of Daniel. The final fall of Babylon must be near at hand, when it will sink like a millstone thrown into the sea, and "be found no more at all." Startling events are at our doors. This is the time to watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation. No one, who wishes to be saved, should live a moment without a clean heart. None but the "pure religion" will stand the judgment test. It is the only kind that will satisfy a man in this life. All else is uncertain.

DID THE POPE CHANGE THE SABBATH?

It is sometimes said the Pope changed the seventh-day Sabbath to the first day; and therefore those who keep the first day thus take upon them the mark of the beast. We have never been able to find any history showing that the Pope changed the time of rest from the seventh day to the first. Is such a history is in existence, we would like to see it; or have some one give us the name of the book and page where the event is recorded. But we do find that when the Emperor Constantine professed to embrace christianity, he confirmed the practice of christiany, who kept the first day; and in A. D. 321 ordained as follows:—

> "Let all judges and people of the town rest, and all the various trades be suspended on the venerable day of the sun (venerabili die solis.) Those who live in the country, however, may freely and without fault attend to the cultivation of their fields (since it often happens that no other day may be so suitable for sowing grain and planting the vine), lest, with the loss of favorable opportunity, the commodities offered by divine providence should be destroyed."

This is the first commandment of any kind that we have been able to find which enjoined the keeping of the first day. But this was not done by a Pope, but an Emperor, who professed conversion to christianity. This affords very certain evidence that the christians at that time were keeping the first day of the week, and consequently, Constantine gave his sanction to this practice.

A CRISIS APPROACHING.

A new aspect of things in Paris is about to open. For some days telegrams from there have indicated a change in political matters. It is evident that Napoleon and his friends are the chief movers. Thiers is fast losing popularity, and the people with the army are anxious to see Napoleon again at the head of the government. They remember the remarkable prosperity of the nation under his rule up to the time of the war with Prussia, and they are about ready to give him another trial.

The following telegram from London, Aug. 15th, shows the current of events:—

> "Advices from Paris say that the city is excited, the situation threatening, and trouble is apprehended from various sources. To-day is the fete of Napoleon, and the air is full of rumors that the army will revolt against the Assembly, declare McMahon Regent, and demand the Empire. The people are leaving Paris in a stampede. Some believe that the Orleanists' scheme is ripe for a coup d' etat, and is being pushed by the proposition to make Thiers permanent executive, which, it is feared, would establish a government not monarchical. Thiers has no friends. He is hated by the Republicans, Royalists and Imperialists alike. A crisis is approaching."

MY EXPERIENCE.

Since our conversion, we have ever been interested in the experiences of devoted christians; and in none so much as those who have consecrated all to Christ. The following, from the experience of Bro. Wm. I. Gill, a devoted minister, gives the best description we have seen of one's feelings, after all is given up to Christ.

O blessed, happy state! Dear Brn. and Srs., enter into Christ without reserve. Give him all. Keep back nothing. Then trust him to keep you.

> "My experience is now a unity. It has no dark sides or internal jars; and it is not jagged or rent at the edges. It is all ensphered with Christ, like the woman clothed with the sun. Formerly it had a double aspect, and somewhat distorted by passion or fear. Now there is the brighter visage without the attendant shade. Formerly two contrasted statements were necessary to describe my entire religious life; and every thing bright or good had to be followed by a 'but.' I enjoyed communion with Christ and the saints, but not without obstructions. I believed in his providence and government; but I often chafed in the yoke I wore. Now there are none of these drawbacks to my happier religious experience; no marring, counter-feeling. My life is never a foaming torrent raging against obstructing rocks or bolders in its channel; but my peace is like a river, and my righteousness is like the waves of the sea. The secret of all this is contained in the favorite words of 'Poor Joseph,' 'I am nothing at all, and Jesus Christ is all in all.' 'Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits.'"

NEW MEETING-HOUSE.—The church in Chelsea, Mass., has been building a meeting-house this summer, on Heard St., near the Eastern depot. It is nearly done, and the present intention is to dedicate it Friday, at 2 P. M., Sept. 1st. Further particulars hereafter.

PERSONAL.—We are rejoiced to learn that Bro. H. A. King has had a very prosperous trip to England, Germany, Italy, and France, and arrived in safety in New York the 11th inst. We expect to see him at our National Campmeeting.

☞ OUR readers will find a valuable article in this paper from Bro. Phelps, in relation to the "cure" for church divisions. We wish to respond with a hearty amen to what he has said.

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK.—As we wish to give our faithful compositors and clerks one week's rest in the year, it is thought best to select the time of our National Campmeeting.

A CHANGE.—Let it be observed that the meeting at South Butler, N. Y., is changed to Aug. 31st, instead of 7th.

"FREE FROM SIN."

Many start back with horror, when they hear one say we may be "free from sin." The doctrine of holiness has been greatly neglected for the last few years. It holds the crowning position in the principles of the Christian religion. Have we a perfect Savior? One who can cleanse "us from all sin," and keep us clean? or must we be but partially cleansed? Says Paul: "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." Rom. 6: 22. When one is "free from sin" is there any sin left? "Knowing this," said Paul, "that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." Rom. 6: 6. Let "the old man" be crucified; "put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Eph. 4: 24.

THE VICTORIA LEAGUE.

These are strange times. When looking at their strangeness, we have frequently said, What next? Well, here comes another new movement for reforming the political condition of the United States. The following announcement will introduce the subject:—

> "NEW YORK, Aug. 1st, 1871.
> To the Editor:—We have the honor to announce
> THE VICTORIA LEAGUE,
> an association now organized, equipped, and in working order, having its headquarters in New York, and its co operative agencies in Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, and San Francisco.
> Its mission is to unite the progressive portion of the American people into a new political organization, or body of voters, called
> THE EQUAL RIGHTS PARTY, > consisting of both sexes, and founded on the constitutional right of suffrage which the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments vest in women as well as men.
> It demands from Congress, at its next session,
> A DECLARATORY ACT, > setting forth, definitely, this interpretation of these amendments, together with immediate legislation to insure the free exercise, by women, as by other citizens, of the elective franchise in the several States.
> It nominates, and will support, and expects to elect, as the next President of the United States, by the combined suffrages of men and women, in 1872,
> MRS. VICTORIA C. WOODHULL, OF NEW YORK."

It will be remembered that not long since, we published a statement from Mrs. Woodhull, in which she says:—

> "I advocate free love in its highest and purest sense, as the only cure for the immorality and deep damnation by which men corrupt and disfigure God's most holy institution of the sexual relation. My judges preach against free love openly, and practice it secretly. For example, I know of one man, a public teacher of eminence, who lives in concubinage with the wife of another public teacher of almost equal eminence."

Mrs. Woodhull is a New York Wall Street broker. Inasmuch as she is an avowed Spiritualist, who openly advocates the free-love department, it will be seen that this movement is sustained by the radical Spiritualists. We are now beginning to see some of the practical workings of Spiritualism in its political aspect.

In another declaration of Mrs. Woodhull, she says:—

> "We mean treason; we mean secession, and on a thousand times grander scale than was that of the south. We are plotting revolution; we will overthrow this bogus republic, and plant a government of righteousness in its stead."

MODERN PRAYER-MEETINGS.

Some prayer-meetings at the present day are very strange scenes. A few of them would be sufficient to send a chill through an entire church, if it was so unfortunate as to be present. We cannot better describe one of these modern prayer meetings, than has been done by Dr. Vincent. He says:—

> "It was held in a room that might have held thirty persons. It didn't hold so many that night. The room was dirty, and dimly lighted by two lamps, whose smoky chimneys had not been cleaned since kerosene had been invented. Sometimes they smoked; they were smoking then. After a while two or three came in, then a few more, and then some more at intervals, until there were perhaps ten or a dozen. The preacher hadn't come. It was ten, fifteen, twenty minutes past the time. There they sat beneath those lamps, waiting. At last the preacher came, sat down, yawned, then asked some brother to sing a familiar hymn. They sung—
>
> 'O for a thousand tongues to sing.'
>
> It has six verses; they sung them all. It would have been the same if there had been sixty. The preacher asked some brother to lead in prayer. A brother prayed, five minutes, seven minutes, ten minutes, twelve minutes. Another followed, praying fifteen minutes. Sung another familiar hymn—
>
> 'Come, thou fount of every blessing.'
>
> Another season of prayer. It was a 'long, dry season.' Then another hymn—
>
> 'A charge to keep I have.'
> It was short metre. But they sung it so as to make it long metre. He thought they would adjourn now; wondered the lamps didn't give out—his patience had long ago. Another season of prayer followed. They sung the doxology; the benediction was pronounced, and they went out, and so did the lamps."

Such seasons are common in these last-day perilous times. If we would have interesting prayer-meetings, the rooms should be well lighted, the meeting should begin promptly at the time appointed, then sing short, pray short, talk short, [illegible] often. Let the social element have free exercise. Be familiar. The nearer we get to Christ, the more liberty and freedom we feel, and the less of cold formalism. Pure Christianity is needed for making its possessors feel perfectly at home in each other's society.

PROF. DENTON'S THEOLOGY.

Prof. Wm. Denton is a noted Spiritualist and lecturer on Geology. Last Jan. 8th he delivered a lecture in Music Hall, Boston, on "the Bible position of woman contrasted with her true position," in which he took occasion to ridicule the God of the Bible, in the following language, as reported in "the Banner of Light," Aug. 5th, 1871:—

> "The Jehovah of the Bible is a he; he has no female companion—no wife to calm his ruffled temper, or smooth his troubled brow, when he is grieved at heart: Jesus is a son—God never begat a daughter to show his appreciation of the more refined and more moral sex."

The Spiritualists are becoming more and more bold in their blasphemous talk. While they care but little about the phenomenal exhibitions, such as are witnessed in their circles; they are very industrious to spread their infidel sentiments in all directions. They are waging a perpetual warfare against all that a christian holds sacred.

NEW TRACTS.

Just published by the A. C. P. Society, Symbolization of the World's Eventful Crisis, by O. R. FASSETT.

An excellent tract of 16 pages, showing that we are living amid the events occurring under the opening of the "sixth seal"; that "we are witnessing them, and are far down in their history, and close upon the end of this world and the solemn judgment scenes."

Price, single, 2 cts.; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail.

"THE TWO-HORNED BEAST."

A TRACT OF 12 PAGES.

Being a new and interesting exposition of Rev. 13: 11. By Eld. John Couch. Price 2 cents single; postage 2 cts.; 15 cts. per dozen; $1.00 per hundred.

"THE END AT HAND."

A TRACT OF 24 PAGES.

Showing that the "Gospel of the kingdom" has been "preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations"; and that the end of this dispensation is at hand, and the Lord about to appear in his glory. By Eld. John Couch. Just the thing to scatter by the thousands. Let it have a wide circulation. Price single, 3 cents; postage 2 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $2.00 per hundred by mail.

☞ TAKE NOTICE.

Persons sending names to this office, should never put postage stamps next to a bank bill, or scrip, for the stamps stick to the bills, and one or both are spoiled, besides causing the clerks a great deal of trouble in trying to get them apart, so as to save both stamp and money.

A CHANGE OF HEART.

The doctrine of a change of heart is sometimes belittled, or made to mean less than it really signifies; and sometimes it is mystified, or made to mean something different from what it really indicates.

1. We are often informed that a change of heart simply signifies a change of purpose. That a change of purpose is involved in a change of heart is admitted; but a change of purpose is possible without a change of heart, while a change of heart is not possible without a change of purpose. A man may deliberately purpose to stop stealing, swearing, murdering, and drinking, and may nobly carry out that purpose, and still possess a heart unregenerated, having never felt the renewing power of the Holy Spirit.

In short, a change of heart indicates nothing less than a change of affections. The term heart is often used to indicate the affections. When David's son engaged in a conspiracy against him, and "stole the hearts" of the people, he simply stole their affections. When we give the heart to the Lord, we give him our affections. When our affections are changed, a new life will be the result—a life of obedience.

2. Many have conjectured that a change of heart indicates the regeneration of the spirit-man. It affects the accountable man, else it would not save him; and the accountable man is the man to be judged, for God will never judge an unaccountable man; and the man to be judged is the man that falls under the stroke of death, and needs a resurrection, which is not true of a spirit man. "Delivered up the dead . . . and THEY were judged." A change of heart makes men "just," and there is to be a "resurrection of the just," proving that the very man that is affected by this change of heart can die, hence, cannot be a spirit-man.

DOUBLE EARS AND DOUBLE EYES.

Can the soul hear and see without the body? This must be so if Christ was talking about the souls of Lazarus and the rich man, for the rich man could see Lazarus, and the rich man's words were heard and replied to by Abraham. This involves the idea of spirit eyes and spirit ears, thus making out that each man has four eyes and four ears apiece, instead of two only, for it cannot be claimed that man's material ears and eyes are mere organs through which the soul sees and hears, without making the human organism inferior to that of the animal creation; for it is a well known fact that the animals see and hear as really as man does, and that, too, without a spirit-animal inside of them to see and hear for them. If man really has so many eyes and ears, he ought to see and hear much better than animals do.

It is sometimes said, "These material eyes are but the windows that the soul looks out at." Then why can not the soul see clearer when the window is taken out, instead of being blind? And what soul looks out at the windows of the horse or ox? Or, in this case, do the windows themselves have the power of sight, being so much superior to human windows? Shall we conclude that man has double eyes and ears, or that only the soul can see and hear, leaving the body inferior to the brute organization? Rather let me discard the idea that the soul of man is a personality without a body.

W. S.

"ABRAHAM'S BOSOM."

The reference to Abraham's bosom, in a Catholic version, is thus guarded by a footnote: "Abraham's bosom—the place of rest, where the souls of the saints resided till Christ had opened heaven by his death." Thus, according to Catholicism, Abraham's bosom is not heaven, but a place occupied by departed souls before the death of Christ; and the earliest view concerning such a place ever entertained by believers in Christ, located it in the bowels of the earth; and the first introduction of a sky-kingdom theory into a semi-apostate church grew out of the claim that Christ went down into this underground realm, in his disembodied state, while his body was dead, and liberated the disembodied saints that had there accumulated, and took them to heaven, bidding farewell to a ghostly cellar, for a home in the skies.

Here the doctrine of going to heaven had its origin. Catholics freely admit that souls did not go to heaven before the death of Christ. When they received the notion that the soul survives the death of the body in a conscious state, they received with that notion the theory of an underground kingdom for ghosts, the whole thing being of heathen origin; and to give the theory a gospel coloring, the claim was devised that Christ took the occupants of this underground bosom of Abraham up to the skies; and although this was not received without some opposition, it finally gained ascendancy; and Protestants now accept the kingdom thus manufactured, though they deny the location and vacation of Abraham's bosom.

W. S.

CATHOLIC DEFINITION OF SPIRIT.—In a foot-note in a Catholic version of the Bible, I find the following definition of the spirit of man: "Spirit.—That is, soul, life, and breath." This differs from the Protestant view, which makes spirit and soul but two names for one thing. But if spirit is really composed of "soul, life and breath," it follows that there is no life in souls, and consequently no consciousness, till they are compounded with life and breath, thus making a new article called spirit. Then when the life and breath are disconnected, the soul must become both lifeless and unconscious, unless the soul continues interwoven with life and breath after the stroke of death; and where will the soul find breath after ascending above the forty-five miles of atmosphere which encircles our globe? And if breath is really a component part of the spirit, it must live within the bounds of our atmosphere, or be disorganized.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE.

B. W. DAVIS.

Keep what before the people? There are a number of things that are very important, and that ought to be constantly kept before the world; and the first and most important to my mind is holiness of heart and life, without which no one can see the Lord. Jesus is soon coming, to gather gems for his kingdom; but it is only the "pure" ones that he will own. And if we would be at "the marriage supper of the Lamb," we must be pure. It will not avail us anything in that day to say we are pure, unless we are so indeed.

We all talk more or less that the kingdom is near, and some seem to think that they will be there, because they believe it is near. The Savior says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." What are the Savior's commandments? The first of all commandments is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." "And the second is like unto it; Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." And another: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another [how?]; as I have loved you." How did he love us? "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Are we keeping these commandments? If not, why are we expecting a home in his kingdom when he comes? What a day of disappointments that will be to many. May the Lord help us to be just right, and ready when he does come.

Some will say that the time is the most important, and unless we believe that Jesus is coming at such a time (which is set by men), we cannot be saved. But if we get ready, and keep ready, no matter how soon he comes, we shall be ready to enter in to "the marriage supper of the Lamb." Another important matter, that should be kept before our minds is, that sinners are perishing. In these times of worldliness and peril, we are prone to lose sight of our great mission, to save the perishing. Our minds should be stirred up in this direction.

Another item that should be kept in mind is the coming campmeetings, and their objects. I hope the exhortations of Bro. Grant, in regard to holiness, will be kept before the church. They ought to be written in letters of gold on the broad canopy of heaven, they are so important.

But how are these subjects to be kept before the people? We will briefly suggest two or three: 1. By the living word, from the living preacher. This is the most effectual way, and perhaps there is no better place to get it before the largest number, than at the campground, or in out-door meetings, in suitable weather. But the preacher cannot be in every place, or do all that ought to be done. It will soon be the best part of the year for the people to get out to meeting, especially in the country, during the long evenings of the winter months. Much can be done by earnest and persevering, personal efforts. Come, my brethren, let us awake to the importance of this work, and try and keep these blessed truths before the world, for the time is hasting greatly.

2. By tracts and other publications. These silent preachers go where the living preacher cannot, and they speak with power. "Whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" May the Lord help us to do his will, and be ready when he comes.

SPRINGFIELD.

S. SWAN.

Well, I enjoy my heart's desire,
I stand on consecrated ground;
Rekindled is the holy fire,
My ear drinks in the blessed sound.

Oh, what a precious scene is this!
Akin to heaven, too good to last;
Sweet foretaste of the final bliss
We shall enjoy when time has passed.

The old and young, the rich and poor,
Unite in worship of our King,
Intent to seize and to secure
The grace which doth salvation bring.

But some are not with us this week,
They hoped and prayed but could not come;
We think of them, and humbly seek
God's blessing on them in their home.

And some are here whose hearts are sad—
The meeting seems unlike of yore;
Some absent one would make them glad,
One who comes hither nevermore.

Oh, cruel death! oh, fierce decay!
How many tents and homes seem void;
How many dear ones sleep to-day
Who loved and waited for the Lord.

But we survive and meet to praise;
We mingle freely prayer and song;
God kindly lengthens out our days,—
We feel to him our thanks belong.

But soon we separate, and go
Our varied ways—north, south, and west,
Never to meet again below;—
Oh! shall we meet among the blest?

"OUR PRESENT AGE."

JOHN TAYLOR.

This is a prominent theme at the present time with all classes and conditions of persons. All are pretty well settled down in the belief that the good time coming is either just at hand, or else begun. They each have their peculiar idea about it; but all agree that a better future in every respect, irrespective of character, awaits mankind; only a few dissenting, who place more faith in the word of God, than in the fables or opinions of men.

The extracts I here give will show that, instead of the good time coming by an increase of virtue, morality, and the triumph of christianity, we have the opposite,—vice in every hideous shape, immorality almost to completion, and infidelity rampant,—a sad present, and a worse future. May we all have grace to withstand it.

When recording the doings of the meeting in Park St. church, on the Social Evil, the Boston Herald, of May 22nd, 1871, reports Major Dane as saying that "lust controls society and legislation." An article in a later number of the Herald, on the Social Evil, says: "A young lady went into an establishment in Temple Place for work, and was informed that she would not suit, as she was not dressed well enough. She replied that as soon as she got work she would dress better. They told her that she must do as other girls did; that there were plenty of men who would clothe her for services rendered. Another lady went into one of the most fashionable stores on Washington St., within two days of the above occurrence, and the same thing was repeated." Comment is unnecessary.

In Zion's Advocate, July 19th, 1871, in an editorial on the Sabbath, Col. Forney, quoting from a French journal, states that in Paris nineteen theatres, sixteen other places of amusements, and horse races, furnish the people with amusement on a Sabbath. The New York Tribune, July 19th, 1871, in an editorial says: "There are not less than fifty thousand denizens of our city (New York), who live by crime only." Says another paper, quoting from the "Round Table," in an article on "The Despair of Christianity":

> "In plain sooth, the age of sensuality, of unchecked corruption, is coming down upon us like night. A free press should have given us more notes of warning than it has; but the press dislikes, in a free country, to print unpalatable truth. Intellectual elevation is scoffed at; and those who strive to inculcate a taste for better things are either hated or despised. Nothing is thought of but the delights of the table, of fine clothes, of showy dwellings and equipages."

The above does not seem to be very flattering for a good time. Said Judge Barnard, of New York, in his charge to the Grand Jury, not long ago: "I presume from this time onward this Court will have to be in almost continuous session, until such time as a generation shall have passed away, so that the vast majority of men now engaged in the commission of crime shall either be incarcerated, run away, or dead."

It is no wonder that Rev. Mr. Fulton, in his work on "True Woman," should say that "the majority prefer an infidel's cheer to the favor of God, and the love of a christian community." I am not much surprised at the preaching of so many fables in this age, seeing that they study christianity, or the Bible, so little, even among our great ones of earth. And this idea reminds me of the following: A few years ago Mr. Hoge, member of Congress from Illinois, quoted as coming from the Bible the following lines:

"While yet the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return."

Col. Benton, in U. S. Senate, spoke about our Savior as having cast seven devils out of a certain man. Said a member of a Legislature: "We hope you will say to us, as Nathan said to David, "Well done, good and faithful servant." Said another member, addressing the house, "Mr. Speaker, I would no more vote for that measure than I would fall down and worship the golden calf that Abraham made."

Some seem to be breaking away from old opinions. Said H. W. Beecher, in a sermon preached against a literal hell: "No one can reasonably believe that men, women and children were being consigned to the fiery lake at the rate of thirty millions a year." With others, fables are yet strong. The Farmington Chronicle, Feb. 23d, heads a death notice, "Beyond the stars." "The child, ten years old, before she died, wrote a composition in the school, called, 'My visit to the stars.'" The writer remarks, "Now she can write a better composition, for she has gone beyond the stars (the italics are as written in the paper); and knows more, far more than her mother about that beautiful place, called heaven." Such views may be pleasing, but they ought to be based on truth.

I close with giving a few extracts from the world's greatest delusion—Spiritualism—as proving the vast spread and increase of infidelity. One of their papers, the "Religio Philosophical Journal," in its book column has the following book notice: "Holy Bible and Mother Goose. Price twenty-five cents." The merits of Jesus Christ and Thomas Paine! What is the difference between them? "Price twenty-five cents," etc. In one of their papers a question was asked—"Is there any way to account for an entire want of historical proof of the life and death of Jesus, as recorded in the Bible?" The answer was—"The Bible offers no positive evidence that such a man ever lived. I am well aware that this knocking the Bible from under the of the Christian [illegible] is a very presumptuous thing." See Banner [illegible] 34, 1867.

Says a writer in this [illegible] April 16th, 1870, on the Millennium: "Christianity is played out; its God is about played out; the blood of its Christ has not sufficient [illegible] to cleanse a sin-stained world; while the devil has achieved a grand success. The only hope for the world is in Spiritualism and its heaven-born philosophy." Such blasphemy is enough to make our blood curdle. This is their better gospel, which supercedes the gospel of Christ. Who says that the world is progressing, except in a downward course?

In another paper, a writer sneers against Christ. He says: "One man was so wicked that it took eight barrels of the blood of the Lamb to wash his sins away"; and then says that "the Holy Ghost is a venerable old creature, who was one of the party who worked with the shovel and the hoe in getting the dust together, when God said, 'Let us make man'; that he had a fight with the devil in the garden of Eden, and has had the rheumatism ever since." He further says: "Some may find fault with us in associating God with liars. We don't place him there. He went there himself."

I believe in the liberty of the press, but it does seem to me that there ought to be some limit to such blasphemy. And this is the religion that Spiritualism wishes to impose upon the world, to supercede Christianity, in making better men and women. May God keep us from this strong delusion, which is trying the world.

A WORD TO YOUNG WRITERS.

By "young writers," I mean not only those who are young in years, but young in experience in writing for publication. It is very often the case, as all editors can testify, that those who write for the paper have complaints to make; and in nine cases out of ten these complaints are groundless and needless, and worse than useless.

These complaints can be classed under a few general heads, and a word of friendly advice given by one who has had many years experience in writing, and who is willing to give others the benefit of that experience.

The first and most common complaint often comes in the form of a question, thus: "Why was not my article published?" How long did you wait, before asking that question? Perhaps you expected to see your piece in the very next paper, when that paper was all in type before your contribution was examined. You do not know how many hundreds of letters are sent every week to the editor of "our paper"; but it certainly takes time to attend to them all. Then you do not know how many good and acceptable articles are on hand waiting for publication. The bottom of the pile of "accepted articles" is seldom reached, and many excellent letters lie for months before they are published. So, however excellent and acceptable your article may have been, do not wonder at the delay of a few weeks, and above all do not pour out a torrent of abuse in the form of a letter to the editor because of this delay. He has burdens enough to bear at best, and you ought to do all you can to cheer and encourage him, not only for his sake, but for your own, and all who read the paper.

I need not say that this conduct on your part is painful evidence that patience has not had "her perfect work" in you. I make all due allowance for weak nerves, sensible and irritable nerves; but christian charity should restrain you from venting wrath upon the editor, and being angry with your brother "without cause." I may here mention several reasons that often occur to exclude from publication articles sent for that purpose.

1. Poor composition. Articles are often sent that would expose the writer to ridicule if published without revision, and it is impossible for the editor to re-write and revise all such articles.

2. Bad penmanship. It is almost impossible to read some writing. To be obliged to guess at part of the words is very vexatious to all concerned, and such articles are often rejected, when it is quite possible that they are very good and worthy of publication, but the editor and printer cannot read them.

3. Want of adaptation. Your article may have been suitable for some other paper, but it contained sentiments or doctrines not in harmony with those advocated in the Crisis.

4. Great similarity to something previously published. You may be quite honest, but it so happened that your article was so near like one published before, that you would be exposed to the charge of plagiarism by having it printed. To specify all cases would take up too much space, and I will close with a few words of advice and exhortation that may be for your good.

If you are enjoying the blessings of pardon and peace, and feel moved to write for the paper, attend to these essential points. Pray for especial help from God in your effort. You need such help, and in order to have it you must ask for it. Our best writers pray often and earnestly for help from the Lord, and for his blessing to follow and his Spirit and power to apply what is written to the heart and conscience of the reader. Pray also for others who write, that they may be fully fitted and qualified for their work, and that God may speak through them, that they may rejoice in the harvest day, when they see that their labor has not been in vain in the Lord.

Especially pray for the editor, that the rich blessings of heaven may rest upon him, and that he may at all times be "endued with power from on high," and that while he holds the "pen of a ready writer," he may be enabled to reach the hearts of those who read, and move them, and influence them, and help them on in the better way.

When you have written an article just as well as you can, and mailed it, do not be over anxious as to whether it is published or not. Write another, and another, till you forget whether all have been printed or not. You are like the sower; some of his seed falls by the way-side, but he keeps on sowing, even though the fowls devour it, and though some should fall in stony places or among thorns. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good." Eccl. 11: 6.

We cannot here dwell upon various forms of complaint, such as typographical errors, omissions, alterations, etc., but you must take the advice of Paul to Timothy, "endure hardness as a good soldier." If you cannot bear these inevitable, unavoidable things, you will be disabled or driven from the field. Remember this: "Ye have need of patience." Trusting that both reader [illegible] by what is here written, [illegible] your friend and brother,

AN OLD WRITER.

EXPERIENCE OF REV. A. B. EARLE.

In the last chapter of "Bringing in Sheaves," there is the following clear testimony of this most successful evangelist, which gives at once the source of his power and how he obtained it. The dear brother shall speak for himself.

Ten years ago I felt an inexpressible hungering and longing for the fulness of Christ's love. I had often had seasons of great joy and peace in Christ, and in his service I had seen many precious souls brought into the fold of Christ. I loved the work of the ministry, but had long felt an inward unrest, a void in my soul that was not filled. Seasons of great joy would be followed by seasons of darkness and doubt. If I had peace I found it would not continue, and it did not. Many anxious came to me complaining of the same thing. How could I help them on that point when I knew not how to get right myself? I took them to the seventh chapter of Romans and there left them saying, O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I was there myself and supposed I must live and die there.

I made strong and repeated resolutions that I would be faithful, but could not keep them. Then I sought and found forgiveness again, but it was soon disturbed by some word, or act, or heart wandering. Thus I lived on for many years. God gave me success in winning souls, and granted me many hours of sweet communion. Still I was unsatisfied. I wanted an uninterrupted rest and peace. At length I felt that the question for me to settle was this, Can an imperfect christian sweetly and constantly rest in a perfect Savior without condemnation? This I revolved in my mind for a long time. I read the experience of others. I searched the Scriptures for light, and asked such as I believed had power with God to pray with and for me. At length I became satisfied that Christ had made provision for me and all his children to abide in the fulness of his love without one moment's interruption.

Having settled this, I said, I need this. I long for it. I cannot truly represent religion without it, and Christ is dishonored by me every day I live without it. I resolved to obtain it at any sacrifice, little realizing how unlike Christ I then was, or how much be needed to bring me there. February 10th, 1859, I made the following consecration: "Jesus, I now and forever give myself to thee; my soul to be washed in thy blood, my whole body to be used for thy glory, my mouth to speak for thee at all times, my eyes to weep over lost sinners, my feet to carry where thou shalt wish me to go, my heart to be burdened for souls or used for thee anywhere, my intellect to be employed at all times for thy cause and glory; I give to thee my wife, my children, my property, all I have, and all that ever shall be mine. I will obey thee in every known duty."

I then asked for grace to carry out this vow that I might take nothing from the altar. I supposed with this consecration entire, as far as my knowledge went, I should soon receive all that my longing heart could contain, but in this I was sadly mistaken. I think I then came nearer to Christ, but as clearer light began to shine into my heart I saw more of its vileness. He then quotes from his journal as follows:

The last three weeks have been weeks of heart searching. I never had my heart so searched before. I detect pride, envy, self-will, a great deal of unbelief, and my love to the Savior to be very weak. Yet I have consecrated all to Christ. I cannot withdraw it from the altar. O, can a worm so vile be like Jesus? I know it is possible, and if I am ever to be like Him, why not now while I am where I can do good in leading others to him? I felt like a patient, who, though in the hands of a skillful physician, groans and writhes under the severe treatment. But my constant prayer was, 'Be thorough with me, Jesus, be thorough.' Many a discouraging day followed. I grew weak and small, and unworthy in my own estimation. I have had keener sorrows for inbred sin than I ever experienced before conversion.

O the distress that I felt on account of pride, envy, love of the world. One sin that troubled me most, and the hardest to overcome, was a strong will, a desire and almost a determination to have my own way; and thus, even in regard to little things, or any little injury or supposed wrong, to speak without reflection, and sometimes severely, even to those that I knew were my friends; to say, I will do this and I will not do that. This I clearly saw must be given up. As I could not do it myself, I gave it over to Jesus, but I found I gave nothing into the hands of Jesus except by simple faith. My faith was very weak. I believed the theory of religion, but to have my heart grasp the reality without wavering, was more difficult. O the longing of my heart for sweet and constant rest in Jesus. I believed I should receive it, and thought it was near.

With this mingling of faith, desire, and expectation, I commenced a meeting on Cape Cod. After re-dedicating myself in company with others, I was in my room alone, pleading for the fulness of Christ's love, when all at once, a sweet, heavenly peace filled all the vacuum in my soul, leaving no longing, no unrest, no dissatisfied feeling in my bosom. I felt, I knew, that I was accepted fully of Christ. A calm, simple, childlike trust took possession of my whole being. I felt that if I had a thousand hearts and lives, I would give them all to the Savior; my grateful love to him found expression in those glowing lines,

"O for a thousand tongues to sing
My great Redeemer's praise,
The glories of my God and King,
The triumphs of his grace."

Then for the first time in my life I had rest which was more than peace. I had felt peace before, but feared I should not retain it. Now I had peace without fear, which really became rest. That night I retired to rest much like a tired babe resting in its mother's arms. I believed Jesus had received me and would keep me. I had no fears of losing that happy state. I seemed in a new world. My burden was gone, my cup was full, and Jesus was present with me. I found that much of my care had not only been useless, but a hinderance to my success, rendering my work in Christ's cause much harder and less pleasant to myself. The Bible seemed like a new book. I had as it were read with a veil before my eyes. This change occurred about five o'clock P. M., November 2d, 1863, and although I never felt so weak and small, yet Jesus has been my all since then. There has not been one hour of conscious doubt or darkness since that time. A heaven of peace and rest fills my soul. Day and night the Savior seems by me. Preaching is a luxury, it is a glorious work. In prayer Christ does not seem far away. All christians are dearer to me than ever. All earthly ties are more precious to me. Home, friends, all blessings, temporal or spiritual, are dearer and brighter than ever before. Thought is quickened; my views of truth are much clearer; I have come to believe just what God says; I can trust him and go forward "with sealed orders."

My success in leading souls to Jesus has been much greater. My joy in telling the world of Christ and his goodness, constantly increases. And as I realize more and more the greatness of his love and the perfection of his character, my swelling heart often cries out,

"O could I speak the matchless worth,
O could I sound the glories forth,
Which in my Savior shine."

O that I had an angel's tongue, or could in some way express to others the love I bear to Jesus,

"I'd sing the character he bears,
And all the forms of love he wears,
Exalted on his throne."

If any should ask me if this was sinless perfection, I would answer, No! by no means. I feel very imperfect and weak, yet I am enabled to believe and trust Jesus, and he is so near that I have realized, in several instances of little inconsistencies, that before the [illegible] waves reached my soul to produce condemnation Jesus said, "Peace be still."

Temptation is presented, but the power of it is broken. I seem to have a present Savior in every time of need, so that for several years I have done the trusting and Jesus the keeping. Thus while I believe and trust Christ entirely, nothing wavering, he gives me rest—not Jesus and my faithfulness, but Jesus alone gives me rest. So that Christ is made at that very point to those who trust to him, "wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption."—Guide to Holiness.

Concerning Contributions.—A case of much interest to newspaper conductors has just been tried in an English court. A gentleman had sent a voluntary contribution to a daily newspaper, which was committed to the editorial waste-basket; whereupon the aggrieved writer brought an action for the recovery of its value. It was held by the court that a contribution sent unsolicited to a newspaper ceases to be the property of the writer precisely as though it were an ordinary letter, and that he cannot insist upon its return in case it is not used. This decision is a most important one. Had the case been decided otherwise, every editor would be at the mercy of the innumerable bores who send him perpetual contributions. It is practically impossible, even were it desirable, for a great newspaper office to preserve and return the hundreds of worthless contributions which it daily receives. If any man thinks he can enlighten the world by a five-column article upon the theory of little-bats, he cannot well be prevented from forwarding his manuscript to some unhappy editor. But the latter is employed for a purpose other than that of daily returning innumerable such essays to their miserable writers.—American Newspaper Reporter.

Obituaries

Sayles. Died in Killingly, Conn., July 25th, 1871, of lingering consumption, D. Sayles, son of Pitts and Lucy Sayles, aged thirty-seven years.

Bro. Sayles bore severe suffering for seven years, during which be manifested remarkable patience and christian submission. Although he had not made a public profession of faith in Christ, yet he gave the most satisfactory evidence of full consecration to him, and expressed an earnest desire in his last days that his health might be so far restored, as to have the privilege of publicly confessing Christ by baptism, and testifying to his speedy coming, and the resurrection of the dead.

He has closed his eyes to the fading flowers and changing scenes of earthly sadness. He rests from pain and human woes, no more to be disturbed by the withering curse, or fear the blighting hand of death. He left a christian mother and an only brother to mourn, yet not as those who have no hope; for a little in the future will be heard the rumbling of the chariot wheels, and the Restorer comes, at whose presence death will flee away, and those who sleep in Jesus waken to eternal life. John Couch.

Hart. Died in Torrington, Ct., Aug. 7th, 1871, of consumption, Burton W. Hart, aged twenty-nine years.

Bro. Hart was an exemplary christian. The Bible was his daily study. He was a firm believer that he should sleep but a little while in Jesus, and then be raised to immortality and eternal life. Funeral services by the writer. B. Hitchcock.

Farnham. Died in Wakefield, N. H., July 14th, 1871, of consumption, Sr. Almira, wife of Eben Farnham, aged forty-four years and eleven months.

Our sister embraced the doctrine of the near coming of the Lord in 1851, and although low in her mind at times, she retained her faith to the last, and before her death sought diligently the preparation for her departure, calmly falling asleep in Jesus. Sermon by the writer, from Acts 2: 26–27. J. Spinney.

Cummings. Died in Concord, N. H., June 2d, 1871, of scarlet fever, Nettie C., aged six years and ten months, only daughter of Bro. Enoch P. and Sr. Mary Cummings.

We trust the assurance, "Thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy," will comfort the aching hearts of the afflicted parents. C. H. Fletcher.

Forrester. Departed this life in Tyrone, N. Y., July 20th, 1871, Mr. William Forrester, aged sixty-five years.

He will be remembered by several of the preaching brethren for the hospitality with which he always received them, and for his active zeal in matters of religion.

Chase. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Bristol, N. H., August 3d, 1871, Deacon David Chase, aged seventy-eight years. N. T. Chase.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

London, Aug. 15. Emperor Napoleon has declined to receive an address of welcome, which it has been proposed to tender him, except at the expressed wish of the British nation.

Aug. 16. In Konigsberg, Prussia, on the 14th inst., sixty-two persons were attacked by the cholera, and there were twenty-two deaths from the disease.

The meeting of the Emperors and their advisors at Gastien is generally regarded as a pledge of peace. The French pretend to be indifferent to the meeting, and predict an alliance between France and Russia.

Berlin, Aug. 16. Provincial correspondence confirms the report of negotiations pending for the complete evacuation of France, but affirms that the provocations offered to Germany by French newspapers endanger peace between the two countries. It adds that if the French offers, to make early payments of indemnity, are fulfilled, and there be no untoward disturbance of the peaceful relations, the withdrawal of the German forces from French territory will soon commence.

Florence, Aug. 16. Garibaldi is very ill, and his son Ricciatti has been summoned to Caprera.

Yokohama, Japan, July 22. A heavy typhoon at Kobi on the 4th inst., caused a loss of four hundred lives. Several vessels were wrecked, including the Pride of the Thames, and the captain, two mates and steward drowned. The damage to property is estimated at half a million of dollars.

DOMESTIC

New York, Aug. 15. Col. Blanton Duncan of Kentucky has just returned from Europe, where he has been in intimate social relations with the French Imperial family. He states that Napoleon believes in his early restoration; that the Government of Thiers is regarded as a mere make-shift; and that his death at this time would be followed by another civil war. Gambetta is looked upon as an ambitious, intriguing and able man. Bazaine waits for history to justify him. Leboeuf is a wretched creature.

The Telegraph Circuit of the World—At the banquet which Cyrus W. Field gave at Richmond, England, a fortnight since, in honor of the fifth anniversary of the laying of the Atlantic Cable, very interesting facts concerning the telegraph circuit of the world were announced. It seems that during this month Shanghai in China will be connected with the new Russian Naval Station on the Pacific, and also with Japan. November will see the completion of a cable between Singapore and Australia. As soon as California and Japan are united, instantaneous communication between the five continents will have been accomplished. Mr. Field will doubtless live to see even greater triumphs than this. . . . At the end of the present year, the "Telegraph Construction Company" will have laid down 19,500 miles of cable, involving a capital of $35,000,000.

In Brief.

—— In the statistics of insanity at our hospitals, from ten to twenty-five per cent. is set against alcohol; while high authorities, that have studied the subject most deeply, record their conviction that as many as one-half of all cases of insanity are caused, directly or indirectly, by strong drinks.——Pius IX. is troubled with fainting fits which last half an hour, and his friends are alarmed.——London numbers two hundred and fifty female students of medicine.——The young ladies of this country now have the choice of fifty colleges wherein to complete their education.——The City of Paris is about to borrow $120,000,000 to complete all the new streets, etc., begun and left unfinished by the empire.——Minnesota is proud of the six daughters of an invalid farmer who, within five years, have cleared forty acres of woodland, fenced and cultivated it, without male intervention.——The trains for transportation of passengers and freight will commence to run through Mount Cenis tunnel on the 15th of September, when there will be a formal inauguration of the road.——Mr. Elihu Burritt, figuring upon statistics, comes to the following tremendous generalization: "Twenty-six hundred millions of dollars a year for Mars against, perhaps, twenty-six millions for Messiah."——Russian law treats as criminals every individual who abandons the orthodox Greek church. But liberty of conscience has for the first time been recognized recently in the case of a Jew who had relapsed from orthodoxy to Judaism. No court would convict him.——The New York Times says that every department of the government of that city is headed by or is under the control of an Irish Catholic, with the exception of the Mayor's office, and that the Catholics are expelling the Bible from the public schools. The Scriptures are not read in the schools of several wards.——Lord Rosse's telescope brings the moon within forty-two miles, so that objects 270 feet are discernible. Baer has calculated that an instrument ten times the power of Rosse's would be required to bring the moon within a German mile, at which distance the body of a man can be perceived.——The spread of Socialist principles seems to be gaining ground throughout Europe, and is watched with considerable interest. There are now twenty-six papers promulgating this doctrine in France; Belgium has seven weekly organs of Socialism; Holland and Germany, seven; Switzerland, four; and Spain has one, published at Barcelona.——Roman gossips have now discovered that Victor Emmanuel and Prince Humbert have both become converts to Spiritualism. The king is developing rapidly into a medium.——On Thursday of last week a great cloud of locusts were swept in from the sea, falling on Plum Island, and literally covering the ground. They might have been raked up by bushels.——Two thousand women work in Wisconsin fields.——New York devours nearly a thousand barrels of eggs a day.——A delicate female in Chicago partook of twenty-eight different dishes at a Chicago hotel the other day.——It is said that the ablest and most influential journals now published in Italy are either edited or controlled by Jews. In Rome, the liberal journal most read is edited by a Jew.——The decline of population in Ireland for the last ten years has been 360,000, almost the entire total of which, it is said, has been from the Roman Catholic church, which, of course, signifies a like increase of Catholics in the United States.——Earthquakes, cyclones, and hurricanes, mark this as a year of momentous agitations in the physical world.

Vermont Campmeeting.

After examining various localities, the committee have decided to locate our annual campmeeting once more upon the old ground of last year. We can find no other so beautiful and commodious as this, with such improvements as we can make. Good water can be supplied freely upon the ground, and board at 85 cts per day, at boarding tent. Those coming to this meeting can come over any R. R. controlled by the Vt. Central R. R. for fare one way. You will buy a regular ticket, and pay full fare to Bethel, and receive a free return pass from the camp committee. All trains will stop at Bethel, Vt., from which place teams are engaged to carry all passengers, with all their baggage of every description, to the ground, at 25 cts each; children under twelve, half price. Inquire for Wilson's teams, and go with no other. Bro. Wilson keeps the depot house at Bethel, and will entertain all who wish at low rates. Lodgings can be had in private houses on reasonable terms; but let all bring bedding, as these places may be full before you come. To enjoy the meeting most richly, every family should have a family tent. We want a Graham boarding tent upon the ground for ministers, invalids, and those who do not wish to become invalids. Who will volunteer to take charge of such an one? Write me at once.

Now, ye lovers of Jesus, and all others, come, from York State, New Hampshire, and from all parts of Vermont, and from far and near, to our annual feast at Bethel, Vt., to commence Sept. 2nd, and to continue till Sept. 11th. We are hoping that Bro. Couch, and others from abroad, will be present to help us.

H. F. Carpenter, for the Committee.

☞ Remember

to mark every piece of your baggage—Bethel, Vt. camp-ground. And also remember that, to save expense, you should come prepared to board yourselves. H. F. C.

Mechanic Falls Campmeeting.

This meeting will commence Aug. 28th, and continue one week. Our ground is enlarged, with more seats, and is beautiful. Our stable is built, and board for horses will be furnished as cheaply as may be. We shall prepare to supply the wants of the people, according to our ability, with plain, wholesome food, at reasonable prices. Arrangements are being made with the railroads that lead to the meeting, and we trust the fares will be satisfactory. We hope our preachers will come burdened with a sense of their mission, and the people assembling be blest with salvation.

The New York Tent Meeting.

As Treasurer, I wish to say to those who have paid their subscriptions to the above object, that the meeting must be held this fall, or next spring, if the Lord will; and that the money remaining in the Treasurer's hands will be ready with interest. Let us consult Bro. Grant and others at the Springfield meeting, and should the New York meeting be postponed until spring, those who have paid will give no offence if they ask the return of their money. While we do not wish to wrong any one, we hope very few will need their money, but on the contrary that the Lord will graciously prosper them and us, that much may be given when once the work is begun. H. A. King.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting in Woodhull Village, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 15th, to continue over the Sunday following, for the purpose of organizing a conference in Northern Pa. and Southern New York. We hope all interested in the cause we represent will be sure and come. Those coming by rail, will leave the cars at Addison, from whence a daily stage runs direct to Woodhull, leaving Addison at one o'clock P. M.

For the brethren, J. W. Taylor.

Tent Meeting.

The New York State Tent will next be pitched in LeRoy, Genesee Co., N. Y. The campaign will open on Saturday night, Sept. 2nd, and continue as long as the Lord may direct. The good results that have attended our meetings in Hornellsville, encourage us to hope for victory in LeRoy. Let the friends of Jesus and gospel truth in all the surrounding region rally and help. I expect to be assisted by A. P. Moore, and other faithful ministers. We shall strike for a Bible Christianity. A. A. Phelps.

Family Campmeeting.

This meeting will be located four miles south of Osso, eighteen miles south of Augusta, which is the nearest railroad station. It will commence Sept. 7th, and continue over Lord's day. All are invited to come the first day, and all christians are expected to come prepared to work for the Master. Hay and tent fixtures will be furnished free, and the poor will be cared for. Let all who are able provide for this end. Brn. Turner, Keach, and Silk are expected to assist in the services.

P. W. Hough.

Notice.

The twelfth annual conference with the church of God in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., will commence on Friday evening, Sept. 22nd, and continue over Sunday. A general attendance is expected. Conveyance will be at Croft's station, on the N. Y. Central R. R., to meet trains from the east at two o'clock P. M., and from the west at four o'clock P. M. Eld. O. F. Sweet will lecture through the coming week and Sabbath, on the subject of Christ's near approach and kingdom.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Eastern District of Wisconsin will be held at Merrimack, Sauk Co., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 22nd, 1871, and hold over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general rally of ministers and members, not only to enjoy the feast, but to labor for the perishing. Friends from the adjoining districts are also cordially invited to meet with us,

Geo. Thomson.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the camp-ground, beautifully located about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Saturday, August 19th, and continuing till August 28th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, August 27th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fares.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Albany $4.35, Pittsfield $2.55, Worcester $2.50. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, at Boston, Natick, South Framingham, Milford, Southville, Westboro, Worcester, and the stations to Pittsfield. Also at North and South Adams, Cheshire, Chatham, Hudson, and Albany.

On the Hartford and New Haven R. R. fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Middletown, Hartford, Windsor Locks, and Thompsonville.

On the Conn. R. R. fare is reduced one third from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from August 10th to August 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the roads operated by the

comprising Vermont Central, Vermont and Canada, Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly, Montreal and Vermont Junction, Sullivan, Og. and Lake Champlain, Missisquoi, Rutland, Vt. Valley, Montreal and Plattsburgh, Whitehall and Plattsburgh Railroads, the friends will purchase regular tickets at the several stations, for the nearest point on the Conn. River Road to South Vernon or Greenfield, at which place they will be sure to go to the ticket office and get a Campmeeting ticket for Springfield, which they will present to the Secretary on the camp-ground to be countersigned; and they will then be furnished with a free return pass—good from South Vernon to the places they came from on any of the roads run by the Vermont Central Railroad.

On the Vt. and Mass. R. Road, Troy and Greenfield R. Road from Hoosac Tunnel, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield. At Greenfield they will go into the ticket office and call for Campmeeting Tickets for Springfield. All such when they go to the Secretary on the camp-ground to have their tickets countersigned, will be furnished with a free return pass from Greenfield to Athol, Fitchburg, or any place on the Vermont and Mass. R. R., or Troy and Greenfield R. R., that they may come from—provided twenty-five passengers shall have come over the Vt. and Mass. Rail Road to the meeting.

Passengers coming from North of South Vernon, unless provided with return tickets, should purchase only to South Vernon, and then purchase to Springfield and return. The same rule will apply also to passengers coming from East of, or in the vicinity of Greenfield.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R. Road, friends from Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.70 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. Passengers by this boat arrive in Springfield at 10.51 noon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed P. M. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the accommodation, which leaves New Haven at 6 A. M.; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the R. R. to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have free return passes by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, 8½ and 9 A. M.; and at 3, 4½, and 9 P. M.

Arrangements with any other roads that may be made, will be noticed hereafter.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held at Springfield, on the National Adv. camp-ground, commencing Wednesday, Aug. 23d, at 8 o'clock A. M.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association are members of the A. A. M. Society. A. W. S.

Annual Meeting.

The Women's Christian Association will hold its annual meeting at Springfield, Mass., August 23d, 1871. It is desirable that all members of the Association should be present.

E. S. Jennings, President.

New York Conference.

The Lord willing, the next quarterly session of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held with the church at South Butler, commencing Thursday evening, Aug. 31st, and holding over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all. It is hoped that every church will send delegates, and quarterly collections for conference fund. Teams will be in waiting at Savannah, four miles distant, on the direct road between Rochester and Syracuse. Take the 2.55 train from Rochester; no other in the P. M. stops. From Syracuse, take the express, about two o'clock, for Clyde, one station beyond, where you meet the other train which will bring you back. Please remember directions, and as far as possible come Thursday. Bro. W. J. Hobbs will give the opening address. Homes will be provided for all.

D. Cogswell, Pres.
Wm. E. Brown, Sec'y.

Tent-Meeting.

If the Lord will, the New Hampshire Mission tent will be pitched near Wells Beach, Me., on land of Charles Boston, the meeting to commence Sabbath, Aug. 27th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Brn. James G. Smith, W. H. Mitchell, Geo. W. Brown, and other able speakers, will be present to preach the word.

James G. Smith.
For the brethren, John C. Shorey.
Darius J. Dow.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Society of Suncook, N. H., have hired the Odd Fellow's Hall to hold meetings in on the Sabbath, and if any of God's servants feel like coming to preach the word, the door is open to such. Please give notice of your appointments, if convenient, in the "Crisis."

Thomas B. Dustin.

Notice.

There will be preaching at Knowlesville, three o'clock P. M., every Sunday, for seven or eight weeks. The time will be divided between Elders J. H. Whitmore and W. Vreeland. Will all the brethren and sisters pray for us, that this one more effort may be crowned with success.

For the brethren, David McClellan.

Illinois Christian Campmeeting.

Brethren in Christ will hold their tent and campmeeting this year two and a half miles north of Streator, Lasalle Co., on the Ottawa road, commencing Sept. 7th, and holding over two Sundays, or until the 17th inst. Eld. P. S. W. Deyo, of Iowa, has been invited, and will be present, also other ministers, to preach the word. The ground is beautifully located on the south bank of Otter creek, with abundance of shade trees, and a good spring of water. Trains will be going to and from the ground to town every day. The usual fixtures for tenting will be furnished free on the ground, such as tent-poles, straw, etc. Meals will be furnished at reasonable rates. Come all, without distinction of sect or party. For the brethren,

J. W. Burroughs.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing Saturday, Sept. 9th, and continue over the Sabbath, Sept. 17th. Ample provision will be made for board and horse-keeping. Board at 80 cents per day. Single meals—breakfast or supper—30 cents. Dinner 50 cents. Horse-keeping (hay and grain) 85 cents per day. The boarding department is under the charge of the committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Arrangements have been made with the railroad and steamboat companies, as follows:—Boston and Maine R. R. trains leave Boston for the meeting 7.30 A. M., 12 M., and 3 P. M.,—half fare. Purchase regular tickets at Boston, of Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover Street, for Alton Bay, and at all intermediate stations, beginning at Lawrence.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R.; trains leave Concord at 10.30 A. M. and 3.25 P. M. for the Wiers. Trains leave Lancaster for the Wiers,—half fare. Those coming from Concord, Lancaster, and Plymouth, can go through to the camp-ground the same day. The fare on the steamboats one way.

Connecticut and Passumpsic River R. R.; trains leave Derby at 7 A. M. for Wells River, Plymouth, Wiers, and Alton Bay,—half fare, if twenty-five passengers. Passengers will purchase regular tickets, and receive free return checks on the camp-ground, signed by the Secretary of the meeting. If any of our friends wish, they can come for the same a week before the meeting.

Eastern R. R. half fare. Purchase regular tickets at the several stations, and receive free return passes on the camp-ground, signed by J. Couch.

Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth R. R.; trains leave Portland at 6.15 A. M., 8.40 A. M., and 2.55 P. M., for Dover and Alton,—half fare.

Concord Road and branches; campmeeting tickets can be purchased at Concord, Suncook, Hooksett, Manchester, Nashua, Candia, New Market Junction, Greenland, and Portsmouth,—half fare. Tickets good on these roads from Sept. 8th to the 18th inclusive.

Let all be careful to purchase Campmeeting Tickets, as none will be furnished with return passes only upon those roads advertised.

We may be accommodated by other roads; if so, we shall advertise in the future.

The meeting is unavoidably appointed later than was desired, on account of R. R. accommodations.

Campmeeting at Belfast, Me.

The campmeeting proposed to be at Pittsfield, or Belfast, is appointed to be held one mile and a half north of Belfast, on the Swanville road, near the paper mill, commencing Aug. 28th. It is motioned and seconded, that we have an old-fashioned meeting, such as Bro. Grant says we used to enjoy twenty-eight years ago, when we knew no sect nor party, but were one in Christ, and had not left our first love. If this be the mind of all concerned and interested, far and near, to enjoy such a meeting, let them signify it by coming in the name of the Lord, committing all strife and contention to the fate of the chaff of the summer's threshing-floor, and bring an offering that shall be acceptable unto God, even the sacrifice of a broken and contrite spirit. Provision will be made as far as practicable to make the season one of gospel labor, rather than a place of merchandise. We expect a big tent for the accommodation of the meeting. All who possibly can will bring family tents, with bedding and provisions, as there will be no boarding tent on the ground. Come all as one, who love our Lord and his appearing. Those coming on the Maine Central, from either point, will stop at Burnham, and take cars for Belfast.

W. Cousins.
I. Damman.
A. W. Walker.

Reduction of Fare.

We have made arrangements by which the fare will be reduced on Steamer City of Richmond, between Portland and Bangor, also on Steamer running between Ellsworth and Belfast. Fare from Ellsworth to Belfast and return, $3 00.

Steamer City of Richmond will leave Bangor every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, at 6 o'clock; returning, leave Portland same nights, at 10 o'clock, or on arrival of express train from Boston. Fare on M. C. R. R. will be reduced from Dexter, Pittsfield, Unity, Thorndike and Brooks, and from all other stations on the road where eight or ten will notify me of their intention of going before the 25th inst. One fare for round trip. All tickets good from Aug. 25th to Sept. 4th. ☞ Please call for Campmeeting Tickets.

A. H. Walker, Richmond, Me., for Com.

The R. I. and E. Ct. Campmeeting.

Brethren, our campmeeting this year will (D. V.) be held at Green Station, on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R. It will commence on September 2nd, 1871, and hold till the 9th inst. We shall be happy to meet the brethren from "all the neighborhood round about." Those who have tents, or can procure them, are requested to bring By arrangements made with the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. Company, "five persons at any station on their lines can buy a ten-passage ticket (i. e. a return ticket each) on which they might together go and return at 20 per cent less than regular rates." Any person can call for a return ticket for the campmeeting at all places between Providence and Plainfield, and get twenty per cent. discount on the fare. Campmeeting tickets to be good till the 9th inst.

For the camp committee, W. Kellaway.

Fare.

The fare from Putnam, Dayville, Danielsonville, and Plainfield, will be one half price for R. I. and E. Conn. Campmeeting.

N. Shumway, for the Committee.

Maine Campmeeting.

The annual campmeeting at Pittsfield, Me., will be held in Hathorn's Grove, at Pittsfield, commencing Sept. 4th, and continue over the following Sabbath. This is a beautiful grove, about half a mile or less from the depot, in a quiet and orderly village. It is easy of access, and pleasant for situation. Everything will be done to make it a pleasant and profitable meeting. Provisions for boarding and housekeeping will be provided on the ground, at very moderate charges, and straw and boards for beds and tents will be on hand. The "Maine Mission Tent" will be in attendance, and afford shelter for sleeping purposes. All who can, bring family tents. There will be a good well, and pasturage for horses if desired.

This meeting has the sympathy and co-operation of the "State Conference," and represents the interests of the people that love Jesus and his coming. Now, brethren and sisters, arise, and come to this feast of tabernacles. Come with two points in mind: to get good, and to do good in the name of the Lord.

W. H. Mitchell.
J. M. Jewett, I. C. Wellcome.
E. A. Ricker, R. R. York.
Hiram Maine, F. A. Baker.

Grove Meeting.

The annual meeting of the church of God (called Adventists) will commence, the Lord willing, Thursday, August 31st, on the old ground, two miles and a half west of Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa., and continue over two Sundays. Friends from the east and west will leave the Atlantic and G. W. R. R., or Erie Railway, and Philadelphia and Erie R. R. at Union, Pa., and take the Union and Titusville R. R. to Lincolnville. Three trains leave Union and Titusville each way daily. Teams will be at Lincolnville on Saturdays to take friends to the ground; also at other times, by writing in time to the subscriber. Come, brethren and sisters, to the meeting, filled with the Spirit of God, and much prayer that the blessing of God may attend the meeting. Hearts, houses and barns open and free. For the Committee,

John T. Oxgley.

Grove Meeting.

There will be preaching at the Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 10th, by Eld. A. Ross. If stormy, the meeting will be in the hall at the grove. Mr. Smith, the proprietor, will furnish refreshments for man and beast to all who wish. S. O. Welch.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in South Bristol, in Mr. Barnes' orchard, commencing Saturday, Aug. 26th, and holding over the Sabbath. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting, filled with the Spirit of the Master, and help contribute to make it a success. Preaching to commence on Saturday, at two o'clock P. M. Bro. Newell is expected to help preach the word.

Eld. C. P. Greenman.

Notice.

As I shall be at the District campmeeting till Friday, the Mechanic Falls campmeeting on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, and Alton Bay after Tuesday, I hope that the friends owing me for hymn books will arrange to pay me at these meetings; or, if needing books, will apply to me as above from Aug. 20th to Sept. 15th.

I. K. Lombard.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at White & Bauer's.

NEW TRACTS.

Who are Sadducees? or, Truth Vindicated. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By Geo. Thomson.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A Colporteur's Notes, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. Ag'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. Life and Death Theology: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. Immaterialism: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. Death and the Dead, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. The Coming Judgment: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

"THIEF ON THE CROSS."

By Elder George Thomson.

A New Tract.

One of the best ever published on the above subject. Just the thing to scatter widely. Price, 3 cts. single; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail. Ag'T.

MAN.

Like as the damask rose you see,
Or like the blossom on a tree,
Or like the dainty flower in May,
Or like the morning to the day,
Or like the sun, or like the shade,
Or like the gourd which Jonah had;
E'en such is man whose thread is spun,
Drawn out and cut, and so is done.
The rose withers, the blossom blasteth,
The flower fades, the morning hasteth,
The sun sets, the shadow flies,
The gourd consumes—and man dies.

Like to the grass that's newly sprung,
Or like the tale that's new begun,
Or like the bird that's here to-day,
Or like the pearly dew of May,
Or like an hour, or like a span,
Or like the singing of a swan,
E'en such is man that lives by breath,
Is here—now there—in life and death.
The grass withers, the tale is ended,
The bird is flown, the dew's descended,
The hour is short, the span not long,
The swan near death, man's life is done.

Like a bubble in a brook,
Or in a glass much like a look,
Like shuttle in a weaver's hand,
Or like a writing on the sand,
Or like a thought, or like a dream,
Or like the gliding of a stream;
E'en such is man who lives by breath,
Is here—now there—in life and death.
The bubble's burst, the look forgot,
The shuttle's flung, the writing's blot,
The thought is past, the dream is gone,
The water glides—man's life is done.

Like to an arrow from the bow,
Or like the course of water flow,
Or like the time 'twixt flood and ebb,
Or like the spider's slender web,
Or like the running for the goal,
Or like the dealing of a dole;
E'en such is man, whose brittle state
Is always subject unto fate.
The arrow's shot, the flood soon spent,
The time no time—the web soon rent,
The race soon run, the goal soon won,
The dole soon dealt, man's life is done.

Like to the lightning from the sky,
Or like a post that soon doth hie,
Or like a quaver in a song,
Or like a journey three days long,
Or like the snow when summer's come,
Or like the pear, or like the plumb;
E'en such is man—he heaps up sorrow,
Lives but this day—and dies to-morrow.
The lightning's past, the post must go,
The song is short, the journey so,
The pear doth rot, the plumb doth fall,
The snow dissolves, and so must all.

AFFLICTION.

A. L. ADAMS.

"Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted."—CHRIST.

"Friend after friend departs;
Who has not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts,
That has not here an end."

Clouded to man are the ways of God. And is it strange that it should be so, since God is infinite and man finite. It is more strange that man should be so presumptuous as to expect to understand the ways and dealings of Him who created not only this, but all worlds and intelligences. I believe that God is infinite in power, knowledge, and holiness; and that he created all things, and therefore must be omnipotent.

Sin is the prime cause of pain, suffering, affliction, and death. Why sin was, and is permitted, man has never yet been able to determine. He can speculate upon it, but it is as foolish as it would be for an idiot to study the higher branches of mathematics; or a lisping infant to attempt the study of the classics. In the garden of Eden sin and sorrow had a beginning, and all have felt their sting. Joyfully do we look forward to the time when the cause shall be removed, knowing that the effect will no longer be produced. Here the innocent often suffer more than the guilty. The immaculate Son of God suffered and died. Oh what intense suffering! Who can tell! Matt. 27: 50.

Afflictions are the test by which God often tries the heart. Sorrow brings out hidden virtues, and affliction makes them shine in all their loveliness. Think you not that poor suffering one, who has been confined to her bed for long years, is the better for it? It may seem hard, but there is a blessing in it. The deepest affliction we are called to pass through on this earth, is to see those we love sicken, suffer, languish, and die, and we unable to save them. It takes a whole christian to say,—"Thy will be done," when the untimely Harvester comes and takes a dear sister and daughter, and hurries her away from home. Mother, do you weep for your departed child? I sorrow with you. You are afflicted, bowed down with grief. Look up to heaven, not that your child is there, but He is there who is acquainted with your affliction. Jesus weeps with you. John 11: 33, 35. "Earth has no sorrows that Heaven cannot heal." Comforting words; they shall be verified in due time.

Now the young wife and mother has been called. Her attachment to life is strong, and she feels hardly prepared to die. But she must go. The Master hath need of her. Let her rest. You have buried your love, but not your sorrow. Your cup of affliction is full; yet there is some sweet in it. You are not the only one in distress, for all those "the Lord loveth he chasteneth," in some way. He does it in mercy too. It is in the most intense affliction that we can see farthest into heaven, if we look up. We are very apt in sorrow to look down. Now an aged father and his grandchild walk side by side to the tomb. Why this disparity? I cannot tell. God knows. "The young may die; the old must." Sorrowing children, your heavenly Father careth for you; "For he hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."—Bible. Blessed words of cheer; they were meant for you; take them to yourself.—"Mourn for the mourner, and not for the dead; for he is at rest, and we in tears."* We should never mourn for the dead that die in the Lord, though they may be young, and life pleasant to them. It will do no good to mourn for the lost. God knows what is best; trust him.

The living, we may mourn for them. Mourn for them that mourn; they need our sympathy. Now the untimely Harvester gathers his sickle around the man of forty summers. Perhaps he will wait long enough for him to say "good by" to wife and children, as they, weeping, cluster around, and make every effort to hold him back. The cruel Harvester says not a word, but hurries him away. This is affliction indeed. Yet, why should

"We, wandering, go Through dreary wastes, and weep each others' woe."
—Pope.

Would it not be better to look up? Heaven knows your sorrow, and Heaven only can heal. Now the little flower is entombed ere it has sinned. All the innocent shall come again from the land of the enemy. Our heavenly Father doeth all things well. Mourn, but not murmur. Death is the monster that cries, Give, give,—never satisfied. He feeds on pain, but his time will come; he, too, shall have an end. Rev. 20: 14. Then we live in the past with our departed friends, their loving words, kind acts, happy associations, then we feel that,

"Sorrow's crown of sorrowing
Is remembering happier things."

There is a joy in our sorrows. Who would be separated from them? Not one. Moore says,—

"Rather than have one bliss forgot,
Be all my pains remembered too."

Our sorrows and joys are often closely linked.

Be it so. I would not forget the sorrow I have felt. "I love to steal awhile away" and weep. It makes one feel better. Pent up grief is sure to wound the soul. I pity the eyes that cannot shed tears. I am glad that we cannot bury in forgetfulness the memory of dear friends. That it lives beyond the tomb, is one of the grandest evidences of a future life outside of revelation. Though shadows of loved ones occasionally fall across our path, we would not exchange them for any thing this world can give. Beyond human power to see, there is wisdom, infinite wisdom, in making perfect through suffering. Were there no pains in this life, how should we measure our bliss? I can but believe, that when the mysteries of God shall be made clear, many happy disappointments will greet his children. . . .

There is a cemetery in North Wilbraham, called the Dell. It is one of nature's beautiful places, in a winding little valley, among the little hills. The laughing brook, the lofty timber, the wild notes of praise, together with the marble slabs, make it a very attractive resort for meditation, especially to the students of Wesleyan Academy. Who does not love to stroll among grave-stones?—if it is not dark. I would not speak of it, but for the happy recollections that carry me back there; and there, too, I find some sorrow. Sorrow and joy walk not far apart. Who would forget where their dead are sleeping? The grave has charms beyond life. Oh, the tomb! It covers every error, shows only sad regrets, and tender remembrances. Some of the dear ones that walked with me in that Dell are now sweetly sleeping. The Master took them. All is well. Yet I weep when I remember, but I would not forget. I struggle to feel that it is right. It is. Jesus knew. Affliction was the magnifying lense through which good old Job looked when he uttered this wonderful speech: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." Oh! help me to have such faith! such love!

Graves talk to us of eternity. Father, mother, sister, brother, if you have a "little grave," go when the shades of evening fall, and kneel beside it, and there feel the need of a Savior and resurrection morn, as you can no where else. Strew it around with flowers, and leave it in God's care. Death buries, so sweetly, all unkindness; and from the earth-chamber comes hope, fragrant with love. There is consolation in mourning. [I never could see why black is essential for weeds, or why we cannot mourn under one dress as well as another.] Weep, nor let your tears be few. "Jesus wept."

"Oh, love! to form one happy chain,
How many thou must break."

In this chain are found all the links from infancy to old age. No Adventist, Methodist, or Baptist, will be found in this chain. Christians only (not in name, but in heart) shall be saved. When Jesus speaks the dead to life, the chain will be complete. If, when you bend over the grave of affection, one bitter regret comes back to sting the conscience, take warning, and hereafter be more careful in the discharge of life's duties toward the living. Ye sorrowing ones, dry your tears. Jesus speaks: THE PURE IN HEART SHALL MEET AGAIN.

BAPTISMAL INCIDENTS.—No. 2.

O. R. FASSETT.

Following a successful tent-meeting in ——, where Bro. Reed and myself had labored in this State (Minnesota), a church was organized and a large number were baptized. The Saturday evening previous to the administration of the ordinance, I preached upon the subject of baptism. A Congregational deacon was present to hear. He informed me afterwards he had not been satisfied with his baptism for a long time. On Lord's day morning, the deacon came to where I was stopping, and opened the conviction of his mind to me, and asked me if I was willing to baptize him on the following conditions: "I am not a full believer in your doctrines. If I should be baptized with your converts, and in your company of believers, there will be a false impression go out that I am a believer with you in your faith as a people, which I have not as yet sufficiently investigated to subscribe to. Neither do I intend to leave my church, nor join yours, at least now. I do not see this as duty. Furthermore, I want to do this, not to please men, nor to be seen of men, but before God and satisfy my own conscience. Now if you will baptize me after you have baptized your company, and repair from that place immediately after you have administered the ordinance to them, to a place I shall designate, where this can be done before God without the multitude, I feel that I would like to be baptized by you."

These were the words, or those of similar import, which this deacon, a most conscientious man and a christian, as all regard him, spoke to me. I said to him that I should prefer to baptize him before the same congregation and witnesses before whom the others were baptized, and I thought it the more consistent way, and that he would be more greatly blest in doing his duty thus openly. However, if he felt the other was the right way for him before God, and would select a certain number of friends to witness the ordinance administered, and allow me to do the same, I would do as he had requested. To this arrangement he readily assented. He then told me of the spot he had selected for the administration of the ordinance, and that I would find him there at the time appointed. Agreeably to our arrangement, after the baptism and the dispersion of the multitude, I repaired to this chosen locality with certain brethren, and there found our deacon in waiting with his witnesses. We both went down into the water, as did Philip and the eunuch, and I baptized him in the sight of his God and Savior, and let him go on his way rejoicing.

However, before night nearly the whole community knew of this circumstance. It became a matter of much talk. Different interpretations were put upon the transaction, and contradictory reasons assigned, until finally the affair came before his church, and was fully ventilated there, the minister, officers of the church, and certain members, discussing the propriety of the deacon's procedure. He, having quietly heard all the complaints and grievances and arguments, finally stated that he thought it best, as the church was dissatisfied with his action, which he conscientiously regarded as his duty, to withdraw from the church, and proceeded to make request for dismission. The church, seeing this was assuming such a phase, and not prepared to lose so good a deacon, and so valuable an aid to the cause in every respect, at once dismissed all further proceedings, and all future criticisms, and all allusions to the erratic course of the deacon, from that day to this.

My opinion to-day is, that this deacon would have saved himself much unpleasant and perplexing trouble in the church; his motives been better understood by the community; and it would have been more satisfactory to himself and friends, and certainly to his fellow citizens, had he submitted to have been baptized with other of his neighbors, with the understanding that he intended to remain in his church, if they still preferred it, or follow the leadings of the Lord's providence. An open, bold and frank stand for Jesus and the truth is certainly the best in the end—always.

CHURCH DIVISIONS.

THE CURE.

A. A. PHELPS.

19. Let us all get nearer to Christ. He is the grand centre of Christianity. By drawing nearer to him, we shall necessarily get nearer to each other. It requires the mighty magnetism of grace divine to draw divided hearts into holy fellowship. Logic will not do it. Philosophy will not do it. Theology will not do it. We may fancy that some slight changes in the ecclesiastical machinery would remove the creaking friction, and restore harmony; but mechanical unions, though easily spliced, are also easily spoiled. A fusion of elements is indispensable to the blessed experience of gospel fellowship. And this melting process can only be produced by the powerful agency of the Holy Spirit. While spiritual prosperity implies the absence of turmoil and strife, the converse of this proposition is not always strictly true. Churches sometimes flatter themselves that they have prosperity because they have peace; when a closer inspection would reveal the sad fact that it is only the peace of death. They have "quiet in all their borders"—and so do grave yards. They are firmly united—not by fusion, but by frost. Their union is like that which turns a mass of water into an iceberg—it is the union of congealation. Such a graceless cohesion is a positive curse. It is doubly sad for a church to become so thoroughly dead, as to be utterly unconscious of the fact that she is dead.

It is not the stillness of stagnation, nor the peace of spiritual death, for which we plead. It is rather the happy harmony that results from a vitalized organism, when every member is in a healthy condition, and every function is properly performed. It is the union of a thousand hearts washed in the same cleansing blood, exulting in the same delivering grace, and throbbing with the same pulsations of love to God and good will to man. Nothing will so effectually annihilate our differences as to nestle more closely together under the shadowing wings of the "Prince of peace." The sweet breath of a Savior's love will dispossess us of pride and passion, and warm us into vital union with Christ and each other. As the relationships of grace are more sacred and endearing than all beside, so the more fully the followers of Jesus imbibe his Spirit, the stronger the bonds of mutual fellowship become.

Church members do not quarrel as the result of grace, but for want of it. If they had more grace they would have less grit. More fasting would make less fighting. Prayer and pugilism are natural antagonisms—the more of the one, the less of the other. The more of gospel, the less of gossip. The more of devotion, the less of detraction. The more of Christ, the less of carnality. With all humility we would venture to suggest that those churches which are in a perpetual storm of excitement, caused by unruly tongues and sensitive nerves, and resulting in vain janglings and senseless factions, give evidence of being wofully backslidden. Their greatest want is a want of grace. How can the "fruits of the Spirit" grow among the worthless weeds of strife and the choking thorns of malice?

The specific rules that have been given in this series of articles are both wholesome and important; but we consider the present one as far the most important in the entire prescription. It may be regarded as comprehensive of all that can be said on the prevention or cure of church divisions. If you see a storm gathering, you need nothing so much as more grace to prepare you for the trying emergency. If your personal rights are invaded, and your feelings are rudely lacerated, you need to cry earnestly to God for more grace to enable you to quell the rising passion, and preserve your soul in patience. If the elements around you are in a turbulent condition, what will so well qualify you to allay the troubled waters as a fresh baptism of the Holy Spirit, flooding your whole nature with its mellowing influence, and transforming you into a genuine peace-maker?

Brethren and sisters, as I now close these articles, I ask you all to enter into a solemn covenant with me to seek a fresh anointing of the Spirit, a closer fellowship with God, a lower place at the feet of Jesus. Will you do it?

Rochester, N. Y.

THE LAMBS OF THE FLOCK.

Gather them into the fold. Yes, gather them in, and let this be the burden of every parent and guardian and S. S. teacher. When Christ was upon earth, the children were brought to him. They could not come without help. So it is now. The church has a greater responsibility in relation to the children, than it is sensible of. It must almost believe in Christ in their stead. It must bring them to him, and entreat him to lay his hand upon their heads; or, in other words, seal a blessing to them. We know he loves children, and is waiting to have them brought to him, that he may bless them.

As many parents take their children to the campmeeting, what more convenient time could they have to dedicate them to Christ than at this feast? and as there are meetings at these gatherings especially for them, their conversion to the Savior should be the special object of the meeting; for admitting that they are indoctrinated in all the mysteries of the Bible, and their hearts are not changed, of what avail? We read that with the heart man believeth unto salvation; from which we infer that he may believe with his head, but not unto salvation. Then aim at the heart, and use the only weapon that will reach it—the Holy Spirit. Pray and labor for the children. D. N. SMITH.

☞ THE man who carries a lantern in a dark night, can have friends all around him, walking safely by the help of its rays, and he not defrauded. So he who has the God-given light of hope in his breast, can help on many others in this world's darkness, not to his own loss, but to their precious gain.

GREAT SPEECH AT THE VATICAN.

Translated by Rev. Leonard W. Bacon, Baltimore, Md.

The boldest and most powerfully condensed argument extant against the pretensions of Popery, is a speech pronounced by a Roman Catholic bishop in the Roman Council. The copy in my possession is one published in the Italian language by the association which issues in Florence the journal entitled, "Papal Rome Unveiled to the People." It ought to be printed for general distribution here. A sixteen-page tract would contain it all.

The great speech is published without name, but my copy, which has just reached me from Rome, bears on its title-page, in the handwriting of one of the most eminent Catholics in that city, the note: "This speech is by Mgr. Strossmayer, Bishop of Bosnia in Crotia."

It is difficult to abridge what is already a marvel of condensed force; but I will do my best.

After a few calm, weighty words of introduction, the Bishop says that under a grave sense of his responsibility to God, he has studiously applied himself to the examination of the Holy Scriptures on the question whether the Holy Pontiff who presides in the council is really the successor of St. Peter, the Vicar of Jesus Christ, and the infallible teacher of the church. The effect of this inquiry has been startling:

I open, then, these sacred pages. . . . But what! shall I dare to tell it? I find in them nothing to justify, however remotely, the ultramontane view. Nay, more! to my utter astonishment, I find nothing said about a pope, successor of St. Peter and Vicar of Jesus Christ, any more than about a successor of Mohammed. Yes, Archbishop Manning, you will say that I blaspheme; and you, Bishop Pie, that I am out of my senses. No, no, my lord bishops! I am not blaspheming; I am not beside myself! But having just risen from the reading of the New Testament from beginning to end, I declare to you before God, lifting my hand towards yonder great crucifix, that I find in its pages no trace of the papacy as it now exists.

Do not refuse to listen to me, venerable brethren! Do not by your murmurs and interruptions justify those who declare, with Father Hyacinthe, that this council is not free, but that our votes are imposed upon us in advance. If this were so, this august assembly, towards which the eyes of the whole world are turned, would fall into the most shameful contempt. If we would be great, we must be free.

I thank his Grace, Bishop Dupanloup, for that nod of approval! It gives me courage to go on.

Reading then the Scriptures, with such attention as the Lord has made me capable of, I have not found in them a single chapter, a single verse, in which Jesus Christ commits to St. Peter lordship over the apostles, his fellow-laborers.

If Simon, son of Jonas, had been appointed to be what we understand his holiness, Pius IX., to be in our time, it is astonishing that Christ did not say to the apostles: "When I am ascended up to my Father, ye all shall obey Simon Peter as ye have obeyed me. I appoint him my vicar upon earth."

Not only is Christ silent on this point, but he has so little thought of giving the Church a chief, that when he is promising thrones to his apostles, to judge the twelve tribes of Israel (Matthew 19: 28), he promises twelve of them—one apiece—without saying that one is to be higher than the rest, and is to belong to Peter. Surely if he had wished this to be so, he would have said so. What must we infer from his silence? Logic tells us: Christ did not intend to make Peter chief of the apostolic college.

When Christ sent forth the apostles to the conquest of the world, he gave to all alike the power of binding and loosing; to all, the promise of the Holy Ghost. Let me repeat it: if he had meant to make Peter his vicar, he would have appointed him commander-in-chief of his spiritual army.

Christ, says the Scripture, forbade Peter and his colleagues to have rule and lordship and power over believers like the princes of the Gentiles. (Luke 22: 25.) If Peter had been made pope, Jesus would not have spoken thus, for, according to our traditions, the papacy holds in its hands two swords, the symbol of spiritual and temporal power.

One fact has profoundly impressed me. When I observed it, I said to myself: If Peter had been pope, would his colleagues have suffered themselves to send him with St. John to Samaria to preach the gospel of the Son of God? (Acts 8: 14.)

What would you think, venerable brethren, if, at this moment, we were to permit ourselves to depute his holiness, Pius IX. and his eminence, Monsignor Plantier, to betake themselves to the Patriarch of Constantinople, and adjure him to put an end to the eastern schism?

But here is another fact, of greater importance still. An ecumenical council was assembled at Jerusalem to decide on questions on which believers were divided. Who would have convoked this council, if St. Peter had been pope? St. Peter. Who would have presided over it? St. Peter, or his legates. Who would have formulated and promulgated the canons of it? St. Peter. Well, now, nothing of the kind took place. The apostle was present at the council, like all his colleagues. But it was not he who framed its conclusions, but St. James; and when the decrees of it were promulgated, this was done in the name of "the apostles, the elders and the brethren." (Acts 15.) Is this the way we manage things in our church?

The deeper I go, venerable brethren, in my examination, the more I am convinced that in the Holy Scriptures there is no appearance of the primacy of the son of Jonas.

While we teach that the church is built on St. Peter, St. Paul, whose authority cannot be questioned, tells us in his Epistle to the Ephesians (2: 20) that it is "built upon the foundation of the apostles and the prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone." The same apostle is so far from believing in the supremacy of Peter, that he openly rebukes those who say: "I am of Paul, and I of Apollos" (1 Corinth. 1: 12) in the same terms as those who would say: "I am of Peter." If then, the latter apostle was vicar of Jesus Christ, St. Paul would have taken good care not to censure so violently those who held to his colleagues.

The same apostle Paul, enumerating the offices of the church, mentions apostles, prophets, evangelists, teachers, pastors. Is it credible, venerable brethren, that St. Paul, the great teacher of the Gentiles, would have left out the greatest of all the offices—the papacy—if the papacy had been founded by divine institution? It seems to me that this omission would have been no more possible than a history of this council that should make no mention whatever of His Holiness, Pius IX. (Voices in the Assembly—Silence, heretic! silence!)

Keep calm, venerable brethren! I have not got through yet. By hindering me from going on, you will show the world that you are in the wrong, and that you have gagged the humblest member of this body.

I proceed: The apostle Paul in not one of his letters addressed to the various churches, makes any mention of the primacy of Peter. If this primacy had existed, if in short the church had had a supreme head, infallible in teaching, would the great teacher of the Gentiles have omitted all mention of it? Nay! He would have written a long epistle on this important, this vital subject. When, therefore, he is rearing the edifice of Christian doctrine, is it possible that he leaves out the foundation and the key-stone? Now, unless the apostolic church is to be reckoned heretical, which we neither wish nor dare to say, we are constrained to acknowledge that the church has never been more fair, more pure, nor more holy, than in the days when it had no pope. Voices—It is false! it is false!

Monsignor de Laval cannot contradict this; for if any of you, venerable brethren, should dare to think that the church, which at this day has a pope for its head, is stronger in faith, or purer in morals, than the apostolic church, he must say it openly in the face of the world; for this room is the centre from which our words fly from pole to pole.

I proceed: Not in the writings of St. Paul, nor in those of St. John or St. James, have I found any trace or germ of the Papal power. St. Luke, the historian of the missionary labors of the apostles, is silent on this vital point. The silence of these holy men, whose writings are part of the canon of the Inspired Scriptures, is as inexplicable, if Peter had been Pope, as that of Thiers would have been if he had omitted the title of Emperor in the history of Napoleon Bonaparte.

I see before me a member of this body who says, pointing at me with his finger: "He is a schismatic bishop who has got amongst us under false pretenses."

No, no, my venerable brethren, I did not come into this august assembly like a thief by the window. I came by the door just as regularly as yourselves. It is my right as a bishop, as it is my duty as a Christian, to speak and declare what I know to be true.

But the thing which astounds me beyond all expression is the silence of Peter himself. If he had been what we say—the vicar of Christ upon earth—he must have known it. If he knew it, how does it happen that he never once—not one solitary time—acted as pope? He might have done it on the day of Pentecost, when he pronounced his first discourse; but he did not. He might have done it at the Council of Jerusalem; but he did not. He might have done it at Antioch; but he did not. He might have done it in his two epistles to the churches; but he did not. Imagine such a pope as this, O my venerable brethren!

If, then, we would maintain that Peter was pope, it necessarily follows that we must maintain that he was not aware of it at the time. I put it to any man with a head to think and a mind to reflect, whether these two suppositions are credible.

To sum up, then: during the life-time of the apostles, the church never thought of the possibility of a pope. To maintain the contrary, it would be necessary to put the Holy Scriptures into the fire, or out of the mind.

But I hear from all sides the question, "Was not St. Peter at Rome? Was he not crucified here head downward? The chair from which he taught, the altar at which he said mass—are they not in this Eternal City?"

Venerable brethren, the sojourn of St. Peter at Rome has no other proof than tradition. But even if he was bishop of Rome, what argument can be drawn from his episcopate here to prove his supremacy? A scholar of the highest rank, Scaliger, has not hesitated to say that the episcopate and sojourn of St. Peter at Rome must be classed among ridiculous legends. (Repeated cries—"Silence him! silence him! Down with him from the platform!")

Venerable brethren, I am ready to be silent; but is it not more becoming to such a body as this to prove all things, as the apostle enjoins, and believe that which is good?

In the midst of such a storm of disapprobation, the bishop reached the close of his main Scriptural argument. The interruptions he encountered, and the retorts he made upon the overwhelming majority that roared against him, are not the least interesting and instructive things about the speech. But nothing could check the torrent of voluble Latin, in the fluent use of which no man in all the Council could compare with Strossmayer. The historical argument which followed, was not less notable than the beginning.

A PATENT-RIGHT SWINDLE.

Among the many swindling operations of the day the patent right dodge is largely practiced on farmers, and we have heard of several cases in this section within a year. The following note is a copy of one now in use by these sharpers. It will appear at first sight to be perfectly simple, and no person, wishing to take an agency for any of the many patents, would hesitate to sign it.

SMITHVILLE, PA., April 15th, 1871.

One year after date I promise to pay A. Sharp, or bearer, Ten Dollars when I sell by order, Two Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars worth of Seeding Machines for value received, at ten per cent. per annum, said Ten Dollars, when due, to be payable at Smithville, Pa.

JOHN SMITH. Agent for A. Brown.

Witness, JOHN DOE.

Now, having read the above carefully, and supposing it to be all right for $10, just cut it in two between the words or, and bearer, in the first line, and you will find that the left hand piece is a perfect note for $275. Having induced a farmer to accept an agency as specified in the original note, and having obtained his signature, the sharper departs. He then cuts off the right hand portion, proceeds to the nearest broker or banker, to whom he offers to sell the note at a discount, on the plea of needing the money. The signer is generally a responsible person, well known to the business men of the village, and the note is purchased. When the note falls due it is presented for collection, and as the signatures are indisputable, the horrified farmer is asked to pay $275, when he only supposed that he owed $10.—Ex.

WARM HEARTS WANTED.

"We need men of hot hearts to tell of the love of Jesus," was the appeal sent home by some Chinese converts the other day. This is what the church needs—what the world needs—"men of hot hearts." "I would ye were hot," is the Master's cry. If we are to succeed, we must be on fire about it. Dr. Arnot, of Edinburgh, tells of his being at a railway station one day, and wearied of waiting for the train to move, he asked one of the men what the trouble was. "Is there a want of water?" "Plenty of water, sir," was the prompt reply, "but it's no bilin'."

That's the trouble with the church to-day. There's abundance of machinery, the engine is all in order, the train is made up, the men are at their posts—"there's plenty of water, but it's no bilin'." The great motive power is wanting. We need to heap on the fuel of sound doctrine, not shavings of sentiment which make a big blaze only to go out as quickly, but the solid logs of fundamental truth—chunks if you will. But we need yet more the fire—to be baptized with the Holy Ghost as with fire.—Selected.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

AVOID THE NET, BOYS.

Come here, boys, let me speak to you. Where are you going? I heard one of your company say, "Come, let us go down to the saloon and get some beer;" is it there you are going? Hold on a moment; that is a bad place for boys. I have seen a great many boys begin at the saloon or liquor shop, and end in state's prison. Did you ever see the fisherman cast a net and draw in the fish? How the fish dive and flop and try to escape, but can't! Did you ever see birds caught in a snare or net? If you have seen pigeons in a net, you have noticed how they try but can't escape. Listen to what the Bible tells you: "As the fishes are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in a snare, so are the sons of men snared in an evil time."

Every liquor saloon or rum-shop is a net or snare; if you are there, you are in danger of being caught. Shun it—keep away. If you begin drinking beer, you will soon want still stronger drinks, and once started on this track, no one can tell where you will end. But if you never taste a drop of intoxicating liquor, we all know where you will end—you will end sober men. How easy, then, to escape becoming a drunkard, to wit, by never drinking a drop of intoxicating liquors.

Avoid the ale, the beer, the lager—don't begin, and you will never get into the net or snare. Think of five hundred thousand drunkards in America, all caught in the net. Some try as hard as do the poor fishes to escape, but in vain. Avoid the net, boys, avoid the net! is the cry of an old sentinel. Listen to the note of warning—keep away from the dram-shops.

A poor drunkard tried to borrow five dollars of me a few months ago. He wandered around in drunkenness, and not ten days later was run over on a railroad track and killed. I knew him when a bright, promising boy. But he went to the rum-shop, was caught in the snare, and in an evil hour ruin came suddenly upon him. Keep out of that net!—Benjamin Joy.

TRUE REASON FOR BEING HONEST.

"Honesty is the best policy," said Harry aloud; "and I mean always to be honest."

"What does 'best policy' mean?" asked his sister Ada, looking up from her work.

"Why, this," replied the boy, "that if you are always honest, even though it may not seem the wisest thing for yourself at the time, you will get best off in the end."

"I don't think," replied his sister, "that it is a good reason; because if you saw dishonest people getting on better for a long time, you would perhaps get tired of waiting for the time to come when you would be 'best off,' and begin to be dishonest too."

"Ada is right," said her mamma, coming into the room; "be honest because it is right, my son; that is the only safe reason. Try to please God, whether any gain comes from it or not. You will sometimes not be able to see how doing the right thing is profitable in a temporal point of view; but it will matter little, when you come to die, whether you have been 'best off' in this world or not."

"I thank you, mamma," said Harry. "In future I will endeavor to do right because it is right, and is pleasing to God, whether it seems to my advantage or not."

A PROUD BOY.

It was a cold night in winter. The wind blew, and the snow was whirled furiously about, seeking to hide itself beneath cloaks and hoods, and in the very hair of those who were out. A distinguished lecturer was to speak, and notwithstanding the storm, the villagers very generally ventured forth to hear him.

William Amnesly, buttoned up to his chin in his thick overcoat, accompanied his mother. It was difficult to walk through the fallen snow against the piercing wind, and William said to his mother:

"Couldn't you walk easier if you took my arm?"

"Perhaps I could," his mother replied, as she put her arm through his, and drew up as closely as possible to him. Together they breasted the storm, the mother, and the boy who had once been carried in her arms, but who had now grown up so tall that she could lean on his. They had not walked very far before he said:

"I am very proud to-night, mother."

"Proud that you can take care of me!" she said to him with a heart gushing with tenderness.

"This is the first time you have leaned upon me," said the happy boy. There will be few hours in that child's life of more exalted pleasure than he enjoyed that evening.—Exchange.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

HASTE AND HEALTH.—It is not at all wholesome to be in a hurry. Locomotives have been reported to have moved a mile in a minute for short distances. But locomotives have often come to grief by such great rapidity. Multitudes in their haste to get rich are ruined every year. The men who do things maturely, slowly, deliberately, are the men who oftenest succeed in life. People who are habitually in a hurry generally have to do things twice over. Slow men seldom knock their brains out against a post. Foot-races are injurious to health, as are all forms of competitive exercises. Steady labor in the field is the best gymnasium in the world.

Either labor or exercise carried to exhaustion, or prostration, or even to great tiredness, always does more harm than the previous exercise has done good. All running up stairs, running to catch up with a vehicle or ferry-boat, are extremely injurious to every age, and sex, and condition of life. Those live longest who are deliberate, whose actions are measured, who never embark in any enterprise without "sleeping over it," and who perform all the every-day acts of life with calmness. Quakers are a proverbially calm, quiet people, are a thrifty folk, the world over.—Dr. Hall.

CARE OF THE FEET.—Concerning this subject, the Scientific American very truly says:—"Many are careless in the keeping of the feet. If they wash them once a week they think they are doing well. They do not consider that the largest pores of the system are located in the bottom of the foot, and that the most offensive matter is discharged through the pores. They wear stockings from the beginning to the end of the week without change, which becomes completely saturated with offensive matter. Ill-health is generated by such treatment of the feet. The pores are not repellents, but absorbents, and this fetid matter, to a greater or less extent, is taken back into the system. The feet should be washed every day with pure water, and stockings should not be worn more than a day or two at a time."

TREATMENT OF SPRAINS AND BRUISES.—The best treatment of sprains and bruises is the application of water, of such temperature as is most agreeable. The degree of temperature varies with the temperature of the weather and the vigor of the circulation. In a hot day use cool or cold water. If the circulation is low, use warm water. The bruised or sprained part may be immersed in a pail of water, and gently pressed and manipulated with the hand or soft cloth, for ten or fifteen minutes, and even longer in severe cases, after which, wrap up the parts in cloths wet in cold water, and keep quiet. This treatment keeps down inflammation, and in nine cases out of ten proves a speedy cure. The liniments and filthy ointments so much used for sprains and bruises do not compare with this simple treatment in efficacy.

IMPORTANCE OF AIRING BEDS.—The desire of an energetic housekeeper to have her work done at an early hour in the morning, causes her to leave one of the most important items of neatness undone. The most effectual purifying of bed and bed-clothes cannot take place, if the proper time is not allowed for the free circulation of pure air to remove all human impurities, which have collected during the hours of slumber. At least two or three hours should be allowed for the complete removal of atoms of insensible perspiration which are absorbed by the bed. Every day this airing should be done; and occasionally bedding constantly used should be carried into the open air, and, when practicable, left exposed to the sun and wind for half a day.

SIMPLE CURE FOR BURNS.—A varnisher of metals, in Paris, one day got his hand badly burned, and in his agony thrust it into a pot of varnish at his side. To his astonishment the pain at once ceased, and the wound rapidly healed. This cure being reported around, persons in the neighborhood who had got burned, came to the varnisher and were cured in like manner. The news circulated far and wide, and finally reached the medical faculty, and the varnisher was sent for to try his skill in the hospital. He responded to the call and succeeded in curing all on whom he has operated. The philosophy of the cure is, the varnish keeps the burn from the air, and gives nature a chance to supply a new skin under its protection.

ACTIVITY AND HEALTH.—All observation attests that the healthiest persons in the world are those most actively employed. The fact is true with regard to women as well as men, and in respect of mental as well as physical labor. The adage, "It is better to wear out than to rust out," is true in the ordinary sense in which it is quoted, but it should also be remembered that rusting out is a more rapid process than wearing out. The ghastly goddess of ill health and disease delights in sluggish blood and indolent muscles.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

HYMN.

Pilgrim, wake! behold the morning,
Long foretold by holy seers,
Gilds the heaven with its dawning,
Hail! the blissful morn appears.
Halcyon day, so full of glory,
Holy prophets sang of thee;
Rapturous in poetic story,
Soon the pure in heart will see.

See! the morning star is beaming
Bright upon the gilded sky;
Oh! what rays of light are gleaming—
Shout aloud! redemption's nigh!
Sing ye now who have been weeping
Through a long night, dark and drear,
Who, while lonely vigils keeping,
Longed to see the day appear.

On it speeds in lustre breaking—
Hallelujah! shout and sing,
Soon our loved ones will be waking,
And the new creation ring
With the loud, immortal chorus
To the Lamb that once was slain;
By his blood in mercy made us
Kings and priests on earth to reign.

Now with all your might and power,
Watch and trim your lamps with care;
Gird your loins and wait the hour
When the Bridegroom shall appear.
Then with all the saints, adorned
With their brilliant diadems,
See the King in beauty crowned,
In the New Jerusalem.

RESURRECTION OF A PART, OR THE WHOLE?

O. D. WOODRUFF.

The resurrection of the wicked dead is denied on the ground that union with Christ is requisite to a revival from the dead, only such as are duly qualified being allowed to participate in it. Among those who believe the righteous only will be raised, it is assumed they are not dead in the sense that the wicked are, because the righteous hath hope in his death. To see whether character affects the nature or power of death, take the purest example on record. We learn (Heb. 1: 9) that Jesus tasted death for every man, and (Rom. 6: 9) was under the dominion of death, though (Acts 2: 24) it was not possible that he should be holden of it. Hope in his case was fully assured, yet death triumphed over the Holy One, and its dominion was complete, though he tasted it but three days and three nights. This case established the fact that death does its work as effectually with the innocent as with the guilty; and its dominion is supreme, whether it reigns for a day, or forever. It feeds alike on the upright and the wicked, and does not consult their feelings or ask their permission to do so.

The Jews upbraided Christ because he said (John 8: 51, 52), "If a man keep my saying, he shall never see or taste death." Now if the wicked dead are never raised, they of course die no other death; how will this theory account for the fact, that those who have kept the sayings of Jesus, have at least tasted the death of the wicked for hundreds and thousands of years? We confess our inability to preserve the theory and the record too. Again, this theory removes all distinction between innocence and guilt, for it asks us to believe that it is just and right to put both righteous and wicked in durance vile together, and allow the righteous to taste the penalty of sin long enough to establish their criminality, and leave us the only alternative to abandon its arrangement, or deny the words of Jesus.

To illustrate: God told Abraham (Gen. 15: 15), "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace, thou shalt be buried in a good old age"; and Joshua said (Joshua 24: 2), Abraham's fathers were idolators. Now this theory has these wicked men firm in the grasp of its penalty; and if they got into this state for their crimes, pray tell us why Abraham has been keeping them company for nearly four thousand years? Has he tasted death or not, and can we do less than reckon him as a criminal for being compelled to share the criminal's doom? This is the only theory we know of that makes a wholesale penal onslaught of the righteous to keep its penalty busy. But says a believer, we preserve the distinction between the righteous and the wicked, because we have arranged to release the righteous and let them go. Very true; but not till they have been associated and punished with idolators and murderers, thieves and liars, sufficiently to forever stain their character for virtue, and present Christ as an inefficient Savior, for not being able to save them from an intentional or accidental classification with such characters.

In Matt. 13th chap. Jesus calls the righteous "wheat," and the wicked "tares." He has fixed the time for gathering them at the end of the world, and calls it the harvest, and says let both grow together till the harvest. A vast multitude of both tares and wheat are in the graves, and we find our author saying (John 5: 28 29), "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and come forth." After he himself has defined the tares and wheat to be the righteous and wicked, and says they shall all hear his voice and come forth from their graves, can we keep this saying of his and at the same time deny it? Does not the fact that all are to hear, prove that all will be revived; and if all are unconscious till they do hear, is it not strange logic to insist that one class will remain unconscious after they have heard? Are we prepared to say that a man who has heard sufficient noise to awake him out of sleep, was not awakened? Is there any power in the voice of the Son of man, or will it fail when brought to the test in the last great day? The process that will show a harvest without the tares, can be made to show a harvest without the wheat, and do away with the harvest altogether.

Christians teach their children to avoid works of fiction and read the Bible; if, however, the children are taught that these sayings of Jesus are to be denied, or figured away; would it be strange if they came to regard the Bible as a compilation of fables and folly, and Jesus as a sensational author, who said things he never intended they should believe? Has not this method of handling the word of God had more to do with increasing the demand for novel reading, among professed christians and their children, than many would like to admit, by making the Bible a precedent to encourage the desire for works of that stamp, so demoralizing to virtue and godliness?

Let us with carefulness remember the day to which the words of Christ, in John 12: 48, point. We are told that the wicked have none of the wheat nature or resurrection seed in them, and as Christ is not the father of the devil's children, they cannot live by him, because he has no mortal life to give. Words might be multiplied to no profit, but a single illustration of what God has done, should be sufficient reason why we should believe he can and will, at his own appointed time, revive the wicked dead.

The hand of an excessively wicked man was once instantly withered and struck with death; and by the same power as quickly revived to mortal life again (1 Kings 13: 4–6.) All we have to say is, if those who believe that God cannot raise the wicked dead to mortal life, could have the experience of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, their doubts would be gone on that point.

What a motley array of theories touching the resurrection of the dead are now presented. One might think the Bible like an old garret, where every thing is stowed away, only a little patience being required to get any thing you want. Some deny the resurrection of the dead entirely, and bid such a thought good bye forever; others believe in the resurrection of all the dead, while another class deny the resurrection of all the wicked; and a recent offshoot from this latter theory has made an improvement, by which it contrives to take a majority of the wicked out of their graves, but for some reason has not yet learned how to get the rest out. We cannot charge inspiration with such an incongruity as this. The Scriptures must have been roughly handled to present such a spectacle. Who knows but other parties may yet arise and teach that their friends and family relations will all be raised from the dead, and everybody else buried forever? They would probably find something in the Bible that could be turned to their account, provided it fared no worse than heretofore.

It is a busy age. Bible doctrine is spliced, patched, mended, or created to order. Almost every man fixes up a theory of his own; and if the Bible gets in his way, he soon learns how to get it out of his way. More time is spent in contriving how to avoid the real meaning of the Scriptures, than in learning how to believe them. Poor old book! Its treatment by professed friends has created more infidels than they would care to know of, besides making many of them practical infidels without their knowing it. "Mystery," in large letters, should be written over the theology of the nineteenth century.

Some teach that the second coming of Christ will be spiritual, and not literal; others, that the meek, instead of inheriting the earth, will go beyond the bounds of time and space; and that to be as it was in the days of Noah, means the conversion of the world. Why not endorse these interpretations, as well as to believe that for all that are in the graves to hear the voice of Jesus and come forth means that the majority of those in the graves will not come forth? To our mind one is as consistent as the other; and until those who deny the resurrection of the wicked dead can tell us why we should not believe Matthew 5: 5 teaches going to heaven at death, or John 14: 3 the spiritual coming of Christ, or Matt. 24: 37–39 the conversion of the world; we must believe that John 5: 28, 29, teaches the resurrection of all the dead. Jesus says (Matt. 24: 35), "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." Will not his words pass away, if either of the above quotations are not literally fulfilled? Though the sayings of Jesus have passed away, they have at least passed an ordeal, which any court of justice would call an attempt to impeach the witness.

After all, we rejoice to know that when time's career shall close, and theories pass for what they are worth, the word of the Lord will stand forever. When the words of Jesus are fulfilled, and human forms burst the ground on every hand, and louder and still louder as the trumpet peals forth, from the depths of the sea to the surface thereof dead ones arise; then, with the law of gravitation reversed, and all nature in amazement looking on, the argument for the resurrection will close amid grandeur and terror, that will remove the stoutest unbelief, but, alas, too late! The heavens may roll together as a scroll, and the earth become empty and void; but the word of our God will still abide, and its promises reach forward and onward into the vast forever, the comfort and assurance of all believers. While resting with confidence in the promises to the righteous, let us be mindful that God will by no means clear the guilty; but will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. Let our standard now be "holiness to the Lord," and our banner his love, that when Christ shall appear, he may say "well done."

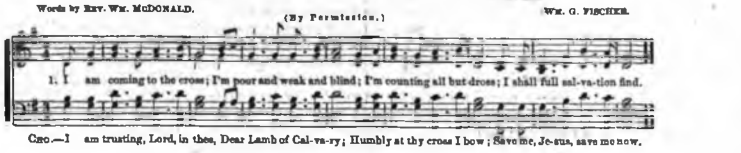
I AM TRUSTING, LORD, IN THEE.

Words by REV. WM. MCDONALD. (By Permission.) WM. G. FISCHER.



1. I am coming to the cross; I'm poor and weak and blind; I'm counting all but dross; I shall full sal-va-tion find.

CHO.—I am trusting, Lord, in thee, Dear Lamb of Cal-va-ry; Humbly at thy cross I bow; Save me, Je-sus, save me now.

2. Long my heart has sighed for thee;
Long has evil reigned within;
Jesus sweetly speaks to me,
I will cleanse you from all sin.—CHO.

3. Here I give my all to thee,—
Friends, and time, and earthly store;
Soul and body thine to be—
Wholly thine—forevermore.—CHO.

4. In the promises I trust;
Now I feel the blood applied;
I am prostrate in the dust;
I with Christ am crucified.—CHO.

5. Jesus comes! he fills my soul!
Perfected in love I am;
I am every whit made whole;
Glory, glory to the Lamb.—CHO.

THE DRAGONIC POWER OF REV. 12.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

Was the imperial government at Constantinople, from the time of its transfer, in the days of Constantine, A. D. 329, the dragonic power of Rev. chap. 12?

A correct understanding of this question is essential to a right application of the supremacy (or the forty-two months) of the beast of Rev. ch. 13. That the dragonic power continued in Rome till A. D. 329, I suppose no one questions. Then the Imperial government was transferred from Rome to Constantinople. The fall of Rome and the removal of the government to Constantinople is thus noticed by Dr. Croly (pp. 207–8):

"The death of the last rival of Constantine had sealed the peace of the empire. Rome was once more the undisputed queen of nations. But, in that hour of elevation and splendor she had been raised to the edge of a precipice. Her next step was to be downward and irrecoverable. The change of the government to Constantinople still perplexes the historian. It was in direct repugnance to the whole course of the ancient and honorable prejudices of the Roman mind. It was the work of no luxurious Asiatic, devoted to the indulgences of eastern customs and climates, but of an iron conqueror, born in the west, and contemptuous, like all Romans, of the habits of the Orientals; it was the work of a keen politician, yet was impolitic in the most palpable degree. Yet Constantine abandoned Rome, the great citadel and throne of the Cæsars, for an obscure corner of Thrace, and expended the remainder of his vigorous and ambitious life in the double toil of raising a colony into the capital of his empire, and degrading the capital into the feeble honors and humiliated strength of a colony."

After the death of Constantine the empire was divided among his three sons; but in a brief period was again united under Constantius by his victory over Magnentius, the usurper of the imperial throne, A. D. 353. Constantius was sole emperor about ten years, and was succeeded by Julian, who entered Constantinople A. D. 361, and was acknowledged by the whole empire. The two branches of the government at Constantinople and Rome have been regarded as being symbolized by the two legs of the image of Dan. ch. 2. This division continued until A. D. 476. The imperial power, however variously balanced, sometimes being entirely in the east, and then in both the east and west. But the supremacy was maintained by the eastern emperors till A. D. 476–9. At this date the western empire became extinct, by the conquest of Rome by Odoacer, the king of the Heruli; and by a vote of the Roman Senate, imperial power was removed entirely from Rome to Constantinople. So the eastern emperor legally became emperor of Rome by vote of the Roman Senate.

As the imperial government constituted the dragonic power, I ask where did the imperial government exercise its power from the days of Constantine till the date when the unfortunate Augustulus, the Roman prince, was made an instrument of his own disgrace? Was it not largely at Constantinople? And after A. D. 476, Zeno, the son-in-law and successor of Leo, received the title of sole emperor of both east and west, and then Rome passed into the hands of the barbarians, and the imperial or dragonic power was removed wholly to the east, and continued there till the reign of Justinian, who in A. D. 538 conquered Rome, and again united the west with the east, and the imperial authority again existed in Rome. After the extinction of the western empire by the conquest of Italy by Odoacer, and the disgrace and banishment of the Roman prince Augustulus, A. D. 476–9, "an interval of fifty years till the memorable reign of Justinian, is faintly marked by the obscure names and imperfect annals of Zeno, Anastasius, and Justin, who successively ascended to the throne of Constantinople." About twelve years of this period, Odoacer, king of the Heruli, ruled in Italy, and then was overthrown by Theodoric, king of the Ostrogoths, who reigned in Italy till A. D. 527. But he declared to the emperor Zeno when he solicited his permission to enter upon the conquest of the tyrant Odoacer, "If, with the divine permission I succeed, I shall govern in your name and to your glory, the Roman Senate and the part of the Republic delivered from slavery by my victorious arms." I think I have presented sufficient evidence already to prove the imperial or dragonic power existed at Constantinople as well as at Rome from A. D. 329, or at least from A. D. 361, when Julian was acknowledged by the whole empire.

It was before imperial Roman government that the church of Christ fled into her wilderness state in the east, where she was nourished for a time and times and a half time from the face of the serpent. Also in the same time the papal government in the west persecuted and made war on the saints. And Gibbon tells us that from the time Justinian assumed the powers of government, he meditated the extirpation of heresy, and the conquest of Italy and Africa. This sentence from Gibbon proves that the elevation of the Roman church to a position of supremacy was a fixed purpose in the mind of Justinian from the first. The conquest of Italy and Africa was necessary because the Ostrogoths and Vandals were Arians, and opposed to the Catholic faith; which Justinian represented.

The beast of Rev. ch. 13, with seven heads and ten horns, is clearly a perpetuation of the dragonic government. "The government of Rome had long been in the hands of the imperial power; but at length that power was removed to the east, and another power came up amid the troubled elements of party strife, which aspired to the supremacy of Rome, and ultimately obtained it. That power was Popery. To this beast the dragon gave his power, his seat, and great authority—and of course the beast assumed all the characters and attributes of the dragon when he received not his power only, but also his seat and great authority.

"It was a beast of seven heads and ten horns. The dragon giving his power and seat to the beast, the papal form of government thus created became an appendage of the dragon, the seventh head; and the beast receiving the power and seat of the dragon, partook of all his characteristics; he became the offspring and image of the dragon." (Proph. Expositions, by J. Litch.)

The dragon had seven heads and ten horns, which represent the seven forms of government which Rome was to assume; the ten horns the ten kingdoms of the barbarians within the empire. The seven forms of government are as follows: Senatorial, Tribunate, Consular, Decemvirate, Triumvirate, Imperial, Kingly. Five of these governments had fallen prior to the giving of the vision. One, the sixth, the imperial, existed at that time. The seventh was in the future: Pagan-Kingly, i. e., the ten kingdoms into which Pagan Rome was divided. This breaking of Rome imperial into ten divisions was the deadly wound to the sixth head of the beast, which deadly wound was healed by the conversion of those ten kings, and their uniting to support the papal beast (excepting the three Arian kings, which were destroyed.) This was accomplished so far as giving Rome, the throne of the Cæsars, to the papacy in A. D. 538. Then this papal power becomes the eighth head of the beast in Rev. ch. 17, and is of the seven, i. e., rises out of the seven and continues till Christ comes, and then goes into perdition.

The characteristics of the leopard beast are clearly identical with the characteristics of the little horn of Dan. ch. 7. as may be seen by a comparison of what is said of the two. The little horn of Dan. ch. 8 is a symbol of Rome through all its changes from its rise till the judgment. But in Revelation Rome is presented in its various changes and aspects; and it may be difficult always to determine the precise meaning of every particular presented; but it is evident that Rome pagan and Rome papal are the great leading features presented; and that the change from Rome pagan to Rome papal was accomplished as early as A. D. 538. Justinian, in whom was vested the imperial or dragonic power, was the direct instrument in accomplishing this result; by giving the papacy its power and throne and great authority, from which it rapidly rose to that height of power to exercise dominion over the kings of the earth; and mainatined its supremacy till A. D. 1798. Then the papal independence was abolished, and a son of Napoleon was declared king of Rome. Here terminate the 1260 years from the taking away of the pagan element, the 1260 years being the duration of the papal supremacy. Then seventy-five years of consumption of the civil power of the papacy carry us to the resurrection, or to A. D. 1873.

The position of those that make the little horn of Dan. ch. 7 identical with the eastern or Greek division of the Roman empire, entirely unhinges the order of the prophecy and introduces confusion and darkness, and reverses the order that God has given in his word. The ten horns of the fourth beast of Dan. ch. 7, are the kingdoms into which western Rome was divided in A. D. 476–9. The little horn arose from among these ten (Dan. 7: 8) and continues till the judgment (vv. 21, 23.) But the Greek empire was destroyed in A. D. 1453. This little horn was to continue in its supremacy 1260 years. But the period of the duration of the Greek division of the Roman empire from the earliest possible date, A. D. 329, is only 1124 years. Falling 136 years short of the period of the supremacy of the little horn. But dating from the point claimed by some, A. D. 476, makes its duration only 977 years; 283 years short of 1260. There has been no concentration of power answering the description of the prophecy domineering over the saints of God for 1260 years, excepting the papal power enthroned in Rome; this I say without fear of successful contradiction. And moreover I assert on the authority of the clear light of history, that Justinian did give the papacy its power, and throne and great authority (or jurisdiction over the saints of the Most High), which continued to be exerted with more or less vigor for 1260 years from A. D. 538 to 1798. God by his providence in history has (so to speak) driven down two great stakes as guide posts to the church, by the events of A. D. 538 and 1798, which indicate the commencement and termination of that important chronological measurement; the 1260 years. And there is no good reason for abandoning the position taken by the late Wm. Miller, and a host of prophetical writers sustaining the position that these 1260 years measure the supremacy of the papacy, and that they commenced in A. D. 538 and ended in 1798. The soundness of this position has not yet been tested, and will not be until we reach A. D. 1873, the end of the seventy-five years, the period additional to the 1260 of waiting to the church of Christ. For we read (Dan. 12: 12): "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand and three hundred and five and thirty days."

At the commencement of these seventy-five years the church of Christ came out of her wilderness state, as is most beautifully presented in the "Song of Solomon:" "Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness, leaning upon her beloved?" What an abundance of light has been emitted through the agency of the church of Christ since 1798, in giving the word of God to the nations of the earth! But this work is nearly finished, and the light is being fearfully abused, and the sure word of prophecy that has been so clearly unfolded is to a very great extent disregarded. Yet the true church will shortly appear "as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."

We wish to follow the true light emanating from the great light-houses placed along the coast, as marked on the chart by the divine hand, rather than the decoy lights that now and then are seen by the vigilant mariners to lead them off from the true course that leads safe into port.

THE EASTER SONG.

Extract from a sermon by Dr. Seiss.

'O grave, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?'—1 Cor. 15: 55.

Since Jesus has risen, believers may rightfully indulge the hope possibly never to die at all. Though it is appointed unto men once to die, the rule is not without exceptions. Every dispensation shows some relaxation of that law. Before Moses, and before the flood, there was an Enoch, who walked with God, and preached righteousness, and was taken up to glory without tasting of death. Under the Mosaic dispensation, there was an Elijah, who withstood the priests of Baal, and remained true to God amid abounding apostasy, and Jehovah sent a chariot and horses from heaven to convey him out of the world without allowing him to be touched by death or the grave. Neither of these prophets ever died. And what has been in other dispensations is to be repeated in ours. Whether or not we credit the traditions concerning the Virgin Mary and the apostle John in this respect, it is one of the great prophecies of the New Testament, and one of the great christian mysteries, that the time is coming when a vast body of living and waiting people of God shall be suddenly caught up from earth to heaven, without ever knowing what death is. "Behold," says the apostle, "I show you a mystery." And what is the mystery? "We shall not all sleep,"—not all die,—"but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." All Christ's people shall be "changed," but not all in the same way. Some are changed by death and resurrection, others are changed without falling asleep first; for "we shall not all sleep."

When Christ comes again, as he has promised, he will find two classes of his people; one class sleeping in the dust of the earth, and the other class living on the earth; some dead, and others still in the world. Those asleep will be resurrected—raised from their graves—and so "changed." But those alive and remaining, will never die. These are to be translated, as Enoch and Elijah were translated, and "caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord," without dying. The Savior himself refers to this where he says: "In that night there shall be two in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left." This taking is to occur in the time of Christ's second coming; and will be a sudden ereption from amid the common occupations of life direct to Christ's presence, without the intervention of death. The same is referred to in our Lord's declaration to Martha; "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live;" i. e., be raised again from the dead. "And whosoever liveth,"—is living, to wit, at the time the dead are raised,—"and believeth in me, shall never die;—never die, because he shall be transferred direct from earth to heaven. Hence, says the apostle, "God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep," that is, whether at the time living or dead, "we should live together with him." The distinct implication is, that those faithful ones, then alive, shall never die, but at once put on immortality, and live on eternally.

No true christian, therefore, has any right to count on dying. He may die; but it is not certain that he will. We cannot tell when Christ will come. "Of that day and that hour knoweth no man." It is a secret which God has reserved in his own power. He may not come for a long time yet; but we have no right to say that he will not come this very year, this very springtime, this very night. We know not when the time is, and therefore we cannot say that it will not be in our time. From the very beginning it was preached as a thing that might occur any moment. There has never been a period when any one had a right to say that it would not occur in his day. So firmly were the first christians pervaded with the expectation of living to see it, that they were in constant watchfulness for it; and the apostle assumes it as so much a matter of course, that he mixes himself and those to whom he wrote with all the transactions he describes. "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." And if he dared not put off that great event beyond his lifetime, and was impelled by the Spirit to keep it before him and his readers as ever impending, how dare we, now that eighteen hundred years of delay have passed, for one moment affirm that Christ will not come in our day? He will come. That coming has already been deferred beyond all anticipation. The signs of its nearness are thicker and intenser now than ever they have been. And the sacred exhortations to keep ourselves in lively expectation and constant readiness are so numerous and pointed, that I cannot see how any christian is warranted in having any other belief but that he shall be still living when the Lord comes. And if then living, he shall never die—never see death at all. People may think we dream; but it is the clear and unmistakable truth of God. It is promised that some shall never die, and the chances are, if we are faithful, that we may be among the number. And with such a prospect legitimately ours, the great apostolic song may well live in our hearts and break from our lips: "O Death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory!"

But whether the believer lives to see that day or not, since Jesus has risen, death and the grave can have but a temporary sway at most. No success is victory, unless what is captured can be held; and Easter is the pledge and proof that all the trophies of this enemy will presently have to be yielded up again. Jesus has the keys of death and of hell. He encountered the tyrant in his own grim realm and came off victorious, leading captivity captive. And he has overcome for all that are his. It was as our substitute he died, and as our representative and forerunner he rose. His triumph is our triumph. And as he could not be holden of death, so neither can the grave long hold those who belong to him. The day is drawing near—a day appointed of God—when all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and come forth. The decree has gone out from on high: "O death, I will be thy plague! O grave, I will be thy destruction!" Easter shows that decree already going into effect. Jesus is risen, and in that resurrection is the demonstration that whatever remains of its fulfillment must come.

"For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. . . . For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. There is not a departed saint who will not come back. There is not a sleeping child of God, but he shall be re-awakened into life. There is not a buried babe in Christ, but it shall be recovered from the land of silence. And though the grave may claim our bodies, and clamor for them in the aches and pains we feel, as sure as we trust in Jesus it will have to let them go again. The patriarchs! they shall reappear. The prophets and apostles! they shall be re-gathered from their tombs. God's lowly poor who sleep in pottersfields! they shall all come out of them. And wherever death or the grave has made a captive of any of God's holy ones, that captive shall be given up, never to be assailed again. From the north, and from the south, from the east, and from the west, from all climes, from all conditions, from all ages, the ransomed of the Lord shall come, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of their Father. Nor will they come in the feebleness and corruptibleness of this poor life. "The dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." From every christian grave shall spring a form, lovely as that of an angel, pure as heaven, and imperishable as the Christ who hath redeemed it. Talk of buds bursting into flowers—of bald branches arraying themselves in shining bloom—of torpid seeds and bulbs sending up out of the dark earth their tinted cups of grateful odors—of worms transformed into creatures of winged glory—of dull egg giving forth birds which gladden the forests with their plumage and their songs,—none of these things even begin adequately to image the glory that shall be revealed in these poor stems of humanity when once the springtime of the coming resurrection dawns. Then shall immortality plant its standard on the vanquished grave, and death be swallowed up of victory!

What matters it, then, whether we wake or whether we sleep? The victory is sure in either case. We see the triumph from afar. The glory of its coming cheers our sanctuaries to-day, illumines every believer's grave, and shines away the darkness of the tomb. In anticipation we already see the death of death. Each returning Easter preaches it afresh. These flowers and these anthems tell of it. In the divine purpose it is already achieved. And in that faith which is the substance of things hoped for, we shout, "O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory!"

"Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ!"

"The victory!" Behold! it issues from the Savior's tomb! It shakes the world with the glory of its coming! It drives the hosts of hell away! It stations angels in our sepulchres! It fills the air with hallelujas! It wakes the songs of cherubim and seraphim! It transforms and transfigures the world! It enacts a new Genesis on sublunary things! It clothes the hills with salvation, and the mountains with praise!

"The victory!" Heaven bursts out with shouts of harmony. The trumpets of eternity sound their golden notes. Archangels call in triumph from the skies. Earth lifts up its welcomes to its Redeemer King. God's tabernacle takes its place with men. Tears cease. Death ends. Sorrow flies. The curse departs. Pain terminates. The day puts on immortality, and knows no more night. The golden city descends, displays its jasper walls, and opens its gates of pearl. The crystal river starts. The tree of life stretches its healing branches over the ransomed race. Time melts into eternity. The Christ reigns king forever!

"The victory! The victory!" Seize it, ye prophets, who wondered at the mysterious promise, but followed it through sufferings and tears. Share it, ye mighty apostles, though ye doubted when ye heard of the broken tomb. Take it, ye martyrs, who welcomed nakedness, sword, cross, famine, rack, wild beasts and devouring flames, that ye might obtain it. Come and enjoy it, ye humble poor of God, whom men despised, but whose sacred dust the angels watch till crowned with the princely splendor of the resurrection. And thou weak one, with hardly strength enough to embrace the Master's cross,—and thou sorrowing one, whose tears fall like rain over the graves of thy dead,—and thou tempted one, through much tribulation struggling onward for the heavenly kingdom,—one and all, lift up your heads; anticipate your triumph; and sing aloud your Easter song: "O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory!"—Prophetic Times.

PREDICTIONS OF PIUS IX.

J. M. TOZIER.

At a recent meeting of the Protestant Reformation Society, held in London, the Rev. Dr. Cumming spoke, and is thus reported: Alluding to recent events connected with the church of Rome, he stated that for several years previous to 1870, the Pope frequently assured those about him that a great catastrophe was drawing near, that would change the political aspect and moral condition of the world. It would be a great international conflict in Europe, which would result in a Romish revival of incomparable splendor. It would be a thunderstorm poured down upon the head of the wicked. It would be a war against German heretics of France. Heretic Germany would be crushed, and the Pope, armed with infallibility, would be ready to vindicate his claim to regulate and direct Europe. It was in this expectation that the priests in Paris impelled the emperor, by the action of many influences, to hurry on the war, assured as they were of the success predicted by the Pope. It is unnecessary to state that all the Pope's prophecies have been disappointed. But it may be asked, How could the Pope anticipate the war that actually took place? The answer is found in the confessional. Then it was known and whispered and looked for with delight, and, inspired by what they learned there, the voices of the priests were loud and frequent on the streets of Paris, "a Berlin."

The speaker showed that the Œcumenical Council, inaugurated to deify the Pope, has resulted in his destruction, and that a succession of catastrophes, amid material storms and portents, had descended on the Papacy, which it was not credulity, but sound interpretation of events to allege, were divine judgments on the apostasy. Spain, Italy, Austria, and Bavaria, were in succession rent from the Tiara. Great Protestant powers have come to the front, and the nations that now lead the world are England, Germany, America and Russia,—powers at least hostile to Rome.

The speaker also noticed, what he did no more than call a remarkable coincidence, the following numbers:—Number of fathers who voted in favor of infallibility, 533. Number in favor of, with modifications, 62. Number neutral, 70. Pope's own vote, 1. Total, 666. He then read the passage in Rev. 13: 17—"Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast, for it is the number of a man, and his number is six hundred threescore and six" (666).

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 6, 1871.

☞ Please Remember!
☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Take Notice!
☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable in Advance, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Campmeetings are about to be held in all of the New England States, throughout which there are many subscribers to the Crisis, who are owing for the same—some largely in arrears. We purpose to have an Agent at the several meetings to receive the dues on the paper, as also to receive the names of new subscribers. And we do earnestly request those who are owing to make a special effort to pay at these meetings. Those who do not go themselves, will please send a portion, at least, of what they owe, by some one of their friends who may be going, and thus do your duty in this matter, and help the office. At any rate, let every one owing for the Crisis for one, two, three, or more years, do something without any further delay.

AG'T.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

The late National Campmeeting at Springfield, commencing Aug. 19th and closing Aug. 28th, was truly a feast of tabernacles. So far as we could learn, all united in saying it was the best campmeeting we have ever held. It was noted for good order, good feeling, and extra good meetings. We have attended many campmeetings during the last twenty-eight years, but this surpassed them all. We have not seen in any other meeting so many willing to consecrate all to Christ; neither have we heard before so many rich experiences. It was often remarked that the spirit of the meeting afforded the brightest evidence that Christ is soon coming; because the bride—the church—appears to be getting ready, by putting on the beautiful robe of holiness, without which none shall see the Lord.

There were some happy conversions, and many followers of Christ were brought nearer to him than ever before. They fully adopted the motto—"All for Jesus," and received great blessings. We have not seen in any other of our campmeetings such a hungering and thirsting after righteousness. They felt more than ever the necessity of entire consecration to the Lord, without the least reserve. Truly, the Holy Spirit rested upon us in power, producing great liberty in prayer and testimony. We had indeed a feast of rich things in Christ; such as but few ever experience in a whole lifetime.

We had preaching by Brn. Geo. A. Streeter, J. W. Thomas, O. D. Woodruff, —— Palmer (Methodist), J. B. Cook, M. Batchelor, J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, A. W. Sibley, A. M. Whitmore, A. Ross, Sr. Stoddard, B. P. Stevens, S. S. Brewer, D. R. Mansfield, M. Grant, H. Pratt, H. Munger, I. B. Potter, Sr. Mansfield, E. Owen, J. W. Brittan, Sr. Benson, S. C. Hancock, and H. L. Hastings. Very interesting prayer and conference meetings were held every morning at 5½ o'clock, when the subject of holiness received special attention. These early morning meetings were precious seasons of refreshing to those present. We have never before enjoyed their equal during our twenty-eight years of experience in campmeetings. They have left a heavenly halo around the consecrated spot, and the happy company that worshiped there "in the beauty of holiness." Several members of other churches were present, and rejoiced with us in the good spirit of the meetings.

The key-note of the campmeeting was the coming of Jesus, and the necessity of a pure heart in order to be ready to meet him. The subjects of the sermons were practical, prophetical and doctrinal. A blessed harmony prevailed throughout the encampment. Discussions of side issues, often common at such gatherings, found no encouragement, and were unknown.

Our meeting for transacting the business of the A. C. A. was conducted with great kindness, dispatch and harmony. Each seemed anxious to do what was for the best good of the whole. We also found our Brn. and Srs. awake to the importance of spreading the glorious truths we love so well, by means of missionary labor, and the scattering of tracts. Over eleven hundred dollars were secured for this object; and we hope those who were not present will be willing to do what they can to assist in this important work, while there is time and opportunity. The hour has arrived for earnest action. There should be no delay. Let there be a noble sacrifice, worthy of the importance of the eternal interests involved. Temporal things will soon be no more. Let us use them to the glory of God, while they are at our disposal. Christ is coming, the judgment will set, we shall be there; let us put all into the hands of our great King for safe keeping till he shall appear in his chariot of glory. Let self be crucified, Jesus magnified, and our hearts filled with "perfect peace."

During our entire campmeeting, we saw no drunkenness, heard no swearing, nor noticed any one who seemed disposed to disturb our delightful harmony. Ten were baptized in the Connecticut river, and others would have gone had there been an opportunity. There were about two hundred and seventy-five tents. There were three large ones, about sixty feet in diameter. The campmeeting closed with the communion, Sabbath evening.

Monday morning, Aug. 28th, brought us to the sad hour of parting; but our hopes of meeting in the kingdom were never brighter. We felt a closer union than ever with Jesus and his disciples. We are most firmly convinced that the hour of our heavenly meeting at the marriage supper of the Lamb is not far in the future.

We never before left a camp-ground so delightfully satisfied with its results as we have been this year. We feel assured that brighter hours are in the near future. While the perils of the last days are increasing in all directions, the peace of God is abundant to fill the hearts of all his dear children, who are waiting for the Coming One. Let us lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption is at hand. Those sleeping in Jesus are soon to be awakened from their dreamless sleep of death, to put on immortality, and to be glorified with their Redeemer.

"How long, dear Savior, O how long
Shall this bright hour delay?
Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

EXPELLED.

We would call attention to Bro. Bowman's letter, informing us of his expulsion from the M. E. church for believing and teaching that man is not immortal, and that the wicked will be destroyed. Bro. Bowman is an able man; and should be sustained. If any desire to send him second-hand furniture, it can be directed to Darlington, S. C. He has given up all for Christ and his truth, and deserves the sympathies of all the friends of Jesus. The Missionary Society will aid him as far as their means will allow. We hope our Brn. and Srs. will send in liberal means to assist in spreading the truth in the South the coming winter. The field is white for the harvest. Probably no better man could be found for the southern field than Bro. Bowman, and would be heard where others would be rejected. His heart is in the work. It is expected that Bro. Sheldon will enter the southern field again, besides other evangelists. Now is the time to take hold in earnest. Let much prayer be offered for this work.

THE NEW BOOK.—It is expected that copies of the new book, of which we spoke some two years since, will be for sale at the Alton Bay campmeeting. It is believed it will be the best work yet published to put into the hands of intelligent readers, who desire to know what the Bible teaches in relation to the great truths which are now agitating the theological world. The work gives a careful examination of the evidences which show that Christ is coming soon, the state of man in death, the resurrection of the dead, the punishment of the wicked, and the reward of the righteous.

BRO. WM. INGHAM.—Many of our readers will remember Bro. Wm. Ingham, of Clementsport, N. S. For some years he has been unable to preach, or to do other work. He and his dear companion are lonely and needy. We would recommend those who can to send them something for their comfort. There are two vessels running from Boston to Clementsport. Anything left at Bickford & Co., 148 Broad St., Boston, would go safely to them. Bro. Ingham is a little better than when last in New England.

CALIFORNIA.—We are pleased to announce to our readers that Bro. O. R. Fassett has consented to move to California for the purpose of preaching the gospel of the kingdom. He is a true man. Pray for him.

ANONYMOUS ARTICLES.—We sometimes receive articles for the Crisis without any name attached. We would say to all such, if they wish to see their articles inserted in the Crisis, they should send us their names.

SCENES OF HORROR.

This year has been specially noted for terrible storms and accidents. There seems to be an increase of them in all parts of the country. Says the Boston Journal:

"We seem to be in one of those seasons when the vials of horror are opened upon the community. The awful railroad accident in this vicinity has chilled all hearts with a sense of affliction and dismay such as this generation has never before experienced. At the same time came the tidings of a similar catastrophe in Pennsylvania, seemingly as unnecessary, though not as disastrous as that nearer home. And now we have reports of a destructive tornado appearing here, after sweeping along various points of the Atlantic coast, as if the wrath of heaven were added to the culpable carelessness of man. All the summer long, too, the press has been steadily engaged in reporting a series of frightful accidents and disasters, some of them unprecedented in their character. Such crises almost make us lose faith in the orderly regulation of mundane affairs, as if some derangement had crept into the forces of nature. But we ought never to forget that the occasional perturbations which are seen everywhere in the material universe are liable to afflict human society and to fall with stunning force at exceptional seasons.

What belongs to us at such periods is to recognize the dependence of man on a higher Power, and to revive that duty of moral responsibility and humane vigilance which has been devolved upon us for wise purposes. If we do not fail in this respect, this season of horrors will not have been experienced in vain, but will pass off, leaving behind good and permanent results."

THE SCHISM IN THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.—LONDON, Aug. 8.—A meeting was held at Heidelburg, Sunday, to take measures for the foundation of a German church. Forty delegates were present from various parts of Germany, Austria and Switzerland. A committee was appointed to draw up a constitution for the new church. Its main points will be the principles of the Council of Constance of 1314, subordination of the Pope to the Council, the separation of church and State, participation of the laymen in the management of the church, free election of bishops, communal election of pastors, and a modification of the confessional. The delegates were divided in opinion as to whether the new church should acknowledge the primacy of the Pope. The committee was instructed to submit a report for ratification at the meeting to be held at Munich in September."

The Catholics will not be able any longer to claim that they constitute the only true church, because they are a unit in their faith. They are now most bitterly divided.

WHAT SPIRITUALISM TEACHES.

In the Banner of Light, Aug. 5th, 1871, we find an article turning into ridicule and contempt what the Bible teaches concerning the Holy Ghost. The writer says:—

"Of all the weird, fanciful and fabulous stories appertaining to the gods and other spiritual entities of the olden times, whose capricious adventures we find so profusely narrated in the legends of Oriental mythology; of all the strange, mythical and mystical feats and ever-varying and ever-diverging changes in the shape, appearance, sex and modes of manifestation which characterize the hobgoblins or ghostly beings which comprise the esoteric stock of the ancient mysteries, that appertaining to the third member of 'the hypostatic union,' the Holy Ghost, seems to stand pre-eminent."

He goes on to say: "The Holy Ghost story of the Christian Gospels, like the more ancient Pagan versions of the same story, is marked by the same wild, senseless, contradictory, discordant and legendary characteristics which abound in all the accounts of gods and ghosts found recorded in the religious books of various nations."

As might be supposed, those who listen to the teachings of the demons become bitter opposers of sacred things, which are essential to man's salvation. The whole tendency of Spiritualism is away from Christ, God and the Bible. It offers a false Christ for the true; a false god for the God of the Bible; error for truth; and wickedness for holiness; and the final result can be nothing short of total destruction.

THE DEDICATION of the new meeting-house in Chelsea will take place Thursday afternoon, Sept. 28th, at three o'clock. See notice.

NEW TRACTS.

Just published by the A. C. P. Society, Symbolization of the World's Eventful Crisis, by O. R. FASSETT.

An excellent tract of 16 pages, showing that we are living amid the events occurring under the opening of the "sixth seal"; that "we are witnessing them, and are far down in their history, and close upon the end of this world and the solemn judgment scenes."

Price, single, 2 cts.; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail.

"THE TWO-HORNED BEAST."

A TRACT OF 12 PAGES.

CAMPMEETING LETTERS.—The following letters were sent to the Springfield campmeeting, and can be obtained by addressing the Postmaster at Springfield:—Miss Nellie S. Perkins, Miss M. A. Pierson, Mr. George H. Waterhouse.

WHO KNOWS?

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to ask you (and as many others as will answer) the following question: Where was the Son of God after he said, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," and "gave up the ghost"? Please answer definitely. L. I. LESLIE.

We know of but one consistent answer to the question, and that is, he was on the cross till he was taken down and put into Joseph's new tomb, from whence he arose the third day, and after forty days ascended to his Father, where he will remain till the time of his second coming; when the "same Jesus" who was crucified, dead, and buried, will appear in great glory to set up his kingdom.

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT.

The government of France is in a very unsettled state. All seems to be quite uncertain. It is said the people have less liberty now than when Napoleon was their Emperor. Says the Evening (Bridgeport) Farmer, when speaking of M. Thiers:—

"The people have not that confidence in him which is the result of a sturdy and honest position on the subject of the future government, and that fact, with the fickle French nature and the intrigues of the Bonapartists is now producing that feeling of discontent, which may soon ripen into another revolution. Which party will come uppermost in the ensuing turmoil, it is impossible to more than conjecture. The Bonapartists, although making a feeble show in the assembly from various reasons, are unquestionably the strongest party in France, and the most active and aggressive. The name of the ex-emperor is still a power in the provinces, and any movement tending to overthrow the present government, would be instantaneously followed by a Bonapartist rally which would end in the restoration of Napoleon to the throne of France."

"PRAYERS FOR THE DEAD."

This is the heading of a note in the "table of references" in a Catholic Bible, Douay version; but the only text referred to, to prove that it is right to pray for the souls of the dead, is 2 Maccabees 12: 43—"And making a gathering, he sent twelve thousand drachms of silver to Jerusalem for sacrifice to be offered for the sins of the dead, thinking well and religiously concerning the resurrection. For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should rise again, it would have seemed superfluous and vain to pray for the dead."

This proof is lame in several particulars: (1) It is found in a book which Protestants do not recognize as a part of the Bible. (2) Even if it were a part of the Bible, it says nothing about praying for the souls of the dead, but for the dead themselves in view of a coming resurrection; and (3) it affirms that it would even be "superfluous and vain to pray for the dead," unless they "should rise again," which could not be the case if the disembodied soul is the part to be benefited by prayer.

Judas, who made this offering, had in view the benefit of the slaughtered men of his army, and not a thought is expressed about the welfare of disembodied souls. And this is the best proof yet presented in support of the practice of praying for ghosts. Judas acted without authority or precedent in offering sacrifice for the sins of the slaughtered men of his army, in order that they might rise justified at the resurrection; for when the dead arise it will be only those "that have done good unto the resurrection of life," but all those "who have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." Man must repent for himself, in order to pardon; hence must repent while alive. One cannot repent for another. W. S.

"YOU ARE IMMORTAL."

Such is the title of a tract issued by the American Tract Society, and scattered over the land for truth. No effort is made to prove the affirmation, but such statements as the following are deemed of sufficient strength to secure acquiescence:

"READER, you are an immortal being! You have been born, and you will die, but you can never cease to exist! You must live for ever! . . . First, you are immortal; and, secondly, you are in the power of an evil spirit, who, unless you are rescued out of his power, will land you in an immortality of misery."

This is a sample of the reading matter that is flooding the land to-day under the name of gospel. The reading matter of Christendom is interspersed with this unscriptural sentiment—"an immortality of misery." Let us do more to counteract this great fable of the age, by scattering reading matter of the right kind, and otherwise; for it is not a harmless sentiment, but when we reason from premise to conclusion, it is seen to be a fatal error.

1. It invalidates the death of Christ, who "died for the ungodly," and "died for our sins," by denying that the sinner was exposed to literal death for sin, like that which Christ experienced; thus rendering the death of Christ unavailing, as it could not save deathless beings from literal death, and Christ died no other death.

2. If sinners were really exposed to endless misery, under the name of death, then as "the Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all," Christ must be doomed to endless misery, which would be a blasphemous theory; yet, from this premise, this conclusion follows.

3. Nearly all of the fundamental errors of the day spring from the doctrine of innate immortality, from Catholicism down to Mormonism. It is the main root of error. W. S.

NOTES ON PROPHECY.—No. 8.

A PROPHETIC DREAM.

For the sake of foreshadowing coming events, God caused the king of Babylon to dream a singular dream, and also to forget it. The wise men of Babylon were called, to refresh his mind with the dream, and to furnish a solution of the same. They were fairly snared, for though the king pretended to have forgotten the dream, they dared not unite in coining a story about what he had dreamed, fearing the king really remembered what he had pretended to forget, and would pronounce them all impostors, if they attempted such a trick; so they were compelled to acknowledge that they were all destitute of supernatural wisdom. This opened the way to exalt the wisdom of God. Daniel, the prophet of the Lord, was inspired to tell the dream, and to give the interpretation of the same. The great image, with its sections of gold, silver, brass, iron, and intermingled clay and iron, are interpreted to indicate successive human governments; and the stone is explained to represent a kingdom of divine origin, to succeed them all, and to "fill the whole earth."

These foreshadowed earthly kingdoms have arisen in strict harmony with the interpretation of the dream; and the heavenly kingdom is due next in order. Then an endless era of bliss will dawn upon the resurrected saints. The long-looked-for "good time to come" will then be inaugurated. The saints, having all experienced the "redemption of the body," will then possess the renovated earth forever.

SPIRITUAL FIRE.—"Did John the Baptist mean spiritual fire when he affirmed that Christ should baptize some 'with fire'"? We think not. The passage referred to reads thus: "He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Matt. 3: 11. If the term "fire" was here used to signify the Holy Spirit, it would make John use tautology, by saying, "baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with the Holy Ghost." If this fire is figurative, John is made to introduce a method of speaking not found elsewhere in the Bible—giving his statement firstly in literal language, and then repeating it in figurative language. Figurative language is never used to explain literal. If the Holy Ghost is literal, so is the fire; but the fire is for the wicked, as John explains in the next verse: "Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." The baptism of the Holy Ghost saves the righteous, but the baptism of fire destroys the wicked—two baptisms for two classes. W. S.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

Received from Sister Sunderland, through Bro. Grant, $10. Sister G. P. Parsons, $1. C. Green, M. D., 50 cents, and a package of tracts. Also about eight lbs. from David Young. May the Lord bless these, my donors, and all who are lending a helping hand to promote the cause of Christ.

I have for a time been much perplexed, on learning there was a license to pay on religious books. The city license, being $50, was more than I could pay, as the profits are so small. But a friend, interceding for me, obtained a free permit to sell in city or State religious books or pictures. By having religious pictures to sell, they help to aid me in scattering tracts. I think to leave here Sept. 1st, and shall be very thankful to any one sending to me, through the World's Crisis or Advent Times, any tracts relating to the speedy coming of the Lord; or any plain, practical tracts, explaining in a most simple manner how a person may be justified by faith in Christ. I meet with many who do not understand the difference between the law and the gospel plan of salvation. There are many who believe they must pray on and suffer for years, seeking to be justified by the law; and it is astonishing to see how many professing christians are still under the law in some respects. The devil is very busy in deceiving the people, for he knows his time is short. JOHN B. WADSWORTH.

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

N. D. BABCOCK.

We again had the privilege of attending the best campmeeting ever held at Springfield, and were truly sorry when it came to an end. It seemed harder to part with those we loved than ever before. Not a word, not an act, not even a look, marred our peace. Years ago we used to listen, when we heard that which was not right about any one, and, ere we were aware, we too were saying the same thing. This always spoiled our meeting; but we have long since learned better; so we see and know nothing but what is good, and our meetings grow better and more profitable, and our peace is never marred. We would that many more might learn the same. The preaching was of the best kind. The prayer-meetings and the consecration meetings were the best we ever attended. There were not many conversions. We cannot help thinking the day of many conversions is past. It seems harder to get the sympathy of sinners than ever before; but the church is making herself ready for the coming of Jesus. "All for Jesus" was the motto. The doctrine of holiness, without which no one can see God, was highly advocated, and many, if not all, learned something new, and are more determined than ever to live holy lives. Some, who never attended a campmeeting before, said they supposed every body was good enough, but when they came there and saw the sisters dress so plain, and were so good, they felt they were far behind them; but they had now learned to live, and meant to profit by what they had learned. This is the great school in which, from the north, the south, the east, and the west, many of God's dear children come to recite; and by their recitations we learn much. We wish all the readers of the Crisis could have been there.

Again, we were glad to hear the subject of dressing the children discussed by many of the sisters. They decided that their children should no longer dress like the world, but lay aside all gold and foolish ornaments and flounces, and dress as Jesus commands all holy ones to dress. We may stand out until the last, but we must obey the word, or we can never enter where Jesus is. "All for Jesus."

One sister arose, and asked Bro. Grant where the line should be drawn in regard to dress? He said it would be rather difficult to draw the line just how we should dress, but he thought there ought to be no difficulty in letting alone what the Bible plainly and positively told us not to wear. We thought truly this is so.

Altogether it was a most profitable meeting. We were glad to meet again with Sister Hastings, and the little children. We always feel most at home with them. Their little prayers and exhortations drew tears from the stoutest hearts. We were sorry to see the face of Sister Hastings so pallid, and we fear, unless Jesus comes soon and the little children pray much for her, she will have to be laid in the silent grave. May we all be ready when Jesus comes, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

East Greenwich, R. I.

A HAPPY CHANGE AND JOYFUL SURPRISE.—At our June State campmeeting in Wisconsin, two men who had not seen each other for twenty-five years, met under very different circumstances from those at their parting. At their parting they were both men of the world, and were both "on a drunken spree." Years rolled on, and the preaching of the day failed to enlist them in the cause of Christ, till one in one locality, and the other in the other locality, heard Advent preaching from different Advent preachers, about the same time, and both embraced the truth and were baptized. Both went to the June campmeeting, failed to recognize each other till introduced by name, when their surprise was "better felt than told" at finding each other "of like precious faith." A happy change indeed. W. S.

Correspondence.

BRO. BOWMAN.—In a private note, Bro. Bowman, of Lydia, S. C., writes as follows:—

"I have been battling for years in South Carolina for these and kindred Bible truths, not only without any one to assist me, but against universal opposition on the part of the clergy. Now when the light is beginning to shine in its heavenly brightness, and the people begin to see and feel and acknowledge its truth; I am to be arraigned before my brethren at the S. C. conference, to be tried on a charge of heresy, and I have no doubt it will result in my expulsion from the M. E. C. South. This seems hard, as I have been in the church from my boyhood days, and for nearly forty years have been a minister in the church. If I were entirely alone in this matter, why then in getting rid of me, in a short time every thing would settle down in quietude, and the world would not know that such a person as myself ever lived in it. But, my dear Bro., does it not seem passing strange that here in the very last days of this present economy, when every thing around, above and beneath us, proclaim the speedy coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, that any branch of the Protestant church should call such men as Polycarp, Tyndal, Luther, and a host of others from their silent graves, with thousands of great and good men among the living, and try and immolate them for the same thing? This, oh this is what throws awful solemnity around this whole affair. This is what stares the church in the face to-day; and will she deliberately assume such a fearful responsibility? I believe she will. Well, God's will be done. Then I will take these men as my companions in earth's tribulations the balance of my days, and to life's latest breath I will proclaim the gospel of the kingdom of God. Glory be to his holy name; he has promised to be with us to the end of the age.

I think at your campmeeting you should adopt some efficient plan for a winter's campaign in South Carolina, beginning in Charleston, say the first of Dec. next, with plenty of your books and tracts for distribution. In case of my expulsion, the brethren will have to lend me a helping hand, until I can organize a church. You could put me on the mission list, say for one year, and I have no doubt, if the case was properly represented to the brethren at large, they would make an extra effort to keep me and my family from want, so that I could still pursue the work of the ministry. I firmly believe the hand of God is in this whole matter, for the furtherance of Bible light and truth in these Southern lands. O, Lord, revive thy work, and let all the people say Amen."

The foregoing was received before the charge of heresy was preferred against Bro. Bowman. What he anticipated has now been done. Who will help sustain our dear brother?

From Bro. P. G. Bowman.

ELDER MILES GRANT:—My Dear Bro.:—Enclosed I send you exact copies of the proceedings of my Presiding Elder, W. H. Fleming, and my formal withdrawal from the M. E. Church South. I now offer myself as a member and minister to the Advent church. Will you, without delay, send me proper authority to preach among you as a people, together with your rules or laws of church government, your plan of organizing churches, doctrines, etc., etc. Now, my dear Bro., let me say to you that in taking this step, I have for the time being cut myself and family off from all support. Can you not make South Carolina a mission field, and appoint me as your missionary in this field? And can you not send me some funds to begin with? We will have to surrender the parsonage, with what furniture it contains. A very large proportion of the laity on this circuit will go with me; and if I can obtain the help I need now, so that all my energies can be devoted to preaching and writing, I can soon form a permanent basis for future operations throughout the State, if not throughout the whole South. Now let all the brethren and sisters put their shoulders to the wheel, and let us roll the blessed light and truth of gospel salvation over these sunny lands. My suspension took place yesterday. Send me authority to preach without delay. Pray for me all the time. Yours in hope of Christ's soon coming,

PEYTON G. BOWMAN.

Lydia P. O., Darlington, S. C.

SUMTER, S. C., Aug. 15th, 1871.

Rev. P. G. Bowman:—My Dear Brother:—Inclosed I send you a copy of the charge and specifications preferred against you. The committee of investigation will meet in the Methodist Church, in this place, on Wednesday, Aug. 23d, at 11 o'clock A. M. Nothing but a sense of duty to the church of God impels to this action. May God direct and bless you.

As ever, your friend and brother,
W. H. FLEMING.

SUMTER, S. C., Aug. 15th, 1871.

Rev. P. G. Bowman:—Dear Bro.:—I discharge what I regard, I assure you, a painful duty in preferring against you the appended charge and specifications; the most grievous duty I remember ever to have performed; for I love you. Affec'ly, H. A. C. WALKER.

CHARGE.—Holding and disseminating doctrines which are contrary to our recognized standards of doctrine.

Specification 1. Holding and teaching that the soul of man is unconscious from death to the resurrection.

Specification 2. Holding and teaching the annihilation of the wicked. H. A. C. WALKER.

LYDIA P. O., DARLINGTON, S. C.,
Aug. 25th, 1871.

Rev. W. H. Fleming:—My Dear Bro.:—After seriously reflecting on the action of the committee, viz., my suspension from the ministry, for holding and teaching doctrines contrary to the standards of Methodism; and believing that the annual conference will confirm the said action; also believing it my duty to preach the gospel of our common and blessed Savior, I feel it my duty to join a communion where these objections do not exist. Herewith I tender you my withdrawal from the M. E. Church South.

From Bro. J. B. Dearing.

BRO. GRANT:—I take my pen to write a few lines of my experience. I obtained a hope in Jesus when very young, but soon wandered into sin. When I was twenty-three years of age, I confessed my backslidings, and united with the Free-will Baptist church in Bartlett, and for thirty-seven years was under the cloud of immortal-soulism and kindred traditions and superstitions. But the Lord in mercy sent Bro. and Sr. McKinstry to this town, and through their instrumentality, wherein I was once blind, now I see. By a close study of the Scriptures for five months, I came to the conclusion that man has no immortality; that at death "his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish"; and that he is entirely dependent upon a resurrection of the body for a future existence, which he obtains at the second appearing of Jesus Christ. This is the gospel I preach, and some of my former brethren have become my enemies, because I tell them the truth.

At a meeting a short time since, after I had repeated the promise of the angel to Mary, that the Lord God would give Jesus the throne of his father David; and as I was telling the people where the throne of David was, one with whom I had formerly labored in the work of the ministry took his hat and went out, and a few followed him, as much as to say, Away with such doctrine. O that the people would believe the truth as revealed in God's word, and prepare for the coming of Jesus; for I believe the time is "near, even at the door," when

"He who once was scourged and bound,
Will come again with glory crowned."

All hail that glorious day! Brethren, come over and help us.

Bartlett, N. H.

From Bro. Jas. Perrin.

BRO. GRANT:—As we have just closed a series of meetings held in the tent at this place, perhaps there are some in different directions would like to hear the result; and by request of some of the Brn., I will now make a short report. Brn. Fenn, Stevens, Wendell, Sergisson, and Gove, preached the word, also Srs. Stoddard and Jennings. The meeting held about three weeks. Three were baptized. Others, as I learn, have made up their minds to go forward in that ordinance. We have hired a large hall, and have preaching every First day, at 3 P. M., and prayer-meeting every Thursday evening. It begins to seem like old '43 times. At that time, we could hardly get a room large enough to hold all that wanted to come. Bro. Gove is our pastor. He was ordained at the Albion conference, last June. He is doing well. He is preaching for us half the time. Any of our preaching brethren, who can visit us, will correspond with Bro. W. T. Storms, or the writer, as we need their aid half of the time.

From Bro. O. Pier.

BRO. GRANT:—We have just been enjoying an interesting season in this place. On Friday, Saturday, and Sunday last, Rev. Z. T. Wood, of Springfield, Vt., and Bro. C. H. Fletcher, of Newport, N. H., were here and held a grove meeting, and although we knew of no conversions, yet it was a season of refreshing to God's children, and some backsliders were reclaimed. Bro. Fletcher did most of the preaching, and showed himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word, giving to each a portion of meat in due season. On the Sabbath, especially, the Spirit of the Lord pervaded the large congregation. It was a season of profit to many souls, and I trust impressions were made on many of the unconverted that will not easily be effaced. To God be all the praise.

Rawsonville, Vt., Aug. 23d, 1871.

SR. B. WATERHOUSE writes:—"While I read the cheering letters from the dear ones scattered abroad, this hope of eternal life when Jesus comes cheers my heart; and when I have been called to pass through trials and deep affliction, this hope has been to me like an anchor to my soul, both sure and steadfast. I have found the Lord to be the one altogether lovely. And while journeying along the rugged path of this life, this hope promises an entrance into the kingdom of heaven, where there will be no sickness, pain or death; but where light and immortality forever last, and we meet our loved ones gone before. My dear companion, who has been laid under the cold sod, died happy in the anticipation of a heavenly inheritance, at the morning of the resurrection, when Jesus comes to make up his jewels and gather all his children home. May I be one to come up with my robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

MAINE MISSION TENT AT OXFORD.

Our meetings in the Maine Mission Tent, at Craig's Mills, Oxford, commenced Friday, July 28th, and closed Sunday, August 6th. The tent was blown down in a short time after it was pitched, Thursday, July 27th. A horse and wagon and several men and boys were under it at the time; but through the mercy of God little damage was done. It was necessary to cut the curtain in getting the horse out. The tent was also torn in a few places, but was repaired the next day by a delegation of brethren from West Poland, assisted by two sisters, and raised again. One man was stunned by the falling centre pole, which was broken, and one little boy was somewhat though not seriously hurt.

The meetings were quite well attended, and quite an interest manifested, especially toward the last of the meetings. There were one or two or more backsliders reclaimed. Sunday, Aug. 6th, two were baptized by Bro. Whitman. The brethren and sisters commenced a prayer-meeting soon after the tent-meetings closed, and a few evenings since, at one of their prayer-meetings, several made a start to serve the Lord. I pray the work may go forward. Bro. J. Whitman preaches at the school-house in the place, once in four weeks. Brn. Whitman, J. T. Jordan, and Jesse Gay, were with us some, and assisted in preaching. Brethren and sisters from West Poland, Casco, Raymond, Norway, Paris, and other towns, were in attendance at some of the meetings.

We are now at Harrison Village, and are having quite good meetings. I pray the Lord of the harvest to bless these efforts to the good of some, and send forth more laborers into his vineyard. Bro. Mitchell was with us from Thursday evening, when we commenced meetings here, till over Sunday, Aug. 13th. Bro. Whitman was with us Saturday P. M., and Sunday. Since then, to the present, I have had no one except my wife to assist in preaching the word. Yours in hope,

A. W. TAYLOR.

LOCAL NEWS.

BRO. GRANT:—Seeing the following in last Saturday's Portland Transcript (Aug. 19th), and thinking you might wish to see it, I send it. JOHN TAYLOR.

So. Noridgewock, Me. (late of New Haven.)

Last Sabbath evening Rev. Dr. Brooks, of St. Louis, a Presbyterian clergyman of marked ability, who has supplied that pulpit two Sabbaths, preached a sermon at State street church which attracted much attention. It was an eloquent argument to prove from the Scriptures that the second coming of Christ is to be his literal, personal coming, with his saints, to reign upon the earth. This doctrine he found so constantly taught through the New Testament, that he was surprised and grieved to find it so generally explained away and spiritualized by the church; the inspired word is too often taken as a Delphic oracle, not meaning exactly what it says. It was most evident that all the writers of the epistles took Jesus at his word and expected his return; they expected it during their lifetime, though they had no warrant for fixing any date. He believed it was the intention of Christ to keep his church in a waiting attitude, each generation of believers bequeathing to its successor as a precious legacy the hope of the personal coming and reign upon earth of their beloved Lord and Master.

He argued the point at length that his sec-

and coming could not refer to the death of the believer, nor to the destruction of Jerusalem. This last hypothesis was abundantly negatived by St. Paul's epistles to the Thessalonians. They were Greeks, lived hundreds of miles from Jerusalem, and could not be supposed to have any great interest in the fate of that city. And yet 25 verses out of 136 are taken by the inspired apostle in assuring them of the blessed fact that this same Jesus who had ascended into heaven was to come again and reign with his saints upon the earth. Some commentator had said that one verse out of 30 in the whole New Testament referred to this doctrine. The speaker had personally verified this statement. He found that one verse out of 30 directly enunciated the doctrine, and one out of 25 taught it directly or by implication. The first disciples and the Christian church for 300 years were in the constant expectation of this second coming. Christ but once mentioned the subject of baptism, and the writers of the epistles but seldom alluded to it, and yet the church is very particular to observe the ordinance, while here is a matter so important that one twenty-fifth of the whole New Testament treats of it, of which the church is neglecting to take note. Is this the attitude of a bride awaiting the coming of her lord?

The speaker said some christians had told him that the idea of Christ's literal coming was so repugnant that their whole nature recoiled from it. What should we say of a wife who trembles in every limb with dread when told her long absent husband was about to return! He closed with eloquent practical remarks upon the elevating influence of this faith. This earth, the arena of Satan's own choosing, shall be the scene of Christ's triumphant reign. He did not believe that any predicted event except this now remains unfulfilled.

RETALIATION vs. REVENGE.

J. PORTER.

That our Lord and the apostles were nonresistants is a truth that cannot be denied, and must be apparent to every enlightened follower of Jesus, "who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered he threatened not." He dealt out no hard names to his offenders. Paul followed in the footsteps of his Lord, saying, "Being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it." Retaliation and revenge were words not found in Paul's vocabulary. If one smote him on the cheek, would he smite him again? No. "Recompense to no man evil for evil," but contrariwise, blessing for cursing. A spirit of revenge will in ten minutes eat the vitals of christianity out of the heart of any man.

But did Paul, for the protection and preservation of his life, upon all occasions consistently with his great mission avail himself of the benefit of the civil law? Certainly. I thank God for the protection of civil law, "that we may lead a quiet and a peaceable life" in all godliness.

A man in mask enters my house, carries off my last dollar, leaving one of my family a dead corpse upon the floor. He is apprehended and seized. What now? put the rope about his neck? No, no; that would be revenge. But shall he not be punished? Why, no, that will not bring the dead to life, nor restore the stolen property. What then? shall such a monster go at large? No. If he is hungry, feed him; or thirsty, give him drink. But the very nature of well regulated society, both civil and religious, from the child seven years of age up to the man of gray hairs says, Let him be chained or muzzled, as you would a savage dog that has rent your clothes and torn your flesh, that he may never repeat the crime, either upon yourself or others. I have yet to learn that this is either retaliation or revenge.

Danville, P. Q.

SOMETHING LACKING.

E. L. CUTTING.

BRO. GRANT:—I have for some time felt it my duty to address a few lines to the readers of the Crisis in regard to true christian character. I have been led to this from viewing so termed christians, who are full of love, kind, good, and truthful before the world, who are looked upon by the community in which they move as being examples of goodness; and whose lips are, as it were, dropping words sweet as honey. But let us accompany them to their homes, where the poor wife has done everything she could think of, in order that this home-coming may be cheerful and pleasant. See that frown gathering black upon his brow; hear the bitter scoldings and threatenings which issue from his lips. He seeks every thing that he may abuse that loving, dutiful wife. She meekly bows her head and answers not, though tears are dropping silently, and the breast is torn with grief. His children cower away in fright, of which he will go forth and boast to his neighbors, as submissive love; but he frankly says they won't mind their mother. True, how can they, when he commands them not to heed what she says in the least?

Obituaries.

BUDLONG. Died in Northampton, Mass., Aug. 21st, 1870, Mary L., only daughter of Sarah C. and the late Sylvester Budlong, aged fourteen years.

She hath gone to rest awhile, and He hath given his angels charge over her, that she may awake when the gathering time shall come, to bloom in that more congenial clime.

S. L. REED.

BUDLONG. Died in Crompton, R. I., Feb. 14th, 1871, Mrs. Abby Budlong, in the seventy-third year of her age.

Having battled with the ills of life for many years, she hath gladly lain down to rest in hope of a better resurrection.

S. L. REED.

TATE. Died in Valparaiso, Ind., Aug. 2d, 1871, Nellie M. Tate, wife of Henry I. Tate, formerly of Stetson, Me., aged twenty-five years.

Sister Tate was converted in 1863, under the preaching of Elder R. R. York, and has ever since lived a Christian life. She was one of God's faithful ones, and it might truly be said of her, "She hath done what she could."

S. E. RUNDLETT.

GREENE. Died in Rutland, Vt., Aug. 12th, 1871, after a severe illness of nearly four weeks, Myra P. Greene, only daughter of Mrs. T. A. Cheney, aged thirteen years and nine months.

She gave good evidence during her sickness that she had given her heart to Jesus, and often during the last week was her voice heard in prayer. She seemed anxious to live to be a Christian, yet she felt confident that if she went into the grave, she should come up in the bright morning of the resurrection.

> "Sleep on, dear child, and take thy rest,
> Thy sufferings now are o'er;
> We hope to meet thee among the blest,
> On that fair immortal shore."

Words of consolation were spoken by I. B. Potter.

LITTLE. Died, Aug. 11th, in Breton township, Washington Co., Missouri, of whooping cough, Herbert G., infant son of Henry A. and Mary L. Little, aged ten months and one day.

We laid our precious jewel away in deep sadness, but with the assurance that

> "Safe on that distant, shining shore,
> Where the long-parted ones shall meet,
> And meeting once, shall part no more,
> There we our 'loved and lost' shall greet."

H. A. & M. L. L.

TWITCHELL. Died in Fitchburg, Mass., Aug. 14th, 1871, of consumption, Oliva, only daughter of Bro. Seth Twitchell, aged sixteen years.

Oliva was greatly beloved, and her death deeply lamented. She dreaded the grave, but loved the thought of Jesus' coming. "He's coming soon, I know," was a familiar hymn. She patiently suffered, and calmly sank into death's embrace "as evening twilight melts in deepening gloom." May she appear in glory in the morn of joy. Funeral attended by the writer.

H. F. CARPENTER.

PLACE. Died in Portland, Aug. 18th, 1871, Sr. Lovina E., wife of George O. Place, aged thirty-two years, four months.

Sr. P. was a great sufferer, but was very patient, and we have no doubt sleeps in Jesus. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Eld. H. M. Bryant.

B. S. EMERY.

STILSON. Died at Long Point, Ills., Aug. 8th, 1871, Albert R., youngest son of George and L. A. Stilson, aged ten months and twenty-four days.

Funeral discourse by the writer, from Jer. 31: 16: "They shall come again from the land of the enemy."

> "When we see a precious blossom,
> That we tended with such care,
> Rudely taken from our bosom,
> How our aching hearts despair.
> Round its little grave we linger
> Till the setting sun is low,
> Feeling all our hopes have perished
> With the flow'r we cherished so.
> We shall sleep, but not forever,
> There will be a glorious dawn;
> We shall meet to part, no, never,
> On the resurrection morn."

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

Another Terrible Hurricane.

ST. THOMAS, W. I., Aug. 22, via Halifax, N. S., Aug. 31. Another hurricane has swept over this important Island, overturning every house and laying the place in ruins.

Yesterday about 1 A. M. a gale broke from the east, shortly afterward shifted to northeast, from which point it blew fiercely until noon, when it veered round slowly to the north and fell upon the Island in a terrific hurricane. It then shifted to the northwest and blew with great violence until 6 P. M. At this hour a hurricane again swept over the Island from the south, but its duration was not so long as on the previous visit, nor was its violence so great. Its greatest fury lasted only two hours.

A SHOCK OF EARTHQUAKE.

Closely following in the wake of the hurricane came an awful gale from the south and southeast, which raged for several hours. During the hurricane in the afternoon several shocks of an earthquake rendered more dreadful the situation of the people, who were hearing overhead the crash of the roofs torn by the hurricane, and obliged to feel at the same time under foot the foundations of their shelters shaken by the earthquake.

THE DESTRUCTION OF DWELLINGS.

Hundreds of dwellings have been swept away, and not a house has been left standing undamaged on this distressed island. Some six thousand people have been left houseless and destitute.

NEARLY ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY PERSONS KILLED AND DISABLED.

Nearly a hundred and fifty persons have been killed and mangled or disabled by houses blown down, or bricks and tiles flying thickly around during the hurricane. Already some thirty corpses have been dragged from under the ruins, which, in the shape of trees, fences, shattered houses and heaps of bricks and tiles, strewn throughout the streets, offer a sight of perfect desolation.

THE ISLAND OF ST. KITTS

is said to be in ruins, as it was caught first by the hurricane which has just passed over here.

THE PRIMARY CAUSE OF CHOLERA—INTERESTING FACTS.—Everything relating to the cholera, which it now appears to be conceded by medical men will pay us a visit next summer, possesses deep interest for all. Raspail, the eminent physician, has taken the ground that animalculæ are the primary origin of the disease, and fortifies his position by able arguments, which as yet have not been successfully refuted. During the prevalence of the disease in 1849-50 a microscopical examination of the water of the localities in which it most fatally prevailed, revealed the fact that it was impregnated with animalculæ foreign to the place, and that these animalculæ would die when placed in contact with camphor.

This is the evidence in support of Raspail, and a thorough microscopical investigation of the water in localities affected, and of the evacuations of a sufferer from this pestilence of the Ganges, it is evident will establish the fact that the disease is propagated by animalculæ. All water for drinking purposes should be boiled and kept tightly covered, for it is in the water where the greater number of animalculæ are found. We should also carefully abstain from all liquids which have not been thoroughly purified by fire.

A judicious use internally, of a few drops of spirits of camphor daily, destroys the animalculæ as fast as they enter the system, thereby arresting the disease. Camphor is one of the remedies for cholera, as well for a prevention as for a mitigation or cure of the disease.

Such facts as the foregoing are certainly worth treasuring up, and we now commend them to the special attention of all our readers.—Philadelphia Evening Star.

☞ The month of August, 1871, will long be memorable for its disasters. The lightning has done its fatal work in a great many instances; the winds and floods have done theirs; fire has devastated towns and villages; boiler and other explosions have caused the death of hundreds; while mining accidents of a fearful character have also occurred. We do not remember so many heavy casualties occurring in so short a space of time, and when to them are added the daily reports of murders and other criminal outrages, we may truly be said to have had a most remarkable August.

☞ It is reported that there is a sect called "Soul Sleepers," in Southwestern Virginia, who believe in the annihilation of the wicked, and the sleep of the righteous until the resurrection. From a report of the correspondent of the Christian Standard this doctrine is finding some favor in the churches of the Disciples of Christ in some parts of Indiana.—Chicago Tribune.

A DISTURBANCE IN THE SUN. Large spots on the sun were visible every day last week, passing through rapid changes, and sometimes breaking into very small ones. The Boston Journal says that a connection is supposed to exist between these phenomena and the Aurora Borealis, for whenever there is an unusual solar disturbance this light is visible.

In Brief.

—— Edmonia Lewis, whose blood is a mixture of Indian and African, is one of the most promising American sculptresses at Rome. She performs every part of her art without any assistance, even putting up her clay, which is a task of great drudgery, and forming therefrom more original designs than any of her sisters are equal to.——A common passenger car of the better order now costs from eight to ten thousand dollars, a Pullman car costs from eighteen to twenty-two thousand dollars. The Pullman cars weigh more than ordinary cars; one of Pullman's twelve-wheeled sleeping cars weighs from twenty-seven to twenty-eight tons; passenger cars on the western roads weigh from twenty to twenty-five tons.——The famine in Persia is more terrible than previously reported, 27,000 deaths having taken place at Ispahan alone from starvation. The condition of the province of Mazanderan is still worse; their rice crop is a complete failure, and the cattle plague, small-pox, typhus fever and cholera prevail.——The drought has assumed an alarming stage in Michigan, as grass and all vegetation are suffering badly. In Detroit the shade and ornamental trees have been injuriously affected, and the country adjacent in the State and Canada is filled with smoke from smouldering fires in the fields and among shrubs and bushes.——A case of Asiatic cholera has appeared in London, creating an extraordinary excitement among the people.——Central Park artesian well, in Chicago, is 1220 feet deep, and produces 430 gallons of fine, clear water per minute, or 619,200 gallons per day. Several other wells are going down.——The manœuvres of the Russian troops will be on a grander scale than usual this year. A novel feature will be the construction of a railroad by soldiers who have been trained for this purpose.——A train went through the Mont Cenis tunnel successfully on the 11th of August, and this tunnel will be opened for travel Sept. 17.

Dedication.

The dedication of the Advent Chapel at Chelsea, Mass., will take place Thursday afternoon, Sept. 28th, at three o'clock. Brn. Couch and Grant will be present to preach the word adapted to the occasion, after which there will be meeting Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and longer if desirable. Let the brethren from abroad come and enjoy the feast with us.

L. BOUTELL, for the Church.

The Advent Christian Conference of North America.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of this Conference, held on the camp-ground, Springfield, Mass., Aug. 25th, 1871, the President, Eld. J. Couch, presided. Prayer was offered by Eld. S. G. Mathewson, after which it was voted, That the coming session of this Conference be postponed one year.

After some talk relative to the place where the next session should be held, it was voted to adjourn sine die.

A. W. SIBLEY, Rec. Secretary.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting in Pittsburg, N. H., commencing Oct. 7th, at one o'clock P. M., and continue as long as the Lord directs. The tent will be pitched at the Terrill school-house. This meeting will be a free one. We believe in preaching and living the whole gospel.

U. G. LADD.
F. S. RANSOM.
GEO. E. BROWN.

Notice.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will hold its next session at the Town House in Rome, commencing at four o'clock P. M., Sept. 21st, and continuing over the next Lord's day. A general invitation is given, and provision will be made for all. It is expected that E. M. Haggett, Jesse Gay, Austin Taylor, Mrs. Katie Taylor, and others, will be present to preach the word.

D. W. A. KNIGHT, Secretary.

Notice.

The Lord willing, we will commence a protracted meeting in the New State meeting-house, in Savoy, Mass., Friday evening, Sept. 15th. Let all the friends of Jesus in the surrounding country rally once more in the name of the Lord, and try to save the perishing.

G. L. TEEPLE.

For Sale.

I offer for sale my tent, built last year at Alton Bay camp-ground, situated on the hill, at the right as you go from the depot, having a view of the bay and depot, very pleasantly situated, and convenient size, 12 x 16, with good chamber, furnished with stove, two bedsteads, and some furniture. Price seventy-five dollars.

O. D. EASTMAN, Landaff, N. H.

Grove Meeting.

There will be preaching at the Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 10th, by Eld. A. Ross. If stormy, the meeting will be in the hall at the grove. Mr. Smith, the proprietor, will furnish refreshments for man and beast to all who wish.

S. O. WELCH.

Family Campmeeting.

This meeting will be located four miles south of Osco, eighteen miles south of Augusta, which is the nearest railroad station. It will commence Sept. 7th, and continue over Lord's day. All are invited to come the first day, and all christians are expected to come prepared to work for the Master. Hay and tent fixtures will be furnished free, and the poor will be cared for. Let all who are able provide for this end. Brn. Turner, Keach, and Silk are expected to assist in the services.

P. W. HOUGH.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting in Woodhull Village, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 15th, to continue over the Sunday following, for the purpose of organizing a conference in Northern Pa. and Southern New York. We hope all interested in the cause we represent will be sure and come. Those coming by rail, will leave the cars at Addison, from whence a daily stage runs direct to Woodhull, leaving Addison at one o'clock P. M.

For the brethren, J. W. TAYLOR.

Ordination.

Bro. George E. Brown, of Haverhill, N. H., was set apart to the work of the gospel ministry, by the imposition of hands and prayer, at Landaff, Aug. 26th, 1871, and is commended to the faithful in Christ, wherever his lot may be cast. Prayer by Bro. U. G. Ladd, charge by H. C. Willoughby, right hand of fellowship by the writer.

JOHN H. EVANS.

Connecticut Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting in the beautiful grove occupied for that purpose last year, near Plainville, Ct., commencing Sept. 2nd, 1871, and holding till the 11th inst.

The fare is reduced one half on the N. H. and N. R. R., same as last year. Mr. T. F. Clark will convey passengers from Plainville to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. Provision will be made for those coming with horses. It is desirable that all who can, bring tents and bedding; especially the latter.

We shall endeavor to provide wholesome food for all who may wish, at reasonable rates, and trust that, together with our brethren and sisters, we may exercise sufficient faith in God, coupled with good works, to dispel the fear of financial embarrassment, which so cripples the religious enterprises of the day, that their votaries are withering from spiritual drouth, the result of too much anxiety for money, and too little knowledge of faith in God. The Lord is soon coming, and we feel the need of a higher standard of holiness, and the deep inwrought work of the Holy Spirit. Let us walk humbly before the Lord, making this meeting the subject of prayer, beseeching our heavenly Father to breathe the Holy Spirit upon the entire encampment, that wanderers may be reclaimed, and sinners converted.

B. HITCHCOCK,
GEO. L. WHITE,
WM. J. RIPLEY,
O. D. WOODRUFF,
Committee.

☞ SPECIAL NOTICE.

On the New Haven and Northampton R. R. the 6.50 A. M. train from New Haven, and the trains which leave Plainville going south at 8.20 A. M., and 7.14 P. M., will stop opposite the Connecticut camp-ground, between Southington and Plainville, to accommodate those coming to this meeting.

Those coming from the north will buy regular tickets to Southington, and those from the south to Plainville; and be sure to tell the conductors you want to stop at the campmeeting, otherwise the trains will not stop. ONLY the above named trains stop at the camp-ground. Those coming by the other trains must stop at Plainville. Please REMEMBER THIS.

The H. P. and F. R. R. Co. have agreed to the following arrangement: Passengers from Hartford and New Britain will buy regular tickets to Southington; and those from Bristol, Terryville, and Waterbury, to Plainville, and then to Southington (on the trains that stop near the ground.) Those from the above named stations on this road can get return tickets on the camp-ground, at twenty-five per cent discount from regular fare.

O. D. WOODRUFF, for Committee.

Vermont Campmeeting.

After examining various localities, the committee have decided to locate our annual campmeeting once more upon the old ground of last year. We can find no other so beautiful and commodious as this, with such improvements as we can make. Good water can be supplied freely upon the ground, and board at 85 cts per day, at boarding tent. Those coming to this meeting can come over any R. R. controlled by the Vt. Central R. R. for fare one way. You will buy a regular ticket, and pay full fare to Bethel, and receive a free return pass from the camp committee. All trains will stop at Bethel, Vt., from which place teams are engaged to carry all passengers, with all their baggage of every description, to the ground, at 25 cts each; children under twelve, half price. Inquire for Wilson's teams, and go with no other. Bro. Wilson keeps the depot house at Bethel, and will entertain all who wish at low rates. Lodgings can be had in private houses on reasonable terms; but let all bring bedding, as these places may be full before you come. To enjoy the meeting most richly, every family should have a family tent. We want a Graham boarding tent upon the ground for ministers, invalids, and those who do not wish to become invalids. Who will volunteer to take charge of such an one? Write me at once.

Now, ye lovers of Jesus, and all others, come, from York State, New Hampshire, and from all parts of Vermont, and from far and near, to our annual feast at Bethel, Vt., to commence Sept. 2nd, and to continue till Sept. 11th. We are hoping that Bro. Couch, and others from abroad, will be present to help us.

H. F. CARPENTER, for the Committee.

☞ Remember

to mark every piece of your baggage—Bethel, Vt. camp-ground. And also remember that, to save expense, you should come prepared to board yourselves.

H. F. C.

Tent-Meeting.

A tent meeting will be held in Plainville, on Bro. David Wilson's farm, in Dartmouth, Mass., near the old camp-ground, to commence Sept. 10th, and continue over the following Sunday. Bro. E. Bellows will be on the ground with his large tent. Brn. M. Batchelor, J. Hemenway, and other ministering brethren, will attend during the meeting. Ample arrangements will be made for board and lodging. Those coming from the north by R. Road will stop at Acushnet depot, four miles from New Bedford, where carriages will be ready to convey passengers to the ground. We hope all the brethren and sisters who are interested to hear the glad tidings of the soon coming kingdom of our Lord, will try to be present. Carriages will be engaged to convey passengers from New Bedford. Notice of the time and place of leaving will be given in the daily papers.

ROBERT COTTLE.

Notice.

The twelfth annual conference with the church of God in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., will commence on Friday evening, Sept. 22nd, and continue over Sunday. A general attendance is expected. Conveyance will be at Croft's station, on the N. Y. Central R. R., to meet trains from the east at two o'clock P. M., and from the west at four o'clock P. M. Eld. C. F. Sweet will lecture through the coming week and Sabbath, on the subject of Christ's near approach and kingdom.

G. STRONG.
M. WHITAKER.
B. C. SIMONDS.

Campmeeting.

Brethren in Illinois, come to campmeeting at Streator, to commence Sept. 7th, and continue for ten days. Elders A. N. Seymour, of Michigan, and P. S. W. Deyo, of Iowa, will be present to preach the word. Come early at the commencement. Come praying that the Lord may strengthen his people, and prepare them for the Master's use. Jesus is soon coming. We have no time to spend in building up a party or sect under any name but the name of our blessed Master. Come to work for Jesus and the salvation of souls.

J. W. BURROUGHS.

A Discussion.

I will hold a discussion with Eld. Chas. Rowe, of Minonk, Ills., at Streater, Lasalle Co., Ills., commencing Sept. 19th, at ten o'clock, and hold two sessions of two hours each, for three days.

QUESTION.

1st. Resolved, That the Scriptures teach that there is an intelligent, conscious entity in man, that survives the death of the body, and is conscious after the death of the body. Eld. Rowe affirms.

2nd. Resolved, That the Scriptures teach that the punishment of the wicked will end in the extinction of their conscious being. I affirm.

J. W. BURROUGHS.

Eld. Rowe is said to be a master in theology, a gentleman, and a scholar. He debated the above question once with Eld. Wm. Sheldon. Will the brethren pray that the truth may prevail?

J. W. B.

Grove and Basket Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove and basket meeting three and a half miles east of Bucyrus, Crawford Co., Ohio, on Bro. M. Bacon's farm, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 14th, at 7½ o'clock, to continue over the following Sunday. Bro. Bacon has a good and commodious meeting-house in the grove, that can be used if necessary. A hearty invitation is extended to all. Come in the name of the Lord, to do and get good, and help sustain the blessed truth as it is in Jesus.

J. M. JUDSON.

Notice.

Will some preaching brother or sister come to Mattapoisett, and fill the desk for the month of September? as I think of being absent at that time, if the Lord will. Pray about it, and come in the strength of God.

Your sister in the vineyard, JULIA A. HARLOW, Mattapoisett, Mass., Box 16.

Notice.

All letters, communications, and remittances for "Woman and her Work," should be addressed to Mrs. E. S. Jennings, No. 74 William St., Rochester, N. Y.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in the west part of Belchertown (Dark Corner), Sunday, Sept. 10th. Pilgrims in adjoining towns are invited.

H. SHUMWAY.

Notice.

As I have changed my place of residence, all mail matter should hereafter be directed to Haverhill, Mass., Box 799.

D. M. LEAVITT.

Notice.

The Maine Western Quarterly Conference will be holden at Mexico Corner, where Bro. A. Abbott may arrange, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 14th, and continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in the vicinity and elsewhere are invited. Brn. Gay, Haggett, Abbott, and others, are expected to preach the word. The meeting will be free for all who love the Lord in sincerity to come and worship and labor with us for the perishing.

JESSE GAY, Pres.
A. W. TAYLOR, Sec.

P. S.—Dr. Abbott at the place will direct brethren from abroad where they can find homes during the meeting.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

NEW TRACTS.

WHO ARE SADDUCEES? OR, TRUTH VINDICATED. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By GEO. THOMSON.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A COLPORTEUR'S NOTES, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office.

AG'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. LIFE AND DEATH THEOLOGY: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. IMMATERIALISM: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. DEATH AND THE DEAD, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. THE COMING JUDGMENT: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

"THIEF ON THE CROSS."

BY ELDER GEORGE THOMSON.

A New Tract.

One of the best ever published on the above subject. Just the thing to scatter widely. Price, 3 cts. single; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail.

HE KNOWS.

Bro. Grant:—These beautiful lines, so full of faith and trust in our heavenly Father, have comforted me so many times, and bid me hope when every thing seemed lost, and the future looked so dark, that I thought if you would publish them in the Crisis, they would cheer many others in trial and adversity. S. A. Ingham.

I know not what will befall me! God hangs a mist o'er my eyes;
And o'er each step of my onward path he makes new scenes to rise,
And every joy he sends me comes as a sweet and glad surprise.

I see not a step before me, as I tread the days of the year,
But the past is still in God's keeping, the future his mercy shall clear,
And what looks dark in the distance, may brighten as I draw near.

For perhaps the dreaded future has less bitterness than I think;
The Lord may sweeten the water before I stoop to drink,
Or, if Marah must be Marah, he will stand beside its brink.

It may be there is waiting for the coming of my feet,
Some gift of such rare blessedness, some joy so strangely sweet,
That my lips can only tremble with the thanks I cannot speak.

O restful, blissful ignorance! 'Tis blessed not to know,
It keeps me quiet in those arms which will not let me go,
And hushes my soul to rest on the bosom which loves me so.

So I go on not knowing; I would not if I might;
I would rather walk on in the dark with God, than go alone in the light,
I would rather walk with him by faith, than walk alone by sight.

My heart shrinks back from trials which the future may disclose,
Yet I never had a sorrow but what the dear Lord chose;
So I send the coming tears back, with the whispered word "He knows."

MALICE.

J. R. SMITH.

"Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you. We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother, abideth in death."

We are all the workmanship of one God, and all men are created and formed in his image, and are commanded to "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Now, as this divine command has been given to all men, it is of the utmost importance that we should give heed to the admonition. Especially is this applicable to those who profess to love the Lord Jesus, and to have been renewed by the Spirit of Christ; for if Christ be in you, the body is freed from sin, for "whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." How it grieves the true followers of Jesus to see men professing to live godly in Christ Jesus, while at the same time they are cherishing and nourishing hatred in their heart, folding it fondly to their bosom, and rolling it as a sweet morsel under their tongue; ofttimes holding this malicious feeling against brethren of the same church, by backbiting, browbeating, accusing falsely, and speaking lies in hypocrisy; while at the same time going forward to the communion table to partake of the broken body and shed blood of Jesus; eating and drinking damnation to their own souls. "Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outside, but within are full of dead men's bones and all manner of uncleanness."

When these hypocritical dissemblers can stand up in public, and take the name of the divine Redeemer upon their polluted lips, by telling us they intend to be honest (?) christians, and at the same time foster the spirit of hatred by circulating slanderous reports against a brother, which have no foundation or truth in them; when these whited sepulchres endeavor to injure, by accusing falsely and maliciously, and retaining money wrongfully, "speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron"; when guilty of such iniquity, do they consider that God takes cognizance of their wickedness? do they consider that they are deceiving and being deceived? do they consider that this is blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, and mockery to the God who made them? How can such men say that the Spirit of the law of life in Christ Jesus hath made them free from the law of sin and death? What reason have they to believe they have ever passed from death unto life, when they are so full of rottenness and iniquity? "Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in." Neither will you ever enter into that kingdom until you put away iniquity far from you, for no unclean thing will ever enter there. "There shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie." None will enter the kingdom of heaven but those who have passed from death unto life, and love one-another; "and this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that ye should love one another. Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother; and wherefore slew he him? because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous." Unless we have "the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his."

Now we wish to prove you by the word of God, for we believe that you are deceived, and we would not have you deceived, for God is not mocked. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap; if ye sow to the flesh, ye shall of the flesh reap corruption." Deceived you certainly must be, unless your life agrees with the teaching of the blessed Bible; for "whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God; and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him. By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments."

Now, deceived friend, you will perceive the utter impossibility of loving God, and at the same time cherishing hatred in your heart towards any who have been created in his image. You cannot have fellowship with God, and at the same time cherish the spirit of the devil; for "no man can serve two masters." "Therefore, if any man be in Christ he is a new creature; old things have passed away; behold all things are become new." When you have passed from death unto life, you will be dead to the world and alive unto God. When you die to the world, all hatred and every unholy feeling will die with you, and must be buried in the grave of sin; you will not lie one to another, but will lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset you, looking unto Jesus; you will present yourselves a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service; you will have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness; you will have no desire to walk in the counsel of the ungodly, neither will you wish to stand in the way of sinners, nor sit in the seat of the scornful; but your delight will be in the law of the Lord, the meditation of his word will be sweet to your soul, and Jesus will be your satisfying portion. If you would have this sweet peace, that runs like a river; if you desire to be happy here, and happy hereafter; if you wish to dwell in the presence of God and his holy angels; "let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

LONG SERMONS.

J. S. WHITE.

Some good things have been said on this subject. There are some things involved in this question, which I have not seen in print. Bro. Leslie referred to the prefixes of the sermon, as being long,—long hymns, long prayers, and the reading of long chapters. He might have added, the time some take up in commenting on the chapter read, and in preaching on the verses of the hymns as they are read. These make a long meeting, and the poor sermon is made to shoulder it. The sermon may be tedious enough without having to carry all this load of preliminaries.

There is often much time taken up in suffixes. At the close of the sermon, a long hymn is sung; then the meeting is open for others to improve, the preacher expecting to hear his sermon praised. Then follows several exhortations, so called, which are nothing more than a commendation of what they have heard in the sermon. Then comes a pause, and the preacher calls for others to speak, expecting and perhaps desiring to hear more of the same sort. While this is going on, there are some present who think the sermon they have just heard is almost anything but what a sermon should be; that it lacked every good quality. They are also thinking that a good sermon needs no praising, and they are wondering if those who praise it are not of his mind. Then, again, they cannot help thinking of the opinion the preacher has of his sermon, whether he thinks the effort calls for such eulogy; or whether he is sensible that he has made a failure, and that the lavish praises of his hearers will cover it up, and so he be encouraged to try again. Such a meeting, to such persons, will be long, and the sermon has to take all the blame, and perhaps deserves it.

Sometimes, after a good sermon has been preached, a long conference is held, in which many talk on diverse points. Then opportunity is given for persons to rise for prayers. No one moves: Then they are urged, and a verse is sung; and again they are urged, and so on for a long time; and when the meeting is closed, every good impression made by the sermon is gone. It may be well sometimes to ask persons forward for prayers; but every effort made after the first invitation is given puts a damper on the meeting, and the longer it is continued the less interest will there be in the meeting.

A long or short sermon does not depend on the minutes occupied in delivery. Some sermons will hold a congregation interested for an hour or more, without once thinking they are long. Again, another sermon before the same congregation would weary their patience, though not more than twenty minutes. In the same meeting, some will call the sermon long, while others will call it short. I was once in a meeting, and heard a sermon on the advent, in which was involved the sleep of the dead, and the final end of the wicked. Some Advent believers present were very uneasy, and to them the sermon was very long, as the sequel showed. But in the same meeting there was a deacon of a Congregational church, who said that he could have sat there and heard the preacher until midnight.

There is no definite rule to be given for the length of a sermon. A man may preach very short sermons as a rule for time, and at the same time have so many prefixes and suffixes as to make the time long and tedious. When this course is pursued for a length of time in the same place, it is always followed by disastrous results; and generally the reaction is such as to make the state of religious interest worse than at the first. There is one rule that should be regarded, with very rare exceptions. Let the prefixes be short, and close the meeting immediately after the sermon. Let this rule be adopted, and if the sermon is worth hearing, the complaints of long sermons will be few and far between.

INFANT DAMNATION.—No. 1.

O. W. STETSON.

About forty-five years ago, when quite a lad, I went one Sunday morning to a Calvinistic meeting, in Chazy, Clinton Co., N. Y., where the pastor of the flock stated in his discourse that "the way to hell was paved with infants not a span long." Now it may seem strange, yet this same old parson B——n was a good, kind-hearted old man; and, aside from his theology, everybody loved and respected him; but from that time forward he never looked so good to me as before. The third finger on his right hand was cut off just below the second joint, and as he made the affirmation, he was holding up that hand, which brought the excised member conspicuously into view; and the declaration so horrified me, that the stub-finger was so ineffaceably impressed on my memory, that for nearly half a century I have never thought of him, but what that vocative digit, with his infantile pavement, are as plainly before me as when he uttered the sentiment. It may be more than probable that there and then was laid the foundation for my subsequent adoption of Armenian sentiments, little thinking that the theology held by the latter school involved all the infant race in the same sad destiny, as a result of their definition of terms.

But having said so much, more must be said, or my own affirmation will seem to many like a hard saying, and an untruthful statement. It is also much to be deplored that some of our most excellent and worthy S. A. C. brethren, by their advocacy of certain theological tenets as Bible doctrine, involve themselves in the same inextricable dilemma, and it is to be hoped they will do one of two things; either get out of their glass houses, or stop throwing stones. In words and profession they say and hold that infants are saved; but in teaching they prove that infants are lost. Let me see how. Well, in John 3: 3, Jesus said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." In ver. 5, "cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Now the word "man" in the text is a generic term, and not a specific one; that is, Jesus is speaking of all or any one of the race, without regard to age or sex. Some one may say that Nicodemus' inquiry in verse 4 proves otherwise. His answer only proves him to have been very ignorant in relation to the entire subject. Paul makes a like statement with that of Jesus, when he says in 1 Cor. 15: 50, that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom." Now, infants are men and women not matured, and are as much flesh and blood in nature as if fully developed. They are also "corruptible" in their nature, but "corruption cannot inherit incorruption"; therefore, they are included in the term man, as used in the text by the Savior; therefore, must be born again, or remain outside of the kingdom.

N. B. The Savior does not say a man must be born twice more, making three births for the one person, but again, once more, making two births for each individual prior to entering into God's kingdom. The word "again," in John 3: 3, is just as significant, just as definite in its application there, as when applied to Christ's coming, when he says in John 14: 3, "I will come again," which means, as Paul shows in Heb. 9: 28, the second time, once more, in addition to his former and first coming; and I certainly have yet to see the first believer in that coming who is not very tenacious as to the particular expressiveness of that word "again," as applied to our Savior's advent. Very well; let us be just as precise, just as particular, just as tenacious, just as critical in its use in John 3: 3, and note the result.

The claim has been very general that conversion and the second birth are synonymous terms; and herein lies the secret spring which sent forth that other claim, that "born of water," in verse 5, was baptism, and then, in the creeds and confessions of faith, made that baptism, regeneration, conversion, new birth. This was done expressly to cover the case of infants, because they saw that the term man comprehended them, and they knew that infants were not converted, as a result of faith and obedience in the gospel, like adults. The Roman Catholic, the Episcopal, and some other churches, still adhere to this doctrine openly, claiming that all infants not so regenerated (by baptism) are lost; hence their custom of rantizing infants. Now, the question comes to me, "do I not believe in the damnation of infants?" to which I give in answer, most decidedly and emphatically, No! But, IF conversion is being "born again," I can see no chance for them, for they are not converted; but I do not believe that conversion is the second birth, nor do I believe that baptism is, either. My scriptural evidence must await another issue.

BAPTISMAL INCIDENTS.—No. 3.

O. R. FASSETT.

Visiting Monticello, Minn., to spend the Lord's day, I stopped on the way at a place called "Elk River," after the name of a river emptying into the Mississippi, and preached Friday evening. Returning on Monday, as the cars arrived at the above station, a gentleman took a seat in the cars just in front of me, and began at once a conversation with me, stating that he was out to hear me the Friday evening previous! At the close of our conversation, I gave him some tracts which I took out of my carpet-bag. Another gentleman in the seat in front of him, seeing me giving him religious reading, asked me if I had any more to spare. I replied by handing him some tracts also. He read them apparently with interest for awhile, when seeing Bro. Chandler move from the seat beside me, he came and took the seat and asked me—"Are you a clergyman? Being informed in the affirmative, he began to relate how the Lord had recently converted him, as he had been on the frontier, far away from all kindred and friends, and among strangers. He told the strivings and leadings of the Spirit, the manner of his conversion, and the great change which had been effected in him. He then asked me if I would baptize him, though a stranger? Learning that he would tarry at Minneapolis a day or two, I told him if he would call upon me at my residence, I would converse with him further, and if I found him a worthy candidate, as I felt assured he was, I would be glad to do so.

He came in the afternoon, and we had a pleasant christian conversation. I was fully convinced of his story and sincerity, and as the evening drew nigh, I informed him that, if he would come prepared, we would attend to the ordinance in the morning, or at once if he should choose. He chose to wait until morning. On the morrow, about ten o'clock A. M., he came prepared with clothes for the occasion. Mrs. F. had just returned from her Sabbath labors abroad. She was informed of the arrangement, and we three proceeded to the river, in front of my residence, the noble and majestic Mississippi. After a brief prayer, we both went down into the river, and in sight of heaven, and of lumbermen on the opposite banks of the river, and of my companion, I immersed our brother in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. He came out of the water shouting the praise of his God and Savior. We took him home, gave him books and tracts, and his dinner, when we bade him farewell. He pressed us to take a small sum of money as he left, which at first we refused from the stranger; but said he, "If you do not want it, appropriate it to some good benevolent object." After he left, I said to my companion, I shall take that money and purchase me a Bible, as mine is about worn out, and preach the gospel out of it, and remember the stranger I thus had the privilege of baptizing. So I have done for more than a year; and sometimes I tell the above circumstance to my audience.

How very seldom do we find one so ready and desirous to obey the Lord in this blessed ordinance, typical of the resurrection to a new life from the dark and turbid river of death, as to inquire out an administrator in the person of the minister of Jesus Christ. It is the more often that we have to urge men and women to obedience. Let those who are neglecting this duty be rebuked by the above beautiful incident of ready and willing obedience.

I will simply allude to another incident, where was illustrated filial affection. When Bro. Cheatham, of Utica, Minn., was baptized, his aged mother sat on the bank of the little lake, or pond, in a chair, to witness the scene she had for many long years desired to see, and yet felt many a time that she might die without the sight, or the Lord come and the duty not done. When her son had been baptized, and he was approaching the shore, she clasped her hands, and Simeon-like exclaimed: "Now let thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation." Bro. Cheatham cried out, "Not yet, mother! not yet; we can't spare you."

O how pleasant to see a son, with a large family to support, so appreciating and clinging to his aged mother who bore him and cared for him in infancy and childhood, and whose blessing has followed him all his days, as well as her prayers, till she has seen him converted and buried with Christ in baptism. So different is this from many others witnessed in these days, when "men" are "without natural affection," that it is worthy of note.

ON THE OTHER SHORE.

BY JENNIE.

There is rest for thee, O weary one,
When life's toilsome day is o'er;
There is rest for thee, when thy work is done,
'Tis over there, on the other shore.

There is a crown for thee of sparkling gems,
In exchange for the cross he bore;
A crown of life, of joy and peace,
'Tis over there, on the other shore.

There is a robe for thee, so pure and white,
Which Jesus keeps in store;
And all who gain the blest abode,
Will wear it there, on the other shore.

There is a home for thee among the blest,
Where loved ones part no more;
Where the weary saints shall be at rest;
May we meet you there, on the other shore.

ASHAMED TO CHANGE.

J. R. CLARK.

If men will change from bad to good, and from good to better, the more rapid their changes, the better will it be for themselves and the world. All improvements involve change; and yet men are ashamed to change. Men are often too proud to confess their errors, or to change when they are convinced that they are wrong. There is nothing more absurd than man's pride of opinion. For men to persist in an error after they are convinced, lest by giving it up they should show themselves to have been mistaken, is madness. There is one thing certain; all men have been, and still are, more or less mistaken in many important matters. The whole path of life, from the cradle to the grave, is strewed with cast-off ideas and opinions. We have taken up an idea and brought it on with us for a time, and cherished it as truth, and after carrying it long enough, we threw it away and picked up another in place of it, and so on, in this way, we have arrived at our present position, whether true or false. And yet we were ashamed each time to change our positions. The same is true of society in general, for the changes of individuals effect changes in society, and all the changes of society are but the changes of individuals that compose society.

The present state of the arts and sciences has been arrived at by a succession of changes. The principles of the several sciences, which have been settled by one generation, have been rejected and exploded by the next; and yet men are proud of their opinions. Many men live and believe as they do because their fathers did so before them. The influence of one over another is great. We should try and cultivate a spirit of independence; search and know for ourselves; launch out upon the great sea of life, and do our investigating, and not be ashamed, when we discover we are in possession of erroneous ideas, to throw them away and embrace something better. The word of God is our standard. Try everything, and compare everything by that unerring and divine word; and by so doing we shall grow wiser and better.

As christians, we should be independent; care not what the world says of us, but care to please God and keep his commandments, that we may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. We are not to be bigoted, but easily entreated, always possessing the fruits of the Spirit (Gal. 5: 22) which maketh not ashamed.

RESIGNATION IN TRIAL.

"Not my will, but thine be done."

Where was there ever resignation like this? The life of Jesus was one long martyrdom. From Bethlehem's manger to Calvary's cross there was scarcely one break in the clouds. They gathered more darkly and ominously around him, till they burst over his devoted head, as he uttered his expiring cry. Yet, throughout this pilgrimage of sorrow, no murmuring accent escaped his lips. The most suffering of all suffering lives was one of uncomplaining submission. "Not my will," but Thy will, was the motto of this wondrous being. When he came into the world, he thus announced his advent, "Lo, I come; . . I delight to do thy will, O my God." When he left it, we listened to the same prayer of blended agony and acquiescence: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me. Nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt."

Reader, is this mind also in you? Ah! what are your trials compared to his. What the ripples in your tide of woe, compared to the waves and billows which swept over him. If he, the spotless Lamb of God, murmured not, how can you murmur? His were the sufferings of a bosom never once darkened with the passing shadow of guilt or sin. Your severest sufferings are deserved; yea, a thousand times deserved. Are you tempted to indulge in hard suspicions as to God's faithfulness and love in appointing some peculiar trial? Ask yourself, Would Jesus have done this? Should I seek to pry into "the deep things of God," when he, in the spirit of a weaned child, was satisfied with the solution, "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight?" The sick child will take the bitterest draught from a Father's hand. This cup which thou, O God, givest me to drink, shall I not drink it? Be it mine to be passive in the arms of thy chastening love, exulting in the assurance that all thy appointments, though sovereign, are never arbitrary, but there is a gracious "need be" in them all. "My Father"! my covenant God! the God who spared not Jesus! it may well hush every repining word.

Drinking deep of this spirit of submission, you will be able thus to meet, yea, even to welcome, your sorest cross, saying, "Yes, Lord, all is well, just because it is thy blessed will. Take me, use me, chasten me, as seemeth good in thy sight. My will is resolved into thine. This trial is dark; I cannot see the "why and the wherefore" of it; but "not my will, but thine, O Lord, be done." "Arm yourselves, likewise, with the same mind."—Mind of Jesus.—Selected by Eliza. Bussell, Concord, N. H.

NOT IN DARKNESS.

J. A. CLEAVELAND.

"But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief; ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day; we are not of the night, nor of darkness."—1 Thess. 5: 4-5.

The lovers of Jesus are represented in this language, and no others. There are thousands of professors in the world who have no more light in them than the sinner. We talk with them upon the increase of light on the Scriptures, and all they have is what they received forty years ago, when they were converted. Says Christ, "Ye are the light of the world." Matt. 5: 14. Who? The church. Who compose this body? All true believers; and they are a body of light. "A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid." Matt. 5: 14. The exhortation of the apostle is, "Wherefore he said, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Eph. 5: 14. The Lord wants his people awake in this age of the world, and sounding the alarm, for Jesus is soon coming, and, as children that love his appearing, we should let the light shine.

Almost everything tells us that the day is right at hand. The sun, moon and stars have told us that he is coming soon; the angry nations also declare it; men's hearts say it is so, for they are failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming to pass on the earth. The earthquake and tidal waves loudly thunder it forth to the sleeping nations. But modern theology says there is a good time coming, and tells us of a world's conversion, thus lulling the people to sleep. It says it don't make any difference with us whether the Lord comes in our day, or in some future age, for we shall all soon die and go to heaven. Thus the great mass are kept in the dark. All this grows out of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. Spiritualism is dependent upon the natural immortality of the soul. If the church had always preached as the apostles did, thousands would have been saved from this trap of the devil. The devil never set a trap, or a snare, that is so well calculated to catch men, as when he got them to believe that he told the truth in the garden; for says he, "Ye shall not surely die." Gen. 3: 4. Out of this grows the doctrine of the natural immortality of man.

Our text says, we are children of light; if so, we are like Christ, and he came and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. 2 Tim. 1: 10. Says the beloved disciple John, "This, then, is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you; that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth. But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1: 5-7. In this we see the necessity of having a correct understanding of the Scriptures, also the necessity of a godly life.

I am satisfied that any one who believes in the near coming of the Savior will keep himself in the love of God, and in a waiting condition for the coming of the Lord. Then, and not till then, will he get immortality. It is strange that well-informed men and women will still hold on to the natural immortality of man, and also to the belief in going to heaven at death. It does seem, if they would open the Bible, and read it without theological glasses, they would believe the truth, and that life and immortality are to be given at the coming of Christ. This is light, and thank God, his people are getting light in this direction. May the Lord help us to be children of light, and of the day.

MIRACLES.

A. ROSS.

There are two kinds, physical and moral. A physical miracle is a change wrought by supernatural agency, in a physical constitution. Like opening the eyes of the blind, unstopping the ears of the deaf, restoring soundness to the lame, causing the dumb to sing, raising the dead, etc. A moral miracle is a change wrought in a moral constitution by supernatural agency. Said the eccentric but pious Rowland Hill:

"If it be inquired, what proof have we of the presence of the Divine Spirit in the visible church of Christ, I answer, in the greatest of all miracles, the conversion of a soul. Neither healing diseases, raising the dead, or infliction of sudden judgments, is to be compared with that power which, by means of an instrument so simple as preaching, lays the proud heart of man in the dust before the cross; raises him to holy joy, alters the habit of his mind and tenor of his life, gives him strength to bear scoffing and persecution; takes away the terrors of the grave, and turns the active current of the soul from the creature to God, from self to Christ, from sin to holiness. This is a miracle which the unbeliever ought to see if he does not. But no sign can savingly convert; this is the province of a direct influence of the Holy Ghost on hearts harder than adamant, till the Lord melts them by the fire of his word, and impresses on them, when softened, the seal of his divine image.

God designs to raise, from a chaotic mass of darkness and disorder that surrounds us, a creation of light and order, to his own glory; but here the sublimity of the Holy Spirit's agency consists in its gentleness: as in producing the old world, it is described as "brooding over the vast abyss;" so now it rests with dove-like tenderness on the church, making it gradually pregnant with eternal glory, and indicates not its presence by fanatic gestures, wild unmeaning exclamations, or the dreams and visions of enthusiasm."

GRAPE SYRUP FOR THE COMMUNION SERVICE.

Bro. Grant:—I take the liberty to send you the recipe for preparing pure, unfermented juice of the grape, rich in color and taste. I would suggest that where the cultivated grape cannot be obtained, the wild, or frost grape, which is abundant in some localities, would answer a good purpose. The recipe was furnished me by a sister who prepares it for our church service. S. A. Kidder.

Process of preparing Grape Syrup for Communion.—Place in a porcelain kettle four quarts of ripe grapes (measured after removing them from the stems); add one pint of boiling water, cover closely, and boil gently until the skins are broken, and the pulp softened; then strain into an earthen dish; and to two quarts of the juice thus obtained, add three and one half pounds of the best quality of granulated sugar; boil slowly fifteen minutes to form a syrup. Put it in glass bottles, or jars, and seal while hot. Will keep a year or more. When required for use, dilute by adding one part water to two parts of the syrup. I would add, that if any of the diluted syrup is left over, it is unfit to use again for communion, as it soon ferments, and makes an excellent wine, which may be bottled and saved for the sick who may require it.

— Our humiliations work out our most elevated joys.

AN EASTERN TALE.

A certain Rabbi had two sons, whom both he and his wife tenderly loved.

Duty compelled the Rabbi to take a journey to a distant country, and during his absence the two boys sickened and died. The grief-stricken mother laid them out on their bed, drew the curtain, and waited anxiously for her husband. He came—it was night.

"How are our boys?" was his first question. "Let me see them."

"Stay awhile," said his wife; "I am in great trouble, and I want your advice. Some years ago a friend lent me some jewels. I took great care of them, and at last began to prize them as my own. Since your departure my friend has called for them, but I did not like to part with them. Shall I give them up?"

"Wife! what strange request is this? Certainly they must be given up this very night."

She took the Rabbi to their bed, drew aside the curtain, and said, "Husband, there are the jewels!"

The Rabbi bowed his head and wept.—Sel.

☞ Christians are like the several flowers in a garden, that have each of them the dew of heaven, which, being shaken with the wind, they let fall at each other's roots, whereby they are jointly nourished, and become nourishers of each other.

Gems.

— He who can suppress a moment's anger, may prevent days of sorrow.

— You may glean knowledge by reading, but you must separate the chaff from the wheat by thinking.

— There are promises in Scripture to help our weakness, but none to overcome our wilfulness.

— A mind full of piety and knowledge is always rich; it is a bank that never fails; it yields a perpetual dividend of happiness.

When you see a theologian
Hugging close some ugly creed,
Fearing to reject or question
Dogmas which his priest may read,
Holding back all noble feeling,
Choking down each manly view,
Caring more for forms and symbols
Than to know the good and true;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the things which his must lack.

— A knowledge of our own weakness creates in us charity for others.

— Gifts from the hand are silver and gold, but the heart gives that which neither silver nor gold can buy.

— Temptations are enemies outside the castle seeking entrance.

— Love cannot any more burn without goodness, than the flame without fuel.

— It is sometimes of God's mercy that men, in the eager pursuit of worldly aggrandizement, are baffled; for they are like a train going down an inclined plane; putting on the brake is not pleasant, but it keeps the car on the track.

Work, brother, why sit you idle?
The day will soon be done;
Do you not see how the swift hours are flying,
How near to its setting the sun?
Work, for life's daylight is waning,
Work, for death's shadow is nigh;
Work, not with weary complaining,
But with aims that are noble and high.

— The very help which God gives men, is by teaching them how to help themselves.

— A hundred years of wrong do not make an hour of right.

— There is no such thing as preaching patience into people, unless the sermon is so long that they have to practice it while they hear.

— Greatness lies not in being strong, but in the right using of strength.

— When flowers are full of heaven descended dews, they always hang their heads; but men hold theirs the higher the more they receive, getting proud as they get full.

Ah! the wrongs that might be righted,
If we would but see the way;
Ah! the pains that might be lightened
Every hour and every day,
If we would but hear the pleadings
Of the hearts that go astray.

— A sanctified heart is much better than a silver tongue.

— Great powers and natural gifts do not bring privileges to their possessor so much as they bring duties.

— Many men carry their conscience like a drawn sword, cutting this way and that in the world, but sheathe it and keep it very soft and quiet when it is turned within, thinking that a sword should not be allowed to cut its own scabbard.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

Neuralgia.—A friend of ours who suffered horrible tortures from neuralgia, hearing of a noted physician in Germany who invariably cured that disease, crossed the ocean and visited Germany for treatment. He was permanently cured after but a short sojourn, and the doctor freely gave him the simple remedy used, which was nothing but a poultice and tea made from our common field thistle. The leaves are macerated and used on the parts affected as a poultice, while a small quantity of the leaves are boiled down in the proportion of a quart to a pint, and a small wine glass of the decoction drank before each meal. Our friend says he has recommended it far and near, and has never known it to fail of giving relief, while in most every instance it has effected a cure. It is certainly worth a trial.—Norwalk Gazette.

Overworked Brains.—A general error prevails on this subject. Nearly all the cases of sickness or exhaustion from excessive mental labor that we read about, are really the effect of overloaded stomachs. Working the brain ever so moderately on a stomach gorged with indigestible food may result in dyspepsia, paralysis, or consumption; and the same might happen if the brain were not worked at all. But, if the stomach is properly fed and the bowels duly attended to, no amount of study or of headwork that any human being can perform between sunrise and sunset will occasion the least injury to the brain.—Everybody's Journal.

Bone Felon.—Of all painful things, can there be any so excruciatingly painful as bone felon? We know of none that flesh is heir to. As this malady is quite frequent, and subject of much earnest consideration, we give the latest recipe for its cure, which is given by that high authority, the London Lancet:

"As soon as the disease is felt, put directly over the spot a fly blister, about the size of your thumb nail, and let it remain for six hours, at the expiration of which time, directly under the surface of the blister may be seen the felon, which can be instantly taken out with the point of a needle or a lancet."—Drug. Circular.

Air Beds in the Morning.—The wise housekeeper should see to it that all the beds should be aired immediately after being occupied. The impurities which emanate from the human body from insensible perspiration, are made up of minute atoms, which, if allowed to remain long, are absorbed by the bed, and will then, to a greater or less extent, vitiate the air for a considerable time afterward. Let the occupant throw the bed open on rising, and as soon as is convenient open the windows and ventilate the sleeping-room. One hour's early ventilation is worth two hours' late airing.—Good Health.

☞ If you wish for a clear mind, strong muscles, and quiet nerves, avoid all drinks but water, and mild infusions of that fluid; shun tobacco and opium, and every thing else that disturbs the normal state of the system.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

THE MISERABLE END.

The following is the graphic conclusion of Mrs. Stowe's "Four Scenes in the Life of a Country Boy," who went to the city, passed through the different grades of promotion in business and crime, until he became a teller in a bank, and a gambler. He loses largely in play, and to retrieve himself abstracts money from the bank. The result is as follows:—

"But the time of settlement of bank accounts is coming, and still his luck does not turn. Pray to God! he dare not, and the devil only laughs at his cries. He thinks of the agony of detection, of the shame and disgrace impending. What shall he do? The whisper comes: "Forge a check." Why not? He can imitate writing cleverly, was always a skillful penman. He will do it; he does it; and here to-day he stands pale, agonized, detected, before the board who have met to examine the accounts of the bank.

There stands the same boy that left his country home, so well-meaning, so beloved, and so happy. Behind him stands the detective and the handcuffs, and at the door the prison van, while the president of the board holds up the forged check.

Where are the respectable friends who helped him to wear off his country greenness at select suppers? They are perfectly shocked at such revelations of depravity. Who would have thought of his turning out such a scamp?

"What a mess he has made of it? The fellow was a fool—a weak-headed fool!"

Yes, he was weak-headed and weak-hearted, and he tried to walk where the strongest heads often turn; and you beguiled him to walk there. You laughed before him at the idea of total abstinence. You boasted before him of your manly powers of touching and tasting every thing, and never getting upset. You untied his boat, and helped him to paddle into the rapids, and then stood safe on the shore to see him go down. You never did anything to hurt yourself! No, and you never will. But how many will be lost by being beguiled to do what you can do safely, and they cannot do at all?

Come, now, boys, let us settle on one or two things as absolute certainties when you start in life. He who never drinks, never will be drunk. That's so, isn't it? He who sometimes drinks, may be. He who never goes into a gambling saloon never will gamble, and he who never gambles never loses; but he who goes to observe, may gamble, and he who gambles will surely lose.

In all these things is it not best not to begin, and would not our country boy have done better to have started with a firm, positive No! instead of the treacherous "We'll see?" He has seen, and seen a great deal too much; and, in nine cases out of ten, that sort of seeing ends in this way. Beware of innocent beginnings in wrong ways, and remember the old text we started with: "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is the way of death."

A BOY'S FAITH.

One of the most beautiful illustrations of believing prayer which I have ever known was furnished the other day by a little boy some four years old. His grandparents were talking about the drought.

"Yes," said the grandmother, "my flowers will all be burnt up, and we shall have no strawberries."

Little Bozzy listened with deep interest, but said nothing. A few minutes afterwards he was seen kneeling in one corner of the room, with his hands to his face, and was overheard praying thus: "O Lord! send down rain, so that grandma's flowers shan't be burnt up, and so we shall have plenty of strawberries."

He then arose and came to his grandmother, saying:

"Your flowers won't burn up, grandma. We are going to have rain."

"How do you know?"

"Oh!" said little Bozzy, "I have been praying for it, and it will come." He seemed to have no doubt of it.

The next morning the first thing the little fellow did, when he come down stairs, was to go to the back door and open it to see if it had rained. According to his prediction, the rain was falling upon the thirsty flowers and the perishing berries. As soon as he saw it he joyously shouted: "It's come, it's come, I knowed it would! I prayed for it."—Examiner and Household.

Preach Small.—"Mother," said a little girl seven years old, "I could not understand the minister to-day, he said so many hard words. I wish he would preach so that little girls could understand him. Won't he, mother?"

"Yes, I think so, if we ask him."

Soon after this her father saw her tripping away.

"Where are you going, Emma?" said he.

"I am going over to the minister's, to ask him to preach small."

Little Sins.—A little hole in a ship sinks it; a small breach in a sea-bank carries all away before it; a little stab in the heart kills a man; and a little sin, as it is often improperly called, tends to his final destruction. A little drop has been many a man's ruin. Every drunkard began with a single glass. Remember this, children.

Would you hear a sweet and pleasant echo, speak sweetly and pleasantly yourself.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"BEHOLD HE COMETH!"

Ages ago in the Eastern lands,
They watched for Him,
List'ning oft for His chariot-wheels
As the day grew dim,
And wondered if He would come again
From Olivet.
With welcoming words on their lips they looked,
And He tarries yet.

Every year across winter snows,
With wistful eyes,
Eager disciples have watched for Him
To come from the skies;
Every year under summer suns
They have sung His praise,
And cried for him from their yearning hearts—
But He still delays.

They died at their watch on the beacon heights,
And we take their place;
We long, as they longed in the olden days,
For the sight of His face;
The sad earth wants him in her deep woe
To give her rest;
But the years pass on, and He does not come
To make us blest.

Sometimes we look at the floating clouds,
And in fancy trace
The shining robes and the feet of brass,
And His glorious face;
We hush our breath when the gloaming comes,
And can almost hear
The thrilling sound of His blessed words,
But he is not near.

Yet courage, brothers! we have his word,
And He will not fail;
Let us be patient, and watch and wait
Till our prayers prevail.
He will surely come, as he said he would,
In the light sublime;
And we shall forget, as we see His face,
This waiting time.

REPORT

Of the Twelfth Annual Meeting

OF THE

ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

HELD AT

Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., August 21st, 22d, 1871.

Monday, Aug. 21st, 4 o'clock P. M.—The meeting was called to order by the President, Bro. S. G. Mathewson, and prayer was offered by Bro. M. Batchelor. On motion, the Chair appointed Brn. Hemenway, Ross, and O. D. Woodruff a committee on credentials. After the names of preachers and delegates present were given in, the meeting adjourned till to-morrow at 9 A. M.

Tuesday, 9 o'clock A. M. After prayer by Bro. Owen, the committee on credentials presented additional names, and reported the following list of membership:

MEMBERS OF THE BOARD: Geo. T. Adams, J. G. Hamblin.

PREACHERS: A. M. Higgins, H. Davis, G. A. Streeter, Jacob Wilbur, J. W. Thomas, Z. D. Baird, R. K. Stark, B. St. John, E. Cotton, Sam'l Ayres, B. Hitchcock, E. Owen, I. I. Leslie, A. W. Sibley, Miles Grant, R. Mosher, J. Hemenway, O. D. Woodruff, A. Ross, C. Goodrich, D. R. Mansfield, S. S. Brewer, L. Boutell, J. Porter, S. Cook, H. A. King, J. R. Boynton, T. J. Cox, L. T. Cunningham, N. H. Barbour, I. B. Potter, J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, H. F. Carpenter, L. C. McKinstry, C. W. Sargent, J. H. Whitmore, Wm. L. Himes, M. Batchelor, J. B. Cook, Wm. C. Thurman, Z. Ford, J. M. Stetler, M. A. Durand, M. R. Phetteplace, H. K. Flagg.

DELEGATES: J. C. Allen, Geo. Johnson, Levi Allen, W. E. Brown, E. G. Higgins, W. M. Hall, H. W. Buxton, Wm. F. Collier, W. G. Ruggles, Henry Taylor, Stephen Robinson, Nath'l Hamblin, Orrin Newell, D. Harwood, Ali Andrews.

This report being accepted, it was moved that a business committee of three be appointed by the Chair. An amendment was offered that said committee be nominated from the body, and that all committees be appointed from the floor. The amendment prevailed, and Brn. J. Couch, A. M. Higgins, and I. B. Potter were so elected business committee, who reported work as follows:

1. Reading of the minutes of the Secretary.
2. Treasurer's report of the A. C. A.
3. Secretary's " " " A. C. P. S.
4. Treasurer's " " " "
5. Business Agent's " " "
6. Address of the President " "
7. Election of officers of the A. C. A.
8. " " Editor of World's Crisis.
9. " " Officers of the A. C. P. S.
10. Promiscuous business.

Minutes of the Secretary of the A. C. A. and the report of the Treasurer, also the reports of the Secretary, Treasurer, and Business Agent of the A. C. P. S., were then severally read, accepted, and adopted.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY

OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society.

Mr. President and Brethren of the Advent Christian Publication Society:—

There have been six meetings of the Society held during the year; four on this ground, and two at its rooms in Boston. At its first two meetings, held on the ground last year (Aug. 24th, 1870), the following business was transacted:

It was voted, on motion of Bro. Dickinson, That Bro. Geo. T. Adams be continued as Business Agent the ensuing year, at a salary of $300, and that his salary as Treasurer be as last year, $300. It was also voted, that the salary of the Editor of the World's Crisis be $15.00 per week. That the salary of the Corresponding Editor be $200 per year, and ten per cent of all collections for the office. That the Secretary of each Society be paid $20 for his services the past year. That the Business Agent be instructed to pay ten per cent to preachers on all collections for the World's Crisis and Young Pilgrim; and to make remuneration according to his judgment for collections of old accounts.

The Business Agent was authorized to execute the order of the Board of the A. C. A. to publish in pamphlet form the proceedings of the eleventh annual meeting, together with the Constitution and By-laws of the two Societies, and such other matters as may be thought best; the number of copies to be left to the discretion of the Business Agent. The offer from Elder Blain of the tract plates of "The Son of God," by Henry Grew, was referred to the publishing committee.

Bro. H. A. King was instructed to prepare a list of papers, with rates for clubbing with the World's Crisis, and submit the same to the Editorial Committee and Business Agent for their approval.

The following resolution was adopted: That we call for and make an effort to raise a fund of $2000 for the publication and free distribution of tracts the ensuing year.

At an adjourned meeting held in the afternoon of Aug. 24th, the following votes were taken: That the question of the continuance of the Young Pilgrim be referred to the Editorial Committee, and also to the Business Agent and its Editor. That the Business Agent be authorized to expend such sums as he may deem necessary (not to exceed $150), in encouraging and remunerating writers for the World's Crisis and Young Pilgrim.

Another meeting of the Society was held at its rooms, 160 Hanover St., Boston, June 8th, 1871, and the following business transacted:

The Business Agent laid before the Society the will of the late Bro. S. T. Chappell, of Colebrook, Ct. (in which the property of our late brother, upon the decease of his wife, is bequeathed to this Society), which was accepted.

That the Treasurer and Agent be authorized, in behalf of this Society, to comply with the conditions of said will.

That the Treasurer be authorized to pay the widow of the late Bro. H. H. Dickinson, Secretary of the A. C. Association, as per vote of Board of Managers of the same, the sum of ten dollars for services rendered.

That, as per order of the Board of the A. C. Association, the Treasurer was authorized to pay the necessary expenses of said Board in attending meeting of the same.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of this Society was held in Boston June 12th, 1871, and the following business transacted. The following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, death in its onward and irresistible march has suddenly removed from our midst Bro. Wm. B. Herron, late Secretary of this Society, filling our hearts with sorrow, therefore,

Resolved, That, in the death of our brother, the Society has lost an accurate, reliable, and valuable officer—one who served it for many years to its entire satisfaction.

Resolved, That, as the originator and Editor of The Young Pilgrim, he ever evinced a strong and ardent desire to benefit the young, "to bring the children to Jesus, instruct them in righteousness, and prepare them for the kingdom of heaven."

Resolved, That for his most deeply afflicted family—an invalid, helpless wife, and two young daughters—who have been bereft of a beloved husband and affectionate father, we do express our warmest sympathy, and assure them that our hearts are deeply affected by this sad loss; and we do most devoutly pray that the widow's God and the orphan's Protector may have them in his special care and keeping unto the day of redemption.

That Elder I. I. Leslie be Editor of the Young Pilgrim in the place of Bro. Wm. B. Herron, deceased. Services as such to commence with the August number of said paper.

That ten dollars be paid the widow of Bro. W. B. Herron, late Secretary of this Society, for services rendered.

That one hundred dollars be appropriated to the widow of W. B. Herron, late Editor of the Young Pilgrim, to defray the expenses of his last sickness and funeral.

At a meeting held on this camp-ground last evening, August 21st, the following business was transacted:

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

The Treasurer's report and the report of the Business Agent were read and adopted, and ordered to be read before the A. C. Association.

The minutes of the meetings of the Board held during the year were read and approved. Whereupon, the Society adjourned, sine die.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec. of the A. C. P. S.

BUSINESS AGENT'S REPORT.

Brethren of the Advent Christian Publication Society:—

Within the past few months, death has entered our ranks and borne from our midst two beloved brethren, faithful co-laborers, whose presence and counsel will benefit us no more forever. But the duties of the hour rest upon us, and it devolves upon me, as your executive agent, to report to you the business operations of the Society for the past year.

We entered upon the business of the year with a capital, as given in our last annual report, of $16,558.81. Our present capital we put as follows:

Property on hand, valued at	$10,173 50
Cash in the Treasury	768 35
Amount due the Crisis, valued at	5,500 00
" " " Young Pilgrim, valued at	400 00
" " on book acct.	500 00
Total capital	$17,341 85

Our receipts the past year were $21,050.82. The late Bro. S. T. Chappell, of Colebrook, Ct., by will bequeathed to the Society, after the death of his widow, his property, appraised at $1,529.65, upon condition that the Society pay some debts amounting to about $300.00, of which we have paid, in accordance with a vote of the Society, $200.00. We think this bequest will nett the Society $1000.00, at least, in due time.

THE BOOK AND TRACT DEPARTMENT.

During the past year, we have published nearly 3,000,000 pages of tracts, several of which are new ones; viz., "Time's Farewell," "The Judgment Impending," "Thief on the Cross," "Symbolization of the World's Eventful Crisis," "The Two-Horned Beast," and "The End at Hand." We have also published an edition of the "Jubilee Harp," "Hymns of the Harp," and of the "Question Book." The value of books and tracts on hand at the beginning of the year was $3,572.42. The cost of books and tracts made and purchased during the year is $3,915.09. Total books and tracts, $7,487.51. The receipts for books and tracts, $4,600.22. Amount received from the Tract Fund for tracts and papers granted, $864.55. Due on book sales, more than last year, some $200.00. Total sales and grants, $5,664.77. Value of books, tracts and papers on hand, $3,915.09. Total, $9,579.86.

The World's Crisis.

This paper, which is the leading interest of the Society, and which is the most widely known of all the journals devoted to the proclamation of the great truths of our time, has continued to go forward in its good work, gladdening the hearts of thousands, and has a larger circulation, stands higher, and is more eagerly sought after to-day, we believe, than ever before. Stimulated by clubbing rates, and a premium list, also an allowance in cash for obtaining new subscribers, and an addition in the editorial department, our friends have done more to increase our subscription list the past year than for several years before.

The number of names upon our subscription list, as given at our last annual meeting, was 8,774; the number of names now is 9,344; the number of new subscribers is 1,983. The number of stoppages is 1,413, making an increase of 570 during the year, notwithstanding many more delinquents have been cut off than usual. We have placed in the hands of various preaching brethren a large number of bills, for them to present personally to those who are largely in arrears, to collect what they could, or at least make report upon the same, so that we may understand every case of indebtedness. The result has been that quite a number of old bills have been paid in full, others in part; while many delinquents have been stricken from the list. There are a large number yet to hear from, and we would say, did our subscribers all pay up promptly, the Society would be able to reduce the price of "our paper" to $2.00 per year. Will not those who are owing for the Crisis do what they can to bring about so desirable a result, by sending in their dues at once?

The number of free subscribers on our list at the present time is 869, being an increase of 30 since last year. The expense of our free list, at our usual rates, it will be seen is over $2,100.00. On the free list, Maine has 151, New Hampshire 102, Vermont 40, Massachusetts 137, Rhode Island 28, Connecticut 73, New York 96, Michigan 29, Wisconsin 28, Illinois 36, Iowa 22; other States from one to ten each.

The receipts for the Crisis during the year have been: on the subscription list, $14,587.18; on the Poor Fund, $75.50; total, $14,662.98. The expenditures not far from $14,500.00.

There are many persons who have received the Crisis for years, who have seen their names with their account on their paper week after week, and have also received bills, but have not yet paid up. The Society has had long patience, and it would now appear duty to cut off the names of those who will not pay, or give some good reason for not doing so.

It is to be hoped that our friends will not relax their efforts in obtaining new subscribers, but that, as the indications are that our time for work is short, they will put forth renewed energies to increase the circulation and influence of this advocate of "life and immortality" through our Lord Jesus Christ, and of his appearing and kingdom now at hand.

The Young Pilgrim.

The number of names on the subscription list is 3,862; last year 4,116; decrease, 254. Last year there were 100 on the free list; this year, 52. The receipts on the subscription list have been $1,135.12; on the "Pilgrim Fund," $24.58. Total receipts, $1,159.70; and there is yet quite an amount due. We have just procured a new suit of type for the Pilgrim, and the prospects for its increased circulation we think are good; and we believe with effort on the part of our various preaching brethren, and others, it can be made the means of doing much good, and without much pecuniary loss to the Society. The expenses have been not far from $1,500.00.

The Tract Fund.

The amount received on the Tract Fund during the year is $627.92. There has been a call for tracts from all quarters, and they have been freely sent out for distribution to the amount of $864.55, which is in excess of the receipts to the amount of $236.63, which deficit has been made up from balance left over from former years. The tract work is a most important one, and we hope the friends of truth will see that funds are not wanting to enable the Society to meet the calls which are continually made upon it.

The Poor Fund.

The amount received upon the Poor Fund was $75.50, only about enough to pay for what has been added to the free list for the year. There are a large number of the Lord's poor, mostly widows, who prize the Crisis for reading matter next to the Bible, who have as much as they can do to support themselves. Such, we feel, should have the paper free as long as it is published; and we hope our friends will remember this class, and contribute to this fund more liberally the coming year, the Lord directing.

Brethren, in closing we would express our thankfulness to our heavenly Father for the many blessings and favors bestowed upon us through the past years, and continued to the present moment; that he has so disposed the hearts of the brethren, sisters and friends, that they have helped forward the good work in which we are engaged by their means, prayers, and readiness to receive, read and circulate our various publications. May the blessing of the Lord rest upon them, and us all; and finally bring us to enjoy a place together at his right hand, in his presence, where there is "fulness of joy"; a home in the kingdom, that shall have no end.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CRISIS OFFICE, BOSTON, Aug. 17, 1871.

We, the undersigned, having examined the accounts of George T. Adams, Agent of the Advent Christian Publication Society, as embodied in the foregoing Report, find them correct, according to the best of our knowledge and belief.

The President of the A. C. P. S. then proceeded to deliver his Annual Address to the Association, which was full of touching appeal, and was listened to with thrilling interest.

Address.

Mr. President, and Members of the Advent Christian Association:—

Through the abounding mercy and protecting care of a gracious God, we are permitted to meet at the end of this official year, as the servants of Christ, in your fraternal and Christian Association. I am placed under constitutional obligations, as the presiding officer of the Advent Christian Publication Society, to address you at this time upon its wants, duties, and work, connected with the past, present, and future. It was organized for the laudable purpose of publishing to this generation, divine truth especially applicable at the present time. The God of this world has given in his word prophetic sketches, and an outline history of all its important changes and events, in its physical, ecclesiastical, and political departments, affecting human society.

It is important that all events affecting men in their probation be understood, either in anticipation, or in their historic relations. It is necessary for the salvation of men, that they anticipate some events, because a preparation for their occurrence is essential; while others must be understood and acknowledged as past, because the well-being of men depends upon their results. It was necessary that the antediluvians should know the flood was coming, that they might prepare to meet it; and it was equally important that they recognize the evidences of its approach. Much divine truth, applicable to men in a sinful state, is repulsive, because it is reproof for their sins, and a forewarning of coming judgment. They never seek for it, but labor to repel it. Therefore those who proclaim it must make aggressive movements, employing every available means to cause the scornful eye to look upon it, and the turned away ear to hear it. The servants of Christ are never blameless, when those means are not thus employed. A man will never receive from the hand of one he esteems an enemy, that which is undesirable, but will sometimes accept it from a friend. Therefore when an unwelcome message is to be proclaimed, the messenger should first labor to show himself a true friend, by carefully selecting kind words in argument, and never suffering antagonism to appear in his communications; but address all as if they were friends for whom he had great care and love.

The great object for which we are associated is to publish such a message; to advertise to this generation the speedy coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead. This must be unwelcome news to all whose hopes and expectations are confined to this world. Satan's first work is to make these truths unpopular, and so cause them to be rejected. To accomplish this, he labors to make its advocates as repulsive as possible, thereby causing the people to reject them and their communications.

Much of our labor has been lost in the past, because we have shown ourselves combatants instead of teachers, ridiculing the people, instead of seeking to save them; using low, sarcastic language, instead of "sound speech;" speaking of them reproachfully, instead of kindly; holding up their errors to scorn, instead of presenting the truth in its beauty.

We live in an age of unparalleled phenomena. All terrestrial things show signs of age and decay. The earth's pulse has become excited and intermittent, throbbing heavily in the volcanic regions, and its death spasms are witnessed, as it vomits forth more frequently the burning contents of its fevered bowels. Its strong frame trembles, and every part quivers, as the electric solar storms are poured forth, producing unheard-of atmospheric currents, seen in roaring tempests, and inundating floods; auroral lights flashing around the blue arch like flames in a heating oven, undulating its surface, rolling the mighty waves of a molten sea under continents and islands, shaking their foundations, and threatening their removal "like a cottage." The sun cast its midnight shadow upon the earth at noonday, and the moon withdrew her silver rays, as if plunged in a sea of blood. The stars in wild confusion leaped from Leo's chamber, blazing through the heavens, as if God was giving to men an exhibition of celestial fireworks.

While these wonderful scenes are transpiring in the heavens and upon the earth, a strangely discordant note is heard in the music of human associations. In the king's palace and peasant's cot, in the state room and church sanctum, mid the assembled masses and private circles, in legislative halls and curtained session-rooms of oath-bound friends; through all the ranks of social humanity, is heard the deep-toned and prolonged sound of whispered contention and outspoken strife; threatened retaliation and sworn revenge. All these things are in exact harmony with divine predictions of scenes to transpire in the closing history of this world. To record them, is to duplicate the divine record of the signs of Christ's coming.

Mr. President, and brethren of this association, our Society was formed for the purpose of publishing to this generation these things. The importance of our work will appear, when we consider that these events were predicted as the last scenes in the history of a sin-cursed world; and therefore become the signs of the ending of the curse, and the introduction of the new creation. God has never changed his administration of earthly government, without first notifying all whose interests were involved in that change, of his purpose to do so. He has always given that notification through his servants, by presenting events predicted to transpire immediately before the great change. This was the case with the Antediluvians and Sodomites. They rejected the evidences God caused to be published to them, and, therefore, knew not until destruction came upon them; those who received those evidences enjoyed divine protection.

Then we have two strong motives for faithfully promulgating these truths. (1.) That those who are in darkness and ready to perish, may see the storm-cloud coming, and hide in the Rock, before they are swept down to perdition. (2.) That by faithfully warning the world of coming judgment, we may obtain God's approval, and receive salvation at his hand. The importance of this subject cannot be over-estimated. No language can describe it; no symbol can illustrate it. It involves the infinite interests of countless millions, and these interests are hinged upon their receiving all the truths of the gospel unfolded at the present time. God commits his truth into the hands of his servants, to be, by them, interpreted, applied, and presented to men. He holds them responsible for that work. Do we, my brethren, belong to that class? Have those terrible responsibilities fallen upon us? Will God hold us accountable for the warning and enlightenment of this generation? He will. Let us, then, like men of God, accept the trust. The fundamental truths of the gospel should not be neglected; but as God did foretell the great events of this age, he thus indicated the special duty of his servants to preach, and publish, the fulfillment of those predictions, which are declared to be signs that the end of the world is near.

The fathers could not publish them, for they had not then transpired. It is a duty reserved for the last generation. It has fallen to our lot to do a part of that most holy and responsible work. There is a specialty in our work which requires special labor, and produces special responsibilities, in which is found the cross by which we are crucified to the world. It is giving the household meat in due season. Giving special truth, at a specific time, which must produce smiting or opposition from fellservants, at which time Christ will come, and reward all the servants, according to their work. This is the work Christ has called us to do. For the execution of those sacred duties, we are assembled before you to-day, Mr. President. It is not to establish sectarian creeds, or to increase denominational interests, but it is to combine our efforts, and systematically use our means, in publishing the last sanctifying and warning gospel truths, to a generation immediately to meet its Judge. To answer the increased demands of those called to these special duties, corresponding means have been furnished by God. He has made it their duty to publish this last message to all nations, as a witness that the end is near; and so he has caused universal toleration to be proclaimed, that it might be sent to all lands, and the text-book of truth, the Bible, be published in the languages of all nations, that they should have no excuse for rejecting its last judgment warning.

The wonderful invention and improvements in printing, came at the time when needed to make the vision plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. To make the tables plain, books, tracts, papers, and charts, must be published, in which clear and conclusive arguments are given, showing the coming of the Just One, so that a generation running to and fro on lightening "chariots" in the day of God's "preparation," may read and understand. This is the work to which God has called us, and in its execution we are publishing a weekly paper, called the "World's Crisis," and one semi-monthly paper, called the "Young Pilgrim," with a variety of books and tracts. These publications have been comparatively well sustained the past year. But if God has called us to this specific work, and these publications are designed, by him, to promulgate the last message of mercy to a fallen world, then a more united and stronger effort should be made to enrich their columns with saving truth, and scatter them like leaves of autumn in the paths of the perishing. Great additions can and should be made to the subscription lists of the papers. Thousands should be sent to those who will not subscribe for them. Those who can do so, are under strong obligation to furnish for them well digested articles, giving our location upon the stream of time, the signs of Christ's coming, the prophetic history of the world, the necessity of enjoying perfect love, possessing holiness, and of being fully consecrated to Christ. Millions are perishing for this light. Shall they have it? Shall we spend these golden moments contending about trifles, while our friends are perishing before our eyes in the dark waters of scepticism?

Would a wise father and mother, seeing their children exposed to a terrible death in a burning house, stop and contend about which door it was proper to enter to save them, until the leaping flames should destroy their loved ones? No, human wisdom would call it madness.

When our eyes are open to see the position the world now occupies, and our relations to it, they about to plunge into the lake of fire, and we holding in our hands the last heaven-appointed means for their rescue, shall we waste those means upon our lusts? Shall we seek for masteries? Shall we labor for place and salary, and contend about questions which angels cannot settle? Shall we lay up treasures where the fires are already kindled, and seek wisdom which is suicidal folly? Shall we reach for human glory, which sinks in eternal infamy? Shall we grasp mortal life, and embrace eternal death? No! Let the answer echo round the world and angels prolong the sound in heaven, No! By divine grace let us rise from childhood to the dignity of sanctified manhood. Our work demands fully developed, high-toned christianity; divinely inspired worship; sound-minded theology; interpretations governed by Bible rules; godly examples in family circles, market places, and public halls; divine love breathed in every word; holiness seen in every act, and charity felt in every emotion. Then will every page of our publications glow with heavenly radiance. The tone of our papers will be dignified; their spirit sweet and winning; their utterances clear and instructive. Our tracts will peal forth the note of warning to the careless worldling, arousing from death slumbers the self-confident Pharisee, and lead to Christ the straying sinner. Our books will be filled with unanswerable arguments, presenting for the hope of the perishing, Christ and the atonement; the condition of justification by faith and repentance; of acquittal, holiness and sanctification; of being with Christ in his kingdom, the resurrection and restitution. They will exhibit in consecutive order, earth scenes of thrilling interest, as recorded on the prophetic page. They will roll up the obscuring veil of mystical interpretations, which have made dark and of doubtful import the word of God, presenting it clear as the morning sun, and scattering the mysteries of Great Babylon away. They will uncover the snare, coiled to drag down to perdition the careless multitudes of this generation, now anticipating peace and safety.

The work is great, but it must be done. Let us pray earnestly that Christ may multiply our strength, and increase our wisdom, that we may do noble deeds for God. The great controversy between God and Satan, truth and error, good and evil, is drawing to a final close. The battle waxes hot. The mighty combatants are preparing for the last decisive charge. All beings and principles are being placed in the lines. Angels and men are there, some for Christ, and some for Satan. Spirits are aroused, divine and satanic, nerving the armor-clad warriors for the mighty work. Truth and error stand boldly up, face to face, each claiming divine origin,—pushing to gain the summit of universal control. Hark! from Zion a sound peals forth. It is the sound of battle, the signal for the last charge. Look over the field. All is in motion. The quickened note, and hurried step, tell that orders have been issued from headquarters. The question must now be settled—who has the right to rule the world? Veiled wonders are in our midst. Mighty scenes, with results unseen, are now marching through the world. The mighty engines, earthquakes, famine, pestilence, and war, are being charged and rolled to the front. The world is stirred, and angels gaze with awe, as the contending hosts rush to the last mighty conflict. Shall we dally and play with children's toys, while all are moved to gain the victory? Shall we waste our time striving for a corporal's place, when peerage with angels could be gained? No, we will listen to Immanuel's command, and rush to the front, wielding our pens instead of swords, ink, instead of powder, throwing our papers and tracts, instead of shells, healing the wounded, instead of destroying our enemies. Strike, ye men of God, STRIKE, for the battle rages fearfully. Ask and receive no quarter. It is perfect victory, or eternal death. Listen! the awful roar of contention and strife is fearful from palace and temple, city and mountain. Ye servants of Christ, be calm in the midst of this wild excitement. Stand firm at your posts amid the whirling rush. Peace is coming. Victory shall be yours. Put the glass to your anointed eye, and see standing upon yonder glorious mountain, a Mighty One, with a banner of purest white, and a long train ready for departure. He is coming; yes, coming to end earth's cruel rebellion, to hush in eternal silence the grating sound of war. Look! the smoke and dust of battle clear before him. The echo of earth's groan dies under his chariot wheels. He lays an Almighty hand upon Death, and buries him in the darkness and silence of eternal night. He opens the vast charnel-house, where lie the dreamless sleepers pillowed in earth's cold lap, and at the word of command from his lips they shall spring to life again. He casts old earth with its crimsoned soil and plague spots, into his furnace, and brings out the new earth recreated in Godlike perfection, radiant with his glory, sinless, and deathless. Then will Satan, with all his angelic and human subjects, receive the penalty of the divine law—eternal death. Then shall sin cease, when the first and last sinner shall cease to rebel. Then shall the victories of Christ's death be known, when the last scratch and stain of sin shall disappear from the works of God, and the unbroken harmonies of the divine government be restored. Then shall meet, with triumphant and eternal greetings, the Bridegroom and the Bride. Then shall the faithful rest from their toils, and rest forever.

O ye servants of the Most High, in view of a perishing world just sliding into perdition, let us renew our covenant with God, and with each other. Push out the life boat, the loved ones are perishing. Work, WORK, for the day is ending, and the rest will be eternal. May divine power nerve your arm to strike once more for God and truth. And when the work of redemption is done, may you share the victories of Messiah's cross in paradise restored. All of which, for the triumph of truth and your salvation, is respectfully submitted.

J. COUCH.

This address being accepted and adopted, on motion, a vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. Couch for his able and eloquent effort, whereupon it was voted to publish the address in pamphlet form.

Brn. R. K. Stark, A. Ross, H. A. King, were appointed from the floor a committee on ballots for officers of the A. C. A., and ballots were deposited at the call of the roll.

Brn. E. Owen, T. E. Wood, I. I. Leslie, were appointed a committee on ballots for Editors, and on motion ballots for both Editor and corresponding Editor were received at the same time.

Brn. B. St. John, J. R. Boynton, J. G. Hamblin, were appointed a committee on ballots for the A. C. P. S. Ballots received at the call of roll.

The report of ballot committee for the A. C. A. was received, accepted, and the following officers declared elected:

Officers of the Adv. Chris. Association.

President—S. G. MATHEWSON.
Vice President—M. BATCHELOR.
Secretary—H. F. CARPENTER.
Treasurer—GEO. T. ADAMS.

Directors.

J. COUCH. J. G. HAMBLIN. H. V. DAVIS.
A. W. SIBLEY. C. S. SHERMAN. H. A. KING.
H. PRATT. A. ROSS. W. H. MITCHELL.

The report of ballot committee for Editors was received, accepted, and the following Editors were declared elected, viz.:

Editor of World's Crisis—MILES GRANT.
Corresponding Editor—W. SHELDON.

The ballot committee for the A. C. P. S. reported, their report was accepted, and the following officers declared elected:

H. V. DAVIS. L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

It was moved that the present campmeeting committee stand as candidates for election at the stand by the people. Carried. Adjourned to meet at four o'clock P. M.

Four o'clock P. M. Prayer was offered by Bro. McKinstry, after which Bro. H. A. King offered the following resolution, which was unanimously passed:

Whereas, the vote of the Association this morning, failing to elect Bro. D. R. Mansfield a member of our Business Committee, seems to exclude the western brethren, and to reflect unfavorably upon them, or Bro. Mansfield; therefore,

Resolved, That we express our kindest regards for them and Bro. Mansfield, and our unbounded confidence in his ability and christian character, and also re-express our hearty adoption of those broad and liberal principles of our Constitution, by which the Vice President of the Western Association acts as corresponding Editor of our weekly paper, and by which all other christians co-operating with us in extending the knowledge of the blessed hope, may enjoy these fraternal relations.

Bro. Hemenway requested to be dropped as a candidate for the campmeeting committee. His request was reluctantly granted, and on motion the present camp committee were empowered to fill the vacancy.

The evil of introducing to our churches preachers of no good christian standing, by publishing their appointments in the Crisis, being brought up, after some discussion, the offering and withdrawal of various resolutions, the following resolution was introduced, viz.:—

Whereas, The churches have been misled, divided, and the cause of Christ injured by the labors of unworthy men, who have been advertised as approved of the body by the publication of their appointments in the Crisis, therefore,

Resolved, That the Editorial officers be requested to withhold the publication of all appointments for persons to them unknown, and also those whose labors tend to divide the church, and those who preach doctrines calculated to drown men in perdition.

Resolved, That when local and personal difficulties in any place cause brethren to establish an opposition meeting, that no appointments for that meeting be published until a proper investigation of the difficulties shall be made; and when sufficient time has passed for such an investigation, and no effort has been made by the original meeting for it, then the appointments of that meeting shall be withheld also.

This resolution was passed, and the meeting adjourned sine die, having enjoyed a most harmonious session, characterized by the fruits of true christian fellowship and love. Let brotherly love continue.

H. F. CARPENTER, Secretary.

THE CHRISTIAN'S DAILY WALK.

"Be thou in the fear of the Lord all the day long."—PROV. 23: 17.

HOW MAY THIS BE DONE?

1. God first, God second, God always. On first awaking at early dawn, think of God, his goodness, his preserving mercy; praise him,—praise him, keep on praising him. Raise your thoughts to God in your first waking moments, as David, "When I awake I am still with thee."

2. Seek the Lord by secret, fervent prayer, and say, "My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up."

3. At a convenient hour collect together your household for family worship, reading the word of God, and prayer.

4. Carry religious tempers and manners into your family and business, and all the engagements of life.

5. Suitably acknowledge God in the meals you take—seeking his blessing, and giving thanks to his name.

6. If practicable, retire in the course of the day for devotional purposes, like him who said, "Evening and morning, and noon, will I pray, and cry aloud, and he shall hear my voice."

7. Close the day as it began, with family worship and secret prayer.

8. Acknowledge yourself an unprofitable servant; and depend only upon the blood and righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ for acceptance with God now, and in the day of judgment.—Golden Rule.

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 13, 1871.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable in Advance, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Campmeetings are about to be held in all of the New England States, throughout which there are many subscribers to the Crisis, who are owing for the same—some largely in arrears. We purpose to have an Agent at the several meetings to receive the dues on the paper, as also to receive the names of new subscribers. And we do earnestly request those who are owing to make a special effort to pay at these meetings. Those who do not go themselves, will please send a portion, at least, of what they owe, by some one of their friends who may be going, and thus do your duty in this matter, and help the office. At any rate, let every one owing for the Crisis for one, two, three, or more years, do something without any further delay.

AG'T.

☞ TAKE NOTICE.

Persons sending money to this office, should never put postage stamps next to a bank bill, or scrip, for the stamps stick to the bills, and one or both are spoiled, besides causing the clerks a great deal of trouble in trying to get them apart, so as to save both stamp and money.

"TO DIE IS GAIN."

There is common sense in the truth, while error is usually opposed to it. This is emphatically the case with the Bible teaching in relation to the nature of man; while some of the theological dogmas on the subject are not only opposed to common sense, but to facts, reason and philosophy. We had these thoughts as we read the following:—

"It is a universal statement universally disbelieved. I have searched the graves of twenty graveyards, and not a marble slab or shaft, plainly wrought, or chiseled in costly design, bore this immortal assertion. I have prayed above a hundred coffins, and watched the faces of the mourners anxiously; not one betrayed a knowledge of this sentence. I have carried a bright face to the funeral chamber, and spoken words of cheerful faith; and men have marveled, revealing their skepticism by their surprise. I have found it hard to persuade men that death is sunrise."

In Phil. 1: 20 Paul says: "Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death." And then says in verse 21, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Does he mean gain to himself, or to Christ?

As he has just said that "Christ shall be magnified" in his "body, whether it be by life or by death," we think he means that it would be gain to Christ, if he dies in defense of his cause.

It would also be gain to Paul, for Jesus has said, "He that loseth his life for my sake, shall find it." Matt. 10: 39. He will not find it the moment he loses it; but at the resurrection, when Christ shall come to raise those who "sleep" in him, and give them eternal life.

"WHAT DOES IT MEAN?"

That the literature of the present age is leading the people rapidly into infidelity, is a fact well known to careful observers. The progress is truly alarming. The perils of the last days are upon us; and yet the mass of professors are quietly dreaming of "a good time coming." It is high time for every true disciple of Jesus to sound an alarm. The following, from a recent London letter, gives a glimpse of the state of things:—

There is a most remarkable state of things existing now in this country in reference to certain matters which we and our forefathers considered of vital importance, not only as to our well-being in this life, but also as concerns the future. It is quite safe to say that a sort of universal skepticism, some would call it infidelity, prevails among the most intellectual and scientific men of the age. Lord Brougham was, perhaps, the pioneer in this "new departure," but he had, during his lifetime, few followers.

It is the present generation that has ventured upon bolder grounds, and you would be surprised at the number of men of eminence who, at this day, entertain and avow opinions in matters of religious belief that must be denominated, at least, heterodox. I will mention a few in order that you may comprehend my meaning. Mr. Darwin, than whom as an intellectual and scientific man no one ranks higher, openly puts his name to speculations that strike at the foundation of all that we have been taught and hitherto believed respecting our origin and destiny.

Professor Huxley, who ranks scarcely lower, is even more radical in his notions and teaching, and indorses what is known as the doctrine of Materialism, to its fullest extent. Sir William Thompson, who is now presiding over the National Congress of Social Science, and who stands almost at the head of modern philosophers, utterly repudiates the Scriptural account of our origin, and somewhat intimates his conviction that we emanated from a source even less respectable than that assigned us by Mr. Darwin.

Stripped of the technical phraseology in which their theories are couched, the opinion of these really eminent men concerning our origin resolves itself into that of poor "Topsy," viz: we never had any common author of our being—we simply "growed." That is precisely what all their speculations amount to. Accepting their theories, the "dignity of human nature," of which we have hitherto boasted so proudly, vanishes like a will-o'-the-wisp.

According to one of these philosophers, we are but improved monkeys; according to another, we trace our pedigree back to the spawn of fish; and, according to a third, our ancestors were ejected in some most incomprehensible manner, from a wandering aerolite. Good heavens! Only to think that the very elite of modern English scholars and men of science have reached such a depth of absurdity.

I might continue the list of well-known names ad infinitum. Carlyle makes no secret of his religious skepticism. Froude, the ablest historian and boldest thinker of modern times, although a clergyman of the Established Church is known to be what we would call in America an uncompromising infidel. The late Professor Gros, whose scholastic attainments were almost unparalleled, and whose personal character was in every respect sublime, steadfastly repudiated all these articles of religious belief which orthodox people deem essential to personal salvation.

Sir John Bowring, whose reputation is world-wide, does the same. In short, wherever we find a man who has advanced beyond his fellows in moral or physical science, we are almost sure to find him repudiating the doctrines that have hitherto been deemed essential to our well-being in this life and in that beyond the grave. What does this mean?

The foregoing affords clear evidence that mere learning is but poor security against infidelity. Learned men are just as likely to reject Christ and Christianity as the unlearned; indeed, we think they are more inclined to reject the Savior, because they are more unwilling to humble themselves at the foot of the cross.

FOREORDINATION.

BRO. GRANT:—I often hear it remarked, when a person dies, "Well, their time had come." They believed God ordained that they should die just such a time, and in just such a place. No matter if one man cuts another's throat, they say it was foreordained of God. They also say God made some men to be damned, and others to be saved. Will you give your views through the Crisis? I love the truth of God, but if this is truth, I do not see it. I want light on the subject.

Yours for the truth, H. L. PATTERSON.
Northport, Me.

We do not find any thing in the Bible that leads us to believe that God causes a man to get drunk, fall out of his wagon, and break his neck; or to commit suicide; or to abuse his stomach and bring on dyspepsia, thus causing premature death. He has established certain laws of health; and if we violate them, we must suffer the consequences. When a mother dressed her child with bare neck and limbs, causing it to take cold and die, it is the mother's doings that killed the child, and not the Lord's.

We do not believe that one man in ten thousand dies a natural death. The Lord is not the author of these premature deaths; only so far as they are caused by a violation of the laws of health. They might have lived longer if they had not abused their stomachs in gratifying a perverted appetite.

If God made some men on purpose to be damned why does he invite all to come to him, if he knows some can't come? Said Jesus: "Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life." If they could not come, why does Jesus throw the blame upon them, and say "Ye will not come?" We think the doctrine that God made some men on purpose to damn them is a great error, and a libel on the character of our heavenly Father and his dear Son. "Whosoever will," let him come. This is the teaching of the Scriptures. All are invited. Thank the Lord. Let us all praise him, and accept his kind invitation.

QUESTIONS.

If the Editor of the Crisis does not believe in Spiritualism as the work of men, how can he believe in the existence of spiritual demons, or devils?

2. What kind of life does the devil possess to enable him to exist six thousand years? Is he immortal?

3. Can there be a race of beings who are not classed with men or angels, and who exist independent of both men and angels, called demons?

4. Where can proof be found that demons are a race by themselves, and that their work is to influence men?

5. What are we to understand by the term "demons"?

6. By what power are demons kept in existence? Do they multiply like other races, or from whence can their origin be traced?

7. If Spiritualism is partly the work of men, why not all of it? C. W. S.

1. Because he believes in the Bible account of demons, who are represented as personal beings. These exert a spiritual influence just as a mesmerizer does upon his medium.

2. The same kind of life that enabled Methuselah to live nine hundred and sixty-nine years. We do not believe he is immortal, because he is to be destroyed. What is immortal is not susceptible of destruction. Paul says Christ will "destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." Heb. 2: 14.

3. The demons are those angels who sinned; and not a class distinct from angels, as intimitated by our inquirer. Hence we read of "the angels that sinned" (2 Peter 2: 4); and of "the angels which kept not their first estate" Jude 6.

4. The proof is abundant in the Bible.

5. The answer to No 5 may be found in No. 3.

6. The same power that keeps wicked men in existence. We have no evidence that they multiply. They were once numbered among the good angels; but since they became sinners, they are called demons.

7. For the same reason that demons are not men. Men and women are the mediums for the demons; hence co-operators. Spiritualism could not exist without this co-operation. Men cannot do all that the demons can; and the demons cannot perform all their works without the aid of men; hence it takes the combined agency of men and demons to carry forward Spiritualism.

SEVENTY WEEKS.

Is not the one week of Daniel 9: 27 included in the seventy weeks of verse 24? What authority have we for making seventy-one weeks in all, when the angel expressly states that "Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city?"

J. M. TOZIER.

We think the seventy weeks, the sixty-nine, the sixty-two, and the one, are all distinct periods, each having a different commencement and termination. We believe the sixty-nine weeks begin with the commandment of Cyrus to rebuild Jerusalem, 488 B. C. and end at the birth of Christ B. C. 5; or, in other words, that they begin 483 years before the true A. D. 1, and end at the true date of Christ's birth.

We believe the seventy weeks begin with the "pushing" of the ram, as described in the 8th of Daniel, 426 B. C., and end A. D. 65 at the beginning of the Roman war against Jerusalem. We believe the "one week" begins at the end of the seventy, and runs to the close of the war, A. D. 72.

We believe the sixty-two weeks commenced at the time the Jews finished the building of the wall, 406 B. C., and ended near the crucifixion of Christ.

GEOLOGY OF THE BIBLE.—A Bro. wishes to know if we can direct him to any work which shows the earth was made in six literal days of twenty-four hours each; and whether there are any geological facts to show to the contrary. We would refer him to "Geognosy," by David N. Lord, who is one of the ablest writers in America. Also a work by Hiram Chase, entitled "Cosmogony and Geology." These works are rare, and should be reprinted. We believe most firmly that there are no geological facts which prove the earth was not made in six literal days of twenty-four hours each. There have been many geological speculations, based on suppositions, which have been arrayed against the Mosaic account of creation; but when the facts appeared, they have stepped forth in defense of the writings of Moses, showing that geology affords no reliable evidence that the earth was not made in six literal days.

"BURY THEIR DEAD."

I would like to know what Christ meant when he said to the young man, "Follow me, and let the dead bury their dead." Matt. 8: 22.

STARKS OLMSTEAD.

We understand Jesus was speaking of two classes of dead persons; one literally dead physically; and the other literally dead to righteousness. The latter was alive physically, so that he could bury the one who had lost his natural life.

FRUITS OF SPIRITUALISM.

There are many noble-minded men and women among the Spiritualists, who refuse to give themselves up fully to the teachings of the demoniacal spirits, or to be led into all their wickedness; while there are others who submit without reserve to be directed by the demons. We give below a specimen of the latter class, taken from the Chicago Daily Republican, Aug. 28th, 1871. We withhold some of the most blasphemous talk, because it is so horrid. The following circular has been freely distributed in Chicago:—

"SPIRITUALISM.

Drs. S. L. McFadden and wife, magnetic physicians, spiritual test mediums, business clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 348 West Madison St., Chicago (corner of May), up stairs. They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present, and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc.

They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law to themselves, to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors, and preachers. All public mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The contradictions of the Bible, lying spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases and private communications, from eight A. M. to five P. M. Circles each evening, Sundays not excepted. . . . .

The Doctor and his wife claim to be Spiritualists upon the very highest plane possible to that belief. His house is full of boarders, men and women who come to be treated for various real or fancied disorders after his peculiar methods. His system is what is called magnetic, and the two claim to be able to exert the healing powers in various ways. This is done by making passes about the head, face, shoulders, and breast of the person, the motions resembling those of an Indian Pow-wow making incantations over a sick man of his tribe. There are also baths, which are rather for show than use, the general appearance of the boarders and disciples being such as to lead the observer to infer that their horror of cold water is almost a hydrophobic passion.

But the curative agent most relied upon—and we approach the subject with reluctance—is carnal intercourse. It is considered by these fanatics as an excellent remedy in most diseases, and as sovereign in many. All the disciples of the great doctor possess the magnetic power of healing in this manner in a greater or less degree, but none to the almost miraculous extent to which it is inherent in McFadden himself. Next to McFadden in the scale of medicinal instrumentalities comes his wife. The number of patients needing the healing assistance of the illustrious physician is such that he finds it necessary to repeat his peculiar treatment several times a day. . . . Each one possesses the healing power in proportion to the amount of animal magnetism which is self-developed. This constitutes the imaginary affinity, which results in intimate association and cohabitation. The common phrase in this horrible society of socialists is, 'Come and see me, and I will do you good.' Nearly all of the community are persons who have separated from their spouses. Nothing like marriage is recognized as in the slightest degree binding, and even continued cohabitation of the same couple is not allowed. This is supposed to interrupt the magnetic currents, and diminish the healing power. So the poor wretches who profess to think they are acting on the higher spiritualistic plane of divine love, are continually seeking affinities, which last only for a day or two, then separating, and repeating the same experience in other couches, and in other pairs. First, circles are formed, in which all are harmonized and passionally excited, then the circles—which are continually forming all the day and all the evening—break up, all seek their affinities, and the putative medical institute becomes worse than any brothel."

When speaking of his wife, McFadden said (pointing to her),

"There is my wife. She is not my wife any more than she is another man's. She is not my wife any more than these other women are my wife. She is just as much the wife of these other men as she is mine."

The days of ancient Sodom are returning. The demons are seeking to lead men and women as far from Christ and Christianity as possible. Spiritualism is the crowning delusion—the chief over all others in the world.

DOWN SOUTH.

Doubtless the readers of the Crisis have often wondered why nothing has been heard about Dr. Bowman,* of South Carolina, since I left the South last winter. I had kept track of him, but felt like holding my peace through the paper till matters should finally culminate. Now I am at liberty to speak a word. The truth was like fire shut up in his bones, and it must find vent; finally, as a last resort, in harmony with the rules of the Southern M. E. Discipline, Bro. Bowman has been suspended by a committee of Presiding Elders, on the following charge and specifications:

CHARGE.—Holding and disseminating doctrines which are contrary to our recognized standards of doctrine.

Specification 1. Holding and teaching that the soul of man is unconscious from death to the resurrection.

Specification 2. Holding and teaching the annihilation of the wicked."

Of course Bro. Bowman had no chance for a defense before the Conference, as he was not accused of holding unscriptural views, but merely views "contrary to our recognized standards of doctrine." We presume they dared not meet him on a Bible issue. The result was, Bro. Bowman sent in his resignation, and appeals to us for membership in our body, and says, "Hereafter regard me as one of you." Having been a member of the Methodist Ministerial Conference in S. C. for over thirty-eight years, and having been stationed in every quarter of the State, we see the hand of God in this opening for the spread of truth. Certainly the readers of the Crisis will help me rejoice in this turning of a new minister into the gospel field.

W. S.

* See last Crisis.—ED.

"IN THEE SHALL ALL NATIONS BE BLESSED."

How are all nations to be blessed in Abraham? Certainly not by becoming blood relatives to him, and thereby being entitled to blessings promised to his fleshly posterity; but this promised blessing is attainable only on the principle of faith; for Paul says, in speaking about this promised blessing to all nations, "So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham" (Gal. 3: 9); "that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel" (Eph. 3: 6); that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." Gal. 3: 14.

Thus this blessing of Abraham on "all nations," is due only on the principle of faith, so making its reception conditional, and has its beginning in converting Gentiles into "fellow heirs," and will be consummated when these "heirs" become possessors. The "great multitude" will be gathered out of "all nations," and thus all nations will share in the blessing—but not all in all nations, for that would obliterate the principle of faith, the only principle by which Gentiles can be made "fellow heirs" in this life, and joint possessors in the future life, for "all men have not faith," and God will never compel men to have faith, for that would be a repudiation of the gospel economy. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." This blessing is not compulsive, but conditional.

W. S.

CAUGHT IN THEIR OWN TRAP.—The command to the priest to "enter not" the Holy of Holies "lest he die," recorded in Lev. 16: 2, of the Catholic version, is accompanied by the following foot-note: "No one but the high-priest, and he but once a year, could enter into the sanctuary; to signify that no one could enter into the sanctuary of heaven, till Christ our High Priest opened it by his passion." If this is really a prohibition against entering heaven before the death of Christ, it just as strongly proves there can be no entrance till his return; for the seventeenth verse of the same chapter is thus translated: "Let no man be in the tabernacle when the high priest goeth into the sanctuary . . . . until he come out." So instead of merely teaching that no one could enter heaven until Christ our High Priest entered it, the proof is just as strong that no one can enter till Christ shall "come out," or return from heaven.

Thus this prohibition against entering heaven before the death of Christ, involves the necessity of an underground home for departed souls of saints till the death of Christ, as Catholics contend that an underworld of souls must as really exist to-day as ever, for Christ has not yet "come out" of heaven, and consequently the underground spirit-men, if there ever were any such, have not yet emigrated to heaven, notwithstanding the statement in the Apocryphal Book of Nicodemus, written "towards the close of the third century," that Christ's soul went down to an underground kingdom of souls, and then "ascended from hell, and all the saints of God followed him"; or, as expressed in a Catholic note on Ps. 67: 19, "Led captivity captive; carrying away with thee to heaven those who before had been the captives of Satan." Let it be remembered that the church received the theory of an underground kingdom long before a sky kingdom was dreamed of either by Jews or Christians, having received this view, together with the theory of spirit-men, from the brethren.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

AN OPEN DOOR.

O. R. FASSETT.

I have just preached in three Presbyterian churches the word of life and gospel of the kingdom. The Presbyterian churches of Lewiston, Youngstown, and Lockport, N. Y., have always been open to me whenever I have journeyed back and forth, through the influence of christian friends there, both in and out of the church; especially through the effort of Bro. Gray, who is an old and permanent friend, and whose family are always glad to see me. We had this time a better hearing than ever. At Youngstown, the church has heretofore been closed against Advent preachers; but learning that Dr. Wisner, of Lockport, had opened his church to me, they were ready to admit me to occupy the pulpit for an evening. We had a large gathering of the people, though in the midst of a busy season of the year, short evenings, and on a week-day.

This region was the field of my first efforts at preaching, and a missionary life; consequently old friends came in from long distances, and the season was a profitable one. Three Presbyterian clergymen were present to hear me,—the pastor of the church, and two of his visiting brethren. This town is the place of residence of Bro. and Sr. Tryon, whose daughter died at Minneapolis a few months since, and whose obituary I gave in the Crisis. She was the wife of Bro. Eugene Sage, of Suspension Bridge, N. Y. That obituary notice is still demanded by the community. All the papers that have been forwarded, and all that could be obtained at the office, have been used. They have been scattered to the ends of the earth. A lady reading it begged one torn and soiled, and sent it to her daughter to the Gulf of Mexico. It is intended by the friends to have it reprinted on a sheet for the purpose of framing it, and giving to all who desire to have it. I stood by the side of the three graves of those departed daughters of Bro. Tryon, whose names and ages are as follows:—Julia, aged twenty-nine; Adelia, consort of Eugene Sage, aged twenty-eight; Amelia, aged twenty-five. On the tomb-stone of Adelia is that beautiful sentence which once fell from her own lips: "There is no love so great, no love so pure, no love so sweet, no love so true, as our Savior's." The three are resting in hope. Many in this section have fallen asleep since I first preached the word here. Serjeant Powley, of the Fort, has departed this life. He was an intelligent and fine-looking man, who was then unconverted. One day he came to our meeting appointed for prayer, to our surprise, after having attended our lectures. He burst into tears and sobs aloud, as soon as he entered the door. His conversion was a thorough one. I called upon his widow, whom I found in deep affliction under her loss.

Dr. Wisner's church, at Lockport, was opened to me through the christian kindness and courtesy of himself as the pastor. Nearly two years since I saw him, and he then gave promise that I should have his church the next time I visited Lockport. Dr. Wisner was formerly my pastor, and at the time I embraced the Advent faith in this city, over a quarter of a century ago. He gave notice from his pulpit that "Eld. Fassett will preach on Friday evening, in this house. He is an old acquaintance, and formerly a member of this church. He will say nothing, I think, to injure you, and may say something which may do you good." He regretted not being able to be present, as he had to be absent in the eastern part of the State over the Sabbath. A large, promiscuous assembly was gathered, filling nearly the whole body of his vast church. Judges, lawyers, and doctors, together with all classes of citizens, were in attendance. Surely, must not the community begin to think that this work is of God, and cannot be overthrown?

Twenty-five and more years have passed away since I embraced the faith in this city; when it was thought I had become deranged, or led away into error. And now, in sound mind, I appear preaching to such an audience, who heard with the greatest apparent interest.

The friends in Lockport (Adventists) gathered around at the close of the service, and we had a hearty salutation, while they aided me on my journey after a godly sort. The Lord be praised for his goodness to me in putting me into the ministry, and setting before me an "open door," that I may "make manifest the savor of the knowledge of God in every place, uncorruptedly and in sincerity."

OUR TOUR WEST.

I. C. WELLCOME.

After greeting our parents and eldest brother's family, we went by request to Lincoln, to spend the Fourth of July with the Swedes, in their Sunday school association. We were introduced to Eld. Peters, the Swedish Baptist minister, who is doing much for his people. He has a church of forty members, and a good Sunday school. He looks for the Lord to come soon. My two preaching brothers, and Dr. J. W. B. Wellcome were also present, and took part in the services, which were held in a beautiful oak grove. There I met two Baptist ministers, of Garden City. Eld. Rookwood, the pastor, invited my younger brother and myself to supply his desk the next Sunday. My brother resigned his privilege, and I gladly accepted the opportunity to preach the word to that people. July 5th, I preached to full and attentive congregations. Three Baptist ministers were present, forenoon and evening. Our themes were the groaning creation, the redemption, and the kingdom of God.

We visited Shelbyville, and preached one evening, in company with Brn. M. and S. C. Wellcome, calling on our only sister and family, whom I had not seen for twenty-seven years. The Lord has been good to us in preserving us alive so many years. A father, mother, five sons and one daughter, met after a separation of so many years. The father is eighty-one, and the youngest child thirty-seven years of age. Not a death has occurred in our father's family in over fifty years. Better still, though brought up under the doctrine of ultra Universalism, surrounded with intemperance, and shut out from christian society in our early days, yet, all have been converted to Christ, and entertain the blessed hope of eternal life at Jesus' coming. This is largely due, under God, to the influence and precepts of a good and devoted mother, who, although she dared not then profess to be a christian, taught her children right principles, and has lived to see them all converted. Three of them are ministers of the gospel, and another of them an eminent and useful physician. While at this place we arranged for a grove meeting on the Sunday following.

We next went to Manyaska, Martin Co., some two hundred miles west of the Mississippi river, on the broad, open prairie, wholly free from timber, and is being rapidly settled. Here we preached one evening to an attentive company, who gathered to hear, on the importance of the word of the Lord. Returning to Shelbyville, we held a grove meeting on the banks of the Blue Earth river, under the stately cotton-wood, black-walnut, elm, and maple trees. It is a beautiful place. The congregation was said to be the largest ever gathered in that town. They listened to the word with great attention. There are a few faithful brethren in that town, who have received the word under the labors of Elds S. C. and M. Wellcome. My brother, M. Wellcome, baptized three happy believers at the close of preaching service.

We next visited our brother, Dr. J. W. B. Wellcome, at New Ulm, Brown Co. This is a German City, on the Minnesota river, with a population of some two thousand. It was surrounded by Indians during the Indian troubles in 1862. Some five hundred of its inhabitants were slaughtered, and the town burned. It is a beautiful site for a city, and is now being rapidly built up, mostly by Germans; but will soon be filled with Americans. We spent several days in this county, visiting in company with our brothers. There were several fine and intelligent families of various nationalities; some of deep piety, and some who are infidels. We saw several families, a part of whose members were killed by the Indians. Visited the Turners' Hall, a large and costly temple, built by the German infidels, called "Turners." Attended the German Methodist church Sunday; and, although we could not understand the language, we were convinced by the plain unadorned house, and the simple attire and manners of the people, that they possess a much deeper piety than the American churches. Though wealthy, they are not proud. Their minister, Eld. F. Inland, is an able speaker, and quite free from bigotry. We enjoyed pleasant interviews with him, and accepted his invitation to hold an English service in his church in the evening. Mrs. W. preached to those who could understand English, and we spoke to them on the blessed hope set before us, and scattered some tracts among the people.

Although there is much lager beer drank, and a large infidel element here, it appears to be a very quiet city, and of much better morals than most American cities.

From Sr. M. P. Ordway.

BRO. GRANT:—Feeling that God has accepted me as his child, and adopted me into his family, and having a sincere desire to do all I can to promote the interest of his kingdom, which I believe is soon to be established under the whole heavens, I would like to add my testimony with the many others through the Crisis, which comes to me each week to comfort my heart with its cheering news, and its enlivening letters from dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad. Although it is but a short time since I embraced this blessed hope of Jesus' soon coming, also the Bible truth that man has not yet obtained immortality, and am also unknown to most of the readers of the Crisis, yet I feel that we are all children of one family, looking forward to that same happy day when Jesus will come to take his weary ones home. Then shall we know and be known.

Oh, what a glorious thought that we are heirs with Christ to an inheritance incorruptible, that will never fade away; heirs with that sinless, spotless Son of God. We, who are so liable to err every day of our lives, can this be true? Yes, it is indeed. If we can claim the promise, and live forever with him on the new earth. Many of us are too poor to possess a foot of land on this old earth, and have no home we can call our own; but, thank God, we are rich in faith, for our hope reaches beyond this transient and fleeting life; beyond this old, crumbling earth, which to-day is tottering and reeling, intoxicated by the terrible wickedness with which it is filled. Thanks be to God, our King is soon coming to establish a home, where all shall be equal. None who reach that blessed place will ever be homeless again, but will live on in the sunshine of God's never-failing love, through the boundless ages of eternity. This hope raises us far above the vanities of this life, and we can with joy grasp every new token of our Savior's advent, knowing, if we are faithful a little longer, our trials will be ended, our sorrows all gone, and our long-cherished expectations realized—a crown of life and a home with Jesus forever.

Concord, N. H.

From Bro. D. K. Barrett, Jr.

BRO. GRANT:—In 1867, when you held a tent-meeting in Washington, D. C., I went to hear you preach. I was then fifteen years old, and was striving to serve Christ, and was a member of the Methodist church. I liked your preaching very much. You made some remark which led my father to say he guessed you did not believe in the immortality of the soul; to which I replied, "I guess he does, for he preaches from the Bible." Up to this time, I do not know that I ever had thought of, or questioned the truth of any doctrine in which I had been brought up. After that, your preaching had a new interest, and when you took your leave of that place, I shook hands with you, and asked the privilege of writing to you, which I have not done till now. We returned to Vermont soon after your meeting closed. We got some of your tracts and papers.

Since the meetings, I have striven to know what is the truth, feeling that there is a wide difference between being mortal and immortal; suffering eternally and eternal death. I feel now thoroughly convinced your view of man's nature, the state of the dead, and destiny of the wicked, is the Bible view; also, that Christ's second coming is near at hand, which is a happy thought, but about which I hear but little. I wish to serve Christ with all I have or am, making it the chief thing in life, all other things being subordinate and auxiliary; also striving to obey all the commands of Christ. I am in a very trying position at the present time, which is this: after my return from Washington, I united with the Congregationalist church, the church with which my parents have long been connected. I hesitated some time about it, on account of the doubts that had arisen respecting some doctrines I knew were held by the church. After examining the articles of faith, and finding nothing to which I could not assent, I united.

Now within a short time, I have been examining the subject of baptism, and am convinced that sprinkling, or pouring, either infants or adults, in no way answers to the command of Christ, and therefore cannot longer remain a consistent member. There is a Baptist church in town, but I have become so confirmed in certain doctrines, that I cannot make up my mind to unite with them, knowing, as I do, that if I was accepted, I should receive no sympathy whatever from the brethren, as they consider those things which you preach enormous errors. My parents, though they think somewhat favorably of these things, yet my father is bitterly opposed to immersion; and all my other relatives despise the "dead sleepers," as some of them denominate those who believe as I do; besides, most of them are opposed to immersion. Therefore, however I act, I must expect the disapproval of all but Christ.

Dear Bro., obey Jesus, and all will be well.—ED.

From Sr. C. Wire.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel grateful to God, and you, that you send me the Crisis to read, and I am determined, by his grace, to profit thereby. Silver and gold I have none, and not even scrip. I know that money is needed to carry on this work, and it shall be my delight to give something when I have it to give. I am very much interested in reading the sounding of the trumpets, by Dr. J. A. Seiss, of Phila. He seems to take altogether a different view of this subject from most commentators. It seems so simple and plain to understand, that it carries the conviction of truth directly to the mind and heart. This is what we need—something so simple and plain that the common people can grasp the idea gladly. They heard Jesus gladly, and so they will his true servants, who try to speak in simplicity, so that the poor may have the gospel preached to them as it is in Jesus, and as Jesus would preach to them were he here upon earth. But, thank God, the pure Spirit of Jesus Christ in his true ones will answer the same purpose now, for it was expedient for him to go away, that the Comforter might come, even the Spirit of truth, which will guide us into all truth, if we will consent.

I am also very much interested in the rest of the reading in the Crisis, and feel heartily to bid you God speed in the work you and the brethren and sisters are doing for him. Truth is mighty, and must prevail. The word of God can never fail. I would say to every one—

Come, build upon the solid rock,
  Till finished to the very top;
Let truth all exigences meet;
  The superstructure is complete.

Then blow, ye winds, and beat, ye waves;
  In vain your furious strength is spent;
Sure footing is beneath the whole;
  'Tis God Almighty; rest content.

Yes, I will build on the corner-stone every day, and go forward trusting God in all danger.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. MARY A. HARDY, Groveland, Mass., writes:—"I am still looking for the 'blessed hope,' and agreeing with the sentiments promulgated in the Crisis. I believe our hope will soon be realized, the kingdom established, and the saints rewarded. My health is such that I am not permitted to attend campmeetings, which would be feasts of delight to my soul; but nevertheless, the joy of the Lord is my strength, at home or in places of worship, by night or by day. All praise to his dear name, that in 'the multitude of my thoughts within me, his comforts delight my soul.' His ear has been opened to my prayer, and he has sent a few more of the people, who are looking for the appearing of their Lord, to dwell in our little community, and inclined our hearts to meet together once a week to mingle our voices in song, and prayer, and thanksgiving; and to exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching. Our brethren at Haverhill, Mass., some two or three miles from us, are being blessed in their efforts to sustain preaching."

SR. IRENE LOVELAND writes from East Glastenbury, Ct.:—"I have been a reader of the Crisis for three years, and can recommend it to all, for I feel that it has helped me to love my Bible, and to love my Savior more and more. I lend it to all who are willing to read it. There are a few here who are willing to read and think for themselves. We have no preaching on the coming of Christ, or the resurrection, except the Bible. That is a preacher that will stand as a witness forever. Christ's coming and the resurrection are glorious and precious doctrines to me. I am looking forward to that resurrection morn, and the appearing of our Lord, who, if we have been faithful, will change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body; and without this, I feel there is no hope. I believe we are living in the last days, and perhaps nearer the end than some think. Then how important it is that we should watch and pray, that we may have this faith that works by love and purifies the heart; that we may be consistent in all things. To do this, we need the assistance of the Holy Spirit every moment."

BRO. IRA SLOCUM writes from Knoxville, Pa.:—"Having become acquainted with the 'blessed hope' by the way of Eld. Butler, and some papers addressed to him, I have become fully in favor of the same. I labored with him until quite a little church was established, from which I received an ordination. About three years ago I commenced meetings in my neighborhood, and was in good exercise for about ten months. I then became discouraged, and turned my attention to farming until about three months ago, when I commenced again near the same place, and the good Lord is bearing testimony to the truth by converting souls. We now number some forty or forty-five in all. I have had no minister to assist me excepting Eld. Butler. He has preached twice or three times. We are all in low circumstances in this world's goods. I often think of sending for some tracts and the 'Crisis,' but cannot do it now."

BRO. J. G. HOOK writes:—"God is with us in our labors in Philadelphia. Last Tuesday evening we crossed the Delaware, and baptized five precious souls. Last evening twelve or thirteen came to the anxious seat, seeking pardon of God. Several of them left rejoicing in Christ. We had a very solemn time last evening. Many, I trust, were convicted, and will be converted to God and the truth. The interest demands afternoon meetings now, and we have them every day except Saturdays. Brethren of the various denominations assist us and take part in the work of the Lord. Many see they have the form, while they are destitute of the saving grace or power, and are seeking to be perfect in love. Pray for us."

BRO. F. BURR writes from Chicago:—"The church here looking for the return of the Master are holding on to the faith once delivered to the saints, and God is enlarging their borders. Last Sabbath six persons united with us in church covenant, making eighteen in all since June 1st. We have some of the best prayer and conference meetings I ever attended, and the unity and love among the members is abounding. Strangers are becoming interested in the glorious themes of life in Christ and the second advent of the Messiah, and our congregations are full and attentive. To God be all the praise. Let all the brethren pray for us, that we may be a power for good in this great and wicked city."

SR. MARTHA BEDELL writes:—"Praise the Lord. O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever. What are we doing for Jesus? Are we watching and praying for him to come, or are we denying him, and saying in our hearts, 'My Lord delayeth his coming'? The church here seems to be asleep. They have a form of godliness, but are denying the power. There are only a few people here who love to read the Crisis. It is the best paper I ever read. I have often wished that I could live where I could hear the truth preached. Oh, that I might see Jesus coming to-day in the clouds. Every true christian will love his appearing. My prayer is, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

Obituaries.

DOUGLASS. Died in Lowell, Mass., July 18th, 1871, of a very distressing disease, Bro. Alonzo Douglass, aged twenty-six years.

Bro. Douglass sought for a pardon of his sins through the atoning blood of Jesus early in life, and became a devoted, exemplary christian. He heard the sweet tidings of his Redeemer's speedy return, and joyfully looked for his coming with the confident expectation of receiving immortality at that day. His last expiring utterances expressed unfailing christian hope, and full assurance of eternal salvation. The wave of death swept him from the embrace of a loving christian wife and a sweet infant son. May God heal the wounded heart of the lonely praying widow, and safely protect the fatherless innocent. J. COUCH.

LICHTENTHALER. Died, May 18th, 1871, at Lawrence, Pa., after an illness of one week, Mrs. Mary, wife of Jacob Lichtenthaler, aged fifty-nine years and seven months.

Also, May 24th, after an illness of four days, her husband, Jacob Lichtenthaler, aged seventy years and seven days.

The removal of this godly pair so suddenly is an affliction most deeply felt, not only in their own household, but in the community where they had resided thirty-six years. In them the poor and sad and wandering had ever found friends, and from them ever obtained the supplies and cheer and counsel that they needed.

They were among the first of God's dear people who became interested in the study of the prophecies; and in 1843 they were among those who lifted up their heads and rejoiced, believing that the day of their redemption was drawing nigh. And when the time had passed, and the morning not yet dawned, still they held on to the promises of their God, and, with those who "love his appearing," continued to search for evidences of his soon coming. Amid all the trials of faith, theirs never wavered, and they died believing that in a little while they would awake in His likeness and be satisfied. H. A. M.

BECKMAN. Died in Seabrook, N. H., Aug. 21st, William E. Beckman, aged twenty-three years.

Bro. Beckman was converted about two years since, and united with the church at Seabrook, and was much beloved for his consistent life and faithfulness in the cause of Christ; but he sleeps in Jesus, and awaits the resurrection morn.

The funeral services were held in the Chapel. Prayer by Eld. Montgomery, of the M. E. Church. Sermon by the writer, from Psalm 17: 15.

JOSEPH W. WHITE.

COOLBROTH. Died in Biddeford, Me., Aug. 13th, 1871, Charlie, infant son of George and Sarah Coolbroth, aged nine months.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

BERLIN, Sept. 6. The North German Bishops have just commenced a series of secret conferences at Fulda to consider the question of the dogma of infallibility. It has been decided at these meetings to omit the customary morning cathedral high mass. The Bishops have assembled in full force, and from the earnest manner in which they have commenced the conduct of their sittings, it is evident that they mean business.

ABATEMENT OF THE CHOLERA.

LONDON, Sept. 7. The cholera epidemic in the Baltic provinces, Prussia, begins to abate. At Konigsberg, where the disease has been most virulent, there were forty new cases and twenty-eight deaths on the 4th instant, and on the 5th seventeen new cases and fifteen deaths. There has been but one fatal case at Stettin, and at Dantzic the disease has been pronounced sporadic.

The few cases of cholera that have occurred at Paris and in this city are now said to have been of a different type from the Asiatic scourge. The anxiety which was felt at Berlin and throughout Germany is decreasing, and it is confidently hoped that the precautions taken, aided by the approach of cold weather, will stay the progress of the epidemic.

THE CATHOLIC AGITATION IN GERMANY.—All over Germany meetings are now held especially to protest against the infallibility dogma; and in Prussia the most important fact of the last week, is the suppression, announced with great beating of liberal drums, of the special division for Catholic affairs which existed in the department or ministry of worship. Some people claim that this suppression was made because the persons in the special department made too much use of their influence in the general parliament to advocate the interests of their own religion. Others say that the Prussian Government, feeling that it cannot maintain the German races united under its supremacy without giving them a common flag, hides its policy under the cover of religion, and intends to foster the idea of the creation of a German church, a unit, in the same manner that it has circulated and popularized industrial and political unity, realized within the past few years respectively by the creation of the Zollverein and the Empire. In Wurtemburg, in Saxony, in the grand duchy of Baden and in Austria, there is much discussion concerning this last move of Prussia's politicians.—Boston Journal.

DOMESTIC.

THE RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Sept. 11. Bishop Whitehouse was met at the door of Christ's Church yesterday by the warden, who accompanied him to the vestry room, where was Rev. Mr. Cheney, in his surplice bands and scarf, and stepping forward and extending his hand, said: "Good morning, Bishop." The Bishop refused to return the salutation, and said: "I cannot recognize you in any way in that garb." The Bishop then spoke to the wardens, but Warden Crane assured him that he might proceed with the ceremony wholly or partially, Cheney would assist or not, as the Bishop pleased; but Cheney must remain in the chancel, as he was rector of the parish, and no power of the Bishop or others should keep him out. Bishop—"Does the church recognize him as pastor?"

Warden—Undoubtedly.

The Bishop then read his formal protest, stating that he was excluded by force from visiting the church, and bitterly accusing the Wardens of malfeasance of office in espousing the cause of a degraded preacher against the spiritual head of the church.

Crane replied that no force was used. The Bishop was here to act, but would not be permitted to exclude Cheney. The Bishop then withdrew in his own carriage.

In Brief.

——The Prince of Wales nearly always passes incognito through Paris. He did the other day, and two years ago he walked into the British Embassy dressed like an English workingman, and announced himself in a thunderous voice at the door, "The Prince of Wales."——Newman Hall says that the churches of the United Kingdom have lost 300,000 members by intemperance during the last three years.——Pius Ninth has signed a brief regulating the mode of procedure by which, in case of his death, his successor may be elected within twenty-four hours.——France is fortifying very rapidly on the northeastern frontiers. In reality these frontiers exist no longer since the loss of Metz, but Mezieres, Laon and Langres are going to be greatly increased in strategic value.——It is rumored that the French Government is negotiating at this moment with Prince Bismarck to obtain the evacuation of Champagne, and of all French territory by the German troops before the beginning of 1872. If this succeeds there will be paid to Germany the three milliards of francs remaining to pay, on letters of exchange indorsed by the first banking houses of Europe.——A Berlin letter denies the news given by many French journals that the Prussian army in France will shortly be reduced to 50,000 men.——The Protestant Missionaries at Pekin have nearly completed their Chinese Bible, and it will shortly be printed there.——The Pope has this year sent the golden rose to the Queen of the Belgians.——M. Thiers is reported to have recently said: "I am an umbrella on which the rain has poured for forty years; a few rain drops, more or less, can do me no harm."——Hindostan has a female lecturer, Sree Rungamba Garce, who devotes her efforts to depicting the wrongs of her sex.——A Naples dispatch states that Mount Vesuvius has commenced to eject lava.——A learned Hindoo who is lecturing in England, says the vice of intemperance was unknown in India till the English introduced it there, but the young men became apt pupils, and now it is causing wide-spread disaster.——Salzburg, made famous by the Prusso-Austrian Conference, is the ancient Juravia and the present capital of the Austrian crown land of Salzburg. It is hemmed in by huge mountains.——The Mississippi is lower than it has been for many years before. Cattle now roam where a few months ago steamboats navigated.——Prince Napoleon has published a pamphlet entitled "The Truth," and addressed "To my Calumniators." He declares in it that he was a stranger to the declaration of war against Germany. He went to Italy by order of the Emperor, who tried to array Italy and Austria against Prussia. He states that he offered to share the captivity of Napoleon at Wilhelmshohe, but his offer was refused.

Religious Intelligence.

——The ancient Church of the Waldenses, while maintaining all its former organization in the fifteen parishes of its native villages, has planted missions at thirty-six stations in other parts of Italy. From twenty-five to thirty other places are from time to time visited by its agents. The Church has twenty-seven pastors, twelve evangelists, sixty teachers. The congregations number 8,335, with upwards of 2,000 communicants.——Henry Ward Beecher's forthcoming Life of Christ, is said to be theology, poetry, and biography, in about equal mixture.——Stephen H. Tyng, D. D., is now seventy-one years of age.——It is stated that one hundred and twenty-two Englishmen have expressed a desire to enter the Russian church.——There is a deep interest among the Jews in Germany in the investigation of the claims of christianity, and they are attending in crowds the preaching of the gospel in the Christian churches.——At the Hamilton campmeeting, August 29th, a young man made a tender and affecting allusion to the late Rev. Dr. Gannett, who, three weeks ago, was present at a Methodist communion service, when he mildly asked the young man if it was free. Giving the doctor an affirmative reply, he partook of the sacrament for the last time.

A Discussion.

I will hold a discussion with Eld. Chas. Rowe, of Minonk, Ills., at Streator, Lasalle Co., Ills., commencing Sept. 19th, at ten o'clock, and hold two sessions of two hours each, for three days.

QUESTION.

1st. Resolved, That the Scriptures teach that there is an intelligent, conscious entity in man, that survives the death of the body, and is conscious after the death of the body. Eld. Rowe affirms.

2nd. Resolved, That the Scriptures teach that the punishment of the wicked will end in the extinction of their conscious being. I affirm.

J. W. BURROUGHS.

Eld. Rowe is said to be a master in theology, a gentleman, and a scholar. He debated the above question once with Eld. Wm. Sheldon. Will the brethren pray that the truth may prevail? J. W. B.

Grove and Basket Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove and basket meeting three and a half miles east of Bucyrus, Crawford Co., Ohio, on Bro. M. Bacon's farm, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 14th, at 7½ o'clock, to continue over the following Sunday. Bro. Bacon has a good and commodious meeting-house in the grove, that can be used if necessary. A hearty invitation is extended to all. Come in the name of the Lord, to do and get good, and help sustain the blessed truth as it is in Jesus. J. M. JUDSON.

Notice.

The Maine Western Quarterly Conference will be holden at Mexico Corner, where Bro. A. Abbott may arrange, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 14th, and continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in the vicinity and elsewhere are invited. Brn. Gay, Haggett, Abbott, and others, are expected to preach the word. The meeting will be free for all who love the Lord in sincerity to come and worship and labor with us for the perishing. JESSE GAY, Pres.
A. W. TAYLOR, Sec.

P. S.—Dr. Abbott at the place will direct brethren from abroad where they can find homes during the meeting. A. W. T.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting in Woodhull Village, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 15th, to continue over the Sunday following, for the purpose of organizing a conference in Northern Pa. and Southern New York. We hope all interested in the cause we represent will be sure and come. Those coming by rail, will leave the cars at Addison, from whence a daily stage runs direct to Woodhull, leaving Addison at one o'clock P. M.

For the brethren, J. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will hold its next session at the Town House in Rome, commencing at four o'clock P. M., Sept. 21st, and continuing over the next Lord's day. A general invitation is given, and provision will be made for all. It is expected that E. M. Haggett, Jesse Gay, Austin Taylor, Mrs. Katie Taylor, and others, will be present to preach the word.

D. W. A. KNIGHT, Secretary.

Notice.

The Lord willing, we will commence a protracted meeting in the New State meeting-house, in Savoy, Mass., Friday evening, Sept. 15th. Let all the friends of Jesus in the surrounding country rally once more in the name of the Lord, and try to save the perishing. G. L. TEEPLE.

For Sale.

I offer for sale my tent, built last year at Alton Bay camp-ground, situated on the hill, at the right as you go from the depot, having a view of the bay and depot, very pleasantly situated, and convenient size, 12 x 16, with good chamber, furnished with stove, two bedsteads, and some furniture. Price seventy-five dollars.

O. D. EASTMAN, Landaff, N. H.

Notice.

The Maine S. A. C. Conference will be held in the Union Chapel, South Windham, Me., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 10th, at two o'clock P. M., and hold as long as thought proper. It is thought best to hold the Ministerial School in connection with this conference. C. GOUD, President.

Notice.

There will be a quarterly conference and protracted meeting in West Gardiner (Spear's Corner), commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 28th, and hold over Sunday. A general invitation is given to all. We hope our preaching brethren will make arrangements to attend this meeting.

In behalf of the church, H. B. SEVEY.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting at Young Hickory, Troupsburg, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 29th, to continue over Sunday. Bro. J. W. Taylor and others are expected to preach the word. We hope there will be a general attendance at this meeting.

For the brethren, E. H. EGGLESTON.

Notice.

The Advent Quarterly Conference of Nova Scotia will be held at Bear Point, Shelburn Co., N. S., commencing Saturday, Oct. 14th. A general invitation is extended to all. Come, brethren, praying that the Lord may direct us in all our work, and make the conference a blessing to his cause.

WM. HALLIAY.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Eastern District of Wisconsin will be held at Merrimack, Sauk Co., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 22nd, 1871, and hold over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general rally of ministers and members, not only to enjoy the feast, but to labor for the perishing. Friends from the adjoining districts are also cordially invited to meet with us.

GEO. THOMSON.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a meeting in Mr. C. Moulton's grove, in Buxton Centre, Me., Sunday, Sept. 24th. Some faithful men of God are expected to be present to preach the gospel. All are invited. Come and help us. E. S. MOULTON.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Society of Suncook, N. H., have hired the Odd Fellow's Hall to hold meetings in on the Sabbath, and if any of God's servants feel like coming to preach the word, the door is open to such. Please give notice of your appointments, if convenient, in the "Crisis."

THOMAS B. DUSTIN.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

NEW TRACTS.

WHO ARE SADDUCEES? OR, TRUTH VINDICATED. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By GEO. THOMSON.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A COLPORTEUR'S NOTES, by John D. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. AG'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. LIFE AND DEATH THEOLOGY: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. IMMATERIALISM: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. DEATH AND THE DEAD, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. THE COMING JUDGMENT: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

"THIEF ON THE CROSS."

BY ELDER GEORGE THOMSON.

A New Tract.

One of the best ever published on the above subject. Just the thing to scatter widely. Price, 3 cts. single; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail. AG'T.

"THE MIDNIGHT CRY."

This is the title of a pamphlet of one hundred pages, presenting evidences for the coming of the Lord in 1873. By Nelson H. Barber. Price 25 cents per copy; $1.80 per dozen. For sale at this office, and by D. T. Cooper, 72 Mount Hope Avenue, Rochester, N. Y. AG'T.

JUST PUBLISHED.

By the Advent Christian Publication Society, a new Tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending: Prophecy and Chronology converging to one Grand Culmination." By Bro. L. T. Cunningham. 52 pp. Price, 8 cents per copy. Postage, 2 cts. 75 cts. per dozen. $5.00 per one hundred. AG'T.

NEW TRACTS BY S. S. BREWER.

EVANGELS OF THE COMING ONE. Price by mail, 10 cts. single copy; per dozen, 70 cts.; per hundred by express, $5.00.

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY. This is a work on the man of sin, as viewed in the light of historic testimony. Price by mail, single copy, 5 cts.; postage 2 cts.; 50 cts. per dozen; $3.00 per hundred.

"TALKS ABOUT PEOPLE'S STOMACHS,"

Is the title of a new work just issued by Dr. Dio Lewis, of Boston.

"Like all of his works, it is brimful of common sense. We do not know of another writer on matters pertaining to health, who says so many good things as Dr. Lewis."—Crisis of Dec. 7th.

"HEALTH BY GOOD LIVING."

A VALUABLE WORK, BY W. W. HALL, M. D.

These two works are for sale at this office, and will be sent by mail, on receipt of publisher's price. $1.50 each. AG'T.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

By Elder James H. Whitmore. Published by the Western Advent Christian Association.

This little volume of three hundred pages is a valuable contribution to the literature of the subject on which it treats, and is worthy of a wide circulation, not only among those who hold to the views advocated therein, but among others who have not given them due thought and investigation.

Price, single copy, postpaid, $1.00. Six copies, by mail, $5.00; by express, $4.20.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

236 pages. Price by mail, $1.20.

The above works for sale at this office.

'Historic Echoes of the Voice of God.'

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. [illegible]

ALTON BAY.

M. S. HORNE.

Again, dear Christian friends, we've met
Within this hallowed grove;
Again we clasp in union sweet
The hands of those we love.

We've come to labor for the Lord,
To lead the wanderer home,
To bid the sinner trust the word,
And to the Savior come.

Yes, work for Jesus; let the cry
Ring through this sacred grove;
The Savior's coming draweth nigh,
Bright day of heavenly love.

All through these consecrated hours
We'll do our Master's will,
Assisted by the heavenly power,
Our mission to fulfill.

How dear must be this lovely place,
To them 'tis holy ground,
Who, seeking for redeeming grace,
Here the dear Savior found.

And here have happy converts stood
In Winnepiseogee's wave,
Baptized within its crystal flood,
Emblem of Jesus' grave.

Many dear ones are sleeping now,
Who were here one year ago;
We know they rest in Jesus' care,
But oh, we miss them so!

And there are those who cannot come,
Who lie on beds of pain;
Praying for that glorious morn
When Christ will come again.

Now as the hour draws near to leave
The place we love so well,
With saddened hearts we linger still,
So loth to say farewell.

But should another year roll round,
And Jesus not appear,
Oh, who of this beloved band
Again will gather here?

INFANT SALVATION.—No. 2.

G. W. STETSON.

We said in our former article that we could see no way for infants to be saved, if conversion was the new birth; but we did not believe that either conversion or baptism constituted the second birth. In John 3: 5, "born of water and of the Spirit" is manifestly synonymous with its equivalent in verse 6—"That which is born of the flesh [in the aqueous birth] is flesh" [and this is the first or natural birth]; but "that which is born of the Spirit is spirit," and this is the second or new birth, or being "born again." Of the first, we have a like form of expression in Num. 24: 7, where it is said of Jacob's natural descendants, "He shall pour the water out of his buckets, and his seed shall be in many waters." In Jer. 51: 13, Rev. 17: 1, and 15, "waters" are again employed to represent men in their natural or flesh state. Peter, in his second letter, chap. 3: 5, refers to the same principle, when he says that water was an agent employed in the primary creation of the material world, and it is equally true of man's perpetuation upon the earth, known as a physiological fact; hence the force and propriety of our Savior in using it in conversing with Nicodemus; thus avoiding tautology.

Of the second, also, we have a most glorious sample, and more than once referred to and specifically pointed out as the second birth, in the case of our Savior. He offers to us in his own person an exemplification of what he taught Nicodemus. In his own person he has been the subject of the first and second births. In the first, he was the word of God made flesh, when in the fulness of the time he was born of a woman, born of the flesh, and "that which is born of the flesh is flesh," and in it he was also put to death. But he was never converted. Do you say, Of course not, he never needed it? Well, we agree. But are you prepared to say, also, that he never was "born again"? Perhaps not. In Col. 1: 18, Paul says he was, and that he was "the beginning, the first born from the dead." But you may say, That was not the "new birth." I would like to know why; it certainly was not the old birth, of which Nicodemus inquired in verse 4. Most assuredly that was the new birth, for then was Jesus born anew, or again, and was the Son of what, or whomsoever, brought him forth, which Peter and Paul testify was the Spirit of God, or God. Acts 3: 15, 4: 10, 10: 40, 13: 30, Rom. 4: 24, and 8: 11. Hence he was "born of the Spirit," and was, by being "born again," the Son of God; and "that which is born of the Spirit is spirit."

In 1 Cor. 15: 23, Paul declares that Christ is the (a) first fruit. But of what, and from what? Other scriptures show that he is a first fruit of the Spirit, produced or born from the dead; and then he proceeds to say that the next fruit of the Spirit will be those who are Christ's, who are to be made alive, or born of the Spirit from the dead, at his coming. Now, in order to prove that this is just what Paul is here teaching, and that this constitutes the new birth, and is by the Bible denominated a birth, I will quote from the Bible a parallel passage, bearing upon this point; and allow me to write plainly, just as plainly as it is in the Bible; for this is an important matter that we have under consideration; something more than a theory, more than a theology; it is a Bible fact, a God-given declaration.

Turn if you please to Isa. 66: 7. The prophet has just been telling us, in chap. 65, what God is about to do to Jerusalem; that one which Paul in Gal. 4: 26 says "is the mother of us all"; i. e., God's children. Now in 65: 7, Isaiah says: "Before she [Jerusalem above, the free-woman) travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a MAN CHILD." All concede that this refers to Christ, and he (In John 16: 19–22) applies this figure to himself. Passing over the inquiry in Isa. 66: 8, let us find the solution in verse 9, filling out the ellipsis in fully expressed words, thus: "Shall I bring to the birth [Christ, "the man child," the "first fruit," the "first born," the "head of the body"], and not cause to bring forth [the body of Christ, the church]? saith the Lord; shall I cause to bring forth [Christ from the dead], and shut the womb [and not bring forth afterwards those children that are Christ's at his coming]? saith thy God." We have studiously employed those sentences, or words only, which Paul, by the same Spirit that moved the prophet, used in relation to the implied portions of the prophecy, lest some one should say we had done violence to this text, in which the resurrection of Christ and the church is called a birth, as David also said in the second Psalm, and Paul also in Acts 13: 33. But inasmuch as all of these persons had been previously born once of the flesh, this birth spoken of must necessarily have been when they were "born again" of the Spirit, for there are no more than these two births spoken of in Scripture,—birth of the flesh, and birth of the Spirit, or (1) born of flesh, and (2) born of Spirit.

Three things are necessarily involved in order to a birth, whether natural or spiritual: 1st, the begetting; 2nd, the quickening; 3d, the bringing forth. In the spiritual production, adults are subjected to the first, when they are begotten by "the word of truth" (James 1: 18), the incorruptible seed, the word of God (1 Pet. 1: 23), commonly termed "conviction." This transpires when any one "heareth the word, and understandeth it" (Matt. 13: 23), producing first "the blade." Mark 4: 28. The second occurs when the Spirit is conferred upon the obedient believer, by which they are quickened from being "dead in trespasses and sins" (Eph. 2: 1), for "it is the Spirit that quickeneth" (John 6: 63), by which they cry, Abba, Father. Rom. 8: 15. This work is of the Father, by the Son (John 5: 21), and constitutes the guaranty, or earnest, of our ultimate adoption into the kingdom, when we shall finally come to the birth. Rom. 8: 23, Eph. 1: 13, 14. This period in christian experience is usually called "conversion," and answers to fruit-bearing of the word (Matt. 13: 23), or the "earing" (Mark 4: 28), or the "fruiting" of the Spirit—joy and peace in the Holy Ghost. In this quickened state we are called (proleptically) the sons of God; that is, sons by faith, in anticipation, and not yet in fact, not yet having Spirit-life of our own, but Christ living in us; and the (Spirit) life which we now live in the flesh, we live by the faith of the Son of God." Gal. 2: 20. For Christ is our Spirit-life, and this Spirit, or eternal life, is in Christ (1 John 5: 11), not in us, and "is hid with Christ in God"; and "when He who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory" (Col. 3: 4), at which time we shall be subjects of the third and final condition, the spiritual birth, being brought forth by the Spirit FROM the dead (not of the dead), by the power of the Spirit's full development in us (Rom. 8: 11); and for this manifestation of the sons of God, the earnest expectation of the creature is waiting, "because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Rom. 8: 19–21); at which time we shall answer to the "wheat" (Matt. 13: 30), or the "full corn in the ear" (Mark 4: 28), the resurrection state, the fruiting perfected, after which there will be no longer a liability of "falling away," or "from grace," or sinning, or being abortives; because God's seed (incorruption) will remain in us; giving to, or causing deathless natures in us; being (having been) the children of God (by faith), and being in fact the children of the resurrection by birth of the Spirit, or being "born again," made like the angels, going and coming like the wind, and none able to tell whence we came or whither we went. So is every one (person) that is born of the Spirit.

ARENA, WIS.

GEO. THOMSON.

Thinking that a somewhat detailed account of the work of God in this place might be both interesting and stimulating to the dear saints of God, who read the Crisis; and more particularly to testify of the wondrous exhibitions of God's power, I proceed to relate what he has done for this people. According to the testimony of many, one year ago there was very little interest in religious matters. Drinking, carousing and profanity seemed to predominate. When we commenced our protracted meeting in January, there was but little interest to hear manifested. After the meeting had progressed about a week, a funeral sermon called out quite a number, and from that point the interest rose. Stout hearts began to quail under the power of truth and the influence of the divine Spirit. Many confessed Christ, and gave in their adhesion to the truths of the gospel, and were made happy in a Savior's love. Among the number were some who were avowed infidels, having been driven to that position by the popular religious teaching of the day; their confession being that they could not reconcile the preaching which they heard with the Bible. The result was, they threw away both Bible and religion; but when they heard the "sure word of prophecy," and discovered that the Bible did not contradict itself, but that it was a harmony, they were ready then, as honest men, to believe and obey it.

There were others, candid, intelligent, thinking men, who had taken refuge in Universalism, because it was the only system of which they had any knowledge that recognized God as being really a God of love; but when they saw the unfoldings of the gospel in all its beauty and simplicity,—that "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord"; and learned thereby that man's destiny was in his own hands; that God was not a tyrant, neither responsible for the sinner's final loss; and that he could bring in "everlasting righteousness" without compelling the sinner to be saved,—then all was bright. I quote the expression of some: "Now I can see through the whole thing clearly." I tell you, it is good to hear these brethren testify. One, in referring recently to his former position in Universalism, remarked: "I thought my foundation was firm, secure and unmovable, not only well cemented together, but leaded through, and I erected my beautiful temple thereon, supposing that nothing would ever be able to even shake it; but the truth came, and all crumbled to dust."

But perhaps the most remarkable cases were some who were far gone in dissipation. They will not object to having their former condition referred to, for they now realize and also testify to the great deliverance God has wrought out for them. One was the ringleader of a party who attempted to break up our grove-meeting, while under the influence of strong drink. In these cases, the reformation was wonderful, and men were compelled to admit that nothing short of the power of God would effect it. In families where before was wrangling, strife, misery and abuse; now there is peace, harmony, love, and praises to God. At our first baptismal service fourteen were planted in the likeness of Christ's death and resurrection. Of that number eleven were heads of families, and eight were husbands and wives together. O it was a lovely sight. Since then fourteen more have obeyed the Lord in the ordinance of baptism, seven of whom were heads of families. The church was organized in January with about twenty-five members. They now number forty-five members. Christianity in the Arena church is christianity in earnest. They keep up three weekly prayer-meetings; or perhaps I should rather say, the prayer-meetings keep them up; for I find that when prayer-meetings go down, churches go down. They are "knit together in love." There is a revival spirit existing all the time, and some are still being gathered. There are probably some ten or twelve now waiting for baptism.

The last case of conversion is one of the most remarkable, I think, on record; indeed, it is considered almost miraculous. It is that of a saloon keeper, naturally of a kind disposition, and tender-hearted, but led away by the bewitching influences of the social glass; and who had become so completely under the control of the demon intemperance, as to be considered by many to be beyond the possibility of reclamation. While I was holding meetings here last winter, he had an attack of the delirium tremens, and came near killing his wife while shooting at the supposed Indians, whom he imagined were coming in through the key-hole to attack him. Poor man. His case was indeed a pitiable one, but the brethren rightly concluded that it was for such the Savior died; and some who had been his former associates, Samaritan-like, labored with him, and the result is, he is now "clothed and in his right mind"; the saloon is closed, and he has given up all for Christ. He and his companion are now singing the praises of God. To God be all the praise.

"The glorious light of Zion
Is spreading far and wide,
And sinners now are coming
Into the gospel tide.
The standard of King Jesus
In glorious triumphs rise,
And sinners are returning
With joy and sweet surprise.
Palms of victory, crowns of glory,
Palms of victory we shall bear.

PLAIN TALK.

C. M. BARNES.

Among the many evil habits of the present day, tobacco using is one. Among the many things that cause a useless expenditure of money, tobacco using is to be reckoned. Among the many things which tend to check the influence of christianity, tobacco using is to be numbered; and I beg the privilege of being permitted to present a few reasons why christians should not use it.

1. It does no good. This is generally admitted, even by those who are addicted to its use; but occasionally we see one who will present some feeble excuse to justify himself in using it. "It steadies and quiets my nervous system," says one. "I am naturally inclined to corpulency, and by using tobacco I keep myself in a somewhat reduced condition," says another. "My teeth are inclined to be troublesome," says a third, "and I find using tobacco relieves me of considerable pain."

But if it be so, that tobacco has these medicinal qualities, how hard it is that the women are not permitted to use it. How beneficial it would be for that poor, worn woman, whose nervous system is all "upset" from her various household cares, if she could only have her husband's pipe and tobacco to smoke, and thus calm and soothe her excited nerves. And how much more easily could the wife get her household duties performed, if she had not that same tendency to corpulency that her husband has. Because he is a man, he can smoke tobacco, and thereby keep himself reduced, but she, poor woman, just because she is a woman, must not use the remedy, however beneficial it may be. And sometimes women have the toothache, too; they are liable to it, at any rate, and I think there are cases on record where they have been troubled almost as badly as the men; but here, again, the man can use a remedy or a preventive, while the woman can not.

Now a word to you, tobacco users, who use it because of the benefits supposed to be derived. When you see your wife or daughter subject to those complaints for which you say tobacco is a relief in your case, why do you not recommend tobacco to them? And not merely an occasional use, but let them know how a constant use of it is an antidote for these disorders in your case, and then advise them to use it also.

But what a weak excuse! to talk of using poison because of its beneficial effects! You know that is not the reason you use it; you use it not for your health's sake (if that was your case, you would use it no longer), but because you love it, and hanker for it; and lacking strength of purpose sufficient to leave it off, you offer these feeble excuses, and the devil laughs in his sleeve when he hears you talking thus; so don't say again you use it because you think your health demands it; say rather, "a depraved appetite craves it, and these flimsy excuses are the best I can present for indulging it."

2. It does do hurt, and in more ways than one, too. Nearly every tobacco user will admit that its tendency is injurious rather than good; differing, to be sure, in their opinions as to the extent it injures, but generally acknowledging its hurtfulness. Now any tobacco user, who has the candor to admit its injuriousness, and especially if he claims to be a christian, should also have religion enough to quit it; for what right has any man, and particularly a christian, to indulge in that which tends to destroy and to defile the temple of God, which temple he is? (1 Cor. 3: 17).

3. It is filthy. It does n't require argument to prove this; an appeal to facts will demonstrate it, and, indeed, I never yet met with a man, saint or sinner, but admitted it. Go through a train of cars after it has accomplished its journey, and what filth is visible! Go to any public hall where a crowd of men has been assembled, and see the pool and puddles of tobacco juice left behind them! Meet one of them for a few moments' conversation, and what an offensive odor one is obliged to face; to be sure the one who causes it does not seem to be aware of it; but those who are obliged to inhale the foul stench, are only too well aware of it, and it does seem as though any man who made any claim to decency and neatness, aside from religion, would quit it on the grounds of decency alone.

To think of the follower of Jesus; the professor of holiness and purity, indulging in the vile and filthy habit of chewing and smoking tobacco! I wonder if such ever read what Paul says in his second epistle to the Corinthians (ch. 7: 1.) And if they have read it, I wonder if they have ever prayed over it, and tried sincerely to learn what the principle therein contained requires of them. I think if it were to be conscientiously done, there would be fewer users of tobacco in the church, if no where else.

The foregoing reasons why christians should not use tobacco, might be multiplied to an indefinite extent; but without doing so, I conclude with the one remark, that if those who are in doubt as to its propriety, will humbly ask God for light, I have no doubt that they will arise from their knees with the conviction that God desires his people to be "cleansed from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit," and to perfect holiness in his fear.

"WHAT IS MAN?"

J. W. BURROUGHS.

It hath been truthfully said, "The greatest study of mankind is man." By a careful examination of the above question, we find ourselves mortal, dying creatures. Then another question arises: In creating man, did God intend he should die? Or, in other words, was man by creation just what he is now, a mortal or dying man? We will examine this question from two stand-points; viz., Reason and the Bible. We would first ask, Does it look reasonable that God, who is all-wise and good, should create man in his own image, and then, before permitting him to have a trial, to infuse into his system the seeds of death and thereby condemn his own work, and become the author of death? Reason says, No! it is unlike God. Secondly, what saith the Scriptures? God made man in his own image, and placed him on trial, by placing before him "the tree of life," and "the tree of knowledge of good and evil," which are symbols of obedience and disobedience, viz., "In [after] the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die"; marginal reading—"dying thou shalt die," or become a mortal man. He broke God's law, and received "the sting of death" by his sin. The poison was now infused throughout his entire system, and the sentence was pronounced on him as follows: "Because thou hast . . . . eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, thou shalt not eat of it, ... unto dust shalt thou return"; for "the sting of death (or the transgression of God's law) is sin." Adam transgressed God's law, and was stung by sin, and became a sinner.

The seeds of death, which caused him to become a mortal man, were sown in him by his own disobedience; by his transgression he became a sinner. And James tells us that "sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Jas. 1: 15. And Paul tells us, "As by one man sin entered into the world, and death [mortality] by sin; and so death [mortality] passed upon all men, for that all have sinned," or, "in whom" all have sinned—marginal reading. Rom. 5: 12.

By the above Scriptures, we learn that mortality is the effect of sin, and sin was the transgression of the law; therefore, if Adam had not broken God's law, there would have been no sin, consequently no mortality or death. "For the wages of sin is death." Again, "sin worketh death." Rom. 7: 13. "By man (Adam) came death." 1 Cor. 15: 21. Mortality or death did not come through the will of God, but "by man." It did not exist until after "sin entered into the world." Again, Paul says, "By the offence of one (Adam) judgment came upon all men to condemnation." Rom. 5: 18. Therefore, we are all of us under the Adamic condemnation, which is mortality, and brings death.

The question now presents itself, what was Adam before he sinned, or when he was created? We will answer this question by first showing what he was not.

He was not immortal; 1st, from the fact, if he had been, he could not have died; 2d, immortality is to be given only to those who "by patient continuance in well doing seek for" it. Rom. 2: 7. It was placed before Adam (as it is before us) as a reward of obedience. He was not mortal, from the fact that mortality was the effect of transgression, and he could not have become a mortal or dying man by transgression, if he had been mortal when he was created. He was neither mortal nor immortal, from the fact that he had not been tried, and had not yet proved himself worthy of immortality; neither had he proved himself unworthy, and thereby incurring the penalty of mortality. He was neither justified nor condemned, because he had not yet been tried; therefore, he was not a subject fit to be justified or condemned.

WHAT ADAM WAS.

By creation he was a probationer. He was on trial for eternal life (not under condemnation until after he sinned), and thereby became a mortal man. A probationer is "one who is on trial, or in a state to give proof of certain qualifications for a place or state." This was Adam's true condition; he was a probationer, on trial for a "state" of immortality. In other words, he was a novice, which is "one who is new in any business; one in the rudiments, a beginner." This was Adam's true condition. He was certainly "a beginner" and "in the rudiments" of life.

He was on trial to ascertain the effect, or what could be done for him. Therefore, his case was undecided, whether he should be mortal or immortal, until he should be sufficiently tried to prove himself worthy or unworthy. He proved himself unworthy, and became mortal and died. For "all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years, and he died."—Gen. 5: 5.

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

A. K. GIBSON.

I think there is no promise in the Bible more spiritualized and ignored than the promise of Christ's return. Many teachers will have it any way but the right way, that is, to make it literal. The text, "I will come again and receive you unto myself," is used as a text for funeral sermons, and applied to death. It is said, "I will come," means death will come and separate you from your body, and you will go to heaven, there to dwell in the blissful presence of God forever.

Paul calls death an enemy, and the word of God clearly teaches that at the coming of Christ, he will destroy death, or raise man up from the dead, and make him "equal unto the angels;" whereas, these teachers make death the Savior; send death instead of Christ, destroy the man's body instead of death, and make an angel of his immaterial spirit, before and without a resurrection; while God only promises that we may be equal unto the angels by and after a resurrection from the dead; which is to take place when Christ himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God.

If the body is only a lump of clay, a clog, and the spirit only is the man, and death relieves the man of this clog, and sends him to glory, and is there an angel; then I opine death is indeed a true friend, a savior; and well may we sing, "'Death is the gate to endless joy;" or, 'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends to call us to his arms;" and as one minister said, "Jesus had no need to come back to this earth; he could just as well sit on his throne in heaven and transact all his business there, as to come here himself." And why not, if the promise, "I will come again," simply means, I will send my voice—death—and relieve you of your earthly appendage, and then you can instantly appear in my presence in heaven, where there is fulness of joy? It is true I have spoken of a resurrection, but I mean by that your conversion, or elevation from a low state of sin to a high and holy life, which alone can fit you for that better resurrection—the rising of the blessed spirit from the body, at the separation, when I come by my voice—death. If this be the meaning of that promise, I wonder no longer that the Bible is a book of mysteries. I only wonder how any uninspired man ever found out what it did mean; and the mystery can only cease to be such by the aid of "those blest spirits" being permitted to return, to tell us that the Bible is to be taken in a spiritual sense, and consequently death does not mean death; that the coming of Christ is not his personal presence, for He comes in a thousand ways, by his word, by his Spirit, by death, and by his providence in many ways. And thus they ignore the most sacred promises of God to his own beloved children.

I heard a minister say: "There is no such thing as death. Man does not and cannot die, and I never allow the word used in my family. What is called death is a separation from the body, the putting off the clay, the house in which the man lives."

With such teaching, is it any marvel there are scoffers, saying "Where is the promise of his coming?" Any wonder that thinking men are disgusted with the theology of this age, and think the Bible a mystery, and can see no sense in it? But, thank God, there is sense in the Bible; and when properly understood, and rightly expounded, it opens the eyes and understandings of these thinking people, and some of them are coming into the light and liberty of God's dear children, and turning "from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." May God send more teachers of his word into the great harvest-field, for truly the harvest is great; it is fast ripening, and the laborers are few.

"SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES."

ELVIRA SHEPARD.

How sweet to search the Scriptures o'er,
To understand the Will
Left us by our departed Lord,
Who'll soon his word fulfill.

We read of an inheritance
That faileth not away;
Where all is pure and undefiled,
Wherein the heirs can stay.

If we are Christ's, then are we heirs,
And thus can enter in
To Zion's city, through the gates,
Forever freed from sin.

How sweet to ponder in our minds
That grand event foretold,
When Zion's King shall come in clouds,
And every eye behold.

Come quickly, Lord, and tarry not,
Thy children watch and pray
To welcome their returning Lord,
Who long has been away.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

There are comparatively few who feel and realize the fact that "God is love." Few that know the full import of the words, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Men may admit the fact of the existence of the Deity, yet in effect deny the God of the Bible, by not believing "the record" that sets forth his attributes. Many seem to feel that Jehovah takes no special interest in his creatures. This feeling is not confined to the world's people, but many who are called Christians fail to realize the love of God, or the fact that he cares for the children of men.

"He careth for you." O that you could believe this. Then you could cast all your care upon him, and be relieved of this great burden. Do you ask for proof of the love of God to man? All his dealings with you, from first to last, are proofs of his love. If you have been chastened, remember that in this he "dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?" All this is for your profit, for your highest good, your everlasting well-being. But you have had many happy days, many things which you must acknowledge to be "good gifts" from above. Are not these all proofs of the love of God?

If he corrects you for sin, this is for your salvation. To allow you to go on in the way of death would prove the reverse; that is, to allow you to go without reproof. It may be hard for you to see how you are to be advantaged by some of his providences; but be content. What thou knowest not now, thou shalt know hereafter. It was hard for Job to see the love of God in his dealings with him in the day of his calamity; but in the end, when all he had lost was restored twofold, and his life was prolonged a hundred and forty years, then doubtless he could say, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted." Do you think that your tribulations are greater than those of Job? Well, even if they are, is not the promise also greater than all that Job had to enjoy? Remember that eternity is the only measure of your reward; and when you have seen and known the length and breadth and depth and height of that love that "passeth knowledge," you will understand that your light afflictions were but for a moment (in comparison), and you will see by how much the "eternal weight of glory" over-balances them all, and would if they were a thousand fold greater. If your life is spared; if you escape, like Job, with but "the skin of your teeth," you shall know at last the great love that your Father has for you.

But now, while on your pilgrimage, you may have comfort and consolation in such form as this:—"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." Ps. 103: 13. "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him." Mal. 3: 17. But it may be that you do not see why God loves you, and so you doubt his love. It is not because you deserve that love, or have ever done anything to merit it; but Jesus gives you the reason in these words: "The Father himself loveth you, BECAUSE YE HAVE LOVED ME."

Now do you love Jesus? Do you love him because he first loved you? Has he not given you proof of his love? Yes, he came down from heaven, and laid aside the glory that he had with the Father "before the world was," and took upon himself the form of a servant, bore our griefs, and carried our sorrows, and even laid down his life for us, died on the cross for you! "Greater love hath no man than this." Do you love Jesus? If you do, "then the Father himself loveth you" because of your love to his Son.

Those who are enjoying "the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ," will not need to read what I have written here. It is for those who do not, but yet may enjoy this "fulness," that I now write. I am sure that but few of those who have professed religion are to-day enjoying that full assurance of love that is within our reach. Many whole churches have not one member that even professes to enjoy it. Others have but one or two, or a very small proportion of their whole number. Why is it? Whose fault is it? Why are the multitude "feeding on husks," when there is bread enough and to spare? O why will you "perish with hunger?" Come home, come home to your Father's house, and "eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness." "Hear, and your soul shall live."

FORTY YEARS.—Forty years once seemed a long and weary pilgrimage to tread; it now seems but a step. And yet along the way are broken shrines, where a thousand hopes have wasted into ashes: foot-prints sacred under drifting dust; green mounds whose grass is fresh with watering tears; shadows even we could not forget. We will garner the sunshine of those years, and with chastened steps and reasonable hopes, push on toward the evening whose signal light will soon be seen swinging where the waters are still and storm never comes.

WEAR A SMILE.—Which will you do, smile, and make others happy, or be crabbed and make everybody around you miserable? You can live among beautiful flowers and singing birds, or in the mire surrounded by logs and frogs. The amount of happiness you can produce is incalculable, if you will show a smiling face, a kind heart, and speak pleasant words.

CLEANSING BLANKETS.—Put two large tablespoonfuls of borax and a pint of soap into a tub of cold water. When dissolved put in a pair of blankets, and let them remain over night. Next day rub and drain them out, and rinse thoroughly in two waters, and hang them out to dry. Do not wring them.

APPLES keep best when cool and dry. Sudden changes of temperature induce the collection of moisture on the skin, which dissolves the delicate varnish with which the skin of the apple is covered, and it soon decays.

Gems.

— Two hearts which mutually love, are like two magnetic clocks; that which moves in one must also move in the other, for it is the same power which acts in both.

— If you have been tempted to evil, flee from it; it is not falling into the water, but lying in it, that drowns.

— The file is rough, and the application of it harrowing to the soul; but all the more bright and lustrous will be the diamond, when, at length thoroughly polished, it shines forth in the royal crown of Immanuel.

When trials come, as come they must,
And cause our highest hopes to fall;
A cheerful heart, with hope and trust,
Will give us strength to conquer all.

— The gold of the sanctuary must be tried before it is accepted; and is thrown into the fire, not because it is of no value, but because it is so precious.

— It is not until we have passed though the furnace that we are made to know how much dross was in our composition.

— The faults of the world can only be learned by a long acquaintance with it, and by suffering from the acquaintance.

— Avoid carefully the first ill or mischief, for that will breed a hundred more.

— Happiness is a perfume that one cannot shed over another without a few drops falling on one's self.

— Those who never retract, love themselves better than the truth.

— Honest and courageous people have very little to say about either their courage or their honesty. The sun has no need to boast of his brightness nor the moon of her effulgence.

Many a simple deed of kindness,
Which the world's praise never won,
Wrought in silence, done in secret,
Never meant to see the sun,
Bright will shine with His approval—
"Faithful servant, nobly done!"

— As all lights cannot make up the want of the light of the sun, so all temporal comforts cannot make up the want of one spiritual comfort.

— There would be no evil speakers if there were no evil hearers. It is in scandal as in robbery—the receiver is as bad as the thief.

— Draw upon content for the deficiencies of fortune.

— He who avoids the temptation avoids the sin.

— They are never alone who are accompanied with noble thoughts.

— Those that boast most, fail most; for deeds are silent.

"This is for your Health."

RESTLESS NIGHTS.

Some persons "toss and tumble" half the night, and get up in the morning weary, unrefreshed and dispirited, wholly unfit, either in body or mind, for the duties of the day; they are not only incapacitated for business, but are often rendered so ungracious in their manners, so irritable and fretful, as to spread a gloom and a cloud over the whole household. To be able to go to bed and be in a sound sleep, an unconscious deliciousness, in five minutes, but enjoyed in its remembrance, is a great happiness, an incalculable blessing.

Restless nights as to persons apparently in good health, arise from, first, an overloaded stomach; second, from worldly care; third, from want of muscular activities proportioned to the needs of the system. Few will have restless nights who take dinner at midday, and nothing after that except a piece of cold bread and a sip of soft pure water; anything beyond that, as cake, pie, chipped beef, doughnuts, preserves, and the like, only tempt nature to eat when there is really no call for it, thus engendering dyspepsia and all its train of evils.

But the more common cause of restless nights is, that exercise has not been taken to make the body tired enough to demand sound sleep. Many spoil all their sleep by attempting to force more on nature than she requires. Few persons will fail to sleep soundly, while they do sleep, if they avoid sleeping in the daytime, and will go to bed at a regular hour, and heroically resolve to get up the moment they wake, whether it is at two, four, or six o'clock in the morning. In less than a week each one will find how much sleep his system requires; thereafter give it that, and no more.—Herald of Health.

HAIR DYES.—Almost every article of this kind contains, in a greater or less quantity, the most poisonous preparations of lead, which are absorbed into the scalp and lower face, become incorporated with the blood, and engender painful, incurable, and disgusting diseases. It is said that in one of the French lunatic asylums eight per cent. of the victims were users of hair dye. Gray hairs add dignity to man. Those who are ashamed of age and seek to conceal it in these ways can scarcely claim the respect of their kind; and it would be wiser in them to be ashamed of their shallowness than of their age.—Selected.

THE WAY TO HEALTH.—The only true way to health is that which common sense dictates to man. Live within the bounds of reason. Eat moderately, drink temperately, sleep regularly, avoid excess in any thing, and preserve a conscience "void of offence." Some men eat themselves to death, some drink themselves to death, some wear out their lives by indolence, and some by over-exertion. Others are killed by the doctors, while not a few sink into the grave under the effects of vicious and beastly practices. All the medicines in creation are not worth a farthing to a man who is constantly and habitually violating the laws of his own nature. All the medical science in the world cannot save him from a premature grave. With a suicidal course of conduct he is planting the seeds of decay in his own constitution, and accelerating the destruction of his own life.

THE great secret of the superior health of the English is the greater amount of quiet sleep. The Americans, as a nation, are wearing out prematurely for want of rest.

BAD MONEY.

Bill Dow was showing the boys a counterfeit ten-cent piece. "O, you don't know it is counterfeit," said Jem Drew.

"Yes, I do; father said it was," said Bill Dow.

"Well, you needn't know it," said Jem Drew. "Your father may be mistaken. I should go to that old peanut woman at the corner, and spend it. Treat us, old fellow. She's half blind, and will never be the wiser for it."

"What an honest, honorable fellow you are, Jem Drew!" cried little Asa Clicker. "That you call doing as you would be done by, do you?"

"Somebody passed it on Bill, and Bill does no more than keep it going," cried Jem. "Come, Bill, give us some peanuts."

"No, sir," said Bill Dow. "I don't do that mean thing, I tell you. I do not intend to be dishonest in a little thing, then I shall never be caught being dishonest in great ones. Father says half the frauds, embezzlements, and bank robberies began in little dishonesties. They tunnel the way for a rush at last."

"Good for you, Bill!" cried Asa Clicker. "I believe in you. As for Jem, he'll die on the gallows yet."

Bill tossed the counterfeit ten cents into the river, and the boys stood on the bridge watching the eddies it made in the still water.

"Let all bad money be sunk before it sinks us," said Asa.—Child's Paper.

HE CALLETH ME.

O wise little birds! how do you know
The way to go
Southward and northward, to and fro?

Far up in the ether piped they:
"We but obey
One who calleth us far away.

"He calleth and calleth year by year,
Now there, now here;
Ever He maketh the way appear."

Dear little birds, He calleth me
Who calleth thee;
Would that I might as trusting be!

IS THERE ANY MOTHER HERE?—A little girl once followed the workmen from her father's grounds, when they went home to their dinner, because she was very fond of a kind old man who was one of them. When he looked from his door, he saw her sitting on a log, waiting for him, and invited her to go into the cottage. She looked in, saw the strange faces around the table, and hesitated. When he urged her, she raised her sweet little face and inquired:

"Is there any mother in there?"

"Yes, my dear, there is a mother in here," he answered.

"Oh! then I'll go in; for I'm not afraid if there's a mother there!"

Her child's experience had told her she could place confidence in a mother's sympathy. A home may be small and mean, but if it is the shrine of a mother's love, it is a happier place than a palace would be without this blessed presence.

☞ THE A B C of lying is, when you have done a wrong, either intentionally or accidentally, to hide it, or say nothing about it. The next step (a short one too) is, when it is found out and inquired after, to deny it. Then the egg which was laid in secret is hatched out, and lie walks off—and will soon run, and even fly.

THE VINE AND BRANCHES.—A Sunday-school teacher was trying to make his class understand the dependence of the branches on the vine. "Jesus is the vine; we are the branches. We derive all our life and happiness from him." "Yes," said a little fellow: "Jesus is the vine; grown-up people are the branches; and we are the buds."

BE FAITHFUL.—Learn that all your work is done for God. Slight nothing. Have the same evidence of your salvation that the little servant girl had, who, when asked how she knew she was converted, said, "Because I sweep under the mats."

HOW TO BE HAPPY.—"What does happy mean?" A little girl lately said, "It is to feel as if you wanted to give all your things to your little sister." The child felt that to be happy, she must be unselfish. She was right. Did you ever feel happy when you had selfish feelings active in your breast?

— True courage is that which is not afraid of being thought afraid; the rest is counterfeit.

ANTICIPATIONS OF THE SAINTS.

Oh! what a happy day
When Christ the Lord shall come,
And with delight and joy
Shall take us to his home.

Oh! what a happy time,
When, in a moment's space,
We to his likeness changed,
Shall see him face to face.

Oh! hasten, Lord, the hour
When we shall see thee near,
When to our longing eyes
Thou shalt with joy appear.

The night is waning fast,
The purple beams of morn,
In overspreading rays,
The eastern skies adorn.

The gilded mountain-tops
Appear with glory crowned,
Throwing in deeper shade
The darkened valleys round.

"WILT THOU BE MADE WHOLE?"

C. R. BARNES.

In Jerusalem there used to be a pool called Bethesda. At a certain season an angel went down into the pool and troubled the water, and then whoever first entered it, no matter what his complaint or disease may have been, was at once made whole.

On a certain occasion, a man who had been infirm thirty-eight years, was lying by the pool, but unable to reap any benefit therefrom, as he had no friend to assist him in going down into it. As he is there lying, brooding over his misfortune, a stranger accosts him: "Wilt thou be made whole?" The impotent man answered him, "Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool; but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me." Jesus (for he was the stranger) saith unto him, "Rise, take up thy bed, and walk." And immediately the man was made whole. John 5: 6-9.

In this diseased man, unable to help himself, we have a fair picture of humanity as a whole, and in his query to this man, "Wilt thou be made whole?" Jesus addresses humanity at large. Wherever there is a sinner; wherever there is one who is subject to evil habits and passions, there Jesus stands, and says to such an one—"Wilt thou be made whole?" And if such will but exercise faith in him, the cleansing blood of Christ will purge them from all sin, and make them every whit whole. There are but few in this land of enlightenment, but have heard Jesus address them, not in audible tones, which others could hear, but through the still, small voice of conscience.

When Jesus speaks to us, we only understand his words. The men accompanying Paul heard the sound when Jesus spoke to him, but none but Paul understood it. On his way to Ethiopia, the eunuch was called, but none of his attendants heard anything. The eunuch, however, heard the call, and obeyed it, and was baptized, then and there, into the faith of Christ. And this Jesus addresses all.

Again, his calls are individual. He calls multitudes at times, but each individual in that multitude has heard himself addressed. Although there were three thousand converted on the day of Pentecost, yet each individual of that large number knew that he had been called particularly, as specially as if he alone had been called.

In all revivals of religion since, when scores have been forward for prayers, each person has recognized Jesus, and has heard him saying, personally, "Wilt thou be made whole?" Further, Jesus calls us at those times that we are most likely to listen. The jailor at Philippi was called when overwhelmed with terror, and many are thus spoken to to-day. Some can be brought to listen most easily when the heart is softened by affliction. Others are reached through their sympathies. All are spoken to at that time, and under those circumstances, when and where they can best be reached. "All these," said Paul, "worketh that one and the self-same Spirit."

If we could listen to many christians as they were relating their experiences, we would hear one say, "I was first awakened to a sense of my lost condition, when I was marvelously saved from death, while hundreds about me were killed outright, or maimed for life. It was then, in the midst of that awful scene of havoc, that I heard the inviting voice of Christ calling me to him." We would hear another say, "I have listened to many powerful sermons unmoved. I have seen scores perish in the briny deep; I have seen the dead and wounded piled in heaps upon the battle field; I have escaped death many times, almost miraculously, but I have passed through it unmoved. But when our little Harry, the light of the household, in whom we all took delight; when he was taken sick, and we saw him suffer, and his little form waste away; when he called me 'father' for the last time, and we saw him die; when we laid him away in the grave, it was then, when my heart seemed almost broken with grief, that I heard a voice I had never heard before. It was then I knew Christ was calling me, and having lost the dearest treasure I had on earth, I was ready to listen to his voice."

In these, and under many other circumstances, our Lord speaks to us all, and happy, yea, blessed is he that knows the joyful sound. Reader, that Christ who called Paul; who called the jailor; that Christ who healed the man by the pool of Bethesda, is calling you, and is ready to make you clean. You who are subject to passion, to envy and malice; you who are full of evil thoughts, can be cleansed from them, and made every whit whole, for the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. He not merely grants pardon for sin, but, blessed be God, he cleanseth us. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1: 9. Oh! who would not be thus cleansed? Who that would not be like Christ? Who that would not like to be as kind, as gentle and mild, as forgiving and patient as he was? Jesus can give us so freely of his Spirit, that it will produce inward holiness, and then the external manifestations of it will be holiness also.

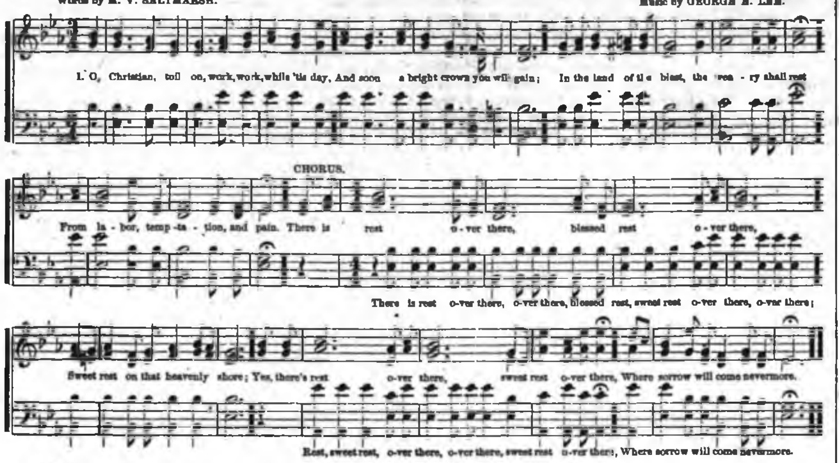
And you, christians, who indeed have found mercy, but are yet, in a measure, in bondage to sin; you who have not yet received the fulness of Christ; you who are groaning daily to be delivered from such a body of death, Jesus speaks to you, "Wilt thou be made whole?" To extend to his people this blessing the Savior came, and because of his mission he was called Jesus, "for," said the angel "he shall save his people from their sins." Matt. 1: 21. Does this seem too great? Remember who it is that promises; 'tis one in whom "dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." Col. 2: 9. Does it seem too great an exercise of power? I would that the eyes of your understanding might be enlightened; that you might know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of his glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the great and exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places.

I wish you might know what great power, yea, what exceeding great power, God will exert in your behalf, in cleansing you from evil. That power which banished death and reanimated our blessed Savior, will be manifested for you, in cleansing and purging you from dead works and your vain conversation, and in causing you to be "alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord," so that, with Paul, you can say "the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God." Gal. 2: 20.

Then come, you who want pardon; you who want a deeper work of grace; you who want sanctification; who want salvation from your sins; who want to be freed from hard hearts and unholy tempers; who desire "to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge;" come, come all, and drink more freely of the fountain of life, and you will have within a well of water continually springing up, so that you need never thirst again. Come, unconverted ones, and seek pardon; seek remission of sins. Come, pardoned ones, and seek purification, seek sanctification, for so is the will of God. 1 Thess. 4: 3. "And the Spirit and the bride say, come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Rev. 22: 17.

REST OVER THERE.

Words by M. V. SALTMARSH. Music by GEORGE H. LEE.



1. O, Christian, toil on, work, work, while 'tis day, And soon a bright crown you will gain; In the land of the blest, the wea-ry shall rest
CHORUS.
From la-bor, temp-ta-tion, and pain. There is rest o-ver there, blessed rest o-ver there,
There is rest o-ver there, o-ver there, blessed rest, sweet rest o-ver there, o-ver there;
Sweet rest on that heavenly shore; Yes, there's rest o-ver there, sweet rest o-ver there, Where sorrow will come nevermore.
Rest, sweet rest, o-ver there, o-ver there, sweet rest o-ver there, Where sorrow will come nevermore.

2 Though thorny thy path, it will not be long,
The end of thy journey is near;
Then with courage press on, in Jesus be strong,
Be faithful till He shall appear. CHORUS.

3 Though Satan may come to lead you astray,
And tell you your hope is untrue;
If you earnestly pray for grace every day,
The Saviour will carry you through. CHORUS.

4 Though often your heart is sad and oppressed,
And weary of toil you may be;
O, then think of that home where grief is unknown,
That Jesus has promised to thee. CHORUS.

5 Yes, think of that home, of that happy home,
Its glories have never been told;
O, your rest will be sweet, your joy be complete,
In yonder bright city of gold. CHORUS.

WISDOM'S HOUSE.

CATHERINE WIRE.

"Wisdom hath builded her house; she hath hewn out her seven pillars."—Prov. 9: 1.

What is wisdom? She is God's treasurer. She hath builded her house. What shall we call this? God's treasury. As a house is never built without a foundation, what did she build upon? Truth and righteousness. "She hath hewn out her seven pillars." What are these? Love, light, hope, peace, power, courage, and duration. Love is a sweet, precious, never-failing pillar of truth, in her house; which reaches from the beginning of creation to all eternity, and has its origin in goodness, which is God.

Light is a glorious, revealing pillar of truth in her house, that will shine more and more unto the perfect day, and has its origin in God; for God is light, and God is love. Light is something very desirable, I find, as I try to look into the perfect law of liberty which the gospel of Jesus Christ gives me. I must come to the light, that I may know whether what I do, or say, or even think, is wrought in God. O how beautiful and glorious is the pure light of the gospel; and as I read and receive new light, although it is as old as creation, it is new light to me. I feel as though every sense I had was being baptized, as it were, into a new creation; especially when the truth was first brought home to me, that we were going to live upon this earth renewed and purified. It seemed as though God was nearer to me than ever. O what a precious pillar, or part in the pillar of light, was this, in the house of wisdom. It could not help but be allied to love and goodness.

The next pillar, Hope, is a bright, anticipating pillar of truth, in the house of wisdom, that we cannot do without in this life, because of its buoyant nature to carry us above the troubles and trials of this life, by giving us bright anticipations of the future—the glorious heavenly kingdom, which every true child of God will inherit when Jesus comes to make up his jewels. This pillar in the house of wisdom centres in the resurrection of the just, and when gained will be as a tree of life to us. Prov. 13: 12.

Peace is a calm, supporting pillar of truth, in the house of wisdom, which is the fruit of righteousness; for righteousness and peace kiss each other; so says the Psalmist. 85: 10. Trusting in the promises of God brings peace within, though trials and temptations run high without. Jesus says; "These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." John 16: 33. "First pure, then peaceable." This is a very important pillar. It gives such rest to the christian. We could not do without this pillar, therefore wisdom put it into her house because she knew it would be needed. "Great peace have they which love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." Psalm 119: 165. Hope, purity and peace go hand in hand in the royal way to the kingdom.

Power is a pillar of truth, in the house of wisdom, that is mighty and strong. It is holiness. Holiness is power. What a needful pillar this is to cause everything to move to the honor and glory of God. The anointings of the Holy Spirit are needed continually to keep this pillar of power going in us in the right direction. For it is ever on the move, as all the rest of the pillars are ever active in the service of God; even peace only fills her place aright in active service. She is a kind of balancing pillar, that helps the rest to steer the right course. It is very needful to power that peace should ever be on hand to help weigh every thought, word, and act, as the house moves forward towards the kingdom. This house represents the church.

Courage, the next pillar in the house of wisdom, is a bold, fearless, undaunted pillar, which is ever accompanied by a great heart, and is very needful to the fearful, and those who are of a doubting mind. The word is, "Be of good courage." Even the most valiant get downcast sometimes, but not so but that courage can help them up, and then they start on anew in the way, which is always strait and narrow; so that there is no getting around the cross, or going over it, but take it up and walk along, never being ashamed of it, but glorying in it, as Paul did; then you will be crucified unto the world. God help us to so run that we may win, is my prayer.

Duration, the next pillar in the house of wisdom, is a long one. Thank God for this. It endures forever. This is not a limited for ever, but it is a forever that endures. And now we must endure with patience as seeing Him who is invisible. How shall we do this? By faith. That is the condition, and it is also the condition of every christian grace we possess. Grace gives us the possession of them now by faith, and helps us to go forward in the christian course. Let us be wise by building on Christ, the corner-stone, every day, hour and moment of our earthly lives, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THE SOUL.

The question of the nature and duration of the soul has been so frequently and elaborately discussed, that one would think it were about time that it be fully settled and understood. But this is far from being the case. Indeed, the contest has hardly reached its climax. And even among those who profess to have the truth, there is much inconsistency and confusion of ideas.

It is not my purpose to give a labored exposition of the subject for general consideration, but to present a few thoughts for the practical benefit, it may be, of a certain class. We find it necessary, however, to inquire, What is the soul? We answer, The term "soul" undoubtedly has for its ordinary meaning person. The Sacred Scriptures contain many instances of this use of the word. But when we speak of the soul of a person or thing, we generally mean something very different. In this case the primus usus of the word is evidently life. Thus, the soul of animals usually means the principle of life contained in the blood. The soul of vegetation is the principle of life contained in the sap, which answers the purpose of blood in animals.

It is evident, then, that the term "soul" when used in this sense, never means a personal entity. It cannot be said either to live or die, except, perhaps, in a fanciful or poetic sense; as,—"Softly now the light is dying on the distant, native shore." It is the body that lives, not the life. It is the body that dies by being deprived of the principle of life. Life is simply an effect, which is distributed throughout the system in the process of circulation. When the organic mechanism becomes worn out, and nature refuses to perpetuate the bodily identity by supplying the waste of the system, then the causes of life cease operating, and life, like the light of a candle, goes out in the oblivion of death. Then it cannot be found. It goes nowhere, nor can it be seen or handled.

It is sometimes said that the soul goes into the grave with the body. This is a wrong statement of facts. The soul does not go into the grave with the body, for the very excellent reason that it does not exist after its causes cease operating. It is absurd then, to talk of its occupying space, and coming in contact with matter.

It is often said, "I believe the soul of man to be mortal." This, too, is incorrect, because the soul, in this sense being a property, cannot possess properties. The principle of life is the same in quality everywhere. Its duration is entirely dependent upon the nature and properties of the corporeal thing itself.

The fact is incontrovertible both in the light of reason and Scripture, that all there is of man is that which we recognize through our senses. Life, thought, pain, desire, love, etc., are all properties of man as an organized substance, but they form no part of him. When a man becomes disorganized, these properties cease to exist; because they remain properties only while he is an organized being.—Adv. Christian Times.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

P. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

The train of thought suggested by the above heading brings deep sadness and bitter regret to many a heart; but let no one on that account turn away from reading what here follows; for we shall aim to show you a compensation in full ere we close. No doubt you have thought of "what might have been," under very different circumstances, in your own case. Many a poor prodigal, who has "wasted his substance with riotous living," has sadly thought of what might have been if he had been discreet and prudent, instead of reckless and profligate. Many an invalid has groaned as he thought of the health and strength he might have had if he had known and obeyed the laws of life ere it was too late.

A man who desired wealth, spoke with regret of a lost opportunity as follows: He had started one day with the intention of purchasing a certain tract of land in the "oil regions," which seemed to promise great returns for the investment. But on the way he was over persuaded to buy another claim, and so he stopped short of his intention, and thereby lost a prize which would have made him a millionaire. This is not the only apparently narrow escape this same man has had from becoming very rich, and no doubt he often thinks of "what might have been" if he had improved the "golden opportunity" in time.

If ever a boundless field opened before a writer, it opens here while thinking of what might have been. "What might have been" if sin had never entered our world. What might have been if all people in all ages had been of one heart and one mind, living together in perfect peace and harmony. What might have been if death had never interfered with human plans and purposes. Or what might have been, even here in this age and in this country, if there had never been any political or sectarian strife, but peace and union had always prevailed through the length and breadth of our land. "What might have been" with Jerusalem and the Jewish nation if they had known, in their day, the things which were for their good.

The compensation for all this loss, the antidote for all the ills of time, is found in the divine promise of what shall be. After Job had been tried in the furnace he "came forth as gold," and he had "twice as much as he had before" his days of sorrow. The promise of God to us is not limited to twice as much as we might have had, under any possible circumstances of which we can conceive. Complete "health and cure," with the "abundance of peace and truth," are included in the promise. Long life, "even length of days forevermore," is but a part of what shall be when "all flesh shall see the salvation of God." Thus saith the Lord, "I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me." When all sin, and all its evil consequences are forever obliterated and sunk in eternal oblivion; when "death is swallowed up in victory," and the former things are passed away, and all things made new, then we shall see clearly what we now but dimly see as "through a glass, darkly."

Whatever is embraced in the words "all things," even far beyond the power of language to express or the mind to conceive, all is ours. Dwell upon this as the end of your faith, and reward of your patience, even this —"a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

EARNESTNESS.

Under the direction of the spirit of inspiration, Solomon wrote: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest."

These words are addressed to every christian. And how much every one may find to do! How many unconverted souls are to be led to Christ! How many children are to be gathered into the Sunday-school and instructed in the great truths of salvation! How many widows and orphans are to be fed and clothed and educated! How many sick and suffering there are whose wants are to be relieved! On every hand is work to be done; we cannot shut our eyes to it if we would. North, south, east and west are whitened harvest-fields and loud is the voice of the Master calling for reapers to enter in and gather sheaves for the garner on high. To every one comes a voice, saying: "Son, go work to-day in my vineyard." But how few there are, comparatively, who heed this call, and go at this bidding! And many even of those who profess to be engaged in the Master's work are more absorbed in other affairs than in the all important work of saving souls. How few there are who are in earnest in this work, who are doing what their hands find to do with their might!

The great want of the church to-day is earnestness. There is a want of earnestness on the part of the ministry. We should be more earnest in the pulpit, more earnest in our pastoral labors, more earnest in the Sunday school work. We should not be content with preaching two or three sermons from the pulpit, each week, but on the street-corners, or in the market place, or public parks, or in the dancing-hall, or in the theatre, or in the saloon, even. Wherever souls can be found for whom Christ died, the blessed gospel should be proclaimed; and if the multitudes are ever reached by the gospel, it must be in some such "irregular" way, for hundreds there are who never go inside of a church, and who cannot be induced to do so till the gospel is brought to bear upon them in some way they do not suspect.

And not only is there more earnestness needed on the part of the ministry, but the laity also need it. We want more laymen who feel themselves consecrated to the work of Christ, and who will embrace every opportunity to speak a word for Jesus, and who will use all the talents God has given them, their money, time, influence, voices, social and official position, in advancing the cause of Christianity. The world is to be saved by the "foolishness of preaching," but the few ordained men cannot do all the preaching required. The laity must become preachers, and call sinners to repentance. And the women, too, must be more in earnest for Christ. How much their hands can find to do in the great Sunday-school field! Nowhere is work needed more than here, and none can do it more efficiently than women.

But how shall this spirit of earnestness be obtained? Only by the baptism of the Holy Ghost. This, and this only, can make men and women earnest in the work of God. Intellectual conviction is not sufficient; men will not run in the way of God's commandments till they are propelled by some other power than that. It must be the all-powerful motive of love, and this is born of the Holy Ghost, and the Holy Ghost is given for the asking, providing the asking is associated with believing, and the great blessing to be retained must be used, for God gives no blessings to be unemployed.

May God baptize the church, and make her throughout the land a body of earnest workers. —Methodist.

PRACTICAL RELIGION IN THE LIGHT OF THE GOSPEL.

J. B. COOK.

"I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice . . . unto God; be not conformed to this world [age]; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds. . . . Having then gifts differing according to the grace given to us; whether prophecy, let us prophecy according to the proportion of faith."—Rom. 12: 1-6.

The word for "proportion" is analogy, and expresses the mutual relation and dependence of parts in the body, or system of gospel truth. It is too much the custom to ignore this primal obligation to think, prophesy, minister, teach, exhort, give, and rule in the body—the church—and in advancing the cause of Christ according to the measure—the analogy of faith.

The doctrine of the gospel that Paul preached in Rome to the Gentile world, is here applied first to the different duties of the christian ministry, or religious service, as a whole. Practical religion is thus made primarily to regulate thinking and preaching in accordance with the word, analogia—giving echo to the word, and keeping on the lofty plane of the divine word.

I. This gives God absolute supremacy over all. Chap. 1: 25.

II. This lays sin and death at Adam's (and every human) door. 5: 12.

III. This reveals righteousness, or justification and acceptance to salvation by grace, through faith in the propitiatory offering of Christ. 3: 22-26; 4: 1-17; 6: 3-5; 8: 1-36; 10: 3-13. Redemption is graciously by his grace, through the redemption there is in Christ Jesus. 3: 24.

This discloses deliverance of the creature—creaturehood, or creation—from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the sons of God. Chap. 8: 14-23.

These are the cardinal points which are adjusted to the dispensational arrangements noted in chapter 11: 12-29, and 15: 8-13; and embrace the resurrection, the kingdom, and all that leads on to the crowning consummation of the gospel of salvation in our fallen world.

This proportion, analogy, measure of faith, is of pre-eminent practical importance. It takes the first place here in practical religion. It subordinates all agencies and events to God's gracious purpose in Christ. It discriminates between Rome—the last form of the kingdom of men, and the kingdom of Christ. Daniel 7: 17, 18; 2 Tim. 4: 1.

Nay, more, it locates the time of wrath, or seven vials, AFTER the seventh angel sounds, and the kingdoms of this world become our Lord's, and his Christ's. Rev. 11: 15-18; 15: 1-4; 15: 5 to 17. This proper proportion, or the right relation of these parts of prophecy, puts the vials in the judgment; and the doom of Rome in its revealed place, like the destruction of Pharaoh in the judgment on Egypt. Ex. 12.

NOTE. The displacing of a figure in any date would destroy the proportion. A daily for July 15th was published July 51st—quite a difference by the loss of proportion. Thus a displaced member of the body (vers. 4, 5) would make deformity, by disregarding the right proportion, or relation and dependence of parts. God's prophecy has a form. Dan. 2: 31-45. No one, then, can obey this divine command but by preaching, teaching, praying, and exhorting, according to this proportion, which locates the kingdom of Christ at and after the judgment, on the last form of the image—the fourth form of the kingdom of men. Dan. 7: 11-14. Thus with the doom of Babylon. It has its relation to the opening scene and progress of the judgment, by the seven vials. Rev. 15: 5-17. Thus with the gospel system. It has its analogy, consistency of proportion of parts.

Practical Christianity pays pre-eminent regard to this vital truth. It involves reverence for God, and all the essential graces of the christian life. Amen. But a disregard of this precept leaves the life of faith feeble, the understanding unfruitful, and thus Christ is dishonored often in the houses of his friends.

THE CHAPEL IN THE HEART.—In your retirement make frequent colloquies, or short discoursings with God and thy own soul. Every return of the heart in these intercourses is a going to him, and appearing in his presence, and is representing him present to thy spirit and to thy necessity. This was long since called by a spiritual person "a building to God a chapel in our heart." It reconciles Martha's employment with Mary's devotion, charity and religion, the necessities of our calling and the employment of devotion; for thus, in the midst of the works of your trade, you may retire into your chapel—the heart—and converse with God by frequent addresses and returns.—Jeremy Taylor.

BIBLE.—Josephus informs us that the first translation from the Hebrew into the Greek was made by seventy-two interpreters, by the order of Ptolemy Philadelphus. From this circumstance it is called the Septuagint version. It was completed about 277 B. C.

ACHERUSIAN LAKE.

GEO. THOMSON.

The great Egyptian superstition was no doubt the origin of the Grecian fables of the river Styx; Charon, the ferryman, the elysian fields, Tartarus, etc., etc. The following historical account may be interesting: "Near Memphis, Egypt, was once a beautiful sheet of water fed by canals. Its shore was ornamented by shady groves and beautiful parks. These were the waters over which the dead were ferried to the tombs and sepulchres beyond. . . . To this lake the mummied corpse was brought. Forty-two persons, constituted judges, ranged themselves around the remains of the departed one, and propounded the following question: Has any one aught to allege against the character of the deceased? In the scales of justice his life was balanced. If it was proved that he had spent a life of dissipation and vice, transit was denied him until his friends could atone for him. Those elysian fields and quiet shades of the departed were for the good alone. If accepted, the ferryman received the precious freight, and bore it beyond the flood." (Handwriting of God, p. 185.)

We are credibly informed by standard history, that the Greeks derived their religion from the Egyptians. Josephus is authority for the statement that many of the Jews imbibed some of their religious ideas from the Grecian philosophers, as the following extract from his discourse on hades will show:

"Now as to hades, wherein the souls of the righteous and unrighteous are detained, it is necessary to speak of it. Hades is a place in the world not regularly finished (?); a subterraneous region, wherein the light of this world does not shine; from which circumstance, that in this region the light does not shine, it cannot be but there must be in it perpetual darkness [a strange place for happy souls.] This region is allotted as a place of custody for souls, in which angels are appointed as guardians to them, who distribute to them temporary punishments agreeable to every one's behavior and manners. . . . This is the discourse concerning hades, wherein the souls of all men are confined until a proper season, which God hath determined, when he will make a resurrection of all men from the dead, not procuring a transmigration of souls from one body to another, but raising again those very bodies which you Greeks, seeing to be dissolved, do not believe [their resurrection] but learn not to disbelieve; for while you believe that the soul is created, and yet is made immortal by God, according to the doctrine of Plato."

Plato was a heathen (Greek) philosopher, and taught the immortality of the soul, on which Josephus based his theory of hades, and was candid enough to credit Plato, and not the Bible, with the parentage of the doctrine as then maintained. Proselytes from the Jews and Greeks, who entertained this doctrine, gradually infused it into the system of Christianity after the days of the apostles, and thus polluted the pure stream of truth. As Mosheim testifies, in the second century, the oriental philosophy began to be introduced into the church, as the result of the conversion of some of the heathen philosophers, and then men began to speculate and philosophize on the nature of the soul, etc. Strange that the great apostle Paul, with all his gigantic powers of reasoning, never argued on the nature of the soul, but chose rather the theme of the resurrection, on which he concentrated all his powers of logic and eloquence. Who was most competent to understand the prominent theme of theology, Paul or Plato? Origen, one of the so-called Fathers of the Church (and truly so in reference to the Romish Church), was born in the second century, at Alexandria. He was learned in the oriental philosophy, and became a convert to Christianity. According to Saurin, "all his philosophy was taken from the ideas of Plato." "He also taught the pre-existence of souls previous to the creation, and perhaps from eternity; their condemnation to animate mortal bodies, in order to expiate faults committed in their pre-existent state, etc., etc."—(Voice of Church, p. 77.)

This Origen introduced the system of interpreting the Scriptures spiritually, declaring that the literal sense was worthless; thus opening the way whereby the Scriptures are made to sustain the dogma of immortal-soulism, with all its monstrous outgrowth of absurdities and superstitions; as purgatory, prayers for the dead, prayers to the dead, prayers by the dead, communion with the dead, communications from the dead, dead men blowing horns, dead women playing pianos, dead children turned into angels, souls attending the funeral of their dead bodies, souls going to heaven or hell at death, souls going to the spirit land, souls going to the spheres, souls going "beyond the bounds of time and space," etc., etc.

And thus the Acherusian lake and river Styx are merged in the more modern river Jordan, or death, beyond which are represented as presently existing gorgeous fields elysian.

"There everlasting spring abides,
And never-withering flowers,
Death, like a narrow sea, divides
This heavenly land from ours."

And again, in the following couplet, we see how faith and desire contradict theory:

[illegible]
And yet we dread to enter there.

How much more scriptural and consistent is Paul's theory: "But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen. . . . Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." 1 Cor. 15: 13, 18.

"All the saints who are sleeping [illegible]

ALTON BAY MEETING.

Another great and good campmeeting is now (Sept 14th) in progress at Alton Bay. The meeting this year is the largest ever held on this ground. There are some attractions at Alton Bay which are not common for camp-grounds. Among these is the beautiful lake, with its steamers plying between the camp-ground and the towns on its borders, and connecting with the cars that run from the camp eastward to Dover, Boston and Portland. The scenery about the ground is rather wild and romantic. There are but few cloth tents. Nearly all are built of boards, and are very closely connected, for want of sufficient room. Many of them are quite comfortable, and of good size. Some families have been spending several weeks here before the commencing of the campmeeting. It is a pleasant place for those who would retire from the busy cares, noise and confusion of the world, to enjoy rural scenery, and inhale the pure country air.

The religious tone of the meeting is elevating, strengthening, earnest, and well tempered with religious zeal. Like all other campmeetings we have attended this year, the subject of Bible holiness occupies a prominent place in the prayer and conference meetings, and in the preaching. The Spirit of God is impressing those who love Christ with the necessity of being entirely consecrated to him in order to be ready for his coming and the marriage supper of the Lamb. We are in possession of facts which show that the spirit of holiness, or entire consecration to God, is arousing the active members in all churches throughout the country. This is a bright omen in favor of the speedy coming of Christ. In proportion as holiness prevails, sectarian walls are demolished, and brotherly love prevails. It does look as though the bride had begun to dress in her bridal robes of Christ's perfect righteousness; that she may be all ready for the appearing of the heavenly Bridegroom.

Let it be kept before all, that the Scriptures declare we must "follow peace with all men; and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Dear reader, let this subject receive your immediate attention. Be sure and have your lamp trimmed and burning. The last days are upon us. Get ready to meet the Judge of the quick and dead. Make no delay. Let all difficulties be settled. Be at peace with all men. Be holy.

BRO. BOWMAN.

In the last Crisis but one, we gave notice that Bro. P. G. Bowman, of Lydia, S. C., had been separated from the Methodist Conference, because he believed in the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked; and that he is now ready to take a bold stand in defense of the doctrine of the Bible. For many years he has been a prominent preacher in the M. E. Church. He is now ready to engage in missionary labor in the south. We think he is just the man for the southern field. Shall he be sustained? Are there not ten men who will sustain him for one year in the mission work? His separation from the M. E. Church has cut off all means of support, so that he is dependent upon his friends for the comforts of life. Are there not ten men who will give one hundred dollars each for the Bowman mission? Let us have a ready response from those who love Jesus, and are able and willing to help spread the truth in the southern states. Now is the time for action.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Saturday, Sept. 2nd, we left Boston for the tent-meeting at Natick, about eighteen miles from Boston. We found the tent pitched in the heart of the village, with the Catholic, Congregationalist and Baptist churches near at hand, within speaking distance. The meeting began Wednesday evening, under the direction of Brn. Morrill and Boutell. We found the people quite interested in the meeting, and ready to co-operate with measures calculated to extend its influence. Quite a number from other churches, who are warm friends of Jesus, took an active part in the exercises, and rejoiced with us in the worship of the God of our fathers. Several of them were with us all day Sabbath, and feasted with us on the heavenly manna provided by the Lord. It was just what they had been longing to enjoy. They felt at home. He said the meeting reminded them of some they enjoyed forty years ago, when the life and power of godliness was in the church. Among others who united with us in the exercises was old Bro. Jennison, over eighty years of age, who has been many years a faithful Methodist preacher, and loves the "old paths," and has no sympathy with the fashionable religion of these last days, which is baptized into the spirit of the world.

We find in all places, where we have been of late, that the living members of the churches are most fully convinced that they must come out from the world and consecrate all to the Lord, in order to be saved. The impression is deep and abiding, and is producing important results. Bright omens begin to appear. Let us reach forth to all such the hand of a hearty christian welcome. Let us put up no sectarian walls, have no testing creeds, no iron bedsteads, to which we require submission before we can unite with them in the work of the Lord. Let christian character be the only test of fellowship; an open Bible the only creed, and brotherly love the only bond of union, and then peace and harmony will prevail in the body of Christ, which is the church.

R. I. CAMPMEETING.

Monday morning, Sept. 4th, we left Natick for Boston, thence to Green, R. I., where a campmeeting was in progress. We only spent a few hours there, but we enjoyed the meeting. It had but just commenced, but the prospect was encouraging. In the afternoon we went on to the in Ct. The camp-ground is a pleasant one, about two and a half miles from the Plainville depot. There were forty tents, including the large state tent. The meeting was an harmonious one, and increased in interest from the commencement to the close. There was a general feeling among the Brn. and Srs. that the time has come when all who expect to be ready to meet Christ, must be entirely consecrated to his service. Many received special blessings, and rejoiced in the possession of perfect love. The prayer and conference meetings were excellent, and will occupy a choice place in the memory of those who participated in those heavenly associations.

PLAINVILLE CAMPMEETING

We had preaching by Brn. O. D. Woodruff, R. K. Stark, H. L. Hastings, Geo. L. Teeple, S. C. Hancock, A. Steele, I. I. Leslie, Sr. H. Hastings, Bro. H. Munger, G. L. White, A. Calkins, A. M. Higgins, and the writer. Good order and brotherly love prevailed. It was the best campmeeting we ever attended in the state. Several were converted, many were reclaimed from a backslidden state; three were baptized, and others would have been had there been an opportunity. From the commencement to the close the spirit of devotion and consecration to the Lord continued to increase. A hallowed influence has gone forth from the meeting that must produce blessed results throughout a large portion of the state.

The weather was delightful throughout the entire meeting. Every day was bright and sunny. A very large audience was present Sabbath, and excellent attention was given to evidences showing that we are near the coming of Christ; when those who are sleeping in him will be raised to put on immortality, and receive the promised inheritance. In all places we find the people, especially church members, more willing and anxious to hear than they have been for many years. They are satisfied that some startling events are at hand, and will give careful attention to candid remarks on the subject.

In our morning love-feast we had one hundred and twenty-five testimonies in less than an hour. In the evening we had a precious season at the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. In short, the whole meeting was a happy success, and its results have afforded most ample rewards for the labor bestowed. The friends of Jesus parted with a strong assurance that in a little while we shall see the King in his beauty and glory.

STATE OF THINGS IN EUROPE.

The present aspect of things in the old world is not very flattering in favor of peace. War clouds are again beginning to fill the political horizon. Russia is making large preparations for the battle field, and all the other great powers are in a state of agitation, which bodes any thing but peace. The fact is, mankind have become so corrupt, and the governments of the world so like "iron and clay," that there is not sufficient cohesive power to hold them together. The last days of this dispensation have certainly come. The great prophetic chart is about completed. Soon, soon the King of glory will appear.

GOOD TIDINGS is the title of a new book just issued, containing a plain statement of the Bible pertaining to the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the saints' inheritance, the punishment of the wicked, and an exposition of the prophecies which show that the second coming of Christ is near at hand. This book is just the thing to put into the hands of all candid readers. Every minister in the world should have a copy; and all others who are interested in the world to come.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.—Those who have paid their subscriptions at Alton Bay, and other campmeetings, and who do not see the date changed on their papers next week, we would say, Be patient; we shall make all right as fast as we can.

THE CAUSE OF DEATH.

BRO. GRANT:—We read in Gen. 2: 7—"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Was he created in a state of decomposition? Was he as we are now, tending downward to the earth? Does the word of God teach that death was introduced into our world on account of man's disobedience?

Stowe, Vt. H. W. SARGENT.

We have no direct revelation on the first point named; therefore, cannot give any satisfactory answer.

2. In answer to the second question, the Bible says: "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men." Rom. 5: 12.

MANNER OF PREACHING.—A lady, recently, in giving her views of the preaching of a minister to whom she had listened several times, said: "I thought it was the business of the minister to feed the sheep. This man don't feed us; he only throws clubs and stones at us, and sends us, bleating and hungry, home." Many a one might gather a useful hint from this as to the proper mode of dealing with the flock of Christ. Harshness, severity, fault-finding, accomplish but little good in the family, the church, or the world. True, it is the pastor's duty to admonish and rebuke, to correct error and reform sin; but always in the spirit of the Master. A scolding minister never yet succeeded in anything but in scattering the flock and weakening his hold upon the affections of his people.—Exchange.

CHURCH POWER AND POLICY.

There is a wide difference between church power and church policy; and the less we have of the former, and the more we have of the latter, the better for all. I am no advocate of laxity in gospel regulations in church matters; but such regulations should be brought about and preserved by an exhibition of the gospel spirit, rather than by too free a display of the rod of church power—a rod intended to be used only as the last resort.

This rush for a church trial as soon as a fault is discovered in a member, with a view to expulsion, before every gospel step has been taken designated by divine wisdom, and taken too in the right spirit, and with the right motive, is all wrong. And the excuse that it is our duty to keep the church pure, can never be made to justify an outrage on the rules and spirit of the gospel economy; for it is a revealed truth that it is as really the will of God that we should seek the welfare of those in our own ranks, who chance to get out of the way, as those who have never been identified with us; and this we can succeed in doing much better by living out the policy of the gospel, than by resorting to church power—thus pushing the offender beyond our own reach. Hasty church trials have proved the ruin of many who might have been saved by the winning policy of the gospel.

When a member has been ensnared by the devil, the first question should be, how can we save him? Not how shall we prove him guilty and get rid of him in the quickest manner possible. When the devil has succeeded in entrapping a person in one fault, his next effort is to get him to cover up that fault, and thus add sin to sin; and this he can do the more easily if he can get some church member to denounce him, and threaten him with a trial. Thus, instead of evincing a feeling for the spiritual welfare of the offender, that would have a tendency to win him, and lead him to early repentance, his mind is inspired with the impression that you are seeking his ruin, and making his fault a pretext to accomplish it, thus leading him to take the defensive. Let us examine the regulations recommended in the gospel regarding the treatment of offenders. As there are different rules laid down to designate our duty toward different kinds of offenders, we will notice them separately.

I. Personal trespass. A rule is given by the Savior concerning the proper treatment of a criminal in the case of personal trespass, in Matt. 18: 15–17; but this is not given as a rule for all kinds of misdemeanors.

1. "If thy brother shall trespass against thee." Mark! this is a case of "trespass," not against somebody else, but "against thee." Then "go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone; if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother." The object of taking this first step is to "gain thy brother," and this can not be done in the spirit of a fault-finder, or a reviling spirit. Go to him in the tender spirit of the gospel, not to threaten him, or to quarrel with him, but to gain him, or recover him from the snare into which he has fallen. Do not wait till you have blackened his character by telling a score of others; but go at once; and take him alone, not to magnify his fault, to breathe out threats against him, but to save him from the tempter's snare into which he has fallen. How many take this first step with an eye to a church trial, and would omit it entirely if they could easily bring about a church trial otherwise; and thus the spirit of this requirement is repudiated. No effort is made to gain the erring brother, but the aim is to crush him.

2. "If he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses, every word may be established. And if he neglect to hear them," etc., etc. The object of taking one or two more is to bring a more powerful influence to bear upon him for his recovery, to gain him, and not to help crush him; or that he may be induced to "hear them," and thereby be saved out of the snare. Too often one or two are taken along after the first censorious visit has been made, and passion has been aroused thereby, to be witnesses in the already contemplated church trial; and often the one or two that would have the least power to influence the offender, are selected. How foreign to the spirit of the Savior's requirement—how unlikely to gain the desired end, the recovery of the erring brother. The only correct method, after having taken the first step, not with a design to chastise or upbraid the offender, but to win him back to the path of rectitude before his act is known to any one else, is then to select one or two that he will be most likely to hear, and let them try to gain him, without having the offence known any further. If these are judicious men, and have an eye to his recovery, rather than to his ruin, in nine cases out of ten they will succeed in saving the offender; indeed, in nine cases out of ten, the first step, if rightly taken, will save him. But if neither the first or second step have the effect to recover him, let still another effort be made, more powerful than the two preceding ones, to save him—not to crush him.

3. "If he neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church; but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican." Why tell it to the church? That the combined influence of the church may be brought to bear for his recovery, or that he may be influenced to hear the church; thus showing that the church should make an effort to save him. In nine cases out of ten, in this third stage of the case, if the church is alive to its duty, and actuated by the gospel motive, the offender may be saved. But how often is this duty of the church abused, the church forming itself into a kind of civil court to prove the party guilty, simply to show their power in expelling him, losing sight of the reformatory policy of the gospel, of which it should be the embodiment. It is not the duty of the church to sanction sin, but it is its duty to make an earnest effort to save the sinner, instead of crying out in chorus, "Crucify him." Let execution be the last thing thought of, and then not put into practice till it is absolutely sure that reform is impossible. What is a church but a combination of saved sinners, still liable to fall under the power of temptation, and what is its work but to save more sinners? And if this is its work, why not seek to save those in our own ranks first, when they chance to fall into sin, instead of seeking, as a retaliatory act, to plunge them into the dark, where they will be so enveloped with the chilling elements of the world, and so stung with the remembrance of your hasty act, that they can perhaps never be reached. Let expulsion come only after every step has been faithfully taken, and it is evident that reform is impossible even after a conciliatory spirit has been shown, mingled with earnest efforts to save the erring one; then, and not till then, "let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican."

II. Various faults. There are other faults into which men are liable to fall, aside from the fault of personal trespass, such as lying, swearing, dishonesty in deal with outsiders, and public crimes of various grades, or crimes that are publicly known. For this grade of faults, the following rule is laid down: "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Gal. 6: 1.

Who shall restore him? "Ye which are spiritual." Never send Satan to preach to sin. Never send a carnal man to restore a man who is overtaken in a fault. Let a spiritual man, or spiritual men, be the actors, and let the work be done "in the spirit of meekness." Always treat the offender as we would like to be treated if we should fall under the tempter's power ourselves, and never feel like saying there is no danger of my being caught in such a disgraceful trap as that, for that may not be the trap which the devil would set for you, for he has a variety of traps for different temperaments, and you may possibly be caught in some other trap; and should you chance to be overcome, would you wish to be treated with rashness, and rudely thrown out of the fold, among the devouring wolves? Or would you wish to be lifted up from the fall by those who had hearts to seek your welfare? Then help that fallen one in the same "spirit of meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted."

A man overtaken in a fault, may be approached in such a way as to lead him to place himself on the defence, and cause him to step from the platform of self-exoneration to self-justification, to his ruin; or he may be approached in such a way as to be led to feel how seriously his act has wounded Christ and his cause, and endangered himself, and thus by kindness be led to true repentance, before arousing his will to his own ruin. Love will win where sour censure will repel and place men out of our reach. Church power should be the last resort. Let gospel policy be tried first.

THE THEORY OF PURGATORY.

Purgatory is not regarded as a realm for souls of sinners, but for imperfect souls of saints, where they will experience purification, and after the lapse of a certain space of time, graduate and go to heaven. The following Catholic note on Eccl. 11: 3, is good authority to correctly represent the theory:

"The state of the soul is unchangeable when once she comes to heaven or hell; and a soul that departs this life in the state of grace, shall never fall from grace; as on the other side, a soul that dies out of the state of grace, shall never come to it. But this does not exclude a place of temporal punishment for such souls as die in a state of grace; yet so as not to be entirely pure: and therefore they shall be saved, indeed, yet so as by fire. 1 Cor. 3: 13–15."

1. The proof-text here referred to is an unfortunate one for the theory, for the text reads, as rendered in the Catholic version, "Every man's work shall be manifest; for the day of the Lord shall declare it, because it shall be revealed in fire; and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is." Although we are told in a foot-note that "his fiery trial, in the particular judgment immediately after death, shall manifest of what sort every man's work has been," the text itself locates this trial in "the day of the Lord," when soul and body will be together, instead of having the body in the grave, and the soul off in some fiery realm to be purged from sin, unless prayed out by some priest before all the impurity is burned out of it. There will be no work for priests to do in praying out souls after "the day of the Lord" comes; so this text affords no proof of a purgatory. As purgatory is said to be a place for the soul, the proof must relate to a time when it is possible, according to Catholicism, for the soul to be existing independent of the body; and when it is possible, according to Catholicism, for the priest to pray the soul out of purgatory, which cannot be the case, if ever, after "the day of the Lord" comes.

2. We are referred to Matt. 12: 36, for further proof—"Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall render an account for it in the day of judgment." The following note is appended: "This shows that there must be a place of temporal punishment hereafter where these slight faults shall be punished." All the punishment brought to view in this text is to be experienced in the day of judgment, which will dawn at the resurrection; so it does not teach any punishment for disembodied souls, but for men in their resurrected state; so it fails to furnish the most distant hint of a purgatory for souls.

3. Proof is sought in Matt. 12: 32—"It shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, nor in the world to come"; and the conclusion arrived at in a note is, "that some sins may be remitted in the world to come; and consequently, that there is a purgatory, or middle place." Even if some sins should be forgiven in "the world to come," which the text does not affirm, that world is "to come" in the sense of succeeding the present world; and hence cannot begin till this world ends, at which time the body will be resurrected, and body and soul be together. If there is a purgatory of souls now in existence, it is a world to emigrate to, and not a "world to come" either in the sense of succession, or transportation; so this text fails to pass as proof of purgatory.

4. We are referred also to Luke 12: 59. "Thou shalt not go out thence, till thou hast paid the very last mite." This text, instead of proving the doctrine of purgatory, is strong proof against it; for the sinner himself must pay the debt if he ever gets out—"till thou hast paid"—and he hast nothing to pay with, and hence, this is equivalent to a declaration that he never can come out. If he could pay the debt with repentance, there would be no need of having the priest pray him out. But this casting of the sinner "into prison" does not occur at death, but after he is delivered to the Judge, "who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing"; hence, the text proves nothing about disembodied souls in purgatory, or elsewhere, but refers to a scene after the judgment, when body and soul will be together.

5. We are pointed to the "spirits in prison," referred to in 1 Pet. 3: 19, on which the following note is given: "See here a proof of a third place, or middle state of souls; for these spirits, in prison, to whom Christ went to preach after his death, were not in heaven; nor yet in the hell of the damned; because heaven is no prison; and Christ did not go to preach to the damned."

That Peter is not here speaking about preaching to disembodied spirits, but to persons, using that form of speech by which a part is put for the whole, is evident from the fact that he tells us in the sixth verse of the next chapter—"For this cause was the gospel preached to them that are dead"—not that were dead at the time of the preaching, but are dead now; hence, disembodied spirits were not preached to unless they are dead. These persons, called spirits synecdochically, were preached to "in the days of Noah," through the agency of that Spirit by which Christ was quickened, or raised from the dead, preaching through Noah, just as Peter elsewhere affirms of the prophets—"The spirit of Christ which was in them did signify when it testified beforehand," etc.

These proofs of a purgatory for the souls of the dead, weak as they are, are quite as strong as the arguments of Protestants in favor of a hell for disembodied sinners—a hell to precede the judgment. The truth is, neither the threats nor the promises of God apply to disembodied men, from the fact that they are only men of imagination, having no real existence; hence, these threats and promises must all be realized subsequent to the coming of Christ to judge the race. Without a judgment, how would it be ascertained who should suffer in purgatory, even if there were such a place in existence? But this question is no more of a detriment to Catholicism, than the following is to Protestantism: How are men to enter heaven or hell in an unjudged state? And how are they to be judged before the "appearing" of Christ, seeing that epoch is specified as the time for both the dead and the living to be judged? And when we remember that the class to be "delivered up" by death are to be "judged," thus proving that the material man is accountable, instead of an immaterial spirit-man, how can we believe either in the salvation or damnation of spirit-men in the past, or in the future? God will save or damn only the class that are to be judged, and not before they are judged.

CATHOLIC COMMENTS ON PROPHECY.—Catholic notes on Prophecy, found in the Douay version of the Bible, may interest some. We will refer to a few items:—

1. In commenting on the second chapter of Daniel, it is claimed that the four sections of the metallic image represent the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman empires; but when we come to the setting up of the kingdom of God, described in the forty-fourth verse, we have this note: "The kingdom of Christ in the Catholic church, which cannot be destroyed"; thus making four literal kingdoms, and the fifth spiritual.

2. The four beasts of the seventh of Daniel are explained in the same manner; the ten horns are allowed to represent the ten divisions of the Roman empire, but the little horn is made to represent a personal antichrist. Homely people do not take much pride in their own pictures, and are often willing to have it understood that the shadow of some other one is intended.

3. The ram and goat of the eighth of Daniel are explained to represent the Medo-Persian and Grecian empires; the notable horn to mean Alexander; the four horns to mean the four divisions of the Grecian empire; the little horn that became great is applied to Antiochus, not liking to admit Papal Rome an ingredient of this doomed horn.

On the Book of Revelation, we have this note: "Many think that most things set down from the fourth chapter to the end, will not be fulfilled till a little time before the end of the world. Others are of opinion that a great part of them, and particularly the fall of the wicked Babylon, happened at the destruction of paganism, by the destruction of heathen Rome, and its persecuting heathen emperors."

Thus it must be located either before or after the supremacy of papacy, to exonerate themselves; but why does not an "infallible Pope" tell them which exposition is right?

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August [illegible], 1871, voted to raise One Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

A. N. SEYMOUR.

Christian union is a most precious theme for the human mind to contemplate. Without it, all is disorder and confusion, and no permanent good can be accomplished in saving sinful men. Would we do good, be a blessing to fallen humanity, successfully carrying the good news of eternal salvation to sinful mortals, and honor Christ who has redeemed us from moral darkness by his blood, which cleanseth from all sin, we, as his chosen disciples, must pay special regard to his heaven-ordained counsel touching this rule of life. No one can be approbated for a moment by Him who has called us into his service and vineyard to labor, who does not strictly and invariably seek to establish and carry forward this all-important principle. Union is a bond of perfectness, by which all enterprises, small or great, temporal or spiritual, religious or political, are sustained and carried forward with success; and the more perfect the union, the greater the success and work accomplished.

Christ Jesus, the chief and only lawful head of his Bride (the church), positively requires this of every branch and member that draws sap and nourishment from the "true vine." When every member of "the body" is permeated with this soul-stirring element, which should be stronger than death, there is nothing but love, harmony, peace, good will, and kindness, existing among its members; and these harmonious characteristics always produce concord of action in all the labor of love for the redemption of a sinful race. Whenever we discover jars, strife, and irregularities in Christ's church, some element or elements that do not lawfully belong to the body have been introduced, and need to be removed as speedily as possible, lest the whole body be demoralized and defiled.

The Scriptures of truth invariably identify the church of Christ as one heaven-appointed, organized body, with Christ at its head, to oversee, govern and direct all its energies. This body has one faith, one hope, one spirit; one calling, one unity of action, and only one; and all its members are baptized into it, by the "one Spirit"; and if led by this Spirit none of them will under any circumstance seek to demoralize the body by introducing human schemes into it.

Adding to or taking from God's most precious rule of life, is exceedingly dangerous work to be engaged in; and for one I choose not to assume such a fearful responsibility, and consequently I am content to stand only on scriptural grounds; and the word makes us wise unto salvation, and thoroughly furnishes us unto every good word and work. Christ prays most fervently, Paul beseeches most faithfully, that God's people may "be one," "perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." Shall we sanction by word and deed this Christ-anointed prayer and counsel? or shall we by word and deed show to an unbelieving world that our wisdom is superior to God's, who is infinite in all his divine arrangement for the salvation of man? Oh! may heaven grant that all his law-abiding children may back right down from every human invention, square on to a "thus saith the Lord," and stand there with an undeviating firmness till the Master says, "Well done"! come and inherit the kingdom, etc., irrespective of the "good words" and "fair speeches" of those who subvert whole houses and seek to draw away disciples after them; for Paul says—"Mark those that cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine that ye have learned, and avoid them; for they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly, and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple."

Some religionists say that it is perfectly right that all the divisions, creeds, and denominational names now extant, should exist, for they produce controversy, and wake up thought and inquiry. Those who make this claim never should raise their voice, or lift their feet, in order to suppress any new creed, sect or name, that is struggling into being, but generally they are the first ones to dogmatize.

But can there be union in the flock of God? I answer, Yes; if not, Christ never would have commanded it, neither would Paul have taught it. On what grounds, then, can it be effected? I answer, by covenanting with the Author of our being that his counsel shall supercede all the wisdom of man, and govern every act and motive of our entire being. Standing on this scriptural ground, as did the apostolic church, every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ at the present day is under special obligation to drop forever all creeds and denominational names, that so wickedly and extensively demoralize the professedly religious world, causing the enemies of the cross of Christ to rejoice and make capital out of these entirely useless and sad departures from the "old paths" of the Christian religion. Most the church of Christ, through sectarian aspirants, be rent and driven into factious parties, and forced on to unscriptural grounds, for the purpose of gratifying the unsanctified ambition of some would-be dignitaries, and by so doing subject themselves to the piercing shots that are thundered forth with tremendous effect against the Bible and our holy religion? Dear reader, stop a moment, and read an extract from an infidel paper called the Index, which speaks volumes as to the importance of christian union,—union in faith, hope, labor, love, and zeal.

DEPLORABLE CONDITION OF THE CHRISTIAN WORLD.

Friends, at present the christian world is a great array of hostile camps. There is no unity, there is no fellowship, there is no common understanding, no common enthusiasm, no common persuasion, no common belief, no common purpose. While some are striving to get men into a heaven beyond the grave, others are striving to make this world they live in a place worthy to be called heaven. We are all at cross purposes. We are all launching our thunderbolts at each other's breasts. The condition of Christendom is a chaos. The sects absolutely refuse to do justice one to another. They will not take the pains to understand each other's leading thought. They will not go out of the way an inch to put their hands into each other's hands to help on any common cause. Our churches are fortified castles. Our pulpits are heights from which we storm the batteries of our fellow believers. No member of one sect will exchange pulpits with the member of another sect. There is incessant misrepresentation—may I not say incessant abuse? . . . It is the commonest thing to find words twisted out of their connection, if not turned upside down, arguments misquoted, and the very reputation of men who do not hold the same form of faith, their very personal reputation, undermined and broken down, if possible, for sectarian purposes alone. . . . Now we say, let this be done away with. Come to some mutual understanding. Do not forever be annihilating each other's work. Do not forever be subverting one another's foundation. Be men.

Dear reader, can you, after reading the above infidel testimony, wonder why there there are no more conversions to God and the Bible from an unbelieving world? Can you any longer wonder why there are so few, comparatively speaking, of the human family whose footsteps are turned towards Christ the Life-giver? At this presentation of facts staring the religious world fully in the face at every move they make, is it to be wondered at that it requires in these days such strong efforts to move people to discover their lost and undone situation out of Christ? It is no marvel. If religious teachers would bring themselves into harmony with Christ's prayer, as recorded in the seventeenth of John, and then labor to impress the command of Christ as recorded in the thirteenth of John upon all religious hearts, so that it become indelibly fixed as one very important rule of life, we should then witness an overwhelming interest in the things that pertain to life and godliness, and by such demonstrations of unity, love, fraternal regard, and earnest christian zeal, "all men" would be forced to acknowledge the power of Jesus' dying love for a sinful race.

About thirty years ago, we became fully satisfied that all creeds, denominational names, sectism in all its multiplied forms, were nowhere sanctioned by Christ or the apostles, but keenly rebuked; so that we dropped the adjective, Free-will Baptist, and resolved to stand only on scriptural grounds henceforth; and, by God's grace assisting, we intend to be found on the altar of God fully and always, and determined that no sectarian gale from the east or west, north or south, shall move us from this platform ordained of heaven.

In conclusion, we are, as we have been for over a quarter of a century, fully committed to the precious truth of the speedy, personal coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and its kindred truths; and we rejoice to know that there are positive indications of speedy deliverance. May we all realize this fact, and "be found of Him in peace, without spot and blameless."

SABBATARIANISM.—No. 1.

"THE MARK OF THE BEAST."

L. BOUTELL.

In all the writings of Sabbath keepers, they impress the reader with the fearfulness of receiving "the mark of the beast," or his image, as brought to view in Rev. 14: 9–12.

They claim that the present truth requires to keep from the mark by "keeping the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus"; and then refer us directly to the fourth commandment in the decalogue. In a little tract, entitled the "Mark of the Beast," they say that Sunday, Sabbath, or counterfeit Sabbath keeping, is the mark of the beast, which will bring such dire judgments upon them, as to make them "drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation." Rev. 14: 10. Hear the author in his tract. He says: "Constantine's decree attached no peculiarity of the Sabbath to the first day." "This was the work of the Romish church." "And this is what constitutes the Sunday a rival or counterfeit of the Lord's Sabbath, or sign." "This is what must make it the mark of the beast." "Here is our test, and by this we denounce Sunday keeping as not good," because it is the mark of the beast.

What, then, is the mark of the beast according to the Seventh-day Sabbath keeper's faith? Keeping first day, or Sunday. How shall we escape the wine of the wrath of God? By keeping the Seventh-day Sabbath, according to the commandment. How does the commandment read? "Six days may work be done, but in the seventh is the Sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord. Whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath, he surely shall be put to death." Ex. 31: 15. Now the keeping of this commandment, says the writer, shall keep us from the sad dilemma of receiving his mark. And does any Sabbatarian keep this commandment? They will not answer in the affirmative. Neither do they claim to. Why, then, in the name of christian honesty, urge and bind it upon others?

Again, if the keeping of Sunday is the mark, then it is no more to be received in the last days than centuries in the past. To connect the keeping of the first day, or the non-keeping of it; the keeping of the seventh day, or the non-keeping of it, with the mark of the "beast," is as foreign from the truth as to claim that Christ came at the destruction of Jerusalem.

When is the beast to be worshiped? Not till the beast has made his appearance. And they teach that a beast, or government, is coming up in the United States, which shall enact laws which shall compel us to obey, contrary to the teaching of the Bible; and a loyalty to this beast will be the receiving of the "mark." And they admit the coming up of this beast, or persecuting power, is yet in the future. Now I ask, in all kindness, can any one receive the mark of the beast till the beast appears? Then there is no fear yet. The urging of the fear of the mark as yet, according to their own teaching, is premature. And still, for the last twenty years, their teaching has been that the keeping of the Seventh-day Sabbath was the only way to shun the mark of the beast, for this was the keeping "of the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus." But this I consider premature, and out of place, and I feel bad to have it blended with Adventism, and crowded upon us as "present truth," when, in fact, it is not truth. But when mixed with the blessed doctrine of the Savior's coming, it is calculated to lead the honest-hearted astray from Christ, and bring them imperceptibly into bondage. I pray the Lord to keep us in the life and liberty of the gospel of Christ, and save us all from going back into bondage.

THE SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

BRO. GRANT:—From two days' observation at this meeting, I can say, in many respects it was the best one I ever attended. I attribute this to one peculiar feature noticeable,—a unanimity of sentiment which seemed to prevail, more especially upon the subject of entire consecration to God. At the meeting in the N. Y. State tent, in which this subject was made a specialty, there was some discussion, or testimony, which may be of interest to those who had not the privilege of being present. As the leader gave opportunity for questions, a number were put which brought out important facts or replies.

One question was in relation to the passage of Scripture which speaks of being sanctified through the Spirit and belief of the truth. The question was—As there are other denominations who do not endorse the views of Adventists, can they be sanctified? The answer was, Most certainly, but in a qualified sense; and to make the matter plain, it is not required of a christian to understand all the details in relation to any doctrine of the Bible, in order to have a pure heart; or, in other words, errors in the head may exist in connection with a holy life. But in order to retain the witness of our acceptance with God, we must walk in the light of the Scriptures as far as we see it; and it is not to be supposed that if any one denies any of the doctrines thereof, after having been enlightened respecting them, he can claim the promise that the blood of Christ cleanses from all sin.

Another question was—As there are many churches and christians who are trying to serve God, but are comparatively ignorant of the manner and time of Christ's second coming, and kindred doctrines, what is the policy to pursue to get them interested in these subjects? The answer was—Common sense is very important in the use of means for this end. Those who have never heard upon these subjects, except from those who ridicule them, have many prejudices which must be removed before they can be induced to hear candidly and investigate them; and it is important to become acquainted with and have their sympathy before giving them strong meat.

The leader referred to his course in San Francisco. He attended several of the social meetings, of different denominations, before preaching in the place, and then not until he was invited; after which he found no difficulty in having audience with the people.

WESLEY GROVE, MONTGOMERY, N. Y.

After leaving the Springfield meeting, I spent a day and two nights at the Methodist camp at Hatfield, and was much pleased with what I saw. One peculiar feature was entire consecration to God. Dr. Butler, who introduced Methodism into India several years since, was there. He told me he had attended nine campmeetings in New England this season, and this was the key-note of them all. He had just come from a meeting at Willimantic, Ct., where he saw several preachers at the altar groaning for free redemption. He was convinced God is preparing the church for some great event. He believed it was the introduction of the millennium. So we believe. All the meetings he attended were fruitful in conversions. There were forty at Willimantic. The Presiding Elder in his opening address said just what an Adventist would have said in relation to the developments of this age; that it is a rushing age; an age of wickedness, and demanding activity in the churches.

I believe the final preparation to meet the Bridegroom is being made, and the Holy Spirit is preaching to many who have never heard of the manner and time of his coming; and thousands of such, no doubt, will go into the kingdom, while the foolish virgins will be shut out.

I saw at this meeting at the Newburgh, N. Y., district the same earnestness on the part of christians for entire consecration to God; and this development has a meaning, and should arouse saint and sinner to awake from sleep, for the day hasteth greatly. "Behold the Judge standeth at the door." "Behold he cometh with clouds." D. N. SMITH.

BRO. S. C. WELLCOME writes:—"The cause is prospering in this part of the State. The truth is finding freer access to the hearts of the people. New doors are being opened, but laborers are few. May God help and bless that few, and give them an unction from on high, that they may have power to sound forth the glorious message of a soon coming King."

PARIS AS IT IS.

PARIS, August 7, 1871.—We arrived in this city a week since, from Geneva, and have employed the time in glancing at all parts of the city. Having resided here one year, from 1867 to 1868, at a period when Paris was in all its glory, we were prepared to judge as to the devastation caused by the war. In passing from the depot to our hotel, we noticed on all the public buildings, and over the entrance to all the churches, painted in large letters, the words, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity." A high-sounding watchword, and the cheapest means of guarding the place from the fury of the mob. Passing down Rue Rivoli, we saw the blackened and broken walls of the Hotel de Ville (City Hall,) a building which costs upwards of 100,000,000 francs. It was commenced by Cardinal Richelieu over three hundred years since.

Passing on, we came to the Tuileries, also in ruins, though a part of the end called "The Louvre" is not burned. Opposite this is the Palais Royale, which we saw was but partly destroyed. We saw also, on the corner of Rue Rivoli and Rue Castiglione, the Hotel of the Minister of Finance (all public buildings are called hotels) all in ruins. Aside from these there were but few private dwellings which had been burned.

From reports which we had seen in the papers we expected to see the best part of Paris a mass of ruins. On the contrary, we find that not one building in a thousand has been burned. Yet nearly every building in some quarters has been more or less marred and defaced by bullet shots during the reign of the Commune.

INTERESTING FACTS.

The number of horses, cabs, omnibuses, etc., seems to be as numerous as ever, though we see strings of horses pass through the city (we suppose from the country) every day. What very much surprised us, was to find that the same shops and stores had the same occupants as when we left Paris three years since—not so much change as occurs every year in New York on the first of May. The garden of the Tuileries presents the same beautiful appearance as when we saw it last. Not a tree has been cut down, and there are the same beautiful fountains, statuary, flower-beds, etc. In Place Concorde we saw that only a few of the colossal statues had been injured, and they were being repaired. And all up the Champs Elysees to the Arch of Triumph, a distance of two miles, we did not miss a tree, shrub, flower, fountain or statue. This is the most beautiful spot in the world, throwing the boasted New York Central Park completely in the shade. The lower end of this space, which is about two thousand feet wide, is filled with as many artificial beauties as the taste of man can devise. The upper end is two hundred and twenty feet wide, the roadway occupying eighty feet, and the sidewalks and double rows of shade-trees occupying the balance.

CLEAN STREETS.

Paris has no equal in the world for clean streets. From the present appearance of these streets, I should never suspect that a barricade had been raised in them. Every principal street is swept four or five times a day—or rather men are kept constantly on the street to remove any impurities that may accumulate; and the whole is kept thoroughly watered. In front of the house where I am now stopping—a private street—there is now a stream of water flowing through the gutters, and a man with a great brush-broom is swashing it up and washing the stones for more than a yard from the curbstone. The other day I was afraid to throw away the stump of my cigar, lest an official should see and rebuke me. This is no exaggeration, but a literal statement of facts. So that Paris still is the most beautiful city in the world.—From European Correspondence of the Boston Transcript.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

VERSAILLES, Sept. 14. The disarmament of the National Guard has commenced. There was no resistance to the enforcement of the decree of the Assembly, and tranquility prevails everywhere.

LONDON, Sept. 14. Dispatches from various points in Russia show that the Asiatic cholera still scourges dreadfully the central and southern portions of the Empire.

FLORENCE, Sept 13. The Opinione states that Count de Remusat, the French Minister declares that France accepts accomplished facts in Italy. She only wishes to see the Spiritual independence of the Pope secured. A renewal of cordial relations between France and Italy is therefore possible.

LONDON, Sept. 18th. A telegraphic despatch from Shanghae says that the Courier of that place announces that the French diplomatic representative in China has received a telegram from his government directing him to make a common cause with Americans in the war with Corea.

The Russian press is generally now vigorous in its attacks upon Prussia and Germany.

Advices from Zanzibar announce the receipt of positive intelligence of the safety of Dr. Livingstone. The authority for the statement is unquestionable and the truth certain. A party of Americans are hurrying into the interior with the object of rescuing the Doctor from his perilous position.

ROME, 18th. It is said that the Republicans are preparing for a manifestation on the 20th instant, the first anniversary of occupation of this city by Italian troops, but no disorder is apprehended.

OPENING OF THE MONT CENIS TUNNEL.—The Italians will inaugurate with solemn official pomp and ceremony, on Sunday, the 17th instant, the formal opening of the Mont Cenis Tunnel. This gigantic triumph of engineering skill begun in 1857 by the State of Sardinia, to connect Savoy with Piedmont, has been pushed forward against many discouragements, until now, after a lapse of thirteen years a tunnel has been cut directly through the bowels of the Alps. The glory of the enterprise must always remain with Italy—although other powers have from time to time endeavored to get a share. France, when she annexed a portion of Savoy, agreed to contribute a certain portion of the expense of working the tunnel. But the French soon saw that they had ruined Marseilles as the port of departure and arrival for the overland mail by helping to bore the Mont Cenis tunnel, because the latter work makes the road from Calais to Brindisi much shorter than by any other route, bringing them, in fact, within sixty hours of each other. The tunnel's effects will be greater than those of the Suez Canal in revolutionizing commerce. Trains are now passing daily and without any delay, and enough experimental trains have been run to prove the entire safety of the transit. Fancy a tunnel 4377 feet above the level of the sea, and 3280 below the crest of the mountain! Cavour, who projected the enterprise, could hardly have imagined that it would be so quickly accomplished. The celebration on Sunday will be a magnificent spectacle and one in which all Italy may take a just pride.—Journal.

FRANCO-PRUSSIAN COMPLICATIONS.—The latest European correspondence announces that there is not so much confidence in the government of Papa Thiers, among the gentlemen over the Rhine, as there was. That amiable old gentleman having commenced by calmly submitting to the sacrifice of Alsace and Lorraine, although he heard their formal groans and protests, it was to have been supposed that he would have continued regardless of their fate. But trouble constantly arises between the two governments concerning the provinces, and Prussia begins to threaten to annul all its promises to M. Thiers, and to come back into the other places with its troops. The Prussian military is furious for extreme measures, and would tear France in pieces could it have its way. Prussia has been too difficult with M. Thiers, and France will not forget it.

DOMESTIC.

THE WEATHER AT THE SOUTH.—The Savannah Republican of the 10th inst. says that since the 18th of August hardly a day has passed without gales and rain storms. It is a question if the same amount of water has fallen during a like period for twenty years. On the other hand, northern Georgia and eastern Tennessee are almost desolated by a drouth. Such is the effect of the calamity in eastern Tennessee that the people will demand the reduction of the State tax to a minimum. In wide districts the value of wheat crops did not exceed that of the grain that was sowed. The corn crop, save along rivers, is almost valueless, and, of course, the hog crop will be a failure.

A NOTABLE MARRIAGE.—On Thursday morning, the 7th inst., Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte and Mrs. Nesbitt Edgar, a grand-daughter of Daniel Webster, were married at Newport, R. I., by Rev. Father Grace, of Newport, assisted by Rev. Father Hughes, of this city.

Mr. Bonaparte is the grandson of Madame Patterson Bonaparte, and grandnephew of Napoleon I. He was born in this country in 1832, graduated at West Point, entered the French army, where he has won for himself much honor. At the siege of Sebastopol he received a decoration from the sultan for gallant and meritorious conduct. His face has something of the Napoleonic cast, and he is said to possess fine abilities, amiable manners and a disposition which gains him friends always. By the laws of the Catholic church, he is, in case of the death of the Prince Imperial, heir to the throne of France, should the family again come into power. The church never declared the marriage of Jerome Bonaparte to Miss Patterson null and void, and Madame Patterson Bonaparte has always prophesied that her grandson would eventually occupy the throne. This is the first instance of a Protestant being married in a Catholic church. Even King Charles was not allowed that privilege when he took a bride of another faith, and a special dispensation was procured on this occasion. Mrs. Bonaparte clings to her old belief, and this favor is considered a very great one in the Roman church.

In Brief.

—— A Prussian Colonel, in a work on the late war, says the German victories were obtained chiefly by numerical superiority. The French were well officered and fought well, but were always overpowered by numbers.——By hard work with her needle alone, Miss Eliza Pettibone has earned money sufficient to purchase a church for the Methodists in the small town in Maryland where she resides.——During the visit of a Turkish man-of-war to Rio Janeiro a few years ago, the officers discovered a large number of Mohammedans among the black population, and one of them left the ship and remained behind to instruct these wanderers from the fold in the true faith of Islamism, from which they had ignorantly made many departures. In a recently published work, the self-appointed missionary says there are 19,000 Mohammedans in Brazil.——While some prominent members were quarrelling in the French Assembly as to who overthrew the established government, a quiet member observed, "But for the 4th of September you would all still be licking the Emperor's boots." He was compelled to leave the Assembly, and one man tried to strangle him on the way out.

NOTICE.

At a meeting of the ministers and some of the delegates, representing South Western Massachusetts, South Western Vermont, and Eastern New York, held on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 25th, 1871, it was deemed absolutely necessary, in order for a better co-operation on the part of ministers and churches, and for the advancement of the cause of the soon coming kingdom of Christ, that a conference be organized, comprising the churches and ministers of the above territory, who are looking for the "return of the Nobleman," and speedy redemption of the faithful of all ages, and the eternal reign of Christ on this earth. We, the undersigned, ministers of the gospel, therefore, do hereby make a call for such a Conference, to be held at Hoosac, N. Y., in the Advent Church, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1871, and to hold over the following Sunday; and for all the churches, who desire the cause of truth advanced in their midst, and who co-operate with the objects and interests of such a conference, to represent themselves by delegates duly appointed, and where there are no churches holding regular meetings, but where isolated brethren live, that they also come, that the Conference may know what can be done to build up the cause in their locality.

Each church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every twenty-five members.

Let there be a general rally, from all parts of the Hoosac Valley, of our brethren and sisters to this meeting. Come in the name of our soon coming King. Come filled with the Spirit. Come to speak for God, that you may comfort the church, and admonish the sinner. Make every possible effort to attend this great gathering of the saints. Ample accommodations will be made for all who come.

We expect to see the following churches in Western Mass., represented by delegates: Plainfield, Savoy, Charlemont, North Adams, and others in that section of the State.

From Eastern New York: Sandy Hill, Fort Edward, Saratoga, Hebron, Hoosac, Low Hampton, and all others in that part of the State.

West. Vermont: Rutland, Castleton, Poultney, Woodford, and all others this side the mountains.

Hoosac is located on the Boston and Troy R. R. Those coming to the meeting will stop at Hoosac Corners. Teams will be at the depot on the arrival of the two and three o'clock P. M. trains, to take those who come to the meeting to the place of the conference.

J. WILBER, R. MOSHER,
R. L. HARRISON, C. PIKE,
Z. D. BAIRD, H. K. FLAGG,
A. W. SIBLEY.

P. S. Let us hear from other ministers and churches, located in the Hoosac Valley, immediately. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.
Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Dedication.

The dedication of the Second Advent Chapel at Chelsea, Mass., will take place Thursday afternoon, Sept. 28th, at three o'clock. Bros. Couch and Grant will be present to preach the word adapted to the occasion, after which there will be meeting Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and longer if desirable. Let the brethren from abroad come and enjoy the feast with us. L. BOUTELL, for the Church.

Notice.

The Mission Tent will be pitched in Fitchburg, Mass., Friday, Sept. 22d, and continue certain days, as the Lord will. Meetings afternoons and evenings. Per order.

ENOCH MORRILL.
L. BOUTELL.

Dedication.

The new Advent Hall at Highlandville, Mass., will be dedicated to the service of God, Friday, Sept. 29th, at one o'clock P. M. Meetings will be continued on Saturday and over the following Sabbath. Eld. J. Couch and other preaching brethren will be present and assist.

S. G. LOWE.

Ct. Conference.

The next annual session of the A. C. Conference of Connecticut will be held in Bristol, Ct., commencing Oct. 18th, and holding over the following Sabbath. It is earnestly hoped that every church in the State will be represented at this conference by their delegates. There is important business to be attended to. Our beloved President, Bro. Dickinson, has been removed from us by the hand of death. His sweet counsel and advice we shall have no more. The chair is vacated. Some one must be chosen to fill it. Brethren, do attend to this call.

B. HITCHCOCK, Secretary.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting in Pittsburg, N. H., commencing Oct. 7th, at one o'clock P. M., and continue as long as the Lord directs. The tent will be pitched at the Terrill school-house. This meeting will be a free one. We believe in preaching and living the whole gospel.

U. G. LADD.
F. S. RANSOM.
GEO. E. BROWN.

Notice.

The twelfth annual conference with the church of God in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., will commence on Friday evening, Sept. 22nd, and continue over Sunday. A general attendance is expected. Conveyance will be at Croft's station, on the N. Y. Central R. R., to meet trains from the east at two o'clock P. M., and from the west at four o'clock P. M. Eld. C. F. Sweet will lecture through the coming week and Sabbath, on the subject of Christ's near approach and kingdom.

G. STRONG.
M. WHITAKER.
B. C. SIMONDS.

Notice.

The Maine S. A. C. Conference will be held in the Union Chapel, South Windham, Me., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 10th, at two o'clock P. M., and hold as long as thought proper. It is thought best to hold the Ministerial School in connection with this conference. C. GOUD, President.

Notice.

There will be a quarterly conference and protracted meeting in West Gardiner (Spear's Corner), commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 28th, and hold over Sunday. A general invitation is given to all. We hope our preaching brethren will make arrangements to attend this meeting.

In behalf of the church, H. B. SEVEY.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting at Young Hickory, Troupsburg, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 29th, to continue over Sunday. Bro. J. W. Taylor and others are expected to preach the word. We hope there will be a general attendance at this meeting.

For the brethren, E. H. EGGLESTON.

Notice.

The Advent Quarterly Conference of Nova Scotia will be held at Bear Point, Shelburn Co., N. S., commencing Saturday, Oct. 14th. A general invitation is extended to all. Come, brethren, praying that the Lord may direct us in all our work, and make the conference a blessing to his cause.

WM. HALLIAY.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Eastern District of Wisconsin will be held at Merrimack, Sauk Co., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 22nd, 1871, and hold over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general rally of ministers and members, not only to enjoy the feast, but to labor for the perishing. Friends from the adjoining districts are also cordially invited to meet with us.

GEO. THOMSON.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a meeting in Mr. C. Moulton's grove, in Buxton Centre, Me., Sunday, Sept. 24th. Some faithful man of God are expected to be present to preach the gospel. All are invited. Come and help us. E. S. MOULTON.

Notice.

There will be preaching at Knowlesville, three o'clock P. M., every Sunday, for seven or eight weeks. The time will be divided between Elders J. H. Whitmore and W. Vreeland. Will all the brethren and sisters pray for us, that this one more effort may be crowned with success.

For the brethren, DAVID McCLELLAN.

Notice.

All preachers wishing to preach in Rutland, Vt., will please correspond with the deacons of the church.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

NEW TRACTS.

WHO ARE SADDUCEES? or, TRUTH VINDICATED. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By GEO. THOMSON.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A COLPORTEUR'S NOTES, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. AG'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. LIFE AND DEATH THEOLOGY: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. IMMATERIALISM: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. DEATH AND THE DEAD, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. THE COMING JUDGMENT: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

"THIEF ON THE CROSS."

BY ELDER GEORGE THOMSON.

A New Tract.

One of the best ever published on the above subject. Just the thing to scatter widely. Price, 3 cts. single; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail. AG'T.

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY. This is a work on the man of sin, as viewed in the light of historic testimony. Price by mail, single copy, 5 cts.; postage 2 cts.; 50 cts. per dozen; $3.00 per hundred.

"TALKS ABOUT PEOPLE'S STOMACHS,"

Is the title of a new work just issued by Dr. Dio Lewis, of Boston.

"Like all of his works, it is brimful of common sense. We do not know of another writer on matters pertaining to health, who says so many good things as Dr. Lewis."—Crisis of Dec. 7th.

"HEALTH BY GOOD LIVING."

A VALUABLE WORK, BY W. W. HALL, M. D.

These two works are for sale at this office, and will be sent by mail, on receipt of publisher's price. $1.50 each. AG'T.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY.

ON SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

By Elder James H. Whitmore. Published by the Western Advent Christian Association.

This little volume of three hundred pages is a valuable contribution to the literature of the subject on which it treats, and is worthy of a wide circulation, not only among those who hold to the views advocated therein, but among others who have not given them due thought and investigation.

Price, single copy, postpaid, $1.00. Six copies, by mail, $5.00; by express, $4.20.

TRUSTING.

M. S. HORNE.

I will trust thee, blessed Savior,
All life's toilsome journey through;
And I know thou wilt be faithful,
Else thy word would prove untrue.

Trust thy hand to guide me ever
In the strait and narrow way,
That no tempting, pleasant pathway
May lure my feet astray.

I'll trust thee for all things needed,
For the promised hundred fold;
The kingdom and its righteousness,
And the tried, untarnished gold.

Oh, I feel 'tis safe to trust thee,
'Tis thy pleasure that I should;
And I have the sweet assurance
That thou carest for my good.

But I know, till that glad morning
When I thy face shall see,
I cannot estimate the good
Of trusting, Lord, in thee.

THE REPENTANT THIEF.

THEOLOGICAL DIFFICULTIES.

O. R. FASSETT.

Jesus was numbered with the transgressors (Isa. 53: 12), being crucified between two "malefactors." Both "railed on him," joining with the mocking multitude for a time. Matt. 27: 38–44; Mark 15: 27–32. One, however, subsequently repented of his sin, and thus rebuked the other: "Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss." Luke 23: 40, 41. Then, turning to the Lord, in the deepest penitence he offers up the following petition to the crucified Savior, in whom he by faith recognizes the coming King of the kingdom of God on earth: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Luke 23: 42. To this Jesus gives the favorable and desired answer which, translated literally, reads—"Amen I say to thee to-day with me thou shalt be in the paradise."

This passage is cited more than all others by immaterialists, to prove a conscious intermediate state between death and the resurrection—a state of rewards in death—the departure of believers immediately to heaven when they die—the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and of a never-dying spirit in man.

There are but a few passages in all the Scriptures which are now relied upon to prove these doctrines; though until recently it has been supposed that the Scriptures abounded with them. This is a familiar one, and in all mouths. Next is "the parable of the rich man and Lazarus." Then follow three or four passages in St. Paul's writings; and, together with one lone scripture from the Old Testament (Eccl. 12: 7), make up the sum. When these are quoted, all the Scriptures are nearly exhausted of any proofs which in the slightest degree can be made to sustain the popular traditions above alluded to, and advocated by immaterialists.

The more advanced in the study, knowledge, and discussion of these subjects now, do not rely upon the Scriptures for proof of the doctrine of "the immortality of the soul," but appeal to reason and nature; and they are plain to declare that they and not the Scriptures are their final appeal. But these no more sustain their theories than the Scriptures themselves.

The object of this article is, to show that this passage (Luke 23: 43) does not sustain the doctrines for which it is so often quoted in proof. There are in the way of the common interpretation, which we proceed to give.

The Scriptures cannot be harmonized in any possible manner with the popular interpretation. And any interpretation or explanation of any passage in the Bible which cannot be in harmony with every other passage in the Scriptures, when rightly understood, but causes endless confusion, cannot be a true one. We may be assured of this.

1. Let us compare the following scriptures: "The rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments." Luke 16: 22, 23. This passage is invariably quoted to prove that wicked men go immediately to hell when they die. Be it so; but here is a passage found in the Psalms and quoted by Peter in proof of the resurrection of our Lord "the third day" after his crucifixion. "He, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in HELL, neither did his flesh see corruption" (Acts 2: 31); from which it appears in the argument of Peter in the context, that Christ's "soul" was in "hell" during the whole period of the three days he was dead. The original word for "hell" in this passage is the same as used in Luke 16: 23. And as Luke wrote the "Acts," as well as the book bearing his name, could he otherwise than refer to the same locality, in both instances, by the use of the same word? Then compare the following, written by the same Evangelist: "Verily I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Luke 23: 43. This is given as translated and punctuated in our common version.

Queries. Are hell and "paradise" one and the same place? Or, if they are not, and Christ's "soul" was in "hell" three days, or during the period of his death, could he and the thief have gone in company to paradise the day of their crucifixion, even if the thief went there? Furthermore, it is maintained that Jesus "went and preached unto the spirits in prison" (1 Pet. 3: 19), not saints, of course, but sinners in the prison of hell, during the period of his entombment, that is, by his "spirit"; hence the language in "the Creed"—"He descended into hell." If this was the case, how could he have gone to paradise, and yet been in hell preaching to the spirit prisoners there during the interim of his death? Will the theologians solve these questions, and tell us how these things could be?

We have no difficulty with these several passages ourselves, and all are in harmony with our exposition of them; but we know not how these can be harmonized with the common interpretation. We challenge the theologians of the immaterialistic school to harmonize these scriptures with their interpretations. They cannot do it, we are bold to affirm.

2. Notice the following: "And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom." Luke 16: 22. This passage is quoted in support of the doctrine of immediate reward after death of believers, in a destined place of happiness. Very well; and granted for the argument that Abraham's bosom and Paradise represent the same blessed locality in the universe. Then let us compare (Acts 2: 31) "His soul—in hell," with (Luke 16: 23) "And in hell he lifted up his eyes being in torments," with (Luke 23: 43), "Verily I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Then we inquire, Are Abraham's bosom, Paradise, and hell, one and the same place? But to avoid the difficulty it is said that Abraham's bosom and hell are different apartments of hades, which is "a place of departed spirits," and that when Christ and the thief died their spirits went to a separate apartment from that occupied by the spirits of the damned. Then we inquire, Does Abraham's bosom, or Paradise, constitute an apartment of hell? John Wesley maintained, from Luke 16: 22, that Abraham's bosom was "a place of separate spirits," and argued therefrom that "the doctrine that good men go to heaven when they die, has not the least foundation in the word of God." Others have adopted Wesley's opinion, yet quote Paul's "desire to depart and be with Christ" (Phil. 1: 23); "Absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord" (2 Cor. 5: 8), in proof that good men go directly to heaven when they die, "where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God."

Query. Where did Christ and the thief then go that day? Did they go to "a place of separate spirits," not "into heaven itself," or did they go to "heaven," or descend into "hell"? Where did they go? Did they visit the three places before sun-down, hell, paradise, and heaven? But how could they do that in company, seeing Christ's "soul" was confined in "hell" until the third day? Furthermore, where do good men go when they die? to Abraham's bosom, or Paradise, "a place of separate spirits"? or do they depart and go "to be with Christ"? In other words, do they go to hell, or an apartment in hell, or to heaven? Which? The theologians get mixed up here beyond the possibility of harmonizing the Scriptures with the common interpretation. With our views, we have no such difficulties to encounter.

3. Jesus on his resurrection declares to Mary—"I am not yet ascended to my Father." John 20: 17. This was "the third day" following the crucifixion. Did he tell the truth, and yet go to heaven with the thief the day of crucifixion? It will not do to say that he meant in his bodily person, for he uses the personal pronoun on another occasion when it can by no means refer to his body born of the Virgin Mary—"I came down from heaven." Besides, "his soul" was, according to the Scriptures, in hell during the period of the entombment of the flesh. Ps. 17; Acts 2. Now if this be true, and Jesus affirmed to Mary what was true, how could Jesus' soul and the soul of the thief go to heaven the day on which they were crucified? Will some of these experts in "explaining away" the Scriptures tell us, and harmonize these scriptures? It cannot be done, with the popular interpretation given of these scriptures.

4. It is doubtful, and by no means certain, that the thief expired on the day of crucifixion. The Jews reckoned their days from the evening at sunset. Although Christ expired at 3 o'clock P. M., yet the two malefactors (being "not nailed to their crosses, but only tied to them by cords, and thus they are represented in ancient paintings"—A. Clarke), may not have died until after sun-down. Sometimes crucified persons lived several days; but in the case of these robbers, their death was hastened by the breaking of their bones; still they may have survived some time after even the increased suffering induced by this inhuman act. From the record of the evangelists, some have formed the judgment that these malefactors did not die that day, and hence the promise could not possibly have been fulfilled the day given. Persons may refer to the following quotations, and satisfy their minds upon this point: Mark 1: 32; Matt. 27: 57; Mark 15: 42–44; John 19: 28–37.

It is apparent if the thief did not die until "even, when the sun did set," then he could not possibly have gone to paradise the day previous. That is certain. See Gen. 1: 5, 8, 13. If he expired but a little before sunset, Christ had preceded him by some hours, and if Christ's soul "descended into hell" to have tarried there until the third day, and then was upon the earth forty days more before his ascension to the Father, the thief, if his soul went to heaven when he died, was there about forty-three days before Christ ascended! How, then, could Christ's soul and the robber's soul be together in heaven the day of crucifixion?

Here is an effort to explain this inexplicable difficulty by a theological Professor; but what poor work he makes of it will be readily seen. "Whether, when our Lord died, his soul actually descended into hell itself, we will not assert or deny; the elder theologians all asserted that he did, and hence they inserted in the Creed the sentence—'He descended into hell,' meaning hell itself. It was not till Puritanic times the doctrine began to be questioned. It is asserted now he went into the world of separate spirits, but not into the region of the damned. At any rate it was but a passing presence, for we know that swiftly he sped to the gate of heaven, taking with him the repentant thief to be with him that day in Paradise."—Credo.

Either to "assert or deny" that Christ's "soul actually descended into hell itself," would have involved the Professor in theological difficulty in harmonizing texts of Scripture with his theological views; so he is wise enough to avoid committing himself here. If Christ's soul "went into the world of separate spirits, but not into the region of the damned," but another apartment of hades—Abraham's bosom—from which John Wesley argues that "the doctrine that the souls of good men go to heaven at death, has no foundation in the word of God," then Christ nor the penitent thief did not reach "the gate of heaven" at all that day. And if about forty-three days intervene between the day of crucifixion and Christ's actual ascension, then swiftly as the soul of Christ sped in "a passing presence" through hell, it by no possible means could "take the repentant thief to be with him that day in Paradise."

I have now presented a few of the insuperable difficulties involved in the common interpretation of this passage. The Scriptures cannot be harmonized with it. It is in conflict with actual facts in the case, and with Christ's own positive averment.

EXPLANATION.

What, then, is the meaning and interpretation which should be given to our Lord's promise to the repentant thief?

Let us first study the petitioner's prayer; for Christ's promise is directly in answer and agreeable to the petition made. "And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Luke 23: 42. Mark; he does not pray, "when thou goest into thy kingdom"; but "comest." A Baptist clergyman in the State of Wisconsin remarked upon this before a large audience, and stated that "the thief was a blockhead for so praying; he should have prayed, when thou goest into thy kingdom." But let us see which betrays ignorance deserving of this epithet, the robber, or the Baptist minister! I think it will be found that the latter is the most ignorant of the Scriptures. In the chronological prophecy of Daniel, Christ is seen in vision coming with the clouds of heaven to judgment, when there is "given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom." Dan. 7: 9–14. When our Lord wished to correct the impression concerning the kingdom of God which prevailed in his day, he declares by parable its revelation at the "return" of the long-absent "Nobleman." Luke 19. Paul, in his charge to Timothy, affirms that "Christ shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1. And John, in his chronological book of Revelation, has fixed the locality of the kingdom of God in this earth, as well as the epoch of its revelation at the sounding of the seventh angel, and when the time came for the dead to be judged, and rewards to God's saints are given. Rev. 11: 15–18. Besides, Christ has taught his church to pray, "Thy kingdom come." The repentant thief therefore prayed understandingly when he petitioned, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

A city missionary in this State, having introduced this subject, and having asked me how I reconciled my faith with our Lord's answer to the cying thief, I read to him first the prayer of the malefactor, then the scriptures confirming its propriety, when with apparent surprise he asked, "How do you suppose he could pray so understandingly?" I remarked to him that he had both the Scriptures and the teachings of Christ to instruct him; and furthermore, inasmuch as his petition was answered, the Holy Spirit must have indited it, and the Holy Spirit knew of course the truth. He remarked "that was a consideration he had not thought of."

A Congregational clergyman in this city once remarked: "It is true the penitent thief prayed, 'Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom'; but the Lord immediately corrected him, and said to him, You need not wait till then; but this very day shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

However, there is no proof of this, but the contrary. And if Jesus has said, "The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works" (Matt. 16: 27); "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22: 12); and fixed the period for the dead to "be judged, and to give reward unto his servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear his name, small and great," "at the last trump"; he did not in promise make the thief an exception, nor forestall the judgment in his case by ushering him into immediate reward in heaven.

2. Jesus' answer to the prayer is in perfect accordance with the petition, when given as in the original, and punctuated correctly:—"Amen. I say to thee to-day, with me thou shalt be in the Paradise." Jesus says "Amen," virtually granting the petititioner's request; but adds to the note of promise not only that he should be remembered when he should come into his kingdom, but actually reign with him in the Paradise, and dates the note, "I say to thee to-day"—this day I give you this assurance. The Scriptures as originally written were not punctuated. When translators began to punctuate them, this passage had "the comma placed by some on the one side of to-day; by others on the other."—Griesbach. And the punctuation makes all the difference imaginable. If the translators, and Bible Societies, British and American, have within a dozen years changed the punctuation of Matt. 19: 28 and Heb. 10: 12, in both instances changing the comma to alter the sense, we demand the change in this passage, to make the petition and answer agree and be in harmony with the Scriptures. If Bible Societies and translators will not grant this, we know that men's punctuations are not a part of divine revelation for us to devoutly revere, but "every word of God." To this alone we bow.

To show the effect of punctuation in any given sentence, together with the emphasis given in the reading, let me introduce the following: The husband of a pious and devoted wife having gone to sea, she sent a note to the Parson to be read in church, without punctuating it, thus: "A person having gone to see his wife desires the prayers of the congregation." The Parson soberly read the request thus—"A person having gone to see his wife, desires the prayers of the congregation." The ridiculousness of this blunder would move the gravity of any congregation. Again: The Presbyterian mentions a clergyman reading a hymn having the verse with the following lines—

"The lambs he carries in his arms,
And in his bosom bears"—

and reads the lines as though thus punctuated and emphasized—

"The lambs, he carries in his arms;
And, in his bosom, bears."

So we may read our Lord's language thus punctuated, and with emphasis: "Verily I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." But this will not alter nor change one whit the truth in the case. "Let God be true, and every man a liar." The word of God will endure when human theories and traditions are buried in oblivion.

The prayer of this penitent malefactor is one that each might adopt with great propriety, and pray as earnestly, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Pray it while living, and pray it when dying. And when Eden and Paradise shall be restored and regained on earth by the coming of our Lord in "the times of restitution" (Acts 3: 19–21; Rev. 21st and 22nd chapters), may both the reader and the writer be remembered together with the penitent thief in the kingdom of God.

☞ No doubt there are some nettles in the world. There are unpleasant things, sad, hard things, that tend to make life smart keenly. But we put far more nettles into the world than are there originally. The real nettles are ourselves, in our own uncomfortable, petulant, sour, selfish dispositions, and they spread their own character over nature.

PUFFING FOLKS—FOLKS THAT PUFF.—No. 2.

D. F. NEWTON.

"Dare forsake what you deem wrong;
Dare to walk in wisdom's way;
Dare to give where gifts belong;
Dare God's precepts to obey."

Beloved, in a previous article we remarked that this puffing apparatus was the curse of the land, a Pandora's box, out of which rush evils innumerable. It is a work of Satan, the old serpent, the devil. We observed, also, that good men, and every one of the least spark of sound judgment, had lost all confidence in what is termed "book tables," or "literary notices," from the fact that they were generally lies, outspoken, barefaced, or mere puffs, bags of wind, etc. Editors puff every thing, good or bad, for the Lord or for Satan, for popularity's sake, or for the sake of keeping in the "ring." Puff? The very dregs of the pit; the very worst of Satan's consorting. No matter how vain, silly, foolish, nonsensical, kill or cure, sink or swim, "we go it, it's popular." Things have changed wonderfully of late. The woman is helping the world now, projecting into amusements, pride, folly and fashion.

"The church and world amalgamate,
A union worse than with the state."

Once, you know, "The earth helped the woman." Rev. 12: 16.

We observed, furthermore, that these religious puffers knew they were furthering the cause of Satan at the very time they were penning these puffs. As a proof of this, please read the following from a religious weekly, now before us:—

"BEWARE OF NOVELS AND ROMANCES.

'A novel was a book
Three-volumed, once read, and oft filled full
Of poisonous error, blackening every page.'

And the novels of the present day are no better than those of the last generation. The 'popular literature,' which, to be 'popular,' must cater to the frivolity, vanity, weakness, and immorality of the public, increases the demoralization of the popular taste, destroys the appetite for wholesome mental food, and corrupts the sentiment of the people. They leave behind them no solid elements to give a vigorous thought, or to qualify for the discharge of duties in social or in business life.

'Make the most of your time!' Look at the young men who spend their time in reading novels, and study the character which they bear. Frivolous, weak, 'trashy,' unreliable, superficial, brainless, and unqualified for serious duties; they drift into the current of life, and are shipwrecked often hopelessly, when they should be just reaping the well-earned reward of a better moral and intellectual life.

Oh, the trashy, artificial atmosphere of the novel-reader! The ruin of moral power to the young of both sexes cannot be estimated. Said a gentleman from the country to us one day: 'I don't care much about your religion, but I thank you for your stand on novel reading. They have been the ruin of my daughters.' Although this was said in reference to their habits and tastes at home, it is too sadly true of thousands of the young and fair, who have been corrupted, dazzled, and destroyed.

Let us say to all young men and women, 'make the most of your time,' by a nobler and better preparation for life than fiction can ever give.

'Tell your father, young man,' said the eccentric John Randolph, to a young friend one day, 'that I recommend total abstinence from novel-reading and whisky-punch! They are equally intoxicating to the brain!' And all our observation proves the truth of the characteristic judgment of the great orator."

Who, think you, dear reader, penned the foregoing? A religious editor? Certainly. And what more beautiful, truthful? And what else does this same professed disciple of the Lord Jesus? Advertise and puff novels, romances, silly things, devilish things, things that corrupt, kill out the very life and essence of gospel purity and loveliness? In the very same issue, you see these serpents coiled, snakes in the grass, placed on the opposite page of the things heavenly and beautiful. What is this but blowing hot and cold at the same breath almost? building (or trying to build) up the cause of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ with one hand, and Satan's with the other? Trying to serve two masters, God and mammon? What else is it? Could Satan desire or ask for agents more efficient to further their devilishness?

This is one specimen, one sample. Scores of religious editors are treading in the same steps, "fearing the Lord and serving their own gods." 2 Kings 17: 33. Sins are covered, winked at. Pleasure is the order of the day. Persons who connived at popular sins, refused to open their lips for the dumb and the oppressed, from a man-fearing, time-serving policy, are conservative, or seeking popularity. Novel-writing, puffing and reading; pleasure-seeking, picnics, fancy fairs, tea parties, oyster suppers, gold and tin weddings, frivolity, nonsense and fashion, go hand in hand. And here is a battle to be fought, equal to the hottest heretofore. Who is on the Lord's side, who?

One of the most lamentable things, weepingly so, is the fact that the doctrine of gospel purity is becoming fashionable, or popular, walking in golden or silver slippers. Persons tipped off in gay and costly adornments, with braided hair, gold and pearls, "mincing as they go," are among the loudest, outspoken, in testifying to perfect love, a full salvation, through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ! Is not this awful, heart-rending? Worse still, leaders in meetings for the "higher life" are connected with secret abominations, infidel associations, free masonry, and odd fellowship. What saith the Lord touching this amalgamation? Beloved reader, please turn to 2 Cor. 6: 14–18. How readest thou?

It is one thing to profess sanctification, and quite another thing to live sanctification; our walk must accord with our profession. God expects it, demands it, angels, the world, justly. Holiness, to be holiness, must be Bible holiness, complete, perfectly symmetrical, God-like, Christ-like. "Every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself even as he is pure."

"'Tis not a sense of small import
A holy life demands,
But what might fill an angel's heart,
And fill the Savior's hands."

And these popular, heaven-daring sins, are not to be touched, reproved, or rebuked. If so be any one rises up against these evil doers, presumes to call in question the propriety of trying to serve two masters at the same time, he is looked upon with suspicion, as a troubler in Israel, being over-much righteous, of having a bitter or unchristian spirit. The charity claimed by these perfectionists covers not only a multitude of sins, but sins outrageous, blood-guilty.

"First pure, then peaceable." A sanctification that is not Bible, repudiating all sin, sins popular and unpopular, is a curse instead of blessing. "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth."

"And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected; hereby know we that we are in him. He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." 1 John 2: 3–6.

But to return to the puffing apparatus. One of the marvelous things among the most marvelous is, that editors and publishers advocating the doctrine of purity, or entire sanctification, should stoop to this popular devilishness of puffing the most puerile, insipid, trifling, cackling nonsense of the day, sickly sentimentals: "Our Young Folks," "The Little Corporal," "Goosey, Goosey," "The house that Jack built," etc. The whole batch of these little serpents eats out the very life of gospel purity and salvation. Satan and his helpers are not satisfied with poisoning soul and body of the great folks, but they have set-to in good earnest, with a vengeance indeed, and lightning speed, to kill the little folks. And oh, how shockingly, how shamefully wicked for men and women, professing "holiness to the Lord," to stretch every nerve in helping his satanic majesty do his work of ruin, desolation, and damnation. Any gospel in these juvenile sheets alluded to, numerous as the flies, frogs, and locusts of Egypt? Any thing to lead to the Savior? Christless? Was any thing ever more?

Parents, do you wish your little ones to be simpletons, weak, puerile, foolish, vain, selfish, self-righteous, proud, hypocritical, time-serving Scribes and Pharisees, mere gigglers, fond of fun and frolic, vulgar merriment, on the road to perdition? Well, then, place in their hands this catch-penny "lullaby-baby, on the tree-top," simpering and silly publication, called "The Little Corporal," puffed to the skies by nearly every religious paper in the land, not excepting the "Guardian" and "Guide to Holiness!" Awful! Readers, beloved, what are we coming to? But more of this by-and-by.

"As is the tree, so is the fruit." "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." "Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?" "Evil communications corrupt good manners."

These popular works of fiction, these trifling, nonsensical, catch-penny juveniles, are the "coiled serpents," snakes in the grass, the most potent engines the devil ever planted upon the earth to undermine the principles of virtue, and subvert the morality and spirituality of the Holy Scriptures.

"Why not live as God would have you?
Why not do his blessed will?
Break the bonds of sin forever,
Strive your duty to fulfill!"

OLIVER HEYWOOD.

This eminent man was one of the persecuted servants of Christ, in the seventeenth century. It is said that at one time he was reduced to great straits. His little stock of money was quite exhausted. The family provisions were quite consumed, and Martha, a maid-servant, who had been in his family for several years, and who had often assisted them, could now lend no more assistance. Mr. Heywood still trusted that God would provide for them. He said:

"When cruse and barrel both are dry,
We still will trust in God most high."

When the children began to be impatient for food, Mr. Heywood called his servant, and said, "Martha, take a basket, and go to Halifax. Call on Mr. N., the shop-keeper, and tell him I desire him to lend me five shillings, if he will be kind enough to do it. Bring some cheese, some bread, and such other little things as you know we most want. Be as expeditious as you can, and the Lord give you good speed. In the mean time we will offer up our requests to Him who feedeth the young ravens when they cry, and who knows what we have need of before we ask him."

Martha observed her master's directions; but when she came near the house where she was ordered to solicit the loan of five shillings, through timidity and bashfulness her heart failed her, and she passed by the door again and again, without having courage to do her errand. At length, Mr. N., standing at his shop-door, and seeing Martha in the street, called her to him, and said, "Are not you Mr. Heywood's servant?" She replying, "Yes," he added, "I am glad of having this opportunity of seeing you. Some friends at M—— have remitted to me five guineas for your master, and I was just thinking how I could send it."

Martha burst into tears, and for some time could not utter a syllable. The necessities of the family, their trust in Providence, and the seasonable supply, entering upon her mind at once, quite overpowered her. At length she told Mr. N. upon what errand she had come. The gentleman could not but be affected with the story, and told Martha to come to him when the like necessity should press upon them at any future time.

She made haste to procure the necessary provisions, and with a heart lightened of its burthen, ran home to tell the success of her journey. Though she had not been long absent, the hungry family had often looked wistfully for her arrival. When she knocked at her master's door, which now must be kept locked for fear of constables and bailiffs, it was presently opened, and the joy to see her was as great as when a fleet of ships arrives laden with provisions for the relief of a starving town, closely besieged by an enemy. The children danced around the maid, eager to look into the basket of edibles, whilst she recited all the circumstances of her journey. Martha wiped her eyes; the father smiled and said, "The Lord hath not forgotten to be gracious. Did not I tell you that God would surely provide for us?"

How applicable the advice of the Psalmist, "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed" (Ps. 37: 4); and the poet—

"The birds without barn or storehouse are fed,
From them let us learn to trust for our bread;
The saints, what is fitting shall ne'er be denied,
So long as 't is written—the Lord will provide."

FRANKLIN SCHOLLINGER.

Philadelphia, Pa.

MEN OF PLAIN SPEECH.

We need in the ministry, now and in all time, men of plain speech. The preacher's language must not be that of the class-room, but of all classes; not of the university, but of the universe. Men who have learned to speak from books are of small worth compared with those who learned from their mothers their mother tongue—the language spoken by men around the fireside, in the workshop, and in the parlor. "I use market language," said Whitefield, and we know the result. I rejoice in the Latinity and Germanic jargon of certain schools of pedantic and pretentious intellectualism, because their learned clatter renders them powerless with the masses; but I mourn when similar hideousness of speech are adopted by evangelical divines, for it assuredly weakens their testimony. Anglo-Saxon speech, homely, plain, bold, nervous, forcible, never fails to move the English heart.

At the same time we do not desire a race of coarse men, who regard slang as being plain speech, which it certainly is not. Admitted that a coarse man may have his sphere, it is equally certain that he is unfitted for many other spheres of equal importance. If it be granted that a spice of vulgarity may adapt a man for special service among navvies and costermongers, we question whether, even with them, there may not be a more excellent way, and there are other people in the world to be considered besides these. We are confident that, ordinarily, coarseness is weakness, and ought to be avoided; and we should no more think of preaching the gospel in the slang of the thieves' kitchen, than in the jargon of the Neologists. The gospel's apples of gold are worthy to be carried in baskets of silver. Language should be fitted to the dignity of the subject.

The most truly dignified language is, however, the simplest; simplicity and sublimity are next of kin. Gospel simplicity is equally removed from childishness and coarseness. Bunyan's English is as pure as it is plain. Our grand old authorized version is a model of speech; though marred here and there by an antique indelicacy, it is, as a whole, perfection itself, both for grandeur and simplicity of style. We need men who do not only speak so that they can be understood, but so that they cannot be misunderstood. The plodding multitudes will never be benefited by preaching which requires them to bring a dictionary with them to the house of God. Why should they be called to work on the day of rest, in order to get at the minister's meaning? Of what use is it to them to listen to spread-eagle talk, which conveys to them no clear sense? The Reformation banished an unknown tongue from the reading-desk; we need another to banish it from the pulpit. The language of half our pulpits ought to be bound hand and foot, and with a millstone about its neck cast into the sea; it is poisoning the "wells of English undefiled," and worse still, it is alienating the working-classes from public worship.—Spurgeon.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

SLEEP, FAINTING, APOPLEXY.

When a man is asleep, his pulse beats and his lungs play, but he is without sense, and you can easily wake him up.

If a person "faints," he too is without sense, but he has no pulse and does not breathe.

Apoplexy is between the two; the heart beats, the lungs play as in sleep, and there is no sense, as in fainting, but you can't shake the man back to life.

In sleep the face is natural.

In a fainting fit it has the pallor of death.

In apoplexy it is swollen, turgid and fairly livid.

If a man is asleep, let him alone, nature will wake him up as soon as he has got sleep enough.

When a person faints, all that is needed is to lay him down flat on the floor and he will "come to" in double quick time. He fainted, because the heart missed a beat, failed for only once to send the proper amount of blood to the brain. If you place the patient in a horizontal position, lay him on his back, it does not require much force of the heart to send the blood on a level to the head; but if you set a man up, the blood has to be shot upwards to the head, and this requires much more force; yet, in nine cases out of ten, if a person faints and falls to the floor, the first thing done is to run to him and set him up, or place him on a chair.

In apoplexy, as there is too much blood in the head, every one can see that the best position is to set a man up, and the blood naturally tends downwards, as much so as water will come out of a bottle when turned upside down, if the cork is out.

If, then, a man is merely asleep, let him alone, for the face is natural.

If a man has fainted, lay him flat on his back, for his face is deadly pale.

If a man is apoplectic, set him in a chair, because the face is turgid, livid, with its excess of blood.—Journal of Health.

HOW TO CURE DRUNKENNESS.

It is generally understood that young persons, when first employed as pastry cooks, are permitted to surfeit themselves to their heart's content on pies or sweetmeats; the result being that in a very short time they become perfectly callous to the charms of the counter. We learn from a valuable little book recently published in London, called The Home Nurse, that in the Austrian army a method on a similar principle is taken as a remedy for drunkenness; and medical reports state that out of one hundred and thirty-nine cases, one hundred and twenty-eight cures of confirmed drunkards have been effected. The plan is as follows:

"The soldier, taken in a state of intoxication, or purposely inebriated, is confined to his room, where his diet is carefully and amply supplied to him, according to his choice. For drink, he is allowed brandy and water, in the proportion of one-third brandy to two thirds water. All his food is prepared in a weak solution of brandy and water. Coffee, with a small quantity of brandy, is allowed him. At first, the treatment throws the patient into a constant state of intoxication, and he sleeps much. At the end of three or four days, he takes a dislike to his food and drink, and asks for a change, which request, were it acceded to, would entirely prevent the completion of the cure. On the contrary, it must now be persevered in until the patient can no longer swallow food or drink, and even the smell revolts and nauseates the stomach, when the cure may be considered as effected."

EFFECTS OF TOBACCO.

A correspondent of one of our health journals sums up the derangements which the habitual use of tobacco produces, as follows:

1. Headache over the eyes.
2. Nervous headache without sickness.
3. Nervous headache with sickness of the stomach.
4. Deafness.
5. Partial blindness, or amaurosis.
6. Running at the eyes.
7. Cancer of the lips.
8. Consumption, preceded for years by a cough.
9. Asthma.
10. Dyspepsia.
11. Palpitation of the heart.
12. Paralysis of the upper part of the body.
13. Neuralgia, especially of the face, head, and neck.
14. Swelling of the gums, and rotting of the teeth.
15. Enfeeblement of the lymphatics.
16. Enlargement of the glands of the face and neck, making them thick about the cheek and lips.
17. Lethargy.
18. Morbid appetite for spirituous liquors.
19. Morbid appetite for food, especially high-flavored food.
20. Indistinct taste.
21. Indistinct smell.
22. Imperfect sense of touch.
23. Obtuseness of the moral sense.
24. Uncleanliness of person.
25. Stentorian or snoring sleep.
26. A sense of deadness and of great debility, on first waking from sleep, until one has had a chew or a smoke.
27. Confirmed and incurable disease, and premature death.—Methodist.

CAMPMEETING.

DEAR CHILDREN:—As very many of you who read the Crisis could not attend the S. A. N. Campmeeting, we will tell you something about it, as we saw and enjoyed it; and more particularly about the children's meetings.

The meeting was formally opened Sunday, the 20th, by Elder Miles Grant; preaching from Heb. 12: 14,—"Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." I think you will agree with me that it is a very excellent text to preach from. The preacher gave a clear, forcible sermon; beautifully sweet, and rich with simple illustrations. I hope you will study to find the meaning of the text. If you follow its teachings it will make you rich. It is worth many thousand dollars. You know it is the pure in heart that shall see God.

A large, new tent was dedicated, and christened the Tabernacle. Meetings were held in it every morning at half-past five o'clock, to receive testimony for Jesus.—They were a complete success. They were real love feasts—all about getting ready to meet our King. They were the best part of the campmeeting. I say the best; I meant to have kept that word best to be applied to the children's meetings, under the care of Mrs. Hastings. They were held after dinner in the Bethel, a large circular tent pitched by Bro. Enoch Morrill. Sr. H., surrounded by the children seated on the hay, and shaded by the flapping canvas, would spend an hour in telling stories, singing, praying, and standing up for Jesus. Many of the children took part in the delightful exercises. I know Jesus looked down with delight and love, and had he been there, he would have taken many in his arms. He was there to bless.

Oh! I cannot tell you much about these meetings; they were too good to describe with pen. They were heavenly feasts. The good they have done eternity alone can tell. I doubt not but more good was done, and God better pleased, when the children's songs of praise floated away on the breeze, up, up to heaven, than by many a long sermon preached to thousands. If there is any thing that will move the heart, it is little children worshiping God in their child-like way. There is nothing on earth so pleasing as a good child.

I think the meeting the best ever held on that ground. Even the trees looked happy. I love to talk with trees, they have such a sweet and amiable disposition. It was a feast to be there, but we had to part. Soon we may gather at the great feast, if faithful.

"That feast day will be gladsome when all, together meet,
A full and happy household, each member in his seat;
The 'house' is very spacious—that great paternal home,
And Christ, our 'elder Brother,' invites us all to come."

LABOR FOR CHRIST.

Come, labor on!
Who dares stand idle on the harvest plain,
While all around him waves the golden grain?
And to each servant doth the Master say,
"Go, work to-day!"

Come, labor on!
High office which the angels cannot share—
To young and old the gospel message bear;
Redeem the day, its hours too swiftly fly,
The night draws nigh.

Come, labor on!
Away with gloomy doubts and faithless fear;
No arm so weak but may do service here:
By feeblest agents can our God fulfill
His righteous will.

Come, labor on!
The toil is pleasant, the reward is sure;
Blessed are those who to the end endure,
How full their joy, how deep their rest shall be,
O Lord, with thee!

THE STRAIT GATE.

J. L. SMITH.

The command of Jesus was—"Enter in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." We see many in the present age, who are professing a good profession before many witnesses, trying to get to heaven by some other way—by some different way than that marked out by Jesus. They profess to live godly in Christ Jesus; they attend the house of worship, and some of them pay quite liberally for the support of the gospel, and yet they are not willing to come out from the world and be separate, and "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness"; when "God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness"; and has commanded us to "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them; for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret"; for "blessed is the man who walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." We are commanded to "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us"; to make straight paths for our feet; to "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."

These formal professors are willing to follow Jesus if they can, but carry their idols with them; and are not willing to be crucified with Jesus and crucified to the world; and why? because Jesus is not a satisfying portion to them. But Jesus says again, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Keeping his commandments crucifies them, and deprives them of their worldly pleasure, therefore they are not willing to come out from the world and take a decided stand on the Lord's side, stand up for Jesus, and defend the truth; for this reason they make very crooked paths, and fail to find that peace and joy the true disciple of Jesus finds. "O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments, then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea."

Some of these are very good moral people, and have had convictions, but their understanding being darkened they cannot see afar off; they have not yet entered "in at the strait gate." "This I say, therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk, not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind; having the understanding darkened; being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart; who, being past feeling, have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness."

Sin and iniquity abound on every hand, and the love of many waxes cold; they cannot sing the Lord's song; and if they attempt to, they have lost the spirit and the power with God they formerly had when they were first converted; and why? because they have not walked in the light, as He is in the light; they have not obeyed the commands of God, and have perverted the Scriptures by calling evil good, and good evil. "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me." His word is so plain, that a "wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein." The judgments of God are terrible to those who attempt to pervert the Scriptures. "And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things that are written in this book."

Now in view of all this, cold-hearted professor, is it not high time for you to awake, and "present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God," which is your reasonable service? "And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." You have deceived your own soul long enough; listen no longer to the syren song of the delusive one; get on board the Gospel ship before you sink beneath the flood of sin and death, where hope and mercy shall never find you. "Awake, thou that sleepest, and Christ shall give thee light." Cleanse yourself from your idols, and "enter in at the strait gate." We are commanded to walk before God and be perfect; to "walk in the light, as he is in the light; to walk in the King's highway, in the highway of holiness. This highway is cast up above the world, and is for the redeemed of the Lord to walk in. There is no unclean thing found in this highway; it shall not go up thereon. This highway is for those who have put on "the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." This highway is for those who have been "made free from sin, and become servants to God, having their fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life."

God does not promise to save you in your sins, but the conditions are that you will forsake all, that you will separate yourself from the world, and that you will not touch the unclean thing. "Wherefore come out from among them, saith the Lord, and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you; and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." "Having these promises, therefore, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord." Begin again, and begin at the bottom; dig deep, and lay a sure foundation; get down to the rock, and build upon that; then, when the floods and storms and cares of life shall come, you will be able to stand, because you are founded upon the Rock of ages.

O, be not deceived; you may deceive man, but you cannot deceive God, for "God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption." O, I beg of you, as one who loves you, and who wishes to meet you in my Father's kingdom, that you will not deceive yourselves by trying to climb up some other way, but that you will "enter in at the strait gate." Enter in by the door. Jesus is the door, and there is salvation in no other; for "there is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." "Verily, verily I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door of the sheep-fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." We must strive to enter in. There are some sacrifices to be made. We are to strive to please God, and not the world; for the love of the world, the love of unfruitful works of darkness, and the love of seeking honor of men, rather than the honor of God, is loathsome in his sight. "O, my soul, come not into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united; for in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they digged down a wall."

The love of dress, and the love of adorning their frail bodies which must soon lie down in the cold embrace of death, is not pleasing to God, for it tends to foster pride in the heart; for "the heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked; who can know it?" God views pride in a most heinous light, because pride draws our affections from God; besides, you are disobeying his holy law; and if you love God, you will love to obey him; for "no man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit; neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." If you love God, you will love to keep his commandments; they will not be grievous to you; you will have no desire to pervert the Scriptures; "ye shall walk after the Lord your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him and cleave unto him." If you profess to love God when you are having fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, when you are wrapped up in your idols, and are clinging to the fashions of the world, and trimming to tickle their fancy, rest assured you are not on board of the Gospel ship; you are deceiving your own soul; you have not yet entered "in at the strait gate"; for "he that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."

Formal professors, awake to righteousness! You are stumbling-blocks; the cause of God suffers by your lukewarmness; you are blocking the wheels of the car of salvation; you are deceiving, and being deceived. Precious souls are stumbling over you into everlasting death, and their blood will be required of you. You have the form of godliness, but are denying the power thereof. You have not entered in "at the strait gate." You have made a move towards the heavenly land; and now, "go forward"; "escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed." Give up the world and be separate, for Jesus' sake; for "ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvellous light." And if God has called you from nature's darkness, old things will pass away, and things which you once loved will look odious to you; you will not indulge yourself in sin; you will not turn to the world, for you will love to keep the commandments of God; you will love to walk in the old paths; for "thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest to your souls." Walk as Christ walked; present yourself without your idols, holy, acceptable unto him, and "enter in at the strait gate."

Dear friend, you may have once tasted of the joys of sins forgiven, and, through neglect of duty, or of disobeying the commands of God, darkness may have come over your mind, and you have fallen from grace, and are still holding on to your profession; but let me tell you that will never save you. O, come back to your Father's house, where there is bread enough and to spare. O come, while Jesus is waiting with outstretched arms to receive you. Come, while the angels in heaven are waiting to rejoice over you. You may at times feel blessed,—those who never knew God have felt his blessing; but, "beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits, and see whether they be of God." Prove them by his word, and "enter in at the strait gate."

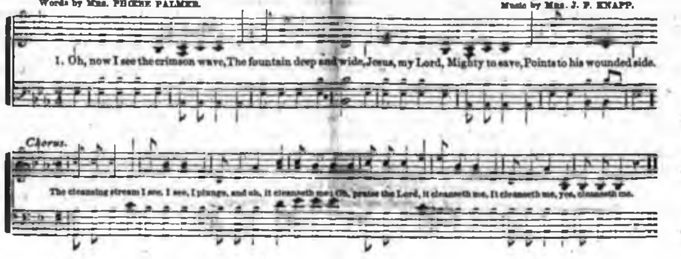
THE CLEANSING WAVE.*

Words by Mrs. PHŒBE PALMER. Music by Mrs. J. P. KNAPP.



1. Oh, now I see the crimson wave, The fountain deep and wide, Jesus, my Lord, Mighty to save, Points to his wounded side.
Chorus.
The cleansing stream I see, I see, I plunge, and oh, it cleanseth me; Oh, praise the Lord, it cleanseth me, it cleanseth me, yes, cleanseth me.

2. I see the new creation rise,
I hear the speaking blood;
It speaks! polluted nature dies!
Sinks! 'neath the cleansing flood.

Chorus.—The cleansing stream—I see! I see!
I plunge! and O! it cleanseth me,
O praise the Lord, it cleanseth me!
Yes, cleanseth me!

3. I rise to walk in heaven's own light,
Above the world and sin,
With heart made pure, and garments white,
And Christ enthroned within.—Cho.

4. Amazing grace! 'tis heaven below,
To feel the blood applied;
And Jesus, only Jesus know,
My Jesus crucified.—Cho.

INFANT REDEMPTION.—No. 3.

O. W. STETSON.

Our next legitimate inquiry, therefore, must be, how are infants redeemed so as to be heirs of salvation, and will they be in the next band or company that are to be made alive at Christ's coming? Our first proof text is in John 1: 29—"Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." Our second in John 3: 17—"For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." But saved from what, and how? In the light of Scripture, shining unto me in the face of Jesus Christ, my answer would be, saved from sin and its effects. By Rom. 5: 12 we learn that "by one man sin entered the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all [was transmitted unto all] men, for that all [for in him—Adam] have sinned"; all are reckoned as sinful. "But not as the fall, so is the gracious gift. For if by the fall of the one [man—Adam], the many died [the all men of verse 12], much more the favor of God, even that gracious gift by the one man, Jesus Christ, abounded to the many."

Paul then proceeds to show that the free gift is unlike the effects of the one (Adam) having sinned, in a very essential particular. "For indeed the sentence was from one [sin or offence] to condemnation; but the gracious gift is [justification] from many offences to [unto] righteousness." "Therefore, as through one offence sentence came on all men to condemnation [of death], so also through one righteous act, sentence came on all men to [unto] justification of life. For as through the disobedience of one man the many [the all men of verse 12 again] were constituted sinners [or sinful], so even through the obedience of the one the many [the same many] will be constituted righteous." Diaglott Trans.

The words man and men here in Romans are generic terms, like "a man," in John 3: 3, and not specific; hence in 1 Cor. 15: 21, 22 it is written—"Since through a man there is death, through a man also there is a resurrection of the dead; for as by Adam all die, so by the Anointed also will all be restored to life." Now, according to Paul, infants die in consequence of the death sentence pronounced upon Adam for his one sin, and the entire race being at that time yet comprehended in Adam, the appointment unto man through him is, once to die; and after this once (dying), the judgment; and the judgment written is, that these same many who die through (in consequence of) Adam's one sin, shall live again through Christ's one righteousness, and then the children's teeth shall no longer be set on edge in consequence of the sour grape eaten by the sire. But the soul (person) that sinneth (the sinning one) shall die.

I know very well that there are not wanting those who will affirm that Paul was writing of those who are adults, consequently are justified by faith in the gospel, and say he does not speak of infants at all. To such it is sufficient to say that Paul affirms that he was writing to all called saints, and many of these, according to Acts 28: 17–29, were Jews with whom Paul labored diligently to prove that the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ was not the God of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles also, and he "expounded to them, and testified of the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus out of the law and out of the prophets." But what proves too much, proves nothing; and Rom. 5: 16 proves that the claim of or to adultship only, is certainly erroneous; for in that verse the apostle is very careful to particularly specify the sins of adult persons, in addition to the sin of the world, which he introduced and set before us in ver. 12; and the personal sins of adults he terms, in ver. 16, "many offences." Now I not only concede, but contend, that we can only be justified from these through faith, repentance, and obedience toward God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by the gospel. But "the sin of the world" came upon us all through the curse pronounced for Adam's disobedience, without our agency; and it will be taken away from us all when the curse is taken off, through the obedience of Jesus Christ, independent also of our agency. In other words, the first Adam by transgression runs the train down the track to the depot of death, but the second Adam begins just where the first Adam failed, and by his obedience reverses the engine and brings the train back again to the depot of life eternal; and when he gets it there, all will receive the gift who have not forfeited that gift, as Adam did, by personal sins (Rom. 2: 6–11, 16); and among these returned exiles will be found infants, who have never committed personal sin in transgression, and for whom also there is no law. And Paul says, in Rom. 5: 13, that sin is not accounted, or imputed, where there is no law; hence the typical promise in Deut. 1: 39—"Your little ones, which ye said should be a prey; and your children, which in that day [on account of their youth] had no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in thither [into the land of promise], and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it." Isa. 7: 16; Rom. 9: 11.

But some theorizing, theological hair-splitter will say—"These children were God's by covenant, they having received circumcision, and the promise has no relation to the children of Gentile unbelievers at all." In Gal. 5: 2, Paul says—"I say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing." Gal. 6: 15—"For in Christ Jesus, neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature." Herein lies the foundation of infant sprinkling, called regeneration. Assuming that baptism under the gospel took the place of circumcision under the law, professed ministers of Christ undertook to do what Christ had already done for the infants. But the priest under the law, circumcising the child when eight days old, was not a type of a gospel preacher sprinkling infants down here. That was a type of the true circumcision, not made with hands, which Christ hath wrought for them in the reconciliation, by the putting away of the body of the sins of the flesh, by the Spirit.

Hence under the gospel we have both circumcision (the true) and baptism. The first is a gift conferred, a work done for us by our Savior, which we neither could or can do for ourselves. The second, unlike the first, includes not "all men," but adults only, and is a duty to be performed as a result of our having heard, understood and believed the gospel; hence faith and baptism are inseparable. All men (mankind) receive the benefits of Christ's death; whereas those who hear, believe, and obey the gospel, alone receive benefit from his rising again to act as our mediator and advocate. For if we (all men) were reconciled by his death, how much more shall we who believe be justified by his life. "Thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy" is an affirmation made by Deity, not because they (whose death caused bitter lamentation in Ramah) were martyrs to or for the truth, for they were not, being victims only of Herod's jealous ambition and rapacious cruelty; but because God desired to lay a foundation for our faith to rest upon, in Christ's work of atonement for our race, and that we through the comfort and consolation of the Scriptures might have hope.

In this coming again from the land of the enemy, these infants will experience the new birth, or be born again, and then God will put his Spirit in them, and they shall live and go in and inherit the land.*

But what position they will there and then occupy, I know not. But Paul says as "one star differeth from another star in glory, so also is the resurrection of the dead"; and I am quite content to leave them thus in the hands of Him who hath done all things well.

* Note. In Dr. Wordsworth's Greek Testament, we find the subjoined reading of Matt. 19: 28—"Verily I say unto you, who have followed me, in the new birth of the saints, at the resurrection, in the New Jerusalem, when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit on twelve thrones."

Christian love bindeth us to pray for the remission of our own sins, so for the remission of the sins of others; also that by infirmity those who are at any time overtaken with sin. And prayers in this kind made by the faithful shall be heard, that we may be excited the more to desire the prayers of another, and the more ready in love to put in practice this duty.

THE POWER OF FAITH;

OR,

Emancipation from all Sin the Christian's Prerogative.

Sin shows itself in two forms,—outward and inward. A man in anger strikes another; the wicked act is outward; but behind the arm is a perverse will and an evil nature, which are the cause of the blow. The natural heart is not only evil inclined, but its spirit, its essence, is evil; for, "the carnal mind is enmity against God; it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." And whether it be a wholly carnal mind, or partially purified, all that remains of the carnal is in eternal enmity to God, in whomsoever it be found. If, away down in the bottom of your heart, there remains a sediment of evil, there is opposition to God; and this spirit of hostility can ally to itself the hosts of hell, and can ally them in a moment. It is a maxim in military science, that no fortification is stronger than its weakest point. Thus, a fort of three granite walls and one mud wall is no stronger than four mud walls; for an enemy, in making his attack, will point its guns against its mud side, and there make the breach and enter. So, at whatever point, on whichever side, of our nature or heart sin be found, there is weakness, a vulnerable place, always accessible to the assaults of Satan. The weakness of the church, the weakness of the mass of christians, is inward sin, which assumes the forms of besetments, inclinations, proclivities, appetites, and continually keeps up a war against all grace and holy resolutions. Emancipation from "the body of this death" would make the church a tower of strength, whose four sides would be all granite. Purge all christians of inward sin, and you may write the millennium to dawn in ten years.

But the christian need not continue to be terrified and wasted by these inward foes. There is a prerogative with which the gospel of Christ endows every adopted child of God, and whose exercise dispenses life and power. It is found in that remarkable declaration, "Reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord;" "for sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace."

Here the christian is invested with a prerogative, and supported by a divine promise: there is given to him the right and ability to declare his emancipation from under the dominion and power of sin.—"Reckon ye yourselves," and the divine assurance that his declaration of emancipation shall be maintained for him; "Sin shall not have dominion over you!" Christ has made all provision for the redemption of his people from all sin; and it remains for them to appropriate the full benefits of his power to themselves. This is the work of faith.

When the national proclamation of emancipation was promulgated, our army spread it all through the land of the south. Now, that was a good instrument in itself, but there was just one thing lacking to make it effective. The lack did not lie in the mind of the Executive that issued the proclamation, nor in the army sent to enforce its provisions, nor in the slaveholders' denial of its authority; but in the mind of the slave himself; all was of no avail unless he accepted the proffered grace, and asserted his freedom. There were slaves in the south that remained in bondage because they chose slavery rather than emancipation. They loved their masters. If we would be free, we must declare our emancipation.

God does not do any thing towards constraining us. He will show us the glory, and set before us the privilege and obligation; but he never coerces our will; so he says, "Reckon ye yourselves" to be dead to sin. Have you ever thought that there is a power that can move heaven, earth, and hell, and God is waiting for you to exercise this wondrous prerogative under his divine proclamation of emancipation, and say, "I am now free from sin?" "Reckon ye yourselves;" this is the omnipotence of faith. Man has not of himself ability to desire or reach the truth; but, if power be tendered to him by Christ, one thing he can say and do, that is, "I will!" even though he were dying. There is omnipotence in us when backed by a power strong enough to sweep away all resistance. When our armies swept through the southern states on their irresistible march, they took with them the emancipation proclamation, and read it to the slaves. Suppose one of those black-faced men inquiring, "How shall I know this is a fact? The laws of Georgia make me a slave; how shall I know I am free?" The officer replies, "You are no longer under the laws of Georgia, but under the grace of this proclamation." "But," says the slave, "how may I be assured that I shall be sustained if I assert my liberty?" The officer turns, and points to the glittering guns and fixed bayonets of the army following him: "These shall sustain and defend you." If, then, the christian would be free from all sin, his will must be joined to Christ's will.

The Lord will do every thing to sustain and defend you, after your will has passed decision, and taken sides with holiness. But you must decide, and say, "I do here and now give myself to Christ, to be his only, by his power."

But you say, "Oh this weakness!" Do you forget the bayonets? Weak indeed you are, a captive to inward sin; but

"Strong in the strength which God supplies
Through his eternal Son."

Do you remember that, when the prophet and his servant saw the army of chariots and horses surrounding the city to destroy it, his servant was afraid, but there stood the man of God, so calm, so full of peace? And why? He trusted in the Lord, the keeper of Israel; and, in the clear visions of faith, he beheld the united armament of omnipotence arrayed for his defence. He would have his servant also calm and confident; so he prayed "Lord, open his eyes;" and he, too, saw the armed hosts of God. So, be thou not fearful, but believing; claim the power, and declare your emancipation. "All things are possible to him that believeth;" declare it now, and "reckon yourself dead to sin;" and, if it be necessary, the Lord God will open the heavens, and fill the skies with his celestial cohorts to protect you. "Sin shall not have dominion over you."

"I rest in thine almighty power;
The name of Jesus is my tower,
That hides my life above.
Thou canst, thou wilt my helper be;
My confidence is all in thee,
The faithful God of love."

There is more than freedom from sin in this "uttermost" salvation; it contains "the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ," "the riches of the glory of the grace of God," the present inheritance and possession of the christian.

Now, mark. When you say, in the strength of grace, "I will be free," God marshals all his forces on your side. But, without this declaration on your part, the provisions and proclamation of Christ's salvation are of none effect, though he had planted his batteries and put his angels in line to help you.

Do you, then, now begin to "reckon yourselves dead to sin, through the power of our Lord Jesus Christ." Have faith in God. Accept the proffered grace,—the grace of full redemption. Say, "I can, I will, I do believe!" and you are in the land of "rest from all inbred sin;" sin shall no more have dominion over you.—Advocate of Holiness.

BIBLE CLASS.—No. 1.

GEO. THOMSON.

Lesson, John 17: 24. "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world."

Ques. What is embraced in the first part of this passage?

Ans. The Savior's prayer to the Father, that all his saints may live with him, and behold his glory.

Ques. Is there any other passage that intimates such an high honor to the saints of God?

Ans. Yes, in John 12: 26—"If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be. If any man serve me, him will my Father honor."

Ques. Where did Jesus go?

Ans. To heaven. Acts 1: 9, 10—"And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight: and while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold two men stood by them in white apparel."

Ques. How shall Christians and their Savior get together, in order that they may be with him?

Ans. He will come again to them.

Ques. Can they not go up to heaven, to be with him? and is there not a promise to that effect?

Ans. I have diligently searched for such a promise, but without success.

Ques. Can you find a positive promise that he will come again for that purpose?

Ans. Yes. John 14: 3—"And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

Ques. Is that promise isolated, or substantiated?

Ans. Substantiated. 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

Ques. What is embraced in the last clause of the verse?

Ans. The pre-existence of Christ.

Ques. Is this idea corroborated by other scriptures?

Ans. It is abundantly. John 17: 5: "And now, O Father, glorify thyself with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." John 16: 28: "I came forth from the Father; and am come into the world." John 8: 42: "For I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me."

Ques. Did Christ have a pre-existence as a personal being, or as the Word of God predestined by the Father to be incorporated in humanity?

Ans. That is an unrevealed mystery, nor does it seem at all necessary, for any purpose connected with our salvation, that it should be comprehended.

Ques. Is there any evidence that Christ did not exist eternally?

Ans. Yes, for he was begotten of the Father, so there must have been a time when he did not exist. Heb. 1: 6—"And again, when he bringeth in the first begotten into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him." See also Rev. 3: 14.

Ques. Is Christ anywhere in the Scriptures called "God the Son"?

Ans. No, certainly not, but he is about forty times called the "Son of God."

Ques. Have you any evidence that Christ is not God, in the same sense that the Father is?"

Ans. I think it is found in the following passage (1 Cor. 8: 6): "But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him."

Ques. What does the Savior mean when he says, "I and my Father are one?"

Ans. That they are one in purpose and work. He prayed that his disciples might be one, in the same sense that he and his Father were one (John 17: 11): "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, AS WE ARE." And 21st and 22nd verses: "That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one."

Ques. If Christ had a personal pre-existence, was he immortal?

Ans. Certainly not; if so, he would have been deathless, and consequently could not have "died for our sins."

Ques. Might not his humanity have died, and his divinity lived on?

Ans. If so, we have but a human sacrifice, and the death of any good man would have answered the purpose.

Ques. Have you any evidence from the Scriptures that Christ was not immortal prior to his resurrection?

Ans. Yes. 1 Tim. 6: 16: "Who [God] only hath immortality," that is, inherent; but the following proves that the Savior had immortality in no sense previous to his resurrection (Rom. 6: 9): "Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead, dieth no more [becomes immortal]; death hath no more dominion over him." The fact of death having "dominion over him" proves him to have been mortal until that dominion, or power, was broken.

Ques. Does the statement that Christ was in "the form of God" and "the express image of his person" refer to his pre-existent state, or to his physical appearance while on earth?

Ans. Evidently to the latter. This is apparent from what he said to Philip (John 14: 9): "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father." This must certainly have reference to the resemblance in appearance; for Christ nowhere claimed to be the Father; but, on the contrary, distinctly affirmed, "MY FATHER IS GREATER THAN I."

Ques. If all that constituted Christ died, how did he live again?

Ans. He was restored to life by the power of God (1 Cor. 6: 14): "And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise us up BY HIS OWN POWER."

CHARITY TO ALL.

T. W. GILE.

"What is that to thee? Follow thou me."

We often hear professors of religion finding fault with their brethren and sisters in Christ because they do not come up to their standard of right in the execution of their duties. It is evident that there are certain duties which are common to all, but it is also apparent that every individual has special duties to perform, which arise from the various stations which they occupy among men. They are, therefore, surrounded with circumstances which disclose to them new avenues for doing good, consequently new duties arise which are of the utmost importance, and must be attended to. We may therefore conclude that some people have duties to perform which are not obligatory upon every other person.

Some do not consider that God has made no two individuals alike. No two persons speak, look, or act exactly alike, and we cannot expect them to think and believe just alike. Therefore it is important that each christian should be acquainted with the character, disposition, and temperament of each of those with whom they are associated, in order to make all due allowance for their imperfections, and to exercise that charity so essential to the interest of the true church of God. Having made this acquaintance, it is our duty to make and preserve peace, so far as we can without sacrificing principle.

If some of our brethren and sisters do not believe as we do in every particular point of doctrine, or do not take so active a part in the service of God as we think they should, "What is that to thee? Follow thou me." It can be productive of no good to censure them, to find fault with them, or to treat them with indifference; but rather exercise a loving, cheerful, and forgiving spirit towards them. To bear and forbear should be the christian's motto, if we desire to prosper in the divine life. Let us not set up a standard for our brethren and sisters; but refer them to the word of God for their rule of faith and practice, and let them act in accordance with that, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Let us examine ourselves, and see if we are right before God. Are we hungering and thirsting after righteousness? Is it our greatest aim to glorify God? Remember that the bright and shining example of a consistent christian will do more to build up the cause of Christ, than the arguments of many inconsistent ones, although delivered in the most eloquent style. Let us, by preparing to live here, be prepared to live in our future eternal home.

ALTON BAY MEETING.

Another great and good campmeeting has just closed at Alton Bay. We think it was the best we have enjoyed on that ground. The attendance was larger than ever before. Quite a number of new houses have been erected this year, and it is proposed to add several more next year. Every body seemed pleased with the meeting, and a large number received special blessings. A goodly number were converted, and sixty-five were baptized in the bay. The facilities for baptism are the best we have ever seen at any campground, because the lake is so near the encampment that no conveyance is needed. Twenty-nine were baptized at one time. Rich blessings were received at the baptisms, causing shouts of praise from those who were buried with Christ in the liquid grave, and much rejoicing in the hearts of the spectators.

This meeting will long hold a hallowed place in the memory of thousands who were privileged to be present. The subject of Bible holiness was a prominent theme in the prayer and conference meetings. Many consecrated their all to Christ, in return, receiving perfect love and peace from our dear Savior. The change was equal to their first conversion. With joy they could sing:

> "Here I give my all to Thee,
> Friends, and time, and earthly store;
> Soul and body, Thine to be—
> Wholly Thine—forever more."

Holiness may be compared to the oil that supplies the head-light on the gospel train, bound for glory. Let every one see that this oil is in their lamps; for without it no one will see the Lord. Holiness is the fruit of the Holy Spirit; or the result of being filled with the Spirit; therefore no one can be holy without it. Holiness is the opposite of wickedness. It is as essential to salvation as is the air to sustain life in this world. We think there is no doctrine which Satan hates more than this. It gives him no quarters—no room in the heart. The time appears to have come when the bride is really making herself ready to meet the coming Bridegroom. We learn from all quarters that the prevailing feeling among christians is that the time has come for entire consecration to Christ. There can be no room for doubt that the Spirit of the Lord has produced this deep impression. Let every one yield to its promptings at once, and thus secure the wedding garment, so essential in order to obtain an entrance to the marriage of the Lamb.

> "None but holy ones can enter
> Through the pure celestial gate."

At 5.45 A. M., we had meetings in the same tabernacle used for the early morning meetings held at Springfield. The Spirit of the Lord was with us every morning to fill the hearts of his people with "great peace." It was truly good to be there. Those seasons of refreshing were more precious than good food when hungry. The interest in these meetings increased every day. We have never seen before, since 1843, so much interest in that portion of Bible truth which relates to sanctification and preparation for the coming of Christ. We believe this interest will spread rapidly, till the bride is ready to meet the Bridegroom.

Sabbath, Sept. 17th, was the great day of the meeting. The crowd was estimated to number from ten to fifteen thousand. We had preaching in four places. Good order prevailed, even beyond what we might reasonably expect. The restraining power of the Holy Spirit was evidently upon the people. The 5.45 A. M. meeting was excellent; and the love-feast at 9 was one of the best we have ever enjoyed. There were two hundred and sixty-five testimonies in one hour. Many of the witnesses spoke of their perfect love as the result of their entire consecration to the Lord during the meeting. It was truly a love-feast. It is rare that so many are seen together who are free in Christ, as were present on that occasion. It seemed as though we were almost on the borders of paradise, and about to enter our happy Eden home. It was truly a season of refreshing.

In the evening we had a precious communion season in the boarding tent. At the close of the communion an interesting ordination took place. One other was ordained to the work of the ministry, during the progress of the campmeeting. It is encouraging to see faithful young men consecrating themselves to the Lord to go forth and sound an alarm to the people in these last days. Pray for them. The young ministers have special need of the sympathies of those who have been longer in the way.

Monday morning, Sept. 18th, we bid adieu to the dear saints with whom we had enjoyed very heavenly seasons during the preceding week. Cars and boats were crowded with the departing ones, who made sweet melody while singing the beautiful songs of Zion.

One event gave sadness to many hearts, and that was the sickness of Bro. B. P. Stevens. He was quite out of health when he arrived, as the result of overwork, and was soon completely prostrated with lung and brain fever. He received as good care as the tent could afford. We left him on the ground in the care of Bro. Hastings and others, hoping and praying that he may be speedily restored to his field of labor and usefulness. He is a true man, and worthy of the confidence of all christians. He is needy. Extend to him the hand of benevolence.

Much more of interest might be said in relation to the meeting; but our time and room require us to come to a period. In a word, we may say, there was a general satisfaction with the results of the meeting. All seemed to be glad that they had been present at this feast of tabernacles.

THE SOUTHERN MISSION.

We are pleased to be able to introduce to our readers Bro. P. G. Bowman as a missionary in the southern field. We think he is the right man in the right place. Being a southern man, he knows how to go to work. From what we can gather, he is fully competent to stand up in the defense of the truth in any situation. But his opposers have cut off all his supplies. Will not those who have the means, remove his load of embarassment, so that he can give himself wholly to the work of the ministry in his new field of labor? Please read his letter in another column. Although it was not designed for publication, we felt it should be laid before our readers. We trust Bro. Bowman will pardon the liberty we have taken with his private communication. Any who wish to assist Bro. Bowman in his noble efforts to spread the truth in the South, can send us their money and pledges, which will be applied as directed. Now is the time for action.

THE LULU MISSIONARY.

On our return home from the National campmeeting at Springfield, we fell in company with Bro. Josiah Tyler, who has been a missionary among the Lulu tribe in Africa during the last twenty-one years, and has just returned to this country. These Lulus are purely heathen. Bro. Tyler gave us an account of their religious sentiments. After hearing his statement, we found that the religion of the Lulus, and that of the Spiritualists, were from the same source. This fact only confirms what was before very fully established: that Spiritualism and heathenism are but two names for the same system; all of which proceeds from demons. Whoever sustains Spiritualism, at the same time is advocating the doctrines taught by the heathen.

ST. JOHNSBURY.

We arrived at St. Johnsbury, Monday P. M., Sept. 19th. This is one of the most pleasant villages in New England, located on the Passumpsic R. R., about twenty miles north of Wells River Junction. Fairbanks' scales are manufactured here. Our meetings are held in the large town hall. The prospect is encourging. We hope to see much good accomplished. Dr. R. W. Warner, with whom we are stopping, has made a worthy effort to get the truth before the people. We trust he will have much cause to rejoice in the sacrifice he has made. This is a new field, excepting a few occasional sermons.

"GOOD TIDINGS."

The new book, entitled "Good Tidings," should have a very wide circulation among those who have not seen the great light now shining upon the sacred Scriptures. It is just the book to lend to your neighbor, to the ministers of the various denominations, and to every body who can read and understand. We believe it is emphatically a book for the times. The price is low, but the contents are valuable. Every family needs one or more copies on purpose to lend. Let us all help in the glorious work of spreading the truth. The price of the book is 65 cts. in paper covers, neatly bound in cloth, $1. Send for it at once.

CAMPMEETING MUSIC.—We have sixteen pieces of choice music, bound together in a neat pamphlet, which we sell for ten cents. The single sheets sell for five cents, making the cost of the whole separately eighty cents. The following are the titles of the music: "I love to tell the Story"; "I am trusting, Lord, in Thee"; "Clinging to the Cross"; "Jesus paid it all"; "All for Jesus"; "Perfect Love"; "Wrestling Jacob"; "Clinging to the Cross"; "Who'll stand up for Jesus"? "The Precious Blood"; "All for Jesus"; "Nearer Jesus"; "Full Salvation"; "Christ for me"; "Valley of Blessing;" "Complete in Jesus."

All of these have been published in "The Advocate of Christian Holiness." A copy of this music is given to every new subscriber to the ADVOCATE. We recommend the ADVOCATE to all who love Jesus. Price 75 cts. a year. Address John Bent, No. 8 Cornhill, Boston.

CORRECTION.—In "Predictions of Pius IX." in Crisis for Sept. 6th, for number 523 read 533.

"RELIGIOUS THEATRICALS."

Under the above heading we find a sensible article in the New York Tribune. It relates to the manner Sabbath schools are conducted at the present day. When the conductors of secular papers, who make no profession of religion, speak of the evil tendencies of many Sabbath schools, as they are now conducted, we think it is high time that the professed church of Christ should awake out of sleep, and escape from the snare of Satan. The Tribune says:—

> "A remarkable story comes to us about our Presbyterian friends in Philadelphia. One evening they had a sort of mass celebration of the Sunday-schools. Now Sunday-schools ought to be in themselves good things, and gathering two or three thousand children together for a celebration is not necessarily bad, if the motive is to give them a few sweet simple truths about their Elder Brother, and if they are sent home at the proper time for them to be in bed. But this celebration we are told, 'avoided all the old stale forms.' The feature of the evening was a dramatic representation. The four seasons, in appropriate costume, appeared under an arch inscribed with the name of 'Jesus' in blazing gas-jets; snow fell, grass grew, flowers, corn, grapes, and grain sprung up, forming a fore-ground behind which appeared Faith and Hope, who, in exquisite fancy dresses, recited their parts; a little girl then appeared, who, with folded hands, declaimed a prayer. The lights of the church were then turned down, a certain rose revealing en tableaux a mother and children also kneeling in prayer. The sixteen Seasons and Virtues assumed the attitude of worship, and the Holy Ghost, represented by a white dove, fluttered overhead. Red and blue fires were then lighted, and Faith, Hope, kneeling supplicants, and the Holy Spirit disappeared in a blaze of glory. . . .
>
> There is becoming common a certain tampering with sacred ideas and words, growing out of the way in which Sunday-schools are usually conducted, to which many religious people are so accustomed as to be unconscious, but which is to every finer taste of the devout mind inexpressibly painful and humiliating. How, too, are the future men to be benefited by ideas which when children reached them without the force of solemnity, awe, or any guise of divine truth? Sunday-schools, we are told, are the great proselyting machinery of Christianity. But are they so? They were established by Raikes for a noble purpose: the religious instruction of the young, who would or could receive no religious instruction at home. They are crowded now in the cities with the children of the rich.
>
> Now, no mother able to give to her child his first ideas of God and his Savior has the right to submit his blank mind and untaught soul to the careless handling of the young boys and girls who (with praiseworthy aims, no doubt) usually fill the ranks of teachers in these schools. Beside this fatal error in their basis of construction, the ambition and jealousies which are to be found in the massed human nature of the church creep out, penetrate, and grow rampant in the little one of the lecture-room. They are perpetually stimulated not to any good word or work, but to the contribution of their weekly penny or dollar to the support of some mission of which they have the vaguest idea, or probably to putting an altar-window in the costly new building which is draining the treasury of the church. In nine out of ten of the fashionable churches, the vilest passions of greedy vanity and purse-pride are worked upon to draw out the needed sum. Published reports are issued of the amount raised by each class, which are denominated Soldiers of the Cross, Lambs of Christ, and honored as they give less or more. These are humiliating facts; but they are facts. Any error which threatens to undermine the pure bases of Christianity and civilization among us, it becomes the secular press to take note of. We make no apology, therefore, for this hint of one, the most dangerous of all, as it tampers with the religion of our children."

THE HELL FOR DISEMBODIED MEN.

That the Bible teaches a hell of punishment for material men, after the arrival of the judgment, we fully believe; but we deny that it teaches the present existance of a hell of misery for disembodied souls. Physical men commit sin, and physical men must reap the punishment for sin—be "judged according to men in the flesh" for "the deeds done in the body"—when "they that have done evil" shall come forth to "the resurrection of damnation."

The theory of a hell for disembodied men has undergone several changes since the poetic hell of heathenism, through which flowed its mysterious river, bearing the name of Cocytus, came into existance. Heathenism originated both the hell and heaven for disembodied men, and located them both in the bowels of the earth. Apostate Jews received from the heathen their notion of an underground heaven and hell, leaving out the river, and substituting a ditch, or gulf, as an impassable boundary line between the two spirit worlds, or rather the two divisions of one spirit world, situated in the heart of a material world, just as the yalk of an egg is enclosed by its shell.

At what time this hell got in there, we are not informed; but we are sure it could not have been there at the time God created the earth and pronounced it "very good," unless it was a good hell. And why the heathen, who knew not God, and were unacquainted with his word, should be the first to find out that it was there, is a mysterious matter, if true.

Apostate Christendom, in an early stage of its apostasy, followed the example of the Jewish Pharisees in adopting the heathen notion of the dual nature of man, and also their theory of an underground home for disembodied men, leaving out not only the heathen view of a river in hell, as the Pharisees did, but making another improvement in the system, by leaving out the doctrine of transmigration, which the Pharisees had retained with a little modification—thus, instead of allowing, as the heathen claimed, that certain ones could be permitted to live in several different tabernacles, instead of going at once into the underground realm, they claimed that all souls, good and bad, upon the death of the body, would go into one department of this underworld of souls.

This improvement upon the heathen notion of an underground home for disembodied souls, was Catholicism in its incipient stage, before the system was matured; before "the mystery of iniquity" had finished its work of apostasy. At a later period the system was changed, by claiming that Christ went into hell in a disembodied state, or rather into one department of this imaginary underworld of disembodied souls, and liberated the righteous ones, and took them up to the skies on the day of his crucifixion or resurrection; which, if true, would contradict Paul's statement—"Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation"; as his return from such a mission to heaven would have constituted his "second" coming, as he was on earth in his resurrected state forty days after this event is said to have transpired. If Paul was right in locating the "second" coming of Christ in the future, this notion of a journey to the skies with an army of ghosts, once shut up in the ground, to form a colony of ghosts in the skies, as the nucleus of the much-talked-of kingdom in the skies for departed souls, is all a fable. Prior to this wild invention of Catholicism, the theory of a sky kingdom for disembodied men was unknown in the church.

But though this theory recognised the vacation of one department of this underground abode of disembodied men, it claimed that the other department, containing wicked ghosts, the hell of Catholicism, was left undisturbed, and the vacated department was recognized as the abode of imperfect saints—those not quite fit to go directly to the new sky kingdom—and soon it was christened "purgatory." Upon the adoption of this heathen view of an underworld for the "shades of the dead," an effort was made to synchronise this realm with the sheol of the Old Testament Scriptures, and the hades of the New Testament. With the aid of a Catholic (Douay) version of the Bible, and the foot-notes appended by Catholic officials, we will look at the efforts put forth to establish an underground realm for disembodied souls—for both good and bad ones before the first advent, and for bad ones only since that epoch. Our version renders the term sheol grave, as often as it renders it hell; but the Catholic version uniformly renders it hell, but appends notes to inform us when it signifies the department for good souls.

1. Jacob is made to say—"I will go down to my son into hell mourning." Gen. 37: 35. Foot-note—"That is, into limbo, the place where the souls of the just were received before the death of our Redeemer. . . . . Meant the place of rest, where he believed his soul to be." If Joseph's soul was the son of Jacob's soul, there might be more plausibility in this assumption; but a note on Gen. 2: 2 informs us that God is constantly at work "creating souls"; so with this view, the soul of Joseph could not have been the offspring or "son" of Jacob's soul. Jacob did not say. My soul shall go down to the soul of my son; but, I will go down.

2. But if it is true that disembodied souls, instead of physical men, go to sheol, they must there be enveloped in unconsciousness, according to the Douay version of another text—"For neither work, nor reason, nor wisdom, nor knowledge, shall be in hell, whither thou art hastening." Eccl. 9: 10. This text not being guarded by a foot-note, we are left to guess whether Catholics would apply sheol, here rendered "hell," to the department occupied by good or bad souls; but whether applied to the one or the other, it proves that they must be there void of "reason," "wisdom" and "knowledge." Good ghosts in that dilemma could not enjoy much, nor could bad ghosts, in that condition, suffer much. Indeed, if this is the condition of disembodied souls—destitute of reason, wisdom, and knowledge—while in sheol, it is not to be wondered at that Catholics sought to get them out of this underground home of unconsciousness; for to be alive and unconscious at the same time is an undesirable state; nor is it surprising that, in view of this condition, in a note on Ps. 67: 19, they represent Christ as "carrying away to heaven those who before had been the captives of Satan." So this underworld of souls was under the dominion of Satan; even good souls were "the captives of Satan" prior to the first advent, according to Catholicism. Then they were liberated from Satan's grasp, and transported to the skies. thus commencing a sky-kingdom for disembodied souls. This kingdom Protestants accept as all right, overlooking the time and manner of its origin; and this hell they also accept, only they have ventured to take it out of its material earth-shell, and locate it somewhere, they cannot tell where—having no conception concerning its present latitude, longitude, or altitude—and have rudely annexed purgatory to hell, thus enlarging the border of hell. But we will follow the Catholic picture of hell a little further.

3. If sheol is the realm occupied by spirit-men, instead of material men, this translation of David's statement sounds strange—"Our bones are scattered by the side of hell." Ps. 140: 7. No note is here given to inform us which department of sheol is here meant by "hell"; but it is a place to which the "bones" of men go. This proves sheol to be the receptacle of corporeal men, instead of spirit-men; for who ever heard of the bones of a spirit? And we here inquire of Protestants who have taken the liberty to take sheol out of the earth, and have assigned it some unknown aerial location, if bones of dead men are ever transported to that realm? Who ever saw them transported? Is it not better to allow sheol to signify the state of the dead than to insist that it is the locality of imaginary disembodied men? Remember that "bones" go to sheol.

4. Jacob is reported as saying of Benjamin—"If mischief befall him in the land to which you go, you will bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to hell." Gen. 42: 38. But this passage is guarded by the following note: "That is, to the place where the souls then remained." But the ludicrous query will arise, Was Jacob's soul in possession of "gray hairs"? Or, was it Jacob himself who wore the gray hairs? As no one will suppose disembodied men have gray hairs to wear to a world of spirits, it must be admitted that this "hell," or sheol, is a realm for material men, instead of spirit-men.

5. On Gen. 44: 31, "Shall bring down his gray hairs with sorrow unto hell," we have the following note—"The Hebrew word for hell is here sheol, the Greek hades; it is not taken for the hell of the damned, but for the place of souls below, where the servants of God were kept before the coming of Christ: which place, both in the Scripture and in the Creed, is named hell." This sheol, here called a "place of souls," is said to have been "below," and to have had its day prior to the first coming of Christ; having been vacated by its inmates at that point of time, as before noticed, in order to establish a colony of souls in the skies, and begin there a kingdom of disembodied men. But this view of the matter seems to clash with their own rendering of David's language: "They are laid in hell like sheep; death shall feed on them." Ps. 49: 14. The inmates of this "hell," or sheol, instead of being disembodied souls, are a class of beings that death can "feed on." Can death "feed on" deathless souls?

The sheol of the Bible is not a place for disembodied souls, but for dead men—men with "gray hairs" and "bones"; a place where these is no "wisdom," or "knowledge." Of this place David said, as rendered by the Catholic version, "Let not his hoary head go down to hell in peace; . . . . bring down his gray hairs with blood to hell." 2 Sam. 2: 6, 9. Hell, when from sheol, or hades, is not the realm of punishment, for its inmates are not to be "judged" till "death and hell" (Gr. hades, Heb. sheol) shall "deliver up" its dead (Rev. 20: 13); and unjudged men will never be punished. Nor will it deliver up disembodied souls to be judged; unless they are "dead"; for those to be "delivered up" are said to be "dead"—hence, hades, or sheol, is simply the receptacle of the "dead," who are yet unjudged. Nor is the case of the rich man an exception to this rule, for not one word is said in the record about the rich man's soul; theologians assume that the soul is meant, though not mentioned. The Douay version reads: "And the rich man also died; and he was buried in hell. And lifting up his eyes when he was in torments." The persons introduced in this record, though dead, are treated as living agencies, by parabolic personification, to illustrate an important truth, and are represented as talking; and the conversation here attributed to them recognizes the fact that they are dead—"if one went unto them from the dead"—"though one rose from the dead"—thus showing (1) that these personages, though represented as talking, were really dead; and (2) that the only way to communicate to the living was by rising from the dead.

This method of setting forth or illustrating truth is used elsewhere, and that, too, in an instance in which hell (sheol) is introduced, and dead men, having "bones," and having been "slain by the world," are represented as talking. The overthrow of Pharaoh is thus set forth—:

> "I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him down to hell [sheol—the state of the dead] with them that descend into the pit; and all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth. They also went down into hell with him, unto them that be slain with the sword; and they that were his arm, that dwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen. To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth; thou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword. This is Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord God. . . . The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell with them that help him; they are gone down, they lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword; Asshur is there and all her company; his graves are about him; all of them slain, fallen by the sword; whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, and her company is round about her grave; all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused terror in the land of the living. There is Elam and all her multitude round about her grave; all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which are gone down uncircumcised into the nether parts of the earth, which caused their terrors in the land of the living; yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit. They have set her a bed in the midst of the slain with all her multitude; her graves are round about him: all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword; though their terror was caused in the land of the living, yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit; he is put in the midst of them that be slain. There is Meshech, Tubal, and all her multitude; her graves are round about him; all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword, though they caused their terror in the land of the living. And they shall not lie with the mighty that are fallen of the uncircumcised, which are gone down to hell with their weapons of war; and they have laid their swords under their heads, but their iniquities shall be upon their bones. . . . Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be comforted over all his multitude, even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword, saith the Lord God." Ezek. 31: 16-18 and 32: 21-32.

We call particular attention to several facts:

1. This scene is laid in "hell" (sheol); not in the hell of theology, but in "the nether parts of the earth"—nor is it a hell of disembodied men, for its occupants are those "slain by the sword," even those "which are gone down to hell with their weapons of war," and these "have laid their swords under their heads, but their iniquities shall be upon their bones." It will not be admitted that disembodied men are slain by the sword, nor that they carry "weapons of war" to hell with them, nor that they have "bones;" but such is said to be the case with the occupants of the "hell" here brought to view, it being sheol—the state of the dead, where military chieftains were anciently deposited with their weapons of war, just as Indians now often bury their warriors with a tomahawk by their side.

1. Though this is a hell of dead men, instead of being a hell of disembodied men, it is said that they "speak" to Pharaoh, and also that "Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be comforted," while it is said that others have there "borne their shame." Here speech, sight, comfort, and shame are metaphorically attributed to them by personification. On the same principle of personification could Jesus represent the rich man as speaking out of hades, which is not a hell of disembodied men, but simply the state of the dead, if indeed Christ is here speaking of two literal men who had once lived on earth, instead of giving an ordinary parable.

On this principle, too, though speaking of dead men, by personification, could he metaphorically attribute to one of them comfort, and to the other torment, just as really as "comfort" and "shame" were attributed to dead men in the case just cited. Abraham is represented as saying to the rich man—"Thou in thy life time receivedst thy good things"; plainly admitting that he was not then alive, though metaphorically represented as talking; else, instead of saying, "In thy life time," it would have been proper to have said, "In thy former life." In this metaphorical scene, or case of personification, though the persons here presented are really dead, the rich man is represented as requesting Abraham to send Lazarus to relieve him; which being denied, he is represented as requesting him to send Lazarus to his living friends, to warn them, lest they also should die in their sins; which request being refused, it is insisted, "If one went unto them from the dead they will repent," showing that the request was not to have the ghost of Lazarus sent, but Lazarus himself sent "from the dead," by a resurrection; for Abraham is represented as responding, "Neither will they repent, though one rose from the dead"—thus showing that the only idea concerning sending Lazarus was by his resurrection. Death fixes an impassable gulf between the righteous and the wicked, preventing any change in point of moral condition, for "the wicked is driven away in his wickedness; but the righteous hath hope in his death." "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord"; they "sleep in Jesus."

Death also cuts off all intercourse between the living and the dead, it being admitted, even in this narrative, that the only way to get a communication open would be by having one rise from the dead, thus rolling back the tide of death. But mark! both in the case of Pharaoh, and that of the rich man, the scene is laid in sheol, or hades, of which realm the wise man affirms, "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom"; so, even if the occupants of that realm were spirit-men, instead of being material men, it would not change the fact that they were unconscious, and consequently the representation of talk must be metaphorical.

Nor is this method of attributing speech to lifeless objects, to illustrate a truth, anything new. It is said that Abel's blood "cried"; and "he being dead yet speaketh"; "the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel"; "the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it." Jotham used this method of speech (Judges 9: 8), attributing a long conversation to the trees of the field, telling what was said by the olive tree, fig tree, the vine, the bramble, and all the trees. The object was to more forcibly impress a point by attributing speech to speechless matter; and thus could Jesus impress an important principle by attributing speech and feeling to dead men—the hopeless and irremediable condition of all that die in sin, and the comforting hope of the righteous, under the watch-care of angels even in death. If, however, Christ is not here metaphorically attributing speech to the dead by personification, to teach a lesson to the living, as in the case of Pharaoh, let our opposers grapple with the mighty fact that there is no "knowledge" in sheol or hades, whether it is the abode of spirit-men, or material men.

REVIVAL MEETINGS.—The leisure season is nearing, when protracted meetings should be held by our preachers all over the land. Special efforts should be made to infuse the spirit of labor for perishing men into the hearts of our membership. We should not be content with the impression that we are in as good working order as other religious denominations around us, for we ought to be far in advance of them, for we see the day of God approaching, and this should make us a working people. And we should make special efforts to get men ready for that great day. This cannot be done by bitter contention, under the claim that we must preach the truth; for truth preached in such a spirit is often ruinous in its present effects. Of course we must preach the truth, but always in the loving spirit of Jesus, instead of the combative spirit of warfare, which never fails to awaken the same contentious spirit in the hearts of some of the hearers—an element that never promotes the revival spirit, but always blights in its incipient stage.

This has led some to suppose that the truth must be suppressed in revival efforts in order to success. But such a conclusion is entirely wrong. A revival that can be killed by the truth of heaven, when presented in the spirit of Christ, ought to die, and angels would say amen to its death. The more truth we present, the stronger will the converts be, and the less liable to be caught by chaff. Revivals minus truth, are like a porridge without salt or meal; and converts, though born alive under the excitement, live only while it stimulates them, and then die for want of nourishing food, having been born without a relish for the truth, rejecting it when presented to them.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. G. Bowman.

BRO. GRANT:—I received yours accepting me as an Advent preacher. I commenced my labors as such on Sunday last, and received thirty-one into the Advent church for a beginning. They compose some of the most influential men and women in this circuit. This is the first Advent church ever organized in S. C. I expect scores more as soon as I get to my appointments. The truth is spreading all around, and stirring up opposition in a corresponding degree. The houses of worship are closed against me, but that only attracts the large crowds to hear the word of the Lord in the open air. I have a great trial, and a great work on my heart and hands; but, glory to my blessed Jesus, his precious grace, and the encouragement of the people wherever I go, sustain me in my work. With $2.500, with what assistance I could get here, I could build four meeting-houses at prominent points, which I am satisfied would unite the strength in every particular in this entire section; and I believe if I could go with, and make a personal appeal to the wealthy and pious, I could raise that amount in a few days. This I cannot do for want of time and means. O, will not God move some of his servants to go at once and present our claims to all who may feel disposed to help us in our poverty and distress? I believe he will. I believe Jesus will send us the help we need. Amen.

I want a number of doctrinal tracts and hymn books. I sent the money long ago for a copy of Hudson's "Debt and Grace." They stated there was none on hand. Send a second-hand copy. Tell the hands in the office to raise a subscription and send me a Bible for my own use with good, plain print. I am truly glad you are coming out to visit us. I think you had better come to me, say about the middle of November, and, after spending some time with me, we can fix on other points. Let me know in time, so that I can advertise the people of it.

Now, my dear Bro., let me beg you, every time you get on your knees to pray, do pray particularly for me, that God may give me love to all men, so that my heart may be kept in perfect peace, and that I may have wisdom and prudence sufficient for this emergency, and be ready to meet the speedy coming of Jesus.

PEYTON G. BOWMAN.

Lydia, S. C., Sept. 12th, 1871.

From Bro. P. Alling.

BRO. GRANT:—The harmony that seems to inspire the hearts of our brethren at our late national campmeeting, relative to the speedy coming of Christ, is of itself a strong testimony to the true believer that redemption is at hand. This is what I have been looking for, and have long believed must be, just prior to deliverance. When the church is fully united, and imbued, soul, body and spirit, with this cementing grace of God, and will cry unto the Lord with one heart like the importunate widow unto the unjust judge, then God will "avenge his elect," and Zion will bring forth, and the entire nation of the dead saints will "be born in a day," and "the earth no longer cover her slain." This appointed labor of the church will come at the appointed time of the promised deliverance; time and event synchronize in all the purposes of God, and point with unerring certainty to these eventful days of expectation and of hope. O how glorious and how exalted are the privileges of the church!

If Enoch and Elijah were honored of God, and before their translation had the testimony that they pleased God, should not the church before her translation have the same testimony? Most certainly. This testimony can be had in the same way they obtained it; viz., by believing what God has said, and by doing what he has commanded. If the hope they entertained was glorious, and enabled them to walk with God, how much more glorious is our hope; and how careful ought we to be to observe all of his commands; and thus, like them, "walk with" him. This can only be attained by adding to our Bible faith the graces the Master has enjoined; viz., virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, and charity. The Lord aid us all in this great work.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

MECHANIC FALLS CAMPMEETING.

A few things about this meeting it may be important to say. It was pronounced a success by the many who attended, and if we count on good order and preaching it was so; but when we think of the many who went away as they came—unsaved, we wish we had succeeded better. The preaching was by A. Damon, F. A. Baker, C. H. Sweet, C. Goud, J. Gay, R. R. York, H. D. Reed, H. L. Hastings, and B. P. Stevens. Sunday morning, at love-feast, we had one hundred and seventy-two exhortations in one hour, and seventeen verses sung. At the business meeting a new committee was chosen for the coming year; viz., R. R. York, J. Gay, C. Denneo, A. S. Mayberry, and John Stevens.

Our financial position is this: There was left in my hands, at the close of the meeting, $304.65; about $135 of the amount being collections. I have paid out $301.55, and have $3.10 left to pay a bill amounting to $19.30. Shall I pay the sixteen dollars from my own pocket? I would gladly, were I able, and say nothing. This bill must be met immediately, brethren. Three of your committee are preachers, poor men, and the other two are not very rich; besides, I think they have done their part. Now will you please send to me enough to balance accounts without delay, and we will be very thankful.

W. Poland, Me. J. ALBERT LIBBY.

P. S.—J. A. Bucknam's bill was $90, instead of $70, as at first supposed. J. A. L.

NOTICE.

At a meeting of several of the friends of the Advent cause in this State, held in the Mission tent, at Pittsfield, Me., Sept. 9th, the following business was transacted:—

Eld. F. A. Baker was chosen chairman, and R. R. York Secretary of said meeting. It was unanimously voted to have a campmeeting on this ground next year, if the Lord will, commencing the last Monday in August, and continuing one week. Bro. J. Carr, L. P. Southard, Oscar Farnam, A. J. Maine, B. Carr, F. A. Baker, and R. R. York, were chosen a committee of arrangements.

Voted, that the committee be authorized to fill vacancies, should any occur. Voted, that the Secretary forward to the Crisis a report of this meeting for publication.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

ROME, 20th. The first anniversary of the occupation of Rome by the Italian troops was celebrated with great enthusiasm to-day. The city was literally covered with festoons of flags, flowers and tapestry. The shops were all closed and political associations paraded with full ranks, accompanied by bands of music, and carrying flags and banners bearing various inscriptions in honor of United Italy. The crowds in the streets were immense and orderly. In the afternoon there was a grand review of troops. Many arrived in the city by the way of Mont Cenis Tunnel and Railway in season to witness the festivities.

EVENING. The celebration continues to-night. Many buildings are illuminated, and the theatres, at which patriotic spectacles are given, are crowded. There have been no disturbances, although cries of "Down with the Pope" were occasionally heard in the streets. Troops are bivouacked in the public squares, and every precaution is taken against the violation of public order.

Sept. 22. The Jesuits and Republican agents have been expelled from Rome. The Pope has postponed the appointment of Bishops to vacant sees until November.

VERSAILLES, Sept. 21. President Thiers has been presented by King Amadeus with the order of the Golden Fleece, instituted by Phillip III. in 1429. Thiers held a lengthy interview to-day with Von Arnim upon the subject of the delayed treaty between France and Germany.

Rochefort was sentenced by court martial to transportation to a penal colony for life.

VIENNA, Sept. 22. Rumors are current that Emperor Francis Joseph is about to abdicate the throne of Austria.

In Brief.

—— The highest farm in the world is said to be situated four miles from Sherman station, on the Union Pacific Railroad. It has an elevation of eight thousand feet above the level of the sea. Vegetables and grain thrive well on this farm, and two hundred apple trees have been set out as an experiment.—— It is estimated that the people of the United States pay $100,000,000 per year for nostrums and nostrum services, exclusive of patent medicines, which add to the sum $25,000,000.—— Five millions of people are at present under arms in Europe, and $12,000 [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] hands.

NOTICE.

At a meeting of the ministers and some of the delegates, representing South Western Massachusetts, South Western Vermont, and Eastern New York, held on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 25th, 1871, it was deemed absolutely necessary, in order for a better co-operation on the part of ministers and churches, and for the advancement of the cause of the soon coming kingdom of Christ, that a conference be organized, comprising the churches and ministers of the above territory, who are looking for the "return of the Nobleman," and speedy redemption of the faithful of all ages, and the eternal reign of Christ on this earth. We, the undersigned, ministers of the gospel, therefore, do hereby make a call for such a Conference, to be held at Hoosac, N. Y., in the Advent Church, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1871, and to hold over the following Sunday; and for all the churches, who desire the cause of truth advanced in their midst, and who co-operate with the objects and interests of such a conference, to represent themselves by delegates duly appointed, and where there are no churches holding regular meetings, but where isolated brethren live, that they also come, that the Conference may know what can be done to build up the cause in their locality.

Each church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every twenty-five members.

Let there be a general rally, from all parts of the Hoosac Valley, of our brethren and sisters to this meeting. Come in the name of our soon coming King. Come filled with the Spirit. Come to speak for God, that you may comfort the church, and admonish the sinner. Make every possible effort to attend this great gathering of the saints. Ample accommodations will be made for all who come.

We expect to see the following churches in Western Mass., represented by delegates: Plainfield, Savoy, Charlemont, North Adams, and others in that section of the State.

From Eastern New York: Sandy Hill, Fort Edward, Saratoga, Hebron, Hoosac, Low Hampton, and all others in that part of the State.

West. Vermont: Rutland, Castleton, Poultney, Woodford, and all others this side the mountains.

Hoosac is located on the Boston and Troy R. R. Those coming to the meeting will stop at Hoosac Corners. Teams will be at the depot on the arrival of the two and three o'clock p. m. trains, to take those who come to the meeting to the place of the conference.

J. Wilber, R. Mosher,
R. L. Harrison, C. Pike,
Z. D. Baird, H. K. Flagg,
A. W. Sibley, H. A. King.

P. S. Let us hear from other ministers and churches, located in the Hoosac Valley, immediately. A. W. Sibley, Secretary.
Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Dedication.

The dedication of the Second Advent Chapel at Chelsea, Mass., will take place Thursday afternoon, Sept. 28th, at three o'clock. Bro. Couch will be present to preach the word adapted to the occasion, after which there will be meeting Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and longer if desirable. Let the brethren from abroad come and enjoy the feast with us. L. Boutell, for the Church.

Notice.

The Mission Tent will be pitched in Fitchburg, Mass., Friday, Sept. 29th, and continue certain days, as the Lord will. Meetings afternoons and evenings. Per order. Enoch Morrill.
L. Boutell.

☞ By mistake the notice of the delay of the above tent-meeting for Fitchburg, from the 22nd to the 29th, did not (as it ought) get into last week's Crisis, but on account of the fair, with other reasons, they desired it put off; and now, the Lord will, it will commence Friday next, at 3 o'clock p. m., and we hope to see our brethren from the vicinity to our meeting. We expect it will continue over two Sundays, and that Brn. Carpenter, Hemenway, and others, will be present to preach the word of God relating to our faith. Come over and help us. L. Boutell.

Grove and Basket Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting near the new chapel, East Savoy, Mass., commencing Thursday, Oct. 5th, at two o'clock p. m., and will continue over the following Sabbath. If the weather should prove to be stormy or cold, meetings will be held in the chapel. A general invitation is extended to all. Come in the name of the Lord, to do good, and help sustain the blessed truth that Christ is soon coming to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe. Preaching brethren, come up and help us. There will be a refreshment stand on the ground. Z. D. Baird.

Dedication.

The new meeting-house at Fremont, Steuben Co., N. Y., will be dedicated Thursday, Oct. 5th, at two o'clock p. m. Eld. W. A. Fenn will preach the dedication sermon, and continue meetings a few days, as per request of the church.
J. W. Taylor.

R. I. and E. Ct.

This Conference will hold its next quarterly session with the church in Foster, R. I., Wednesday, Oct. 4th. Come up to this feast of the Lord, all ye his servants. M. R. Prettyplace, Clerk.

Dedication.

The new Advent Hall at Highlandville, Mass., will be dedicated to the service of God, Friday, Sept. 29th, at one o'clock p. m. Meetings will be continued on Saturday and over the following Sabbath. Eld. J. Couch and other preaching brethren will be present and assist.
S. G. Lowe.

New Music.

I have just published three new pieces of Music, entitled, "Rest over There," "Life in the Future," and "The Father's Mercy." Price 5 cents each, postage two cents. Any other piece of music published may be obtained at the regular price, by addressing Geo. E. Lee, 387 Main St., Springfield, Mass.

Notice.

The Maine S. A. C. Conference will be held in the Union Chapel, South Windham, Me., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 10th, at two o'clock p. m., and hold as long as thought proper. It is thought best to hold the Ministerial School in connection with this conference.

We hope to see a general attendance of our ministering brethren and delegates from all the churches, and others, to work for the Lord in saving sinners and spreading the knowledge of his truth. Those coming to Conference will call on Brn. J. Stephens and — Spear for directions and accommodations. In behalf of the committee,
C. Goud, President.

Protracted Meeting.

There will be a protracted meeting in Kingfield, as Bro. Blackwell may arrange, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 12th, and continue as long as thought best. Brn. B. F. Davis and Wm. Doughty are expected to attend. H. B. Sevey.

Conference.

The next quarterly session of the R. I. and E. Conn. Conference of Reformers, will be held at the North Foster Tabernacle, R. I., commencing Wednesday, Oct. 4th, at two o'clock p. m. A full attendance of preachers, delegates, brethren and sisters is hoped for. N. A. Angell.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting in Pittsburg, N. H., commencing Oct. 7th, at one o'clock p. m., and continue as long as the Lord directs. The tent will be pitched at the Terrill school-house. This meeting will be a free one. We believe in preaching and living the whole gospel.
U. G. Ladd.
F. S. Ransom.
Geo. E. Brown.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Church hold meetings every Lord's day in Temperance Hall, No. 8 Bleury St., Montreal, P. Q., at half-past ten a. m., and half-past six p. m.

I'M WAITING.

M. P. ORDWAY.

I'm waiting, I'm waiting for Jesus to come,
Because he has promised to give me a home;
A home with the angels, a home with my God,
A home which he bought with his own precious blood.

I know that I'm weak, but Jesus is strong,
And he's always near by to help me along;
He pities me when I am tempted to stray,
And gently calls after me, I am the way.

I mean to be faithful and strive against sin,
For Jesus has blessed me and taken me in;
Yes, into his favor, his love, and his care,
And soon he will give me that home over there.
Concord, N. H.

SPIRITUAL FOOD.

C. E. BARNES.

Those who are familiar with their Bibles, will hardly need to be told that in teaching us its truths it abounds with illustrations and comparisons taken from the natural world, so as to present them to us more plainly. Would it have us see clearly the care of our God in keeping his people? It represents him as being a careful husbandman, as being a tender Shepherd. Would it have us comprehend the nature of Christ's love toward us? It causes us to do so, by calling him the Bridegroom, and his church the bride; and in this manner it illustrates all of its many truths.

That change which is experienced when Christ is received into the heart by faith, is called conversion (Matt. 18: 3); is called a moral quickening or resurrection (Eph. 2: 1; 5: 14); but that figure which best represents it, is that of a birth, for as the new born babe enters upon its natural life at birth, so does the babe in Christ (1 Cor. 3: 1), at conversion, enter upon an entirely new life; a life which before was wholly unknown; a life unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Rom. 6: 11.

In natural life, by administering proper food and nourisment, we see the babe grow, and pass successively through all the various grades and stages of life, until at last, vigorous manhood and maturity are reached. And as in the natural, so also is it in the spiritual world. Peter says—"As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby" (1 Pet. 2: 2), and throughout the Scriptures this idea of spiritual growth and development is recognized, and also demanded; and it is concerning this growth that I wish to present a few thoughts.

The laws or principles which control the development of natural life and strength, are the same in spiritual life. If a child is sickly, weak, and feeble, there can be found causes which have produced such a condition. Oftentimes such an one cannot relish good, plain, hearty food, not from any original defect in nature's workmanship, but because a too indulgent parent has permitted the child to eat so freely of those things which have an injurious effect, that the blood has become impaired, and the digestive apparatus so disarranged, that these ill consequences are but the legitimate and inevitable results.

Another cause which leads to natural debility, and general inefficiency, is a lack of exercise, and in this respect the fully of parents is often manifested. Instead of permitting the children to romp and play in the open air and sunshine, they are in many instances deprived of the pleasure, and in consequence we again see the weak and delicate one. But, on the other hand, when we see a child that is not permitted to gratify its appetite when and with what it pleases, but is fed with good, plain, wholesome food, and is permitted to run and play, thereby giving a vigorous action to the different parts of the system, I say, when we see one thus permitted to do, then we see a healthy, robust child; and if those same rules are carried out in practice until maturity, then we see men and women, and not the shadows or wrecks of men and women. These are features of natural life; the relations subsist the same in matters pertaining to the growth and development of "babes in Christ."

When we see a dwarf in nature, a "Tom Thumb" or a "Commodore Nutt," we look upon it as a rarity; as something strange that there should be no growth. And I would that religious dwarfs were equally rare; that a cessation of growth was as uncommon in spiritual as in natural life; but, alas! in a spiritual sense, the "Tom Thumbs" are only too numerous. Instead of seeing the converts daily growing in grace and divine life, we too frequently see them remaining in a condition where they appear weak, unhealthy, and, in a word, the victims of, for what I can think of no better name than, religious dyspepsia. Now those who are in this condition (and how many such there are!) have got there because of indulging in those gratifications that tend to spiritual decline and decay.

God designs his children to grow, and to this end he has provided food and exercise, which, if taken in preference to other kinds, will most assuredly lead to a strong and vigorous christianity. Said Jesus to Peter—"Feed my sheep" (John 21: 16); and if this injunction is heeded, and the sheep permitted to have gospel food, and are denied all of an injurious tendency, a fine looking flock, rich with wool, will be the result. Said the chief Shepherd—"It is written man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Matt. 4: 4. Said his servant Peter—"As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." Said that mighty man of God, that giant in spiritual things, Paul, "Refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness." Tim. 4: 7. And when christians will feed upon the word of God; when they love it so that they can say with Job, "I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food" (ch. 23: 12); when with David they can say, "How sweet are thy words unto my taste; yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" (Ps. 119: 103); when they relish the word of God to this extent, and when they will give themselves plenty of godly exercise; working in the Sabbath school; working in prayer-meetings; working every where, sowing seed beside all waters; always engaging in this kind of exercise; "always abounding in the work of the Lord;" everywhere standing up for Christ; when this is reached, then we shall see those who have come unto the maturity of perfect man, "unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (Eph. 4: 13); then we shall see a christianity and spirituality that all heaven will rejoice over, and that God will delight to honor and own.

But instead of this exercise in heaven's gymnasium, many there be who never take an active part in laboring for the prosperity of Zion.

The Sabbath school needs workers, but these drones remain idle; they go to prayer meetings, but their voice is seldom heard in prayer or exhortation. And in their intercourse with the world, oftentimes too timid to speak a word for Christ and his truth, even when it is assailed by its enemies. They neglect to exercise themselves unto godliness, and no wonder they are weak and inefficient. And instead of feeding upon the heavenly manna, the bread of life; instead of meditating upon the word of God, and finding pleasure and profit therein, there is no apparent relish for it, so that when it is read, it is more to satisfy the demands of a condemning conscience, than because their desires really tend that way. But how eagerly is the story paper read! How utterly oblivious to every thing else do they become while reading it! And when at last the "to be continued in our next," is reached, how eagerly and earnestly is the next number longed for, and how impatiently waited for!

No wonder there is no relish for gospel food. No wonder their appetite is spoiled. No wonder they are on a decline. No wonder they have nothing to say in the prayer-meeting. No wonder there is such a sickly christianity at the present time. No wonder there is a spiritual dearth in the land, when the food and exercise ordained of God to promote health, are ignored, and that of an injurious nature is indulged in instead.

The lack, the great lack in christians to-day, is a lack of earnestness; an apathy and drowsiness that are shameful; and one main reason is because of the baneful influence upon the mind of reading light and nonsensical story papers, which, instead of ministering to the devotional part of their natures, pampers a lower taste, and checks, almost immediately, further spiritual growth. The precious plant of God's own planting is allowed to be choked by these tares, so that the bud, which gave promise of becoming a beautiful flower, fades away, and becomes a thing of naught.

And is this always so to be? Will you persist in ministering to this passion, at the expense of spirituality, or will you cease to devote so much time to it, and, instead, feed upon that which will expend the mind, purify your nature, and cause you to grow in the knowledge and in the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ?

Oh! I would that you might heed Peter's injunction, and "as new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye might grow thereby."

THE SACREDNESS OF THE MARRIAGE COVENANT.

B. MATHEWSON.

At the present, when the sacredness of the marriage covenant instituted by the highest authority in Eden's bowers is so lightly estimated, and severed as the flax that falls asunder at the touch of fire, and conjugal infidelity among all classes from the highest aristocrat to the lowest plebian is rampant, it seems befitting and extremely opportune that the law by which all God's real children are governed should be set forth, refreshing their memories upon this subject.

As John the Baptist began the gospel of Jesus Christ (Mark 1: 1), we will look at the fidelity and zeal he manifested upon this subject during his short ministry. He possessed sufficient moral stamina to reprove a king who had put away his own lawful wife and taken another. No fear, no hesitancy, or personal embarrassment is manifested in his manner, but with respectful carriage he pointedly tells the king his flagrant crimes. It is true he lost his head in consequence of this faithful reproof, for who is so revengeful as an adulterer or an adulteress, when blamed or reproved? Jerome informs us that when Herodias received the Baptist's head, she manifested her diabolical disposition by drawing out the tongue and thrusting it through with her bodkin. So exceedingly incensed was this adulteress on being exposed to public censure, that she would ere this have imbued her own hands in the blood of this faithful minister had an opportunity been afforded. Mark 6: 19. Thus much of the forerunner of the Messiah.

The Savior himself introduced this subject in the early part of his ministry, in that memorable sermon on the Mount, in Matt. 5: 31. He refers to the bill of divorcement allowed by Moses, found in Deut. 24. From some knowledge we gather both from profane and sacred history, many of the Jews had so interpreted this saying of Moses, as to make it appear lawful for a man to put away his wife for the most trivial cause; such as—"If she were not agreeable to him;" "If she did not dress his meat well;" "If he found any woman he liked better." Let any one turn and read Deut. 24, and see how far it differs from anything of this kind; see if there is anything on which to base such an explanation.

Both Josephus and Philo show that in their time the Jews believed divorce to be lawful upon very trivial causes. But the Messiah's declaration upon this point is emphatic, free from ambiguity. Hear him—"But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery." Need any mistake this language? Would it not be perfectly intelligible to a child of twelve years possessing common ability? But the Pharisees, who evidently loved this transformation of Moses' language, came to him some time after this, and temptingly inquired whether it were lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause? Christ refers them to the first pair in the beginning, showing them that even parental ties should be riven, in order the more fully to cement the bands of conjugal affection; making it evident that this institution was of too sacred an origin to be rent asunder by man, showing conclusively that no tie is so sacred, no affection so strong, as that existing between the true husband and wife. Then Christ plainly reiterates the language he had used in his sermon on the Mount. Let us read it again. Jesus repeated it twice—"But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever marryeth her that is divorced committeth adultery."

Thus, when we see a husband or wife with stronger affection for any other friend, even father, mother, brother, sister, or child, we may know there is something wrong. It is not as the Creator designed in the beginning. This may sometimes be unavoidable by the good. Sin in some form or other may have so metamorphosed a companion as to make them loathsome to a pure heart; and good interesting children must of necessity be more lovable. Sin in many cases has thwarted the purposes of God for the present, but eventually he will not suffer it so to be.

Inspiration is equally emphatic in the language used by the apostle on this subject relative to severing the marriage relation. 1 Cor. 7: 10, 11. Also in regard to the strong attachment that should exist between husband and wife; that it should be strong as life itself (Eph. 5: 25, 28, 33), beside many others which might be adduced.

But, says the long-abused and neglected companion, who has suffered many indignities, and, it may be, lives in continual fear of being deprived of life, is there no redress? Must I continue yoked up with one whom I fear as I do the midnight assassin, the entrance of whose footfalls causes my very being to tremble? Yet I cannot prove him guilty of the sin mentioned by the Savior. Does the Savior forbid one's leaving such a monster of cruelty though once holding the marriage covenant with him? I do not so understand it. I understand it is the marrying again that breaks the Savior's command. His teaching is, whosoever puts away his wife and marries another, unless there be conjugal infidelity, is an adulterer. "And whosoever marries her that is divorced committeth adultery." But what if a man, like one in the State of Ct. some years since, who had been poisoned by his wife twice, and though he loved her still, dared not risk his life by living longer with her, do you think the Savior's language obliged him to still remain with her? But according to the divine command he must not marry again, unless it was apparent she was guilty of the sin mentioned by the Savior. But the sequel of this case was, he was soon released from her in a way that he might marry again; her real character being made apparent.

I do not understand the Savior to teach that a married couple must always live together unless one is guilty of this particular sin, but they may not marry another for any other cause. But from the sacred manner he treats of the marriage covenant, it proves that the case must be an extreme one, that shall even separate husband and wife. Some have threatened a separation if their companions continued to follow Christ. Should such for fear of breaking the marriage covenant leave Christ? Nay, verily. Paul's advice found in 1 Cor. 7: 15 is befitting in this place—"But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases." Who ever considers Mr. Wesley culpable for allowing a carnal though fashionable wife to depart, rather than give up preaching the blessed gospel? But he remained unmarried and diligently followed his Master.

No one can stand justified and act contrary to this command of Christ, be their profession what it may. Many have attempted this who profess goodness, but like the branch that is severed from its parent stem, they wither. If circumstances are favorable they may appear fresh and green for a little time, but, alas! they can draw nourishment from the living vine no longer; hence they wither and finally die.

BETHEL INDEED!

Seldom has the spirit of glory and of God rested more sensibly upon God's little flock than at the Bethel, Vt., campmeeting, which closed Sept. 11th. Praises to God! for his rich mercies and blessings come with a free, full flow, from scores of hearts filled with Jesus' love. Old veterans of the cross pronounced it the best campmeeting for twenty years. "This seems like '43," was often repeated, echoed and heard on every hand. How shall we enumerate our blessings?

1. And least, a healthful, leafy temple of worship, beautiful for situation.

2. The loveliest of weather for an encampment.

2. And better, the absence of all human greatness. Therefore,

4. A ceasing from man, and an utter prostration before God for help. Never do I recollect of hearing in one week so many prevailing prayers offered to God. While they were yet speaking, He heard. What wonder then that

5. We had the sanctifying presence of the Lord of hosts.

6. Brotherly kindness. Sweet was our fellowship one with another. The comforts of love were ours. Harmony prevailed everywhere.

7. Freedom. Fetters broke, chains parted, bondage gave place to liberty. The children spoke and prayed by twos and threes in every meeting, yet all was harmony.

8. Good meetings. Not one poor meeting for eight consecutive days. Glory to God! Our order of worship was this: at 5½ A. M., general prayer and worship. 8 A. M., family worship. 9½ A. M., love-feast daily; and although daily, the more we feasted the more we had to feed upon. 4 P. M., children's meeting. 6 P. M., general prayer and worship. 10½ A. M., 1½ P. M., and 7½ P. M., preaching. Not one untimely sermon or dull season of worship, but higher and higher daily rose the spirit of the meeting, till Sunday morning some might have supposed us drunken with new wine; but we were only drinking from the fountain clear as crystal from underneath the throne. Glory to God!

9. Aged pilgrims. A very interesting service during the week was an old people's meeting. There were present twenty upwards of seventy years; nine upwards of seventy-five years, and four upwards of eighty years of age. One brother, aged eighty-four years and past, walked fifteen miles to attend the meeting. Their testimony was cheering to younger hearts. They felt youthful in hope, although with trembling limb and bowed form.

10. The work of grace. The Lord was sought and found. Wanderers came home amid tearful joy. Sunday morning, with its four long seats of mourners seeking God, will not soon fade from our memory.

11. Good order. The order upon the ground was much better than last year. Saturday night we had a demonstration of wickedness, arising from some misunderstanding between lovers of folly and the police; but it only served to make the picture of '43 more complete, and God soon gave us complete victory, and a glorious triumph, and good feeling prevailed toward the meeting even among the thoughtless throng.

12. God was all and in all. To Him all praise belongeth. Let us not forget that the secret of all our blessing was this:—God wrought in us "both to will and to do of his good pleasure." Oh have we gone here and there, trusting in this or that one's greatness for our blessing, and been disappointed. Henceforth let us trust in God, who useth the humblest instrumentalities to glorify himself. Our help cometh from the Lord. Many were the hearts that left the ground feeling that the Redeemer's cause had received an impetus at this meeting which would be felt the whole year.

The Vermont State Conference held in connection with the meeting was an occasion of great interest and profit. It breathed earnest effort and work in the vineyard. Dear brethren, let us be humble and true to Christ, and soon Bethel will become Mount Zion, with louder praise, sweeter songs, fuller joys, with vaster hosts of countless saved in Eden's bowers of fadeless green; and partings then will know no tear, and vacant groves no sad spell of loneliness shall wear.

"We'll be there." N. F. C.

NEW YORK A. C. CONFERENCE.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The quarterly session just closed—Sept. 3d, 1871—at South Butler, N. Y., has proved a very interesting and profitable meeting. We think all felt it was good to be there.

The Address was given on the first evening, Aug. 31st, by Bro. W. J. Hobbs, using the words "Occupy till I come" as a foundation of remarks. A very fine delegation arrived to attend this first meeting, and the occasion was really one of unusual interest. The Lord seemed to be with us in truth, sanctioning our efforts for this place.

There was the usual harmony of feeling and unity of action in our business sessions (of which there were three), enabling us to do the same with dispatch, decency, and in order.

The first meeting was called to order by the President, on Friday morning at nine o'clock. After prayer by Bro. J. B. Cook, the following committees were appointed. On Business: M. R. Miles, W. J. Hobbs, J. H. Whitmore. Devotional Exercises: E. A. Bowe, J. S. Beeman, Wm. E. Brown.

The following ministers were present and reported their labors for the last quarter:—W. J. Hobbs, C. H. Williams, J. W. Taylor, S. C. Gove, J. B. Cook, E. S. Jennings, W. A. Fenn, E. F. Sergisson, D. Cogswell, J. H. Whitmore, M. R. Miles. Bro. Wm. Ingmire, J. E. Wells, W. Vreeland, and H. H. Brown, were also present, making fifteen ministers in all; and letters were read from Brn. A. A. Phelps and D. T. Taylor.

The second business session was held on Saturday morning at nine o'clock. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, as also the following Treasurer's Report:

June 10th, received of the treasurer, $49.75. From Buffalo church, $4. Rochester, $2.20. Springwater, $1. June 14th, received of the Sec. from the Del., $18.10. From individuals, $10.—Total, $85.05. June 14th, paid B. P. Stevens, ex. for Tent, $5.00. A. A. Phelps, do., $20.00; for tracts, $10.00. June 15th, paid W. A. Fenn for lamps, $10.00. Total, $45.00. Balance on hand, $40.05.

Sept. 1st, 1871. R. C. BROWN.

The following delegates reported and handed in the annexed quarterly collections, viz: E. A. Bowe, Darien; W. J. Hobbs, Springwater, $2.55; J. S. Beeman, Honeoye, $2.25; J. Phelan, Rochester, $7. E. Johnson and E. Sanderson, East Shelby, $5; A. Roberts, Wolcott; Dansville, $12; Lockport, $4. Total, from collections, $32.80; by individuals, $11.33—$44.13. Adjourned.

Bro. Cogswell reported having disposed of the old tent for $25—$10 balancing the old account at Bro. Field's, and the remaining $15 falling to the conference fund. The following resolutions were passed by unanimous vote:—

1. Resolved, That this conference regret to receive the resignation of Bro. C. M. Booth as master of the N. Y. State Tent, and in accepting it, we express to him our appreciation of his past services.

2. Resolved, That Bro. Wm. E. Brown be appointed to the place vacated by Bro. Booth.

3. Resolved, That Bro. Wm. A. Fenn be appointed associate of Bro. A. A. Phelps in the conduct and management of meetings in the N. Y. State Mission Tent. Adjourned.

At four o'clock there was another short session, called to order by the Secretary, the President being unwell. By invitation of the church in Rochester, it was voted to hold our next quarterly meeting with them. Bro. M. B. Miles was appointed to deliver the opening address; Bro. D. Cogswell his alternate. The following resolutions were offered and passed:

1. Resolved, That a protracted meeting committee of three be appointed by the President, from the members of this conference.

2. Resolved, That it shall be the duty of said committee to arrange and hold protracted meetings, or assist in arranging and holding such meetings, in such places and at such times as they may think will best subserve the interests of the cause.

3. Resolved, That this conference is glad to learn that Bro. in northeastern and in southern New York are about to organize quarterly conferences in their respective regions, and we cordially invite their co-operation with this body at our annual meetings.

The preaching was of an excellent spirit throughout, and the congregations were large and attentive. Our chapel proved too small, and the Disciples very kindly gave us the use of their house Saturday evening and all day on Sunday. Bro. J. B. Cook preached Friday P. M., and Bro. J. W. Taylor spoke in the evening from Acts 3: 19–21. Saturday A. M. we listened to Bro. Ingmire from Eph. 3: 1–8, and in the afternoon to Bro. J. H. Whitmore from Rom. 6: 23, in connection with John 5: 12. In the evening Sister Jennings spoke, giving the gospel according to Paul in 1 Cor. 15.

Sunday morning Bro. D. Cogswell gave a very interesting discourse from 2 Cor. 5: 10, after which the usual collection was taken up, and $55 received, afterwards increased by individuals to $60, which the committee report as being disbursed as follows: one minister having come furthest, and also met with a loss, received $8. Seven received $5 each; five received $3 each, and two received $1 each. In the afternoon Bro. W. A. Fenn gave us a good discourse from 1 Cor. 15: 22, and in the evening Bro. J. B. Cook again, from Rom. 15: 27.

Several social meetings were held, and all the time improved. They were interesting, and, we trust, exceedingly profitable seasons. Many were encouraged to a greater diligence and earnestness in the prosecution of our christian work; and may the Lord help all to carry out the good resolutions, there formed, very faithfully at home.

The meeting closed on Sunday evening with an interesting communion season, one hundred and forty-eight partaking together of those precious emblems which "show the Lord's death till he come." A vote of thanks was tendered to the Disciple brethren for the use of their house, and to the citizens of the village for their kindness in entertaining strangers.

The committee on protracted meetings, as appointed by the President, are as follows: Wm. A. Fenn, Rochester; M. R. Miles, Wolcott, and E. F. Sergisson, Rochester.

MESMERISM AND SPIRITUALISM.

BRO. GRANT:—I have intended sending the enclosed extract to you for some time. I found it on the road one day. It seemed to be torn out of a work on Spiritualism. These extracts show, in a measure, that Mesmerism is pretty nearly allied to Spiritualism, and also will in part account for much of the free-love which pertains to Spiritualism, or, more properly, Demonism. May you have still more success in combating with this last foe to vital Christianity. JOHN TAYLOR.

So. Norridgewock, Me. (late of New Haven.)

"Spiritual manifestations, rappings, etc., are brought about only by those who have attained the highest perfection of the practice of mesmerism, and when four or six sit round a table all concerned in will, with one object, desire and determination, they fail not in obtaining interviews with those inhabitants of the spiritual world they desire, which is usually preceded by various demonstrative noises, rappings, etc., which are significant of their presence.

'A short time ago I induced a lady, who was formerly much addicted to mesmeric practices, to give me her experience, written down, and a curious revelation it is. She confessed that whenever she was capable of being acted upon, mesmerically, the mesmeric state was always preceded by one of sexual excitement, often amounting to a perfect orgasm, and that if this feeling was not experienced, she could never be mesmerized. Sometimes the exaltation of the nervous system was so great she could with difficulty control herself, and so many orgasms would follow each other that she would be completely exhausted, and would faint away. According to her statement, the mesmeric sleep or ecstasy, was nothing but the dreamy languor following a sexual orgasm, and though it may not be precisely the same in all similar cases, yet, I am satisfied it is in most. I have seen exhibitions of this kind with young females, in which I could plainly perceive, from observation of such phenomena, that sexual excitement, though modified and disguised, was the moving impulse. Several respectable ladies have also assured me that they were fully award of this, from their own partial experience, when being mesmerized for the cure of disease, and they both refused to submit to such influences again, or allow their daughters to do so. In short, I am satisfied that such influences are often dangerous to morals, and also destructive to health.'"

"FOR EVERY MAN."—Heb. 2: 9.

C. GREENE.

Yes, precious thought, for thus he died for me,
From condemnation he hath set me free.
To Jesus let all nations bow the knee,
How should I love him! yes, he died for me;
In this believers willingly agree,
Self-evident, so plain indeed to see;
God's Lamb thus offered; this is our plea,
Herein the world should have a jubilee;
Through faith an end of sin and misery.
It never tires;—Jesus died for me,
And this from second death the only remedy;
Man's nature coupled with Divinity.
"For every man," and thus he died for thee.
Phila., Pa.

BEECHER ON CONFESSING SINS.—If a man lies I think he ought to confess it, but it is not expedient to tell all your sins openly. Nothing is more disagreeable to me than to hear a man's ailments. If a person has a sore, I don't want to hear about it. I don't care to be regaled with the state of a man's stomach or liver. I have ills enough of my own. Yet some people will get together and croon and croon, and talk about other's sicknesses, and about corpses, and how many they have laid out, and have a regular graveyard banquet. It is the same with spiritual ailment.

There are times when men should make a confession of specific sins. If a man has been carrying on the liquor business, and is converted, it is quite proper that he should confess that he has been doing the devil's work. If he has been engaged in any wickedness that has been open to the whole community, his repentance should be open. It is not necessary to give an inventory of all one's faults, but if we say anything it is better to be specific than generic.

— Though true repentance be never too late, yet late repentance is seldom true.

— Many lose the opportunity of saying a kind thing by waiting to weigh the matter too long. Our best impulses are too delicate to endure much handling.

— Nothing is profitable which is dishonest.

A nameless man, amid a crowd
That thronged the daily mart,
Let fall a word of hope and love,
Unstudied from the heart;
A whisper on the tumult thrown,
A transitory breath—
It raised a brother from the dust,
It saved a soul from death.
O germ! O fount! O word of love!
O thought at random cast!
Ye were but little at the first,
But mighty at the last!

MRS. WOODHULL.—It has been said that woman is woman's greatest enemy, which is not true; but, if applied to the leaders of the woman suffrage cause, that woman is doing more than man can possibly do to retard it, we believe the saying would be correct. Mrs. Woodhull, who claims to be the leader of the party, and who, we are sorry to say, is by too many acknowledged such, is doing more harm to the cause than the opposition of all the men between Maine and Texas could do. The disgusting free-love principles she is constantly advancing in connection with suffrage, are so repelling that it will take a long time and the efforts of many good men and women to overcome the prejudice that will arise from her teachings. She is a smart woman, and a keen writer, which makes her words and actions more injurious.

In an article in her paper, speaking of Mrs. Crittenden, the wife of the man murdered by Mrs. Fair, she says: "A woman who claims a right to a man because of a ceremony which means even less than justice and even more than mockery, when another woman possesses his most ardent love, commits against her sex a foul crime, that is revolting to an instinctive feminine self respect;" making this innocent woman a greater sinner than a murderer. She longs for the time "when the loves of humanity shall be as pure as the loves of the plants, and the aroma of the spirit shall consecrate those ecstatic unions and unimaginable blisses." She says the free love women of America are grateful to Swinburne and Whitman; and especially the latter, and then she proceeds to quote some of their most advanced verses in praises of gross sensuality. Whitman has, according to this female, "a sense of that divinity of love which might be supposed to animate John, the beloved apostle, should he revisit earth; accommodating himself to the nineteenth century, with all the gallantry of Don Juan, and all the spiritual worship of his sublime soul."

This woman, so vile as to utter such sayings, who has two husbands in the same house, and no knowing how many affinities out, is the one who is to be candidate of the woman suffrage party for President. Surely the cause of woman has fallen in bad hands, from which every virtuous lady will recoil and quote the 'Good Lord, deliver us.'—Springfield Daily Union.

A SYRIAN convert to Christianity was once urged by his employer to work on Sunday, but he declined. "But," said the master, "does not the Bible say that if a man has an ox or an ass, that falls into a pit on the Sabbath day, he may pull him out?" "Yes," answered Hayop, "but if the ass has the habit of falling into the pit every Sabbath day, then the man should either fill up the pit, or sell that ass." The story has a sort of a swivel moral which will fit a great many disputed points in these days.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

A PARABLE FOR CHILDREN.

On a fine autumn day Richard was keeping his twelfth birth-day. He was the son of kind and pious parents, who had given him a large number of presents of different kinds, and had allowed him to-day to invite a party of friends.

They were playing together in the garden, in which Richard had a small garden of his own with flowers and fruit trees in it. On the garden wall there were growing some young peach trees which were bearing fruit for the first time. The fruit was just beginning to ripen, and the red cheeks were showing through the delicate bloom which covered them. They looked so beautiful that the boys began to long for them.

But Richard said, "My father has told me not to touch these peaches, for it is the first fruit which the trees have borne. I have all sorts of fruit in my garden. Let us all go away, or we might be tempted to pick them."

Then the boys said, "Why should we not taste them? To-day you are king of the garden, and no one else. Besides, is not this your twelfth birthday? You are a year older to-day. You don't mean always to be a child in leading strings, do you? Only come into our garden! No one tells us not to pick things there."

But Richard said, "No, come with me. Father has told me not to touch them."

Then the boys answered, "But your father will not see you, and how is he to find it out? If he asks you, you can say you know nothing about it."

"Fie!" replied Richard; "that would be a lie, and my cheeks would turn red and soon betray me."

Then the oldest said, "Richard is right. Just listen; I know another way. Look here, Richard. Let us pick them; then you can say you did not do it."

Richard and the others agreed to this. So they broke off the fruit and shared it.

As soon as it was getting dusk the boys went home. But Richard was afraid to meet his father, and whenever he heard the house door opened he was frightened, and began to tremble.

At last his father came, and when Richard heard his footsteps, he ran as quickly as he could to the other side of the garden, where his own little garden was. But his father went and saw how the young trees had been stripped, and called.

"Richard, Richard! where are you!"

When the lad heard his own name, he trembled more from fear. And his father came to him, and said:

"Is this the way you keep your birthday? And are these the thanks I receive, that you rob my trees?"

But Richard replied, "I have not touched the trees, father. Perhaps one of the boys did it."

Then his father took him into the house, and placed him in front of him in the light, and said:

"Do you still want to deceive your father?"

And the boy turned pale and trembled, and with tears confessed the whole. But his father said:

"From this time you are never to go into the garden again."

With this his father left him. But Richard could not sleep all night; he felt miserable as he was lying in the dark; he could hear his heart beat, and whenever he was falling asleep, he was frightened by dreams. This was the worst night of his life.

The next day he looked pale and wretched, and his mother began to grieve for the boy. So she said to his father:

"Look how Richard is taking it to heart, and how low-spirited he is. The locking up of the garden is a sign to him that his father's heart is locked against him too."

The father said, "That is what I wish. That is the reason that I locked up the garden."

"But, then," said the mother, "it is so bad a beginning to the new year of his life."

"It will for that very reason be the happier afterward," was the father's reply.

After a few days the mother said again to to the father:

"I am afraid of Richard's despairing of our loving him again."

"There is no fear of that," replied the father; "his own guilty heart will assure him of the contrary. Hitherto he has enjoyed our love. Now let him learn how to know and admire it, that he may recover it again."

"But," said the mother, "does not it seem to him now to be somewhat serious and stern?"

"That is true," answered the father, "for it appears as justice and wisdom. But let him learn in this way, through the consciousness of his sin, to fear and honor it, and in due time it will appear to him again in its original shape, and he will again, without timidity, call it love. His present trouble is a proof that he is sure to do this by and by."

Some time had again passed by when Richard came one morning out of his bed-room with a quiet but serious face. He had put together in a basket all the presents which he had ever had from his parents, and he now brought the basket and put it down before his father and mother.

Then his father said to him, "What does this mean, Richard?"

And the boy said, "Father, I don't deserve your kindness, so I have brought back the presents. But my heart tells me that I am beginning to be a new child. So pray forgive me, and take me and everything you have so kindly given me."

Then the father folded his child in his arms, and kissed him, and wept over him. And his mother did the same.—Children's Hour.

CARE OF THE TEETH.

In this article I purpose giving a few hints for the management of the teeth. A little practical wisdom, well acted upon in early life, may do more toward saving the teeth than large sums of money expended in later years.

Among measures for the preservation of the teeth, cleanliness ranks first. It is more important than all things else. You may observe that those surfaces of the teeth which are kept freest from soft deposits of food by friction of the lips and tongue, are also freest from decay; on the other hand, all confined localities, interstices and fissures, where impurities are sheltered from friction and removal, are burrowed into by decaying cavities. It is often asked: "Why do teeth decay most often in secret and hidden places, making the cavities both hard to find and difficult to fill?" It is because filth accumulates here and rusts out the hardest enamel. You have not done your whole duty by your teeth until you have removed the last atom of impurity from the most sheltered position between the teeth.

As a cleansing agent, the tooth-brush is indispensable; nothing has ever been invented that can equal it. It should not be too stiff, else it will wound the sensitive edges of diseased gums, and become an instrument of destruction to the very organs it is intended to save. It should not be used rashly, but with extremest care, so as not to injure the tender membranes of the gum while exploring the most confined interstices after impurity.

You do not know how to use a tooth-brush by instinct, as a bird builds her nest: it is a thing to be learned. Perhaps you have been using a brush for years while your teeth are still decaying. Go to some dentist, and assure him that you will not be offended by the truth: he will tell you that you do not half use your brush.

The brush should be used perpendicularly: it should be forced between the teeth both back and front; it should be carried briskly over the ends and into the fissures of the double teeth; it should be used on the inside of the arch; it should pursue its relentless search on every side of the wisdom teeth. The tooth-brush should also be used with an abundance of tepid water, else it will only stir up the impurities without removing them. Rinsings of soft water may be required to wholly dissolve and carry them away.

How often should the tooth-brush be used? For most people, so often that it will never get dry from one using to another; for health reformers, twice each day. The brush must in any case be used as often as you eat. "Twice a week," and oftener when you "go visiting," will not satisfy the demands of hygiene. The organic atoms of food do not long lie exposed to the warmth and moisture of the mouth without undergoing what is termed putrefactive decomposition. The result of this is an acrid, chemical agent that attacks and slowly decomposes the enamel. There is, therefore, no safety unless the teeth are kept absolutely free from the pulpy remains of foods.

You should never eat between meals. Cleansing the teeth is useful only until next you taste food; immediately after that, they need a second cleansing. To go about between regular meals, tasting an apple here, eating a raspberry there, nibbling a crumb of biscuit at one time, or a graham cracker at another, is the high road to ruin for the teeth. Such a course is disturbing to the stomach, even though you swallow but little; it is destruction to the teeth though you swallow none. There is but one sensible and safe course. As often as food enters the mouth, it must be followed by the brush and water, even though it be forty times a day. Will you therefore keep nibbling and rinsing all day? It is better to eat what you need, cleanse well your mouth, and, after that, keep it closed against the smallest morsel. Its purity should be held sacred against the slightest flavor of any aliment until the next meal. In this way only can you escape that frightful mutilation of the teeth which is going on in the mouths of those about you. Do you think that you can save your teeth by a less rigid adherence to the laws of dental hygiene? Perhaps; but the chances are wholly against you.

Most persons should devote from five to ten minutes each day to cleansing the teeth. Brushes of different quality, tooth-picks, floss silk for crowded teeth, should all be at hand. If you do not know how to use all these things, get some dentist to show you. Haven't time for all this? Very well! You will soon have time to spend with your dentist in having expensive fillings inserted. And when all is done, perhaps he will tell you: The fillings are warranted if you keep your teeth absolutely clean, not otherwise. If you would save your children much suffering, and shield them from the worst kind of mortification; if you would preserve their bodies pure and perfect, temples of the soul, teach them how to care for their teeth.—D. C. H. in Health Reformer.

INFLAMED EYES.—The following recipe for the cure of inflamed eyes is given: "Take a potato, and after quartering it, grate the heart as fine as possible, and place the gratings between pieces of cambric muslin. Place the poultice over the eyes, and keep it there fifteen minutes. Continue the operation there successive nights, and a perfect cure ensues." It is worth trying by those afflicted with sore eyes.

TO STOP NOSE-BLEED.—Stand up with the head elevated. Compress the nostril with the finger, and at the same time stretch upward the arm on the same side with the bleeding nostril. Keep the arm perpendicular for two minutes. In most cases this remedy will succeed.

☞ CHILDREN should, in all cases, be allowed plenty of water to drink, and caused to retire never later than eight o'clock if disease is to be avoided.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrines of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PATH.

I walk as one who knows that he is treading
A stranger soil;
As one round whom the world is spreading
Its subtle coil.

I walk as one but yesterday delivered
From a sharp chain;
Who trembles lest the bonds so newly severed
Be bound again.

I walk as one who feels that he is breathing
Ungenial air;
For whom as wiles the tempter still is wreathing
The bright and fair.

My steps, I know, are on the plains of danger,
For sin is near;
But, looking up, I pass along, a stranger,
In haste and fear.

This earth has lost its power to drag me downward,
Its spell is gone;
My course is now right upward and right onward
To yonder throne.

Hour after hour of time's dark night is stealing
In gloom away;
Speed thy fair dawn of light, and joy, and healing,
Thou star of day!

For thee, its God, its King, the long rejected,
Earth groans and cries;
For thee, the long beloved, the long expected,
Thy Bride still sighs!

A SERMON.

THE DIGNITY AND CONDESCENSION OF CHRIST.

C. R. BARNES.

"For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich."—2 Cor. 8. 9.

What an instance of benevolence is here presented to us! What an example to cite, in order to lead christians to be mindful of the necessities of others! That his brethren may be led to give of their substance to such as are in want, Paul refers not to the example of Moses, as a pattern of generosity; not to what he himself had sacrificed on their behalf, but he points them to what their Savior had done for them,—"For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." In getting, therefore, an understanding of this passage, consider

I. The person introduced—"our Lord Jesus Christ."

An act of benevolence becomes magnified and appreciated, as we learn of Him who has benefited us. If we learn that our benefactor is one who is vastly our superior, one upon whom we have no claims; further, if he is one toward whom we have acted unkindly, and then, in our time of distress and misfortune, he comes forward and offers us a kind and helping hand, surely such an act as that, is worthy of all praise. Hence, our first step will be to show who and what our benefactor is. It is a question worthy of our attention; it is a question demanding our attention and investigation, for except we learn of him, how can we "honor the Son, even as" we "honor the Father"?

One reason why this subject has become so obscured, is because men have endeavored to be wise above what is written, and by their unwise speculations, have only darkened "counsel by words without knowledge." The better way is to believe the plain statements of Scripture, even if above our comprehension, and to wait until the dawn of the "perfect day" for a full understanding of them. What then do we learn in the Scriptures of Christ? We learn

1. That he is the Son of God. "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon him; and lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Matt. 3: 16, 17. Now the query is, In what sense is he the Son of God? As when applied to him, the title is one of peculiar dignity and honor, it follows that it must be applied in a peculiar sense. It has a greater significance when applied to Christ, than it has when given to angels and men.

In Job angels are called "sons of God"—"Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? . . . When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy"? (ch. 38: 4, 7.) They are "sons" by creation. In this sense, also, Adam is called the Son of God. In the genealogy of Christ as found in Luke's account, Enos is called the son of Seth, "which was the son of Adam, which was the Son of God." 3: 38. Men also become sons of God by adoption—"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God; for ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father." Rom. 8: 14, 15.

Now, if nothing more is meant when Christ is called the Son of God, than in these instances where angels and men are so designated, it is not a title of special dignity, for in this sense the spiritualist or infidel who denies the doctrine of the incarnation, will be ready to admit his sonship. "We are all sons of God," say they, "and in this sense we believe Jesus to be the Son of God." But Jesus is called "Son" in a peculiar sense—"the only begotten." "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him." 1 John 4: 9. In making this so emphatic, that Christ is the only begotten Son of God, it is that we may learn that there is a different relation existing between God and his Son, Jesus Christ, than between God and others. Christ is "made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For unto which of the angels said he [God] at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son." Heb. 1: 4, 5. While we are all "the offspring of God" (Acts 17: 29), Christ alone is "begotten" of him.

2. As Son of God, he possesses the nature of God. This a created being does not necessarily have. While all living creatures derive their life from him, they do not, as a consequence, partake of his nature. Beasts are created by him, but they have not his nature. Man is a creature of God, but he does not possess this nature; he "is of the earth, earthy." 1 Cor. 15: 47. Angels, also, are created, and although they are spoken of as being divine creatures, it is because they dwell in heaven, in the divine presence, rather than because they are intrinsically possessed of a divine nature; but Christ is divine, because it is his nature intrinsically considered.

Angels are called divine because of their locality, but Christ is divine wherever he may be, whether upon earth, or in heaven, whether upon Calvary's cross, or sitting at the right hand of the majesty on high. He was divine when sharing glory with the Father before the world was, and his divinity still clung to him, even when "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief." He was divine when in the form of God, and no less divine when he had humbled himself and had become "obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." The Scriptures do not speak of Christ as a mere creature. He is spoken of in language too exalted to be applied to any mere creature. If he was such, he would not necessarily possess the nature of Deity. To have that, he must be a Son, not by creation, nor by adoption, but by being begotten; and this the Scriptures teach in many places.

3. As he has the nature of God, therefore he has equality with God. This he himself claims. On a certain occasion, said Jesus—"My Father worketh hitherto, and I work. Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God. Then answered Jesus and said unto them. Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do; for whatsoever things he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise, . . . for as the Father raiseth up the dead and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will, for the Father judgeth no man; but hath committed all judgment unto the Son; that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father which hath sent him." John 5: 17-23.

Who but a peer could thus speak of receiving honor, even as the Father? Who but the "only begotten Son" could say "what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise"? Surely, if he was not an equal, I do not wonder that the Jews charged him with blaspheming.

It is readily granted that in an official capacity, the Father is greater than the Son; indeed, this is stated with as much clearness as the other. Said Jesus, "If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said I go unto the Father; for my Father is greater than I." John 14: 28. Again, "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." John 6: 38. Here is seen subordination; the Father sending the Son; the Son not doing his own will, but the will of the Father. Thus it is seen that in the work of redeeming man, the Father is greater; but in the relation subsisting between themselves, they are equals, Paul says of Jesus, that "being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God." Phil. 2: 6.

Here, then, we have two classes of texts, at first sight seeming contradictory. The Trinitarian method of harmonizing them is, to refer one class to the "humanity" and the other to the "divinity" of Christ; but a better way seems to be to refer the "superiority" to an official relation, and the "equality" to their relation in a social capacity (if the term is allowable) as Father and Son. To illustrate: In a kingdom, in an official relation the king is greater than all, queen and prince included, but between themselves, when the cares of State are laid aside, together with all the pomp and ceremony of royalty; when thus they mingle in the social relations of life, they are equals. And in this manner the superiority of the Father and, at the same time, the equality of the Son, may be understood.

4. As he is the Son of God, he possesses a distinct personality. This is an assertion of a fact, which stands out so prominently in the New Testament as to hardly need argument to sustain it.

When on earth, Jesus taught his disciples to pray to their Father, who was in heaven. At his baptism, his Father's voice was heard coming from heaven. The Father sent the Son, hence sender and sent are distinct. The Father is unbegotten, but the Son is begotten; therefore, the begotten and he who begat him must be two distinct persons. The Father is invisible, no man at any time hath seen him, but Christ the Son is visible, and hence distinct. God the Father never died, but Christ the Son did. God the Father never became man, but Christ the Son did. God the Father never was made a little lower than the angels, but Christ the Son was. God the Father never became poor for our sakes, but our Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, did, as saith the text. And thus we might continue to bring proof that Jesus Christ is not the Eternal One.

Further, if Jesus be the Eternal God, then what is true of God will be true of Jesus. Let us quote a few passages—"Jesus so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son;" did he? "When the fulness of time was come, Jesus sent forth his Son;" did he? "There is one mediator between Jesus and man;" is there? Jesus said to Mary, "I ascend unto your Jesus and my Jesus." Did he?

To prove from the Scriptures that Christ is equal with God is one thing; to prove that he is the God with whom he is equal is another and more difficult thing. Because equality exists between them, we are not therefore to confound them, "to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." 1 Cor. 8: 6. The faith which the Scriptures demand of us in order to be saved, is not that Christ is the "very and eternal God," but that he is his only begotten Son. That we might believe this, John wrote his gospel. 20: 31. Upon believing this, Philip baptized the eunuch. And of him, God spoke and said, in him he was well pleased. And this only begotten Son, in whom the Father is well pleased, who is of the nature of God, and who is equal with God, is the Lord Jesus Christ whom Paul introduces to us in the text.

II. His condescension: "Though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor." In giving freedom to the slaves, and in breaking their fetters, thereby giving them the liberty which had been so cruelly withheld from them. Abraham Lincoln did a great and noble deed, and he is justly praised for it, but it cost him no great sacrifice. A few hours thought, a few moments spent in putting those thoughts upon paper, and then when the Presidential seal is placed thereupon, the act has been done. A great deed it was, but to accomplish it, he was not obliged to sacrifice his own ease. And if Jesus had redeemed us, and yet remained in glory; if he had emancipated us from sin, without coming near us, it would have called for our gratitude and praise, but how much more does it, when he enriches us by impoverishing himself! That we might have freedom from sin he himself became a sin offering; that we might have glory, he suffered shame; that we might have honor, he suffered ignominy; that we might have life, he died, and rose again, that thus it might be given us.

O, the love of Christ! "many waters cannot quench" it, "neither can the floods drown it." Man may love his fellow-man, so that for his sake he will suffer loss of reputation, of houses, home and friends, yea, he may love his friend so that he will lay down his life for him (and greater love than this, hath no man), "but God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Rom. 5: 8. Blessed be God, Christ died for us; he that had glory with the Father before the world was; he that was rich, became poor for our sakes. This view gives honor to the Son of God. That view which attributes the sufferings of Christ to "humanity" merely, robs Christ of his chiefest glory. It makes mere humanity redeem us, but the Bible view is, that Christ died for us. The Son was sent, not mere humanity; that was always here. He that was rich became poor, from the manger to the cross. He that was with God in the beginning, was made flesh and took upon himself our nature; humanity did not do this. He that was in the form of God and who did not think it robbery to be equal with God, took upon him the form of a servant; humanity never did that, for it was never in any other, than the form of a servant.

That doctrine which considers Christ as being "very God, and very man," makes the work of atonement the work of a mere creature. It makes the humanity suffer agony in the garden; it makes humanity suffer mockings and scourgings; it makes humanity hang upon the cross and die, while the "divinity" escapes. It makes humanity cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" But the Savior of Paul was more than that; his Savior was a divine Savior, was "the Lord from heaven." Trinitarians tell us, that except Christ be "very and eternal God," it is idolatry to worship him, but do they think that the "very and eternal God" was crucified, was slain, and buried? Nay, they do not. Do they think then, that the angels are are idolaters when they worship "the Lamb that was slain?" Will the redeemed be idolaters when they say with a loud voice, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing?" Rev. 5: 12. O, my Savior! my Redeemer! if the angels of God worship thee, surely then may we.

III. The object he had in in view: "that ye through his poverty might be rich."

Sometimes a man's motive is such as to hinder him from receiving praise, even when the act done by him, itself considered is praiseworthy. If an act of kindness is performed to some needy one, from selfish motives, he who does such an act is not praised for his benevolence, as it was to benefit self that such deed was performed, but in the condescension of Jesus, in ransoming us from sin and death, self-benefit did not enter into his considerations. It was benevolence of the purest kind; and, he, being poor, lost humanity, lying helpless and dying, like the good Samaritan, went to his relief, bound up his wounds, restored him to health, and met all the bills himself. In thus doing, it was not that he might be enriched, but that we might become so. And how rich we may become, specially so in two particulars.

1. In righteousness. That we might escape the corruption of the world, and become holy, was one of the objects of his death, for God "hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." 2 Cor. 5: 21. Christ "gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Titus 2: 14. Righteousness, that we could not attain unto through the law, or by any other means, has been made attainable through the offering of Christ, and now the Spirit of God is given us whereby evil is suppressed, and the good is cultivated and increased. Oh! christians, accept the riches of divine grace.

2. But that in which we have been enriched most of all is, life. We are living in a world of mortals; men are dying every hour, and every moment. Jesus came that man through him might live. He came, not merely that man might be happy, but that he might not perish. Pardon and justification are mercies, and sanctification also, but if death was to terminate forever our existence, pardon and sanctification would be of little worth. Therefore, if man is to enjoy a lasting happiness, he must have a lasting life. That he might have this Jesus came. Hear him, "I am the living bread which came down from heaven. If any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever . . . and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6: 51, 54. In speaking of his "sheep," the "good Shepherd" says, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10: 10.

Such, in brief, seems to be the dignity, and work of our Lord Jesus Christ. In the text, he is presented as an example for christians to imitate in ministering to the wants of the needy. Christian brethren, do you, in your intercourse with the world, remember it and imitate it? And not only is he our example in this, but we can look at his life for an illustration of all the practical requirements of the gospel. Take him as our pattern in obedience to the divine will, and as our example in patience. Take him as our pattern in zeal; as our pattern in meekness and long-suffering; take him as our pattern in holiness throughout. Seek to be ruled by that Spirit which controlled him, and then that Spirit which raised him from the dead, will also quicken our mortal bodies. Let not our piety consist in saying, "Lord, Lord," but in doing the will of our Father which is in heaven.

MY FATHER'S HOUSE.

J. F. VERON.

"In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go away, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

These, my dearly beloved brethren and sisters, are words, as you are aware, that proceeded from the lips of our once crucified but now exalted Savior, and they were addressed to persons who had no abiding home in this world. They had given up every thing they possessed here below, to follow Christ, therefore, they were destitute of earthly possessions, yet they were contented to remain so, so long as they had with them Him whom they loved. But the time had come for Christ to be offered up, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled, which saith, "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter; and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth." And they having received the intelligence thereof, were sorrowful; yea, they were filled with sadness; but those blessed words, "I will come again," falling sweeter than any earthly music on their ears, alleviated their sorrows. It afterwards filled them with unutterable joy; therefore, said our beloved brother Paul, our "life is hid with Christ in God, and when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." And so it is with all God's children since then; yea, even down to this day we have no abiding place. We are pilgrims and sojourners here, as all our fathers were. We travel through a wilderness where chilly winds blow; and as we travel and feel those chilly winds of adversity, and especially the cold and destructive blasts of sin, we grow weary (not of well doing) and sick, and faint; and then we inquire with earnest, longing hearts, after our mansion which Christ has gone to prepare, saying, O God, are we almost home?

Weary, and tired of waiting for the Bridegroom from heaven, the church is groaning, "being burdened, not for that" she "would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." So that the glory which shall be revealed in us might appear in full blaze, setting forth and revealing to countless, blood-washed throngs those things that remain for the people of God. As the prisoner, who has been thrust in the inner prison, and has remained there for years, longs for deliverance and sunshine, when he catches a glimpse of it from his cell within, so with the church of Christ, when we can obtain such glorious views of the coming kingdom as fills us with joy, remembering that we are yet waiting for the kingdom, in a cold, dark, sinful world, which extorts from us the anxious and all-important question, Are we almost home? are we almost home?

Home sounds sweet to the child of God, as he travels the rough road of this mortal life, fighting as he has to fight. Being beset with innumerable hosts of enemies, he rejoices when he can see or hear of some landmark, which betokens the nearness of the kingdom, prepared for him from the foundation of the world; knowing that by him who shall fight a good fight, finish the course, and keep the faith, there is a crown of life to be received from Christ, the righteous Judge, at his appearing, and the setting up of his kingdom. Then with a life of never ceasing happiness, a kingdom of most exquisite beauty, and a crown of unfading glory, let us by the grace of God be patient, saying,—

We are waiting in a wilderness,
All fraught with pain and woe;
We are waiting for deliverance
From our troubles here below.
Cho.—Yes, we're waiting, we are waiting,
For the Savior to appear;
Then with joy, with joy triumphant,
We shall meet him in the air.

We are waiting for deliverance,
At our glorious Captain's hand;
Soon we'll see his blessed presence,
And we'll hear him give command.

Here below we toil and labor,
Here we walk the path by faith;
Here we seek the Savior's favor,
Until he demands our breath.

As we toil, we hear him saying—
Let not trouble you dismay,
For the night is now fast waning,
Soon you'll see the light of day.

Soon the trumpet shall be sounded,
And the dead in Christ shall wake;
They shall triumph o'er the tyrant,
And their dusty garments shake.

Then with joy they'll rise triumphant,
Having on immortal bloom,
Following their deliverer's footsteps
To the New Jerusalem.

THE NEW BIRTH.

O. R. MERRILL.

Some of our brethren advocate that the new birth is not in this life, but at the resurrection. I believe in a birth at that epoch when "a nation shall be born at once," and we become the children of God in a physical sense, "being the children of the resurrection." I also believe in a moral or spiritual birth, which will constitute us the "children of God by faith." It seems strange to me that a doctrine so essential of itself, the very foundation of Christianity, should need any argument. But so it is. I claim this new birth for every child of God.

1. Because the Scriptures teach it. Let us see. 1 John 4: 7—"And every one that loveth is born of God." 2: 29—"Ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him." 5: 4—"For whosoever is born of God overcometh the world." We have the assurance in these texts that every one that loveth, and is doing right, and overcometh the world, is born of God. Let us believe what the Word says. Once more. John in his first epistle (3: 2) says—"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." If we are now "the sons of God," as John says, then we have had a birth of some kind, most assuredly. The resurrection has not taken place, consequently we have had no resurrection birth. Therefore I conclude that we must have a spiritual or moral birth, which I call a new birth.

Peter in his first epistle (22, 23) addresses the elect thus—"Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love for the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently. Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." And then the exhortation—"As new-born babes, desire the sincere milk of the word." 1 Pet. 2: 2. John says (John 1: 12, 13), "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name; which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man; but of God." James says (1: 18)—"Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures." Paul to Titus (3: 5) says—"According to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost."

2. Have we experienced this washing of regeneration, or new birth? If so, happy are we. And can we know anything about it? I think we can. John in his first epistle (3: 13, 14) says—"Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you. We know that we have passed from death unto life [why?] because we love the brethren." Again (4: 7)—"Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." 5: 1, 2—"Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God; and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him. By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments."

Now the question is, Do we love the brethren? (not only those that believe as we do, but all that love the Lord Jesus and his appearing), and do we keep his commandments? If so, rest assured that we have "passed from death unto life," and have become "unto our God kings and priests," and can now offer up our "spiritual sacrifices," and by-and-by "we shall reign on the earth" in its purified state.

We may not be able to tell just how we received the new birth. It is as the Savior told Nicodemus—"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit." John 3: 8. We know (those of us who have experienced this change) that "whereas we were once blind [spiritually], now we see"; and "the things we once hated we now love, and the things we once loved we now hate."

If what has been said does not satisfy the advocates of the new birth at the resurrection, that the Scriptures teach a regeneration, or new birth, in this life; what more I might say would not. It appears to me that their ideas of regeneration are scarcely more definite than those of Nicodemus. I would warn all (myself included) to seek and obtain regeneration in this life. It will be too late, if we wait until the resurrection. We have the promise that if we seek, we shall find; if we knock, it shall be opened unto us. Let none delay. Make haste. Time is short. What we do must be done quickly. If we have this spiritual birth, we shall have the physical birth, which will be a change from mortality to immortality "at the appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ."

As salvation by Christ can be obtained only by one way, whether it relates to this world or to the world to come, and that by believing on him with all the heart; it can readily be seen that the only difference is between faith and unbelief. By faith we are grafted into the true olive tree, become branches of the living vine, and members of the living body. Then there is a growth expected, and a growth must be had, and will be had unless we hide our talent in a napkin. And it is all accomplished by faith and the Spirit of God.

By faith the people of God are disciplined and perfected. By the same rule they are led to a higher life. Faith grasps the truth, no matter how unpopular. Faith lives by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God. It welcomes and rejoices in it. Faith is ready to deny self for Christ, let the cross or cost be what it may. It exalts Christ and abases man. Faith has an ear to hear, eyes to see, and a heart to obey; and by obedience faith is made perfect. This is the sure way to sanctification, if it is not sanctification all the way. Faith greets and lays hold of truth as it presents itself to the mind, whether experimental or practical; whether dispensational or chronological; and by it is illuminated with a growing assurance in which he can say, "I am now ready to be offered." The path is the path of the just, and shines more and more till his pilgrimage ends. Thus if he lives in the days of Noah, by faith he will know the flood is coming; and, acting in harmony with his belief, he is found walking from choice in the fulfillment of prophecy, on the side of God, and in the light; while the unbelieving will be in the dark. So of necessity there will be a contrast between them.

Jesus Christ recognizes it in the searching language—"He that is not for me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." By this sacred rule it can be seen that faith always abides in the truth, giving the mind of Christ, so that, when the signs of Christ's coming are due, faith responds amen, and with all readiness yields assent, walks in the light, and is sanctified by happy obedience, or walking in the truth. Thus being sanctified, consecrated, set apart, our walk is continually with Jesus, and when we would do good, love makes it the most easy task to perform.

We are Christ's; he is ours. He speaks; we obey. His blessings are so abundant that we are more than satisfied. We cry out spontaneously—

"How happy are they,
Who their Savior obey!"

The Spirit of God helps our infirmities, swells our hearts with love, sweetens the path of wisdom. Our will is Christ's; Christ's will is ours—holy resignation. It is blessed, holy living; all peace, "joy unspeakable and full of glory."

The dispensational cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" to set up his everlasting kingdom and bring in righteousness, falls sweetly on the sanctified soul. It would be his greatest delight to welcome a coming Savior. Thus we see professed holiness, that does not love the truth, is not the holiness that will give assurance here of eternal life in the world to come.

CONSOLATION.

R. M. RIPLEY.

How sweet to the believer in Christ are the consolations of his word. How, in the many trials and perplexities of the way, the word smooths the roughness and grades the narrow path with nice adaptation to our weary feet. When in temptation's hour the clouds grow thick and dark, the earth seems cold, and every man a foe, then to the word we turn, and light springs forth from darkness. We are assured that the trial shall not be greater than we can bear; that a way of escape will be provided, and that we shall be better prepared to realize afresh our many blessings. We receive great comfort in the knowledge that Jesus our blessed Master endured the same and much more for our sake, and has told us to "be of good cheer," for he has overcome. And thanks be to him, he is our redemption.

We can well afford to suffer for Christ, if we are to reign with him in glory. And our sufferings here only cause us to perfect our ways in his sight, and make us sigh for the rest that remaineth. O precious the thought, an eternity of blessed rest, an eternal freedom from all strife with sin. "Come, Lord Jesus." We not only have the consolation that is afforded us in that he suffered for us and died, but that he was raised again for our justification. Rom. 4: 25. "Therefore," says Paul, "being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." Rom. 5: 1, 2.

Here, then, is ground for joy. No matter if evils roll in upon us in tidal waves; we are all safe on the rock. Rejoice in it all, for our strength is from the Highest, and it will never fail us. We are apt to forget God when we get into trouble. We fret sometimes if we have to carry the cross, careless of the promise—"If we suffer, we shall also reign." 2 Tim. 2: 12. The consolations of God's word must be known, like all else, to be appreciated. And the way to know it is to study it—not read it simply. When you read a passage that applies to your case, ponder it well; revolve it in your mind. If it is a command, obey it; if a blessing, enjoy it by appropriating it to yourself. Let it become a part of yourself, and then it will mould and change you into its own likeness, from glory to glory, till made complete in him.

The consolations of God's grace are designed for all his children. It matters not where they are, or what their mental capacities are. If, according to the ability God has given them, they try to serve him, the blessings are theirs, both now and ever. How thankful we are that, while we are passing through the refining fires which God in his infinite love has seen fit to try us with, he has provided for us a fund of peace and happiness that bids us be quiet and cheerful. True it is that the warfare is a severe one. The enemy of our souls is very vigilant; he watches every opportunity to inflict a wound. But "the weapons of our warfare are not carnal" (2 Cor. 10: 4), and with gospel armor we rise from each fall with increased strength, prepared anew to do battle for the Lord.

"Thy servants in all this glorious war,
Shall conquer, though they die."

What a joyful confidence it gives to know that we are victorious, even in death.

Reader, are you a partaker in the delights and sorrows, the hopes and fears, that are incident to the "narrow path"? Have you become an heir to the crown of thorns and the cross of Christ, that you may be accounted worthy in the day of his coming? Are you willing to suffer, if need be, that you "may win Christ"? Do you belong to those of whom the apostle said, "Our hope of you is steadfast, knowing that, as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation." 2 Cor. 1: 7. Consider these things. Be not negligent in the matter. You cannot hold a neutral position. The Master said—"He that is not with me is against me." Matt. 12: 30. Then for the sake of your wife, your husband, your children, your parents, and for Christ's sake who died for you, repent, "that your sins may blotted out."—Acts 3: 19. "Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work." 2 Thess. 2: 16, 17.

PEACE IN JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"He is our peace."—Eph. 2: 14.

"There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." This world lieth in the wicked one, and there is not much peace in it. As we look out upon society, we see it rocked and tossed like the ocean seething in a storm. The nations are angry. Men may talk of peace, and cry "peace and safety"; yet that does not make peace. The enmity of the human heart must be slain before there can be peace with God; and as we have no promise of the conversion of the world before the coming of Jesus, we need not expect that peace will be universal until all God's enemies are destroyed. When that happy era dawns,

"Then peace shall wave her sceptre high,
And love's fair banner greet the eye,
Proclaiming victory."

But it is the christian's privilege to have peace now. Peace with God, peace with his fellow men; peace, deep, pure, perpetual, flowing steady as a stream onward to the mighty ocean. There may be confusion and strife without, but within there is peace. The ocean on the surface may be in commotion, but down in its fathomless depths all is quiet. The atmosphere near the earth may be whirling and flowing in every direction; but away up above the mountain tops all is calm and clear. Says Jesus, "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but in me ye shall have peace. "My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

Christ is the believer's peace. He has made peace through the blood of his cross. God is satisfied, the law honored, the guilty conscience cleansed, and now all is peace. The middle wall of partition has been broken down; the enmity, the law of carnal commandments, slain and nailed to the tree, and now Christ can make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace. Jews and Gentiles are at peace. Salvation is free. Whosoever believeth may have peace. "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

The gospel proclaims peace to him that is afar off. The angels sang peace at the birth of Christ. "Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth, and good will to men." Christ is the Prince of peace. All God's children are peacemakers.

Reader, have you peace with God? Is your heart at rest? Is there a deep undercurrent of holy peace running through your soul? Are you calm and serene under exciting circumstances? Are you peaceable, gentle, good natured, loving, kind, sympathetic? Are you never cross, and sour, and ugly? Does your countenance always shine with the heavenly influence of peace within? Soon the saints shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace. The Prince of peace will reign, and earth shall be filled with peace forevermore.

— Each drop in the bitter cup is measured out by the unerring hand of the heavenly Physician, who never makes mistakes, nor ceases to watch his patient for one moment.

THE OUTLOOK.

To the student of prophecy, who has kept watch of the signs of the times for the last twenty-five years, and noted the fulfillment of some of the last jots and tittles among the prophetic pencillings, the present outlook upon the world is one of most thrilling interest. The last twelve months have been loaded with great events; such as must take place just before the coming of the Son of man. Others must soon open to cheer the waiting bride of the Lamb. Delighted with the signs that he is about to show his smiling face, beaming through the clouds of glory, she is robing herself in her pure bridal dress, provided by the Bridegroom King; in order to be ready for a seat with all the holy ones at the marriage feast. The happy hour is making haste. When it arrives it will be the sublime event of the ages. The glory of earthly grandeur, when conquerors have returned victorious over the fallen foe; or when Popes and kings have been crowned amid gorgeous regal splendors, are all unworthy of a passing notice, when compared with what awaits the bride of Christ. O what a change to be translated from her poverty, her tribulation, her oppression, her outcast condition among the enemies of her loved one, into the company of all the pure and the holy, with them to live eternally.

And are we near the time when the night of weeping shall end in the morning of unending joy? Yes, yes. All doubts are gone. The glad day is at hand. The great clock of time is about to sound its alarm to awaken the dead, and commence its records for the eternal future. The hour to watch has come. Soon the Bridegroom and his angel guests may be seen coming in all their glory to meet the waiting bride. None but the spotless will be ready. The covetous, selfish, proud, envious, licentious, and all who have hatred or variance, will be left among the weeping and wailing ones. They were invited, but they refused the offer. They loved earth's sinful pleasures, and forgot the future. They drank from Satan's cup, and spurned the Lord's. They might have been saved; but they chose the broad way. The fault is theirs. The dark waves of endless oblivion must roll over them, while the bride of the Lamb lives on eternally amid the joys of her paradise home, where peace and love fill every heart, and sorrow's tears are for ever unknown.

Is it true that the time is at hand when the righteous shall be saved and the wicked lost? The great prophetic streams which run to the end; the signs in heaven and earth, physical, moral, social and political, all answer with bold emphasis, Yes, "the end of all things is at hand." All who are unprepared have no time to waste. The warning has been long and faithfully sounded over land and sea; north, south, east and west; and those who have heard and passed it unheeded, can find no fault if they hear it no more. Let the few remaining days of life be devoted to the preparation necessary to fit us for a blessed welcome into the family of heaven.

CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE.

If those who have had deep experiences in the service of Christ would write them out in brief, we think they would be specially interesting and profitable to a large number of our readers. The time has come when those who are waiting for the coming of Christ feel the importance of being entirely consecrated to him, in order to be ready for translation. All such are specially interested in the experiences of those who are enjoying perfect love and peace. Point out the steps by which the eminence was gained; the feelings since, the attacks of the enemy and the means by which he has been defeated.

We would like to appropriate from one to three columns each week, expressly to interesting items, under the heading of Christian experience. Come, tell us what Jesus has done for you.

ANTIOCHUS EPIPHANES.

There are some writers who have made efforts to overthrow the evidences presented to prove that we are near the second coming of Christ. One of the clear points in the prophecy to show that we are near the end of the present dispensation is that relating to the "little horn," in the seventh chapter of Daniel. That it applies to the Roman papal power, we see no chance for doubt. But those who have tried to set aside this prophecy, and make out that its fulfillment affords no evidence that we are near the end of this dispensation, say it applies to Antiochus Epiphanes. The following, from Sir Isaac Newton, in his work entitled, "Observations upon the prophecies of Daniel," presents the facts in their true light. He says:—

> "A horn of a beast is never taken for a single person. It always signifies a new kingdom; and the kingdom of Antiochus was an old one. Antiochus reigned over the four horns, and the little horn was a fifth under its proper kings. This horn was at first a little one, and waxed exceeding great; but so did not Antiochus. It is described great above all the former horns; and so was not Antiochus. His kingdom, on the contrary, was weak, and tributary to the Romans, and he did not enlarge it. The horn was a "king of fierce countenance, and destroyed wonderfully and prospered and practiced;" that is, he prospered in his practices against the holy people; but Antiochus was frighted out of Egypt by a mere message of the Romans, and afterwards routed and baffled by the Jews. The horn was mighty by another's power. Antiochus acted by his own. The horn stood up against the Prince of the host of heaven, the Prince of princes; and this is the character, not of Antiochus, but of anti-Christ. The horn cast down the sanctuary to the ground, and so did not Antiochus; he left it standing. The sanctuary and host were trampled under foot 2,300 days: and in Daniel's prophecies days are put for years; but the profanation of the temple, in the reign of Antiochus, did not last so many natural days. These were to last till the time of the end, till the last end of the indignation against the Jews; and this indignation is not yet at an end. They were to last till the sanctuary which had been cast down should be cleansed, and the sanctuary is not yet cleansed."—Observations, pp. 137, 138.

ST. JOHNSBURY

Is one of New England's most pleasant villages. Its streets, shaded by noble elms, its neat and handsome cottage homes, its public buildings, the beautiful grounds about the several residences of the Fairbanks, who have a world-wide fame for their noted scales; their extensive manufacturing buildings, in which some three hundred men are employed; the good morals of the people, good air and water, besides the R. R. accommodation, and many other inviting things, all combine to make St. Johnsbury a very desirable place for a residence.

Our meetings at the town hall in St. Johnsbury continued to increase in interest to their close, Sept. 27th. Some requested prayers, saints were quickened, and a new interest awakened in the prophetic scriptures relating to the coming of Christ. Members of the different churches were present, and united with us in the worship of the God of our fathers. The truth took root in new hearts, and we hope for good fruit that shall result in eternal salvation.

DEDICATION.

The Chelsea Chapel, on Heard St., near the Eastern depot, was dedicated, Thursday, 3 P. M., Sept. 28th. It was an interesting occasion. The dedication sermon, by Bro. J. Couch, commanded marked attention from a full house. Bro. L. Boutell, C. Goodrich, J. C. Smith, E. Morrill, C. E. Barnes, C. Cunningham, T. M. Preble, and Sister Mansfield were present. The chapel reflects much credit on those who planned and executed the building. It is well ventilated, lighted, seated, and to those interested in our meetings it affords much satisfaction. Under the chapel, on the first floor, is a convenient room for conference meetings, also rooms suitable for a family.

The prospect for the Chelsea church is quite encouraging. Love and harmony prevail, and a new interest is being awakened in the minds of many, who are members of other churches, in relation to the coming of Christ.

SCATTER TRACTS.

Every friend of Jesus should have a choice assortment of tracts to give to his neighbors from time to time, as opportunity may offer. How can a little money be better appropriated? These silent preachers often accomplish great good. They do not dispute and stir up the passions of any one, but they keep on talking, telling their interesting story. Do not be without them, to give to him that needeth. Much light may be scattered in this way at very small expense. Let there be a liberal sowing of tract leaves. Some will fall on good ground and bring forth fruit to the glory of God. Let us all do something to help in this good work.

THE PAPACY.

The Papacy in Europe is in a critical condition. Bismarck has decided against those who defend the infallibility of the Pope, and considers them as hostile to the state. Hence, to support the Pope's infallibility in Germany, disqualifies one for an official position. This is a bold stroke against the Papacy. It is intimated that the Pope threatens to ally himself with the democracy of Europe, as his last resort. Says a close observer:—

> "If the church is, however, moving in this direction, the changes that impend over Europe are startling in the extreme. Social revolutions will follow which have no precedent in history. And it is not improbable that instead of a Catholic despotism extending all over central Europe, we shall see an uprising of republicanism, which will leave few of the old landmarks."

"WHO CREATED ALL THINGS."

In King James version, Eph. 3: 9 reads as follows:—"And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ." The clause—"by Jesus Christ"—is not in the Syriac, Alexandrian, Coptic, Ethiopic, Vulgate nor Vatican. The clause was evidently added by some copyist. If any of our readers will take the trouble to look to the original, they will find it wanting. It will be observed that the sense is complete without the supplied clause.

RUSSIAN WAR CLOUDS.

The military movements in Russia indicate that war is expected at no distant day. When Russia moves again upon the battle-field, we expect the closing scenes of the present dispensation are not far in the future. At the present time, there is such an accumulation of evidences in favor of Christ's speedy coming, that we do not see how any one at all familiar with the prophetic scriptures, and the history of the past and present, can doubt that "the last days" have truly come.

A close observer of affairs in the old world says:—

> "It is well known that Russia during the past year has been using every effort to prepare for eventualities. The Czar is represented as having been engaged very recently, accompanied by General Leflo, the French Minister, in exercising his armies on a grand scale, training whole corps d'armee in the laying of temporary railways, and generally giving indications of military activity. It is said to be impossible not to notice that the vicinities of all the barracks show a great stir. Hospital wagons and camp equipage are being repaired and put in order. The cartridge factories are humming constantly, turning out half a million metallic shells daily. Additional orders for Gatling guns have been sent to the United States. The Russians have now over three hundred of these these terrible engines of war.

Fitchburg Tent-Meeting.—We spent Saturday (Sept. 30th, and Oct. 1st) at the tent-meeting in Fitchburg, Mass. Bro. E. Morrall pitched the tent Friday, Sept. 29th. Bro. Brewer and Sr. Stoddard were with us on the Sabbath to assist in preaching the word of life. The tent was full of attentive listeners. The prospect looks quite encouraging for happy results. The meetings are to be continued every afternoon and evening this week, and over the following Sabbath. Bro. Morrall is the right man in the right place.

SPIRITUALISTS' NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The Spiritualists held their eighth National Convention at Lyceum Hall, N. Y., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 12th. and holding three days. The matrimonial question was freely discussed, and much opposition raised to the present system of marriage, and the laws regulating the same. Several Mormons in Salt Lake City, who have lately embraced Spiritualism, sent their friendly greetings to the convention. As these Mormons have several wives, the subject of a plurality of wives was noticed; when Dr. Gardner, of Boston said: "If you want to erect a standard of morality for Spiritualists, where are you going to begin? I don't care if a man has one thousand wives. . . Let us make a our own standard."

Wednesday morning, Miss Hinman, of Connecticut, opened the exercises by a speech in the form of a prayer addressed to the Creator, as "Our Father and mother." She also called on the spirits of Theodore Parker and John Wesley to be present during the meeting. After some further exercises, another prayer was offered by Mr. Horton, a Universalist Spiritualist, which was addressed to the God of heaven, after the manner of ordinary prayers by Universalist clergymen. This brought forth strong denunciations from the leading members of the convention. The reporter says:—

> "Mr. Storer protested against these innovations. Here was the time spent in listening to a prayer to an unknown God, concerning whom nobody knew any thing, that might be appropriated to some subject of interest. Dr. Gardner said he had not come from Boston to attend a prayer-meeting. He did not want to listen to invocations to Joab or Jehovah. Dr. Bailey moved no more invocations be allowed." This shows the tendency of Spiritualism.

Mr. Horton informed the reporter that the Presidentess said to him during the discussion of the subject, that if he had addressed his prayer to electricity it would have been well received by the convention.

Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull (Col. Blood's wife), Editress of the Revolution, and a Wall street broker, who has been nominated by the Female Suffrage Party for the next President of the United States, was chosen as President for the next National convention of Spiritualists. She is a well-known avowed free lover. She said if the next Congress refused to give woman the right of suffrage, she should advocate secession, treason, a new government, and the overthrow of the present.

Spiritualism is beginning to develop itself in its true light in political matters. Satan is trying, through Spiritualism, to get full control of the governments of this world. His plan is, first to break up all the present governments, throw them into confusion, make them so corrupt that all confidence in them will be destroyed, and then propose a new system of government, on a new basis, having for a motto, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," and let him run the machine by spirit control, selecting the proper men and women who will best carry out his purposes. His only way to accomplish this is to run Spiritualism into politics and religion. This he is doing with astonishing success.

Reason and Revelation.—A writer in the New York Observer, Aug. 10th, says:—"Reason and revelation unite in teaching the soul's immortality"; but he failed to give either reason or revelation to prove his assertion. We should like to see his strongest reasons, and his plainest passages of Scripture. We will give the Observer a proposition for consideration, as follows: Although the original words (nephesh and psukee), rendered soul in the Old and New Testaments, occur eight hundred and fifty-seven times, yet not in a single instance are they qualified by the words immortal, everlasting, undying, eternal, or any equivalent words that signify endless existence. Will the Observer please name the passage of Scripture that teaches the immortality of the soul?

A SIGN OF THE "LATTER TIMES."

A pastor writes to the Evangelical Repository of his experiences and opinions of Masonry; and he infers correctly in the following paragraph that the seductive power of secrecy is from the arch-deceiver, the devil:

> "For years my feelings have stirred within me; although I have been comparatively dumb with silence, yet my heart has been hot, and while I have been musing the fire has been burning. Often I have been disposed to raise the valve and let off the steam. Before I entered the ministry, I heard enough to cause serious reflection; but since then, I have heard enough to make the ears tingle and the heart sad. How it is possible for one, and especially one called to preach Jesus, to identify himself with an anti-christian organization, so that on the Sabbath he can hardly find language strong enough to express his adoration of the name and person of the Son of God, and on Monday, passively yet positively ignore both, I confess, I cannot understand. But if we are in the "latter times," as some think, then we may expect "seducing spirits and doctrines of devils" to lead men from the pure and true "faith once delivered to the saints." I rejoice in the thought that God reigns, and just as he can shake slavery out of a throne, so he can vindicate his name and character against all his enemies."—Cynosure.

DOES DEATH BRING THE JUDGMENT?

The following rendering of 2 Cor. 5: 10, is given in the Douay version: "For we must all be manifested before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the proper things of the body, according as he hath done, whether it be good or evil." The following note is appended: "In the particular judgment immediately after death, the soul is rewarded or punished according to what it has done in the body."

These reflections arise:

1. The origin of the theory of judgment and reward for the soul immediately after death, is here traced to the fountain head—Catholicism; but it contradicts the word of God which teaches that the "very man" that is enveloped in "death" is to be "judged," instead of a deathless soul; and that this judgment is due at the very time that the entombed dead shall be delivered up, instead of the time when the body passes into death's embrace. Rev. 20: 13.

2. If the disembodied soul, at death, is rewarded or punished for the deeds done in the body, how can the body ever be saved or damned, seeing the soul gives account for all the good deeds, or bad deeds if ever committed, and reaps reward for the same? Will the body come up and demand a settlement after God has settled the whole account with the soul?

3. As the judgment is due after the reign of death is ever, the reward for our deeds, "good or bad," must come subsequent to that epoch; hence, no salvation for saints, nor damnation for sinners, till death's reign expires.

CHRIST THE "FORERUNNER."

Paul speaks of Christ as entering heaven for us, as "the forerunner" (Heb. 6: 20), or the first one to enter; and this conflicts with the theory which claims that men had been constantly entering that realm for over four thousand years previously. Not only was Christ the "forerunner," or the first one to enter heaven, but he entered as a resurrected, physical being, and not as an invisible shadow. Furthermore, he entered "alone" as our great High Priest, and "no man" could enter till he should come out. Finally, he entered to remain for a limited time merely—not to remain always; and when he shall come again to receive us unto himself, we shall be also caught up for a little season, till the indignation be overpast, during which time he will confess us before his Father and the holy angels: then "the kingdom under the whole heaven," having been cleansed, will become the eternal abode of all the saints.

From the foregoing considerations, we may conclude—

1. If Christ is the "forerunner," saints could not have entered heaven before the first advent.

2. If Christ entered "alone," and also entered as our High Priest, where "no man" is permitted to enter till he shall come out, saints have not entered heaven since the first advent.

3. If Christ entered as a resurrected being, we cannot enter on any other principle, and consequently not till the resurrection arrives.

4. If Christ entered for a limited time, our stay will not be eternal, but merely till all foes are exterminated.

THE "OWN HOOK" POLICY.

This distracting and ruinous policy is to be deplored, and should be everywhere discountenanced among us: "I am on my own hook." That is the meanest religious "hook" that one can hang on. Is not the church book as good for you as for anybody else? Or are you better than others? If concert of action is to be discarded by one, why not by all? Then farewell to church order, and ordinances, and union; and look out for anarchy, distraction, and confusion,—each man being his own leader, and responsible to nobody. If this principle on a large scale would blot out church order, how can it be right on a small scale? Think of Peter or James as starting up and saying—"I am going on my own hook; I will be responsible to none of you." Would not the voice of Paul have been distinctly heard—"Mark them that cause divisions"?

This "own hook" policy is ruinous to the cause of Christ wherever it breathes its blighting breath. Christ's cause flourishes in the element of union, but it withers under the touch of distraction, which is but another name for this "own hook" policy. Let the feeble ones all pull on the same rope, and pull the same way, and the result will be different from the effort of a dozen men pulling on a dozen different ropes, in a dozen different ways. In the former case there is union; in the latter, the "own hook" policy is exhibited, resulting in failure, and loss of time. In short, this "own hook" policy exalts itself above divine wisdom, repudiating heaven's prescribed plan. Be somewhere, and be true.

NEWS FROM THE SOUTH.

I am receiving good news from the South; not only from Bro. Bowman, but from other portions of the South. One brother, to whom I sent "Life Beyond Death," sat up nearly all night to read it through, and then carefully re-read it afterwards, and is now rejoicing in the truth. In another section several have already been turned out of the Baptist church for advocating our views on the soon coming of Christ and kindred doctrines, including one Baptist minister. Another Baptist minister writes me—"I think it probable that we will have a stir in our Association before long"; and this minister has already come out clear on the whole truth, and is calling for works on the life and death theme to scatter, which I am sending him. It will be time to make his name and locality public when they turn him into the gospel field more fully. God bless him. I am still sending works south, and shall continue to do so as long as I can get funds, for my heart is moved for that poverty-stricken and destitute field. May God water the seed.

I reserve other items of news for another note, only adding that in some parts the clergy are stirred up to preach against us, but none who have read the works sent are affected by it.

"THE DEAD IN HELL."

The following passage found in the apocryphal book Baruch (2: 17), which is a part of the Catholic Bible, will show in what light the hell of the dead was viewed anciently—a realm of dead men, and not of ghosts. "For the dead that are in hell, whose spirit is taken away from their bowels, shall not give glory and justice to the Lord."

The hell here brought to view not only contains the dead, but such dead ones as are destitute of spirit; hence, they were not then understood to be spirit-men, as theologians now make them to be. This version of Isa. 38: 10 represents Hezekiah, that man with a perfect heart, as saying—"I shall go to the gates of hell"; and David's statement in Ps. 115: 17, is thus translated—"The dead shall not praise thee, O Lord; nor any that go down to hell." We have also the following rendering of Ps. 49: 14—"They are laid in hell like sheep; death shall feed on them." Death could not feed on spirit-men. 1 Sam. 2: 6 is thus rendered—"The Lord killeth and maketh alive; he bringeth down to hell, and bringeth back again." A similar passage is found in Tobias 13: 2—"For thou scourgest, and thou savest; thou leadest down to hell, and bringest up again."

Both in the books of the Bible, and in the apocryphal books of the Old Testament, we find repeated allusions to a hell for dead men, but not for spirit-men. But when we get into the apocryphal books of the New Testament, which were coined during the incipient stages of Catholicism, we find allusion to a hell for spirit-men in the centre of the earth, and also a home there for good souls, till the death of Christ; when, as it is claimed, Christ took these good souls out of this dark realm, and escorted them to the skies—this being the origin of a sky kingdom for spirit-men—leaving hell in the heart of the earth.

EXPLANATION.

We, the undersigned members of the council, which was called the 28th of June last, to sit at Portland, Me., to hear and settle differences between the two churches worshiping at "Advent Hall" and "Union Hall," feeling that we have been misunderstood in our report of the investigations and divisions published in the "World's Crisis," wish to make the following explanations on that report:—

1. Whereas, the second article in the report referred to reads, "Resolved, That the church worshiping at Union Hall is legally the first church"; by the word legally we mean really and truly the first and original Second Advent Church in Portland.

2. In the fourth article of that report we say:—"Resolved, That Bro. J. S. Brooks had a legal claim on the first lot of settees used in Advent Hall"; but from the evidence then before us, we could not see that that claim exceeded the sum of seventy-five dollars.

3. The council, of which we were members, having been appointed by the State Conference to settle the difficulties existing between the above named churches; and said churches having covenanted with said conference to abide their decision, before the conference would entertain their matters, we intended, by ordering the two churches to meet, and form themselves into one body, that the meetings at "Advent Hall" should cease, and all the Advent believers in Portland and vicinity should be "one," as our Lord hath prayed.

4. The two churches met at Union Hall, according to our instructions, July 17th. At that meeting the Union Hall church voted unanimously to abide the report of the council, but the Advent Hall church rejected their decision eighteen to one. We firmly believe the Union Hall church have acted in good faith with the council, and have done what they could to effect a union. And now we tender to them our sympathies, and recommend them to the confidence and co-operation of all who acknowledge the claims of the gospel of Christ.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

In the Crisis of Sept. 6th, I find the following question by Bro. Leslie:—

"Where was the Son of God after he said, 'Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit,' and give up the ghost'? Please answer definitely."

Answer: He was on the cross until he was taken down and put into Joseph's tomb, where he remained until the third day. If Bro. L. thinks that this does not cover all he meant by the question, and will put any other question, one or more, relating to Christ as the Son of God, I shall be pleased to answer them.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting at Springfield Campground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the coming year, and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

CAMPMEETING AT GREENE, R. I.

The annual campmeeting of the R. I. and E. Ct. Conference of churches took place near Greene station, on the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill line, commencing on the 3d inst., and ending on the 12th. It was the second meeting of the kind held by this conference, the former taking place at Foster, R. I. The ground was well shaded by a number of lofty trees, that lifted their noble heads of foliage, and shaded those who listened to the word. On Sunday, the 4th, sermons were preached by Elds. — Wood, J. S. White, and W. Kellaway, to large and appreciative audiences. The interest was good throughout the whole day, but in the evening feeling began to brim for the first time, and overswell the banks of the heart, pouring out of the eyes of the hearers. Two came forward to be remembered by faithful hearts in their prayers, and one of these, a backslider, received anew the witness of the Spirit, and a restored peace of conscience.

On Monday and following days the impression deepened in intensity, and profitable meetings were held, some being converted to God. With the increased and increasing power present at the various services, the audiences enlarged in size, till there were as many on the ground as could comfortably be seated. Many dear preaching brethren and sisters came on to the spot where the "feast of tabernacles" took place, and preached or exhorted to good acceptance. Among the ministers present were Elders Durfee, Bellows, White, Phetteplace, Northup, Thomas, Wood, Corey, Card, Davis, Butler, Collins, and the writer. Bro. M. Grant gave us a call, and ably showed us what we should understand by the term, "a new creature in Christ Jesus." Bro. H. L. Hastings likewise stayed with us over night, whilst on his way to Plainville, and preached us a godly discourse from—"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen." Sister Anna Smith gave some account of her mission-work in New York, which was most attentively listened to by the brethren, and responded to, at the suggestion of the campmeeting committee, with a liberal donation from the audience. Sisters Crumb, Stoddard and Durand were also present, and gave help in every good work coming to their hands.

On Friday afternoon a weeping meeting was held, and four professed to believe in Jesus, and find rest to their troubled minds. Brethren from other denominations came and took part in the meeting, and expressed themselves more than favorably disposed toward the truth and spirit which they had heard and felt. On Sunday, the last great day of the feast, it is computed that from 2,500 to 3,000 people were present (which is a large number considering the sparsely settled neighborhood), and the great and heavenly "spread" was partaken of. Altogether, it was one of the very best of the campmeetings—full of love and harmony, and crowned with peace and prosperity. And may our kind Father grant that those of his dear children who purposed on the ground to be more obedient to his wise and legitimate will, be ever careful to seek to know and do it, so that, when the long rest and the joyous song of the mighty innumerable gathering who shall assemble on the hill of Sion shall commence, many of those who met in Green station may be there with the writer, who is your servant for Jesus' sake.

W. Kellaway, Sec. of Camp. Com.

REPORT.

MAINE CONFERENCE.

The Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference commenced Thursday, Sept. 14th, with but few out. The attendance was small till Sunday, when the school-house at Mexico Corner, where it was held, was crowded to its utmost. There was a goodly number of brethren and sisters present from the surrounding towns, some of whom do not often enjoy such a privilege. Judging from the cheering and heartfelt expressions of gratitude from the brethren and sisters, we felt assured that the meeting would be one of profit to these isolated ones in the blessed hope, if to no others. Our social meetings were refreshing seasons. Sunday there was good interest to hear on the evidences of the near coming of Christ and the establishment of his kingdom. At the close of the evening service we enjoyed the commemoration of the Lord's Supper. As we partook of the emblems of Christ's body given for us, and of his blood of the new testament which was shed for many for the remission of sins, we felt that it would be but "a little while" and our great High Priest, who has ascended into heaven to appear in the presence of God for us, would return to bless his people, whose sins have been remitted, and who are without the camp, bearing his reproach, waiting for his return, when he shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain unto his coming shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; when he shall swallow up death in victory, and wipe away tears from off all faces, and take away the rebuke of his people from off all the earth, who will say in that day, "Lo! this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us."

Our next quarterly conference is to be held in December. Will brethren who desire it to be holden with them inform Bro. Jesse Gay, Pres., North Norway, or A. W. Taylor, Harrison, Secretary.

Sr. L. M. Stoddard wishes to say to her friends that she intends to move to Lockport, N. Y., about the middle of October. She says:—

"The Lord has seemed to open the way before me, and I hope to see more fruits of my labor than heretofore, when going here and there, and, as soon as an interest was felt, have to leave to attend to domestic affairs; and not being watered, the devil catches the seed and no good results. The harvest is truly great, but where are the earnest laborers? May the good Lord send forth more laborers, who shall carry the gospel of the kingdom into destitute places. Pray for me, as I take the responsibility of caring for the 'flock of God'"

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. & Sr. W. A. Durand write:—"As nothing has appeared in the Crisis as to our condition since the friend living with us wrote of the accident which befell us July 17th, we would say, for the information of those who have not heard from or seen us since, that by the blessing of God, and as we believe in answer to the many petitions sent heavenward for us, we are slowly recovering, though we have little encouragement that we shall ever again be strong as before. Husband's right shoulder is still very lame and troublesome, and wife's broken arm has healed as fast and as well as we could possibly expect; but the ligament of the shoulder being torn from its place, it leaves the arm almost useless for anything like work, but general health and strength are much better than we anticipated. Our little son has entirely recovered, as he was only bruised, and that not very seriously. We feel like offering thus publicly our tribute of thanksgiving to our heavenly Father for his abounding love and mercy to us in sparing our lives, and for all the blessings he has conferred upon us. To him be glory evermore. Amen."

Bro. J. G. Hook writes:—"The work of the Lord is onward here. The tent 'Evangelist' was filled to overflowing last evening, also Sunday evening the 10th. It was estimated there were three thousand souls present. Mercy-drops are daily falling. Some new ones are asking for prayer at almost every meeting. Between thirty and forty have already come to the anxious seat, or stood up for prayer. Last Saturday I had the pleasure of baptizing six happy souls in the Delaware; making eleven since we pitched the tent. It was pleasant to see the anxious multitude receive the tracts I received from the Crisis office. I find some opposition to the Bible doctrine of the sleep of the dead, and destruction of the finally impenitent; but they will hear and read on the subject, and some do believe. I find many friends, who welcome me to their hospitalities, and bid me God speed. Pray for us in Philadelphia."

Bro. B. P. Stevans.—A correspondent writes:—"I have spent the day (Sept. 25th) with Bro. B. P. Stevens at Great Falls (Sr. Morrill's). He is quite weak and prostrate, though his symptoms seem rather better. He feels deeply his situation, and feels anxious for his family, and much desires to be with them. Poor man, pray for him."

Bro. O. R. Fassett, Minneapolis, Minn., writes:—"We intend to depart from home for California, Oct. 12th, via Chicago. We shall be in Chicago, Sunday, Oct. 15th, and go west the 16th, the Lord willing."

GEORGE MULLER'S ORPHAN HOUSE.

George Muller, of the Ashley-down Orphanage at Bristol, has published his annual statement, and the results thus far achieved are certainly to be characterized as extraordinary. Mr. Muller tells us that from the beginning he has received above £500,000 as the result of prayer and faith. As many as 150 missionaries are assisted from the funds. From the commencement 23,000 children, or grown-up persons, have been taught in the various schools entirely supported by the institution, besides tens of thousands benefited in other schools assisted by its funds. Added to this, more than 64,000 Bibles, 85,000 Testaments, 100,000 smaller portions of the Holy Scriptures in various languages, and 29,000,000 of religious tracts, have been issued and distributed through its agency. Upon the support of the orphans, in procuring the admission of whom no favoritism, it is said, whatever, can possibly prevail, there has been expended from the commencement an almost fabulous sum. The erection of five orphan houses alone has cost £115,959. The expenses of the houses during the past year, have been £22,660; and it is thought they will be still greater next year.

While living his practical "Life of Trust," Muller has firmly maintained his original principle of never contracting debt, and of acting "according to God's mind by first obtaining the needed means." The Editor of the Bristol Post says: "In glancing through the considerable portion of the pamphlet from which a knowledge is to be derived of the mode in which the funds are supplied to Mr. Muller's hand, we find the help comes in almost every variety of amount from all parts of the world. It is given sometimes in cash, and it is to a very large extent, indeed, sent in anonymously. Among the heaviest sums received during the year, we note a legacy of £5,000, with £196 13s 4d. added as interest, from the late J. A.; a legacy of £1,000 from W. R., who, Mr. Muller tells us, was so complete a stranger to him through life that he had not even heard his name; a donation of £500 from 'A Christian Gentleman;' one of £700 (500 of it for the Spanish Mission) from a donor not specified; £300 from 'A Christian Noble Lady;' £100 from an unnamed person living at a considerable distance; £500 from a manufacturer; £350 from 'near London;' £500 'from a considerable distance;' the sum of £700 in Turkish Bonds and 10 shares in the Italian Irrigation Canal Company, by some one not specified. Anonymously and Somersetshire, fifteen £20 Honduras Government Railway Bonds. There are several sums of £250 and £200, many of £100, and others ranging down to the offering of 2s. 6d. by 'a former orphan' and a like sum by 'a very poor woman.'"—Christian Union.

The Jews in Rome.—The only persons who will really benefit in the end by the expropriations of religious houses that are in progress—are the speculative Jews. They will buy in the cheapest market, that is of the Government, and sell in the dearest, that is at their own price; and if things go on as they do at present, the sons of Israel will in time become the proprietors of Rome and Italy. They already own most of the newspapers, especially those which pay. The proprietor of the Liberta is a Jew, Arbib by name; so is he of the Opinione, lately established here, Dina is the name. The Corriere di Milano also belongs to a Jew, and so do several others of the Italian journals.—Cor. of London Tablet.

Obituaries.

TITUS. Bro. T. W. Titus, of Vernon, Vt., is dead. He died Sept. 16th, aged sixty-seven.

The vacant seat at church, and the cane draped in mourning, told the sad story. The family soon entering the vacant slip reminded me, for the first time, that a funeral sermon was expected, though one week from the time of his death. Bro. Titus had the confidence of the brethren in Vernon, as I am told. He was one of the first to embrace the blessed hope, and was ever ready with heart and hand to support the cause he so much loved. Up to the Sabbath before his death, he took part in their meetings, and at that time he made an unusual effort to impress upon the brethren the importance of watching. He had been deprived of sleep for some seven weeks, by sickness in his family, and was quite exhausted. He frequently said, during the last week of his life, that he must give up; he could not stand it much longer. His nervous system was prostrated (I know how to sympathize with him), and in an unguarded moment reason gave way, and he was left to take his own life. His son told me that it was not probably premeditated scarcely for a moment. All seemed to think that it was the work of insanity, caused by over exhaustion, and that he will share a part in the first resurrection. May the Lord grant it may be so. The wife has lost a good husband; the children a kind father; the church one of its main supports, and the town a respected citizen. May this strange providence teach us more of our frailty and weakness; and, like the vine, may we entwine more closely around the trellis that God has given for our support, until our work is done, and the crown is won.

H. PRATT.

MEAD. Died at Brookfield, Mass., Sept. 22nd, 1871, of consumption, Sarah M. W., wife of William H. Mead, formerly of Weston, Mass., aged twenty-three years.

Brother and Sister Mead sought the Lord at home, some four years since, and were baptized by Elder John Hook, in Mystic river, Charlestown. She adorned the doctrine of God our Savior, and, after a protracted illness, sleeps in Jesus. After words of comfort to the survivors from H. L. Hastings, she was laid in the tomb, in hope of a better resurrection.

May her afflicted husband and little daughter be comforted in their sad bereavement, and brought to meet her again in the goodly land.

"There none shall beckon us away,
Nor bid our festival be done;
Our meeting time the eternal day,
Our meeting place the eternal throne.
There hand in hand, firm linked at last,
And heart to heart enfolded all,
We'll smile upon the troubled past,
And wonder why we wept at all."

S. L. S.

PERRY. Died in Waterford, Me., Aug. 27th, 1871, Sr. Delight, wife of Chandler Perry, aged eighty years.

Sister Perry was one of the first who embraced the faith of the Lord's soon coming, and consecrated herself to the service of God. Since that time she has lived out her faith before the world; coming out from its fashions and follies, she followed Christ and maintained a godly walk. She now sleeps in Jesus, leaving a companion eighty-seven years of age, and two sons, to mourn her loss. Her husband remarked we were leaving him, "I have lived with my dear wife sixty-one years. We have worked hard, yet have found time to serve God and love each other, but have found no time to quarrel. In a few days we shall meet in the kingdom to part no more." We tried to comfort them with the blessed promises of God, which are sure.

J. GAY.

GIFFORD. Died in Pacheco, Contra Costa Co., Cal., Edward E. Gifford, of No. Dartmouth, Mass., aged thirty-two years, seven months, and eighteen days.

He experienced religion five years ago, and since that time has lived a christian life. He went to California last summer, and at the time of his death had established a Sabbath school in a town called Concord. He was a firm believer in the Advent doctrine, believing time was short. Christ was with him through the dark valley of the shadow of death. May these words comfort the family and friends of our loved brother; and let us remember that in the morning of the resurrection God will remember his precious dust, and raise him up at the last day.—COM.

DENMAN. Fell asleep in Jesus, Sept. 3d, at her residence near Wakeman, Sister Mary Denman, wife of Bro. John A. Denman, aged thirty-five years and three months.

Her funeral was attended on the 5th, by Bro. J. M. Judson, who spoke words of comfort to a large circle of relatives and friends upon the literal resurrection of the dead, in the Methodist church at Birmingham, where she was interred. She left an affectionate husband and four dear children to mourn their loss. She had been for several years a worthy member of the Norwalk S. A. church, and died in the assurance of faith of a speedy redemption. She desired only this to be said of her—"A sinner saved by grace."

P. ALLING.

HYDE. Fell asleep in Jesus, at Stoneham, Mass., Sept. 12th, 1871, Mrs. Judith Hyde, aged fifty-seven years.

Hers was a lingering sickness, which she bore patiently and submissively. After giving her beloved children and friends her dying admonition, she fervently implored the throne of heavenly grace in their behalf, and as the sun gathers brightness ere it calmly and serenely sinks to rest, so our dear sister in Christ in full assurance of faith fell on sleep, to awake when "the heavens be no more." Words of comfort, admonition and instruction were tendered on the occasion by the writer.

S. S. BREWER.

THOMAS. Died in Glens Falls, N. Y., Sept. 13th, 1871, Samuel W. Thomas, only son of Elnathan and Mary W. Thomas, aged twenty-seven years and nine months.

The subject of this notice was a kind and affectionate son, a loving brother, and a good citizen. His loss will be mourned by a large circle of friends. Many sympathizing relatives and neighbors gathered on the funeral occasion, and listened to words spoken by the writer, from Rev. 21:4.

JACOB WILBUR.

MARVILL. Died in Hampton, N. H., Sept. 14th, 1871, Josiah Marvill, aged fifty-eight years.

Bro. Marvill has been an exemplary christian for a number of years. Although lonely and poor in this world, he was rich in faith, and died in hope of soon seeing Jesus. The writer administered words of comfort to the mourning circle, from Job 7:16.

WM. C. STEWART.

PARSONS. Died in Litchfield, Me., July 31st, 1871, Bro. William Parsons, aged eighty-four years.

Bro. P. found the Lord when quite young, and has always maintained a family altar, and for the last twenty years has been looking for the return of Christ to save his people. He was esteemed by all as a man of truth and integrity. He rests in hope.

A. H. WALKER.

DECATUR. Died in Peabody, Mass., Aug. 14th, 1871, of consumption, Elvira A. Decatur, aged thirty-three years.

His sufferings were severe, yet he bore all with patience and fortitude. He sought and found the Savior ten years ago, and since that time has lived a christian life. He rests in hope of immortality and eternal life when Jesus comes.

M. M. MERROW.

MOULTON. Died in Portsmouth, Sept. 21st, Sr. Judith Moulton, aged seventy-eight.

She was converted when between ten and eleven years of age, baptized when fifteen, embraced the faith of the second advent of Christ in 1842. She was a consistent, devoted, beloved christian woman, and died in the triumph of faith.

E. A.

JOHNSON. Died at Watertown, Mass., Charles Sumner Johnson, aged twenty years.

PRATT. Died at Manhattan, Ka., Aug. 27th, 1871, Newell Pratt, formerly of Winsted, Ct., aged sixty-two years.

Died in Brewer, Me., Sept. 6th, 1871, of cholera infantum, Willie, son of Bro. Geo. W. and Sr. Hattie F. Field, aged one year.

IMPORTANT STATEMENT BY MARSHAL MCMAHON.

PARIS, Sept. 24. Marshal McMahon has been heard before a committee of investigation on his conduct in the late war. The Marshal is reported to have said that he assumed sole responsibility for the disastrous results of his march from Chalons to Sedan. He declared that he did not act by the orders of the Emperor Napoleon, who had exercised no influence whatever upon his resolution. The plan adopted by him (the Marshal), which was opposed to that of concentration of the army under the walls of Paris, he said, ought not to be absolutely condemned, as it had equal chances of success. But two days had been lost because the troops were too fatigued to continue their march, and because he was ignorant of the movements of the other commanders—which was the principal cause of the disaster. This declaration has produced a profound sensation, and the Bonapartist journals express great joy over it.

VERSAILLES, Sept. 26. Authentic information has been conveyed to the Government proving beyond question the existence of numerous Bonapartist agents, not only in the city, but in various parts of the country, who are actively engaged in intriguing for the restoration of the Bonapartist dynasty. Every opportunity is eagerly embraced by these agents to work upon the present Administration, and to impress on their minds the advantages to be gained to the country by the restoration of the Imperial family to power. These intrigues now seriously occupy the attention of M. Thiers, and measures will be devised by the Government to counteract their influence.

PARIS, Oct. 1. The supporters of the Empire are behoming bolder in their intrigues and are agitating openly for its restoration. Clement Duvernois, editor of the new Bonapartist paper, declares that Thiers is failing, and that the country will naturally return to the government which gave them twenty years of order.

LONDON, Sept. 25. A dispatch from Versailles to the Standard says President Thiers is disturbed by fears as to the safety of his life, and that his bed chamber is guarded at night by patrols.

Sept. 26. Correspondence has been discovered in the Tuileries developing a plan to put Napoleon on the throne of Belgium. The discovery occasions a sensation in Belgium.

BERLIN, Sept. 28. A Protestant League is in course of formation throughout Germany, the object of which is the expulsion of Jesuits from the country.

DOMESTIC.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 30. The case of Hawkins, the polygamist, indicted by the grand jury for adultery, was called to-day in the United States Court and the time for pleading fixed for Monday. It is commonly reported that Brigham Young is indicted on several charges, and it is said he will be tried the coming week.

The sale of muskets and ammunition continues, and the Mormon papers advocate open resistance to the laws. It is understood that a reinforcement of regular troops has been asked for, and Camp Douglass is likely to hold a large garrison.

Many indictments for serious crimes, including leaders of the Mormon Church, were made by the grand jury of Beaver county. The writ of the court is threatened with resistance.

Three companies of United States troops arrived to-night from Forts Bridger and Steele. They were sent by Gen. Augur upon the request of Gov. Woods and the commander at Camp Douglass.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 2. Brigham Young was arrested this afternoon at four o'clock, upon the indictment of the Grand Jury, charging him, under the Utah statute, with lewdly and lasciviously cohabiting with sixteen different women. The arrest was made by U. S. Marshal Patrick at the residence of Young. Owing to the sickness of the prisoner he was allowed to remain at his house to-night in charge of the Deputy Marshal. He will be taken before Judge McKean to-morrow. The penalty imposed by the statute on conviction on this charge is imprisonment for not over ten years nor less than six months, and a fine of not over $1000 nor less than $100.

The rumors of trouble and an outbreak among the mormons are not to be credited. The Mormon leaders gave assurances that all processes of the Court will be obeyed.

Governor Woods has made every preparation for an emergency, and he will maintain the law at any cost. Another company of United States troops arrived here to-night from Fort Bridge.

It is reported, and generally believed, that indictments have been found against Brigham Young to-day for murder.

HUNT AFTER THE COMMUNISTS.—The recent arrests have brought up the number of Communist prisoners to the fearful number of 34,000, and no provision has been made by the Government for an adequate jail delivery. The fourth court-martial now sitting at Versailles has been sentencing a few obscure National Guards to simple deportation for having served under the Commune. One of these victims of the Thiers Republic was an old man of 72. With such sentences can we wonder at the bitter feeling of hatred which the Proletarians must entertain against the ruling class.

NOTICE.

At a meeting of the ministers and some of the delegates, representing South Western Massachusetts, South Western Vermont, and Eastern New York, held on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 20th, 1871, it was deemed absolutely necessary, in order for a better co-operation on the part of ministers and churches, and for the advancement of the cause of the soon coming kingdom of Christ, that a conference be organized, comprising the churches and ministers of the above territory, who are looking for the "return of the Nobleman," and speedy redemption of the faithful of all ages, and the eternal reign of Christ on this earth. We, the undersigned, ministers of the gospel, therefore, do hereby make a call for such a Conference, to be held at Hoosac, N. Y., in the Advent Church, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1871, and to hold over the following Sunday; and for all the churches, who desire the cause of truth advanced in their midst, and who co-operate with the objects and interests of such a conference, to represent themselves by delegates duly appointed, and where there are no churches holding regular meetings, but where isolated brethren live, that they also come, that the Conference may know what can be done to build up the cause in their locality.

Each church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every twenty-five members.

Let there be a general rally, from all parts of the Hoosac Valley, of our brethren and sisters to this meeting. Come in the name of our soon coming King. Come filled with the Spirit. Come to speak for God, that you may comfort the church, and admonish the sinner. Make every possible effort to attend this great gathering of the saints. Ample accommodations will be made for all who come.

We expect to see the following churches in Western Mass., represented by delegates: Plainfield, Savoy, Charlemont, North Adams, and others in that section of the State.

From Eastern New York: Sandy Hill, Fort Edward, Saratoga, Hebron, Hoosac, Low Hampton, and all others in that part of the State.

West. Vermont: Rutland, Castleton, Poultney, Woodford, and all others this side the mountains.

Hoosac is located on the Boston and Troy R. R. Those coming to the meeting will stop at Hoosac Corners. Teams will be at the depot on the arrival of the two and three o'clock P. M. trains, to take those who come to the meeting to the place of the conference.

J. WILBER, R. MOSHER,
R. L. HARRISON, C. PIKE,
Z. D. BAIRD, H. K. FLAGG,
A. W. SIBLEY, H. A. KING,
A. P. BUMP.

P. S. Let us hear from other ministers and churches, located in the Hoosac Valley, immediately. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Notice.

Dr. N. H. Barbour has given a series of lectures during the past three Sundays at the Lowell St Chapel, Boston, presenting prophetic and chronological evidences for the coming of the Lord in 1873. The lectures were well received by the brethren, sisters, and friends, and we trust good was accomplished in the name of our soon coming Lord. Brethren desiring the services of Bro. Barbour will please address him, care of Dr. Dio Lewis, No. 17 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Oct. 2nd, 1871. GEO. T. ADAMS.

Notice.

The New Hampshire State Conference will meet Wednesday before the third Sunday in November. Particulars hereafter. JOHN COUCH.

A Request.

Will the clerks of the various Advent churches in Massachusetts, that are in sympathy with the Mass. A. C. Conference, please send to the undersigned, as soon as convenient, the number of members belonging to their respective churches? Also, will those who worship in chapels of their own please say so? By complying with the above request, a favor will be conferred upon the cause at large. C. E. BARNES, Salem, Mass.

Notice.

It is proposed, the Lord willing, to have a protracted meeting of several days at West Parsonsfield, Me., to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 12th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Mark Stevens and D. F. Leavitt will be present to preach the word. A cordial invitation is given to all who work with the Lord, to come and help on the good work of our God in the place, that sinners may be converted and the church built up into Christ. For the church, CHAS. H. HURD.

Dedication.

The Advent Chapel, built at Springwater, N. Y., this season, will be dedicated Thursday, Oct. 26th. Sermon by Elder John Couch, of Chelsea, Mass. Services to commence at 1 o'clock P. M. We cordially invite our sister churches to represent themselves at this meeting. In behalf of the church at Springwater, WARREN J. HOBBS.

Conference.

A Quarterly Conference will be held at Weeks' Mills, Me., Thursday evening, Oct. 19th, and hold over Sunday. Preaching Brn., sisters and laymen are invited to come and work for holiness of heart, and the salvation of sinners. We hope the conference will be well represented, and decide where our coming quarterly conference shall be held.

S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Ct. Conference.

The next annual session of the A. C. Conference of Connecticut will be held in Bristol, Ct., commencing Oct. 18th, and holding over the following Sabbath. It is earnestly hoped that every church in the State will be represented at this conference by their delegates. There is important business to be attended to. Our beloved President, Bro. Dickinson, has been removed from us by the hand of death. His sweet counsel and advice we shall have no more. The chair is vacated. Some one must be chosen to fill it. Brethren, do attend to this call.

B. HITCHCOCK, Secretary.

Notice.

The Maine S. A. C. Conference will be held in the Union Chapel, South Windham, Me., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 10th, at two o'clock P. M., and hold as long as thought proper. It is thought best to hold the Ministerial School in connection with this conference.

We hope to see a general attendance of our ministering brethren and delegates from all the churches, and others, to work for the Lord in saving sinners and spreading the knowledge of his truth. Those coming to Conference will call on Brn. J. Stephens and — Spear for directions and accommodations. In behalf of the committee.

C. GOUD, President.

Notice.

The Advent Quarterly Conference of Nova Scotia will be held at Bear Point, Shelburn Co., N. S., commencing Saturday, Oct. 14th. A general invitation is extended to all. Come, brethren, praying that the Lord may direct us in all our work, and make the conference a blessing to his cause.

WM. HALLIAY.

Protracted Meeting.

There will be a protracted meeting in Kingfield, as Bro. Blackwell may arrange, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 12th, and continue as long as thought best. Brn. B. F. Davis and Wm. Doughty are expected to attend. H. B. SEVEY.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting in Pittsburg, N. H., commencing Oct. 7th, at one o'clock P. M., and continue as long as the Lord directs. The tent will be pitched at the Terrill school-house. This meeting will be a free one. We believe in preaching and living the whole gospel.

U. G. LADD.
F. S. RANSOM.
GEO. E. BROWN.

Notice.

Brn. B. S. Emery and I. Damman will commence a meeting at Congress Hall, Portland, Oct. 19th, and hold over the following Sunday.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference, for this year, will be held at Parkersburg, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing October 26th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Lord's day. All are cordially invited. Eld. Ramsey will be at the meeting, and many others. Let the churches and delegates, and all ministers who can attend, be at this meeting. ALONZO RAYMOND.

Notice.

All letters for A. E. Smith, or "Star of Hope Mission," should be directed to Box 75, Station A., New York City. All who have written the past year, and received no answer, are requested to write again immediately, and direct as above, saying when their letters were sent, from what post-office, and, if any money was sent, how much.

Notice.

Eld. A. G. Newell will fill my appointment in Steuben county, N. Y., Oct. 28th and 29th. At Wallace, on the 28th, fellowship meeting at 2 P. M.; and 29th at 10½ A. M. At Avoca at 3½ P. M., same day. Quarterly meeting at Wallace Nov. 25th and 26th. C. F. SWEET.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting at Hollis Centre, Me., commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 18th, to continue over Sunday. Brn. Jesse Gay and — Hill are expected to preach the word. We hope all will come that can.

S. G. RUMERY.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A COLPORTEUR'S NOTES, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. AG'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. LIFE AND DEATH THEOLOGY: OR, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. IMMATERIALISM: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. DEATH AND THE DEAD, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. THE COMING JUDGMENT: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.50; $5.00 per one hundred copies.

I'M NEARING HOME.

M. S. BRIGGS.

I'm nearing home; though waves dash high,
The land ahead I see,
And there upon that shore so nigh,
My mansion waits for me.

My Elder Brother goes before,
Has stemmed these boisterous waves,
To welcome me upon the shore
That life's fair waters laves.

Oft from the path I've turned aside,
And from his counsel roamed,
But now ahead the land I've spied,—
My bark is nearing home.

Father, forever on that shore
I'll praise thy blessed name,
When dark affliction's night is o'er,
And I thy gift may claim.

So let the waves dash high around,
No harm can come to me;
My little bark is heavenward bound,
Though on life's treacherous sea.

Though often dark has been my way,
The morning soon will come,
And shine with one unclouded day,
For I am nearing home.

Athol, Mass.

WAS JESUS CHRIST THE SON OF JOSEPH?

LETTER TO REV. R. L. COLLIER.

DEAR SIR:—"While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, saying, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, The son of David. He saith unto them, How, then doth David in spirit call him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool? If David then call him Lord, how is he his son? And no man was able to answer him a word." Matt. 22: 22.

"What think ye of Christ? whose son is he?" are tremendous questions for weal or for woe, and blessed is the man who shall strive to understand and answer them correctly. We have now to do with the second question, mainly, "Whose son is he?" This is not a question of personality nor of personal qualities, but of paternity, and as such we shall treat it in this letter.

The Pharisees answered, "He is the son of David." This was their understanding of the coming Christ. If this was the true answer it would have been but the part of candor to have accepted it, and to have dismissed the subject. An answer to a question may be correct in part, and yet incorrect for the want of fulness. There can be but one true answer given to any question. It must not embrace too much nor too little. The question did not involve the maternity of Christ, but his paternity. "Whose son is he?" If he was the son of David in the sense of sire, by a male lineal descendant from David, then the answer was correct. But Jesus took issue. "How then doth David in spirit [in prophecy] call him Lord?" This question was a negation. A question may be an emphatic affirmation or negation. When a question grows out of an answer to a question, it takes on the form of dissent, negation. So in this case. Jesus having denied the correctness of the answer, he proceeded to the argument. David himself said, "The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand till I make thine enemies thy footstool." This silenced his opponents. No wonder. If he were David's begotten son, even by a remote ancestor, he could not have been more than David's peer. But David said, in the 110th Psalm, the Christ is "my Lord." These early humanitarians then failed in argument. And they had no desire to discuss the question a second time, as they had another kind of argument in reserve for him, who had now so signally triumphed over them.

Now, sir, can you justify the course of our Lord in this controversy with the Pharisees on the supposition that he was the son of Joseph? And how will you explain the prediction of David—"The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand till I make thine enemies thy footstool"? And how will you dispose of Peter's address to the Jews on Pentecost? "For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand until I make thy foes thy footstool. Therefore, let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus whom you have crucified, both Lord and Christ."

Remember that this was spoken to a Jewish audience, and applied to the glorification of Christ. Remember also, that the Jews were the librarians, the keepers, of the documents. Why then would they allow an apostle to use their own sacred records for their conviction and shame; and prove the glorification and Lordship of the crucified One by their own beloved David? My dear sir, these are but a few of the difficulties that beset your path.

On the question of paternity your claim for Joseph, not Joseph's, for he never set up any claim, will have to be abandoned. Here your system is lame in every limb, yourself being judge.

But there is a sense in which the "written record" makes Jesus the son of David. We shall collate a few texts: "Once have I sworn by my holiness, that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me." Psalm 89: 35, 36. "Of this man's [David's] seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus." Acts 13: 23. "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God, which he had promised afore by his prophets in the Holy Scriptures, concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David, according to the flesh; and declared to be the Son of God, with power," etc. Rom. 1: 1–4. But we have language still more emphatic in the angel's salutation to Mary—"He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Luke 1: 32.

What is the meaning of this phrase, "the Son of the Highest?" We shall soon see. "Then said Mary unto the angel, How can these things be, seeing I know not a man? And the angel answered and said unto her, the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore, also, the holy offspring which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." "And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word." On this prediction of the nativity we remark—1. That Mary expressed a doubt—"seeing I know not a man." 2. "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest overshadow thee," removed that doubt. 3. "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word." Mary believed that the power of the Highest would be an adequate cause for the promised result, and said, "Be it unto me." How any man can believe this colloquy between the angel and Mary, and disbelieve the miraculous conception is a contradiction in statement and in fact. If the Spirit of God had anticipated the doctrine of "two human parents," he could not have more carefully provided against it. Every possible safeguard has been thrown around the question of our Lord's paternity.

The premises submitted in this argument lead out the following conclusions: 1. That the Christ is the Son of David maternally according to the flesh. 2. That he is the Son of God without the co-operation of a human father.

We have given Luke's testimony of the miraculous conception. The preface to this narrative should be noticed in this place.

It reads—"Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us, even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word; it seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus, that thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed." Luke 1: 1–4.

The miraculous conception, then, was one of the things most surely believed among the primitive disciples, the denial of Unitarians to the contrary notwithstanding. Their faith in a human Christ is wanting in activity. It was born too late to be the faith of the gospel—christian faith.

To return again to the angelic message. "That holy offspring which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." When eight days old he was named "Jesus," and was known as the son of Joseph; no one called him the Son of God for a period of thirty years. How improbable the prediction. The son of humble parentage, himself to all appearance a babe—a genuine babe; as helpless and dependent as other infants; no early precocity. All the marvelous stories about him are in the Apocrypha. No mention was made of him until he was twelve years old, and then certain doctors were only astonished at his questions and answers. From that time he was subject to his parents, and wrought with his reputed father as a house builder, and once at least he was called the carpenter. Now, what was there to suggest to any one that he was the Son of God? Nouns are words, and words are the representatives of thought according to the conventionalities of language. What in the history of this humble, unpretending man could have furnished the image—the type of the thought that he was the Son of God? He was called the Son of God, and has been for eighteen hundred years. It is now called the Son of God by all the civilised nations of the world. This fact remains to be accounted for. It is as much the duty of unbelievers to account for it as believers. Here the parties are brought face to face.—American Christian Review.

"THE LORD IS GOOD."

E. S. WILLARD.

One morning as I was preparing breakfast, after having spent the night in watching over my husband who was suddenly attacked with pneumonia, a dear young brother in Christ opened the door and with a smiling face said:

"I have good news for you, sister!"

Indeed, what is it?

"The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble; and he knoweth them that trust in him."

That is good news, I replied; and it refreshed my spirit as cold water refreshes the thirsty soul. Bless his name, I know he is good, for he is good to me in all my fallen, helpless, sinful state; he pities, he upholds, he forgives and loves, where men condemn, hate, and revile. O bless his name for ever!

My heart is warm with his love this morning, as I look around my home and see the tokens there of love to me, in my absence to the feast of tabernacles at the National Campmeeting. The same sweet spirit of love pervades the household as when I left it, and it greeted me from each member with such unmistakable signs, that it made my home, in every sense of the word, a home to me, and made me so glad that I yielded to God's arrangement for me and left all, as in a moment of time, and went. It is good to go where God says "go," and equally good to stay where he says "stay." Thus the secret of all peace is to be in harmony with the "God of peace"; the secret of all patience and consolation is to be in harmony with "the God of patience and consolation"; the secret of hope is to be in harmony with "the God of hope"; that he may fill us with all joy and peace in believing, that we may abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost. Rom. 15.

How sweet it is to abound in hope! My soul feels its sweetness this morning, and you my beloved friends understand me, for your souls abound in hope as you have dispersed to your homes from that blessed encampment —a foretaste of what it will be when we "are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God . . . . to the general assembly and church of the first born which are written in heaven." How I long to greet your familiar faces there; for I believe in the doctrine of recognition so beautifully set forth from the stand. The Lord bless those young servants of his who spoke from his mouth such words of profit on that occasion; and those fathers in the gospel, veterans of God—shall I not know them there as well as here? I shall, bless God! How glad I am "that I am in this band, Hallelujah!"

"My all to Christ I've given,
My talents, time, and voice;
My life, my reputation,—
The lone way is my choice."

"The lone way"! Noah trod it, Abraham trod it, prophets and apostles trod it, and the Lamb of God himself trod the winepress alone, and of the people there was none with him. Many years ago I made up my mind I would go to the kingdom if I went alone; yea, I even blessed God for the privilege to go, if I went alone; and so does every servant of the Lord feel at some period of his pilgrim way. The Lord will prove each child of his as he proved Peter—"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?"

"My reputation" was the hardest thing to lay at Jesus' feet. I felt about it as a tried servant of God once expressed himself in my hearing, as he was trembling under a cross. Said he: "If my reputation were for sale, there is no man rich enough to buy it. But," he added, and so I now feel, "if I lose it in obeying my divine Master, who laid down his life for me, it is a poor oblation, and goes as free as air."

Beloved brethren and sisters, Jesus knows it all; let us therefore be patient in well doing, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that our labor is not in vain in the Lord, whether men praise or blame. The Lord is our judge.

My husband, who "tarried by the stuff," and the faithful sister whom the Lord sent to take charge in my absence, and who says she never shall forget the blessing she received at that campmeeting two years ago, join with me in christian love to you all, and to the household of faith, desiring an interest in your prayers. "Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work." 2 Thess. 2: 16, 17.

"HIDDEN WITH CHRIST."

The apostle's own words, "For ye are dead; and your life is hid with Christ in God," furnish to our use the best definition which can be given of the so-called "higher life"—a living Christ, in whom the believer abides by faith, from whom he derives spiritual life, and through whom he is enabled more and more, to die unto sin, by "crucifying the old man with his affections and lusts."

Now, the fact is too plain to be called in question, that the majority even of true christians have not, as yet, reached—nay, many do not, in all their earthly career, attain unto the fulness of the blessedness which Jesus would impart to each of his beloved disciples.

For the guidance of those who sincerely desire to "come up higher," these three points may be mentioned as the simple conditions in compliance with which the wished-for-end may be gained.

1. Full and unreserved consecration of one's self to Jesus; the surrender of everything to him, with the aim henceforth in everything, "whether we eat or drink, or whatever we do, to do all to the glory of God"—"all to the glory of God."

2. Unceasing continuance in prayer; the devout reading of the word, and meditation upon its truths; so making our lives conformable to its teachings that it shall be evident to all observers that we hold the Bible to be a rule of practice as well as of faith.

3. Great activity in the service of Jesus; (a) in our hearts, by fighting against sin and cultivating holiness; and (b) in endeavoring to "do good to all men as we have opportunity."

While such activity in the midst of the busy scenes of this work-day world is incompatible with the visionary and reclusive theory of the Higher Life entertained by some, it may be safely affirmed that such a life were wanting in one of its most important elements—if it fail to bear abundant fruitage in good works done for Jesus' sake.

Two particulars remain to be stated as constituting satisfactory evidence that one had begun to live on this higher and nobler plan of christian experience:

1. Growing likeness to the Savior. The same mind which was in him will begin to develop itself in us, and men shall take knowledge of us not only that we have been with Jesus, but also that we daily sit at his feet and learn of him.

2. Perfect peace and confidence in Jesus. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is staid on thee, because he trusteth in thee." And this is identical with that "full assurance of hope unto the end" of which the apostle speaks.

We shall know that Christ is ours and we are his. We shall walk with him as our dearest friend, and commune with him as our elder brother. Thus in the midst of life's changing and trying scenes, our souls may abide in that sweet calm of loving intimacy with Jesus, so beautifully illustrated by a little incident in the biography of Bengel, the great Biblical scholar. One night, after a day of heavy toil over his favorite studies, feeling too weary even for his customary devotions, just before retiring, he looked up, with his hand resting upon the open Bible, and simply said, "Lord Jesus, thou knowest me; we are on the same old terms." And with this he lay down upon his bed and fell sweetly asleep.—Christian at Work.

TIME.

J. B. COOK.

Time is duration as it belongs to events, as they occur in the succession of ages and the generations of men, and is as essential to them as space is to the geography of nations.

Time is given in the Bible, as I am informed, from the beginning on to the first year of Cyrus; whence there is no need to doubt as to chronology.

Time thus computed by Elliot, as I am informed, fills out six thousand years to the spring of 1873 A. D.

Time, as applied to the coming of Christ, has fixed on his birth as the point at which he came.

Time, as it records the coming of Christ, points to his actual entrance on his Almighty mission (Isa. 40: 3; Luke 3 and 4; John 1: 27–34; Acts 13: 22–25), but not to his passive state at birth, though announced and heralded by the angels, as was most becoming the grand event.

Time, given as 1335 days, or years, if dated from the event (Dan. 12: 11–13) would or may extend from 538 to 1873. I have no space for detail, and need none.

Now I feel like a good child. All dogmatism seems to have dropped out of me. I only wish to ascertain why this may not be so. Keep cool, but show why not, whoever can. To me, it is something in advance; and also in general accordance with the mighty moral movement that has been produced by the preaching of the grand concentral truth of God—the second coming and kingdom of Christ.

I feel willing to own the record of his coming, as introduced by John's ministry. Mar. 1: 1–14. This gives a divine sanction to the Advent proclamation. It is "confirmation strong as holy writ," if it may be so applied. It justifies and vindicates the general movement, as Jesus' coming justified the preaching of John. It sets the whole on "the rock of ages," in God's time and God's order. It assures the second advent nigh, as the ministry of John was the herald of his heavenly errand into our world the first time. "Amen, and amen."

☞ SUCH souls as have once been in the arms of God, in the midst of all oppositions, are as men made all of fire, walking in stubble; they consume and overcome all hindrances; all difficulties are but as whetstones to fortitudes. The moon will run her course, though the dogs bark at her; so will all those choice souls who have found warmth under Christ's wings run their christian race in spite of all difficulties and danger.

BRIDLE THAT TONGUE.

J. SIBLEY.

Yes, I mean it; bridle that tongue, or you will go to ruin, and doubtless lead others there with you. Thousands of professed christians to-day are doing more injury than good to the cause of Christ by not being "slow to speak."

Stop that jesting and joking. It does you no good, and it is not Christ-like; it is a characteristic of the world. "Go ye not with them nor follow after them." They are going to destruction, and if you bear their character, instead of the character of Christ, you will go there too.

You want to be a christian? Yes. You want to be like Christ, and be accepted of him when he comes? Yes. Then do not let your tongue turn about your whole body; if you do, it will lead you to perdition. Do not tell every body's faults but your own. Suppose Bro. A. does not believe just as you do in all things; will it make him believe any different if you tell everybody you see of his faults, and that you "have no fellowship for him"? No, never.

If you wish to benefit a person, first convince him that you love him, and then your labors will be appreciated. You must stop talking about others, and go to praying for them, if you would have them to be better.

When you are in company, is there not something else to talk about besides of what Bro. B. has said or done, or what somebody said that they heard about Sr. C., or what Bro. D. believes that does not agree with your opinion of Scripture?

O, my brethren and sisters, the Lord's coming is near at hand, and every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment; for by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned. Matt. 12: 36, 37. When I see the proneness of man to err in this particular, I do not wonder that Peter, when writing about the dissolution of the earth and the coming of the Lord, broke off and asked—"What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?"

Dearly beloved, let me exhort you, as Paul did the Philippians—"Let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ." Do you believe in perfection? "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man." James 3: 2. I know that "the tongue can no man tame"; but if we consecrate ourselves entirely to the Lord, and trust in him, his grace will be sufficient for us, and we may be enabled to "show out of a good conversation our works with meekness of wisdom." Now "as He which has called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, Be ye holy, for I am holy"; and "without holiness, no man shall see the Lord." Again I say, "Bridle that tongue."

OUR TOUR WEST.

I. C. WELLCOME.

July 24th. Left Mrs. W. and our son at New Ulm, to finish their visit, while we accompanied our brother, S. C. Wellcome, one hundred and seventy-five miles by wagon east, to his field of labor. Called at Medo, and preached one evening, putting up with Bro. A. Weston, an eastern family, and lovers of the blessed hope. There is a field of labor in this vicinity. Who will occupy it? Passing through several beautiful towns, we stopped at Bro. E. S. Barrett's, Wasioga. He and his family are very much interested in the Lord's coming and kingdom. They were from the east, and very glad to see us. We enjoyed their society and hospitality.

July 27th. Went to Rochester, a young and thriving city, intending to call on Bro. Geo. Emery to spend the night, but he and his family were absent, and we put up at a hotel.

28th. Came through Eyota, and dined with Bro. Brown and family, eastern folks, and acquainted with our early ministers. We next visited Bro. and Sr. Leonard and family, at St. Charles, eastern folks, who have embraced the blessed hope, and are so deeply interested in it that they have fitted up a large room in their house for meetings, where brother S. C. W. preaches Sunday evenings alternately. We next went to Utica, visiting several families on the way, and put up with Bro. D. Cheatham and family, where we found a pilgrim home.

30th, Sunday. Held a grove meeting on the Methodist camp-ground, in company with Brn. S. C. Wellcome and P. Ramer. The gathering was large, and very attentive while we attempted to preach to them the kingdom of God and the signs of its soon coming. It was a good day in the Lord. In the evening went to St. Charles and preached in the house of Bro. Leonard, from 2 Pet. 3. Six ministers were present to hear. May the Lord bless it to their good, as well as to others. There is plenty of opposition here, but an open door for the word, where faithful labor can be successfully bestowed.

Spent the following week in visiting with our brother various families in his field of labor, among whom were Bro. and Sr. Richardson, formerly of Lowell, Mass. They were among the first who embraced the Advent message, and suffered for its sake. They still love the blessed hope, and feel an interest in having it preached. Attended two social meetings, at one of which one young man arose and declared his desire and determination to become a christian.

Next went to Viola and visited several families who are much interested in the soon coming of our Lord. Sunday, Aug. 6th, preached to an attentive audience. By an error appointments had been given out for me in this place, and also in Eyota, for an afternoon service, and the preacher of the United Brethren having an appointment here had come deciding to give way and hear me. Therefore my brother S. C. W. went to Eyota to meet my appointment there, and I preached to the minister and an interested people on the signs of the times, and the coming of Christ, showing up the false cry of peace in the bogus theory of the world's conversion; and while I was tearing his theory in pieces, and showing that Isa. 2, and Micah 4, predicted such teachings, he felt greatly excited, yet he bore it like a christian, and treated me very kindly.

Then went eight miles to Eyota, to fill an evening appointment. The people were assembled, and we preached to them from 2 Pet. 3, while a heavy thunder-tempest was rising, which burst upon us soon after we closed the meeting. Some hastened home amid the darkness, thunder, and rain; while others of us remained until eleven o'clock, when it so abated that we, and four brethren and sisters from Viola, went home with Bro. Brown, and spent the night listening to a real Minnesota thunder-storm, which is a grand and terrific scene, carried on on the same broad scale of everything else in the great West. Bro. and Sr. Brown are used to a full house, and cared for us in true pilgrim, tavern style.

Parting from the brethren here, we started for Winona, to fill appointments there. Stopping at Bro. Cheatham's, we encountered another Minnesota storm, more furious and terrific with wind than any we had seen before. Yet the Lord preserved us from all evil, and gave us a resting-place for another night with this truly hospitable family of pilgrims.

Aug. 8th. Went on our way to Winona, calling on families of our boyhood acquaintance, whom we had not seen for nearly forty years;—boys brought up with us in the interior of Maine, but now settled in Minn. on extensive prairie farms, as rich and beautiful as this earth in its present state can produce. We dined with Bro. Samuel Bates, of Stockton, who with his invalid wife (a great sufferer) and son, look for the Lord. Here we saw what industry and experience can do in raising fruit trees and honey. Bro. Bates has more than one hundred thousand as handsome young fruit trees as can grow, and one hundred and thirty stands of bees. They are a success with him.

REPORT.

VT. ANNUAL A. C. CONFERENCE.

Met at Bethel (Camp Brook) Campmeeting, Sept. 9th, 1871, at eight o'clock A. M. Conference opened with prayer by Bro. H. F. Carpenter. The President in the chair. The minutes of the last session were read and approved. The President appointed the following committee on credentials: B. B. Chedel, J. Harding, Stephen French. The report of the Com. on credentials was accepted and adopted. The Constitution being read and approved, the President made choice of the following Brn.: S. French, Oscar Beckwith, D. Carr, to receive ballots for officers the year ensuing, with the following results:

For President, S. G. Mathewson. For Vice President, H. F. Carpenter. For Secretary, R. N. Stetson. For Ministerial Committee—S. G. Mathewson, H. F. Carpenter, Oscar Beckwith. State Committee of five—H. F. Carpenter, S. G. Mathewson, Geo. C. Ames, Stephen French, J. Harding.

1. Moved, that we have an annual campmeeting next year, if time continues and the Lord will. 2. Moved, that the location of the camp-ground be left with the State committee. 3. Amendment to last year's quarterly conferences. To be held where the interest demands. Bro. H. F. Carpenter was chosen as traveling missionary in the State as the interest and duty call. Adjourned.

Met at half-past three o'clock P. M., according to adjournment. Prayer by Bro. Chedel. Listened to reports of delegates from churches. Bro. I. B. Howes reported Bridgewater church as being in good standing, and in working order, with a Sabbath School and Bible class. L. Smith reported West Fairlee church. In good standing; trying to serve the Lord. Bro. F. T. Edson the East Roxbury church. Few in number, yet united, trying to live out their faith, trusting in the Lord. Bro. Nichols the Warren church. Prospering, and holding weekly prayer-meetings, and trying to live out the Bible rule. S. Whitney the Stowe church. Have prayer-meetings two or three times a week, and trying to live for the coming kingdom. Stephen French the Rutland church. Had a wolf among the flock, causing distraction with some of its members, but has been dispersed, and they are now prospering again, trying for union. Bro. Chedel, Springfield church. A few trying to live in the service of the Lord. J. Washburn, Bethel. A few trying to serve the Lord; have no organized church; do the best we can. M. Clark, Cabot church. Flourishing, and taking good courage; prospering in serving the Lord. John Boutwell, Stockbridge. Have no organized church, but are trying to get into order. N. L. Collins and G. Huntley, Waterbury church. In a prosperous condition. A Sabbath School of about sixty members is doing well. M. Dinsmore, Dinsmore-hill. A few trying to serve the Lord and live for his coming kingdom. Bro. Wm. Baker, Rochester. Being in perfect union in the service of the Lord, himself and wife (church in his house). S. H. Chapman, Middlesex. Still holding on to the Lord and his promises; looking for his soon coming. J. S. Adams, Barnard. Trying to live, and be ready for Jesus' coming. Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Castleton church. Never in better working order—union, harmony. Have a flourishing Sabbath School; trying to do the will of the Lord, and prospering in his service.

Minister's reports were encouraging. Few in number, but united in effort for the salvation of the perishing, and "looking for that blessed hope, and glorious appearing of our Lord," to take his waiting Bride to himself. (We here give the names of ministers present at the best campmeeting we ever attended.) Ministers: S. G. Mathewson, J. A. Cleaveland, H. F. Carpenter, J. Harding, Geo. A. Cole, B. B. Chedel, Oscar Beckwith, A. A. Hoyt, A. Hubbard, A. Ross, Daniel Braley, S. Lamson, Z. T. Wood, H. C. Howard, J. H. T. Varney, D. Carr, Jr., J. A. Carr, J. Ashley, J. Litch, H. L. Hastings.

Moved, that the minutes of this conference be published in the World's Crisis. Adjourned sine die.

R. N. STETSON, Sec.

P. S.—This conference was the best we ever had (though we never had a poor one). The spirit of Jesus seemed to manifest itself in all its acts, and in connection with one of the best campmeetings we ever attended in the State. No contention, but for the faith once delivered to the saints, for more holiness of heart, to be more like Jesus, more fully consecrated to God and his service. This meeting will tell on when time shall be no more, and saints are gathered home. More consecration, all ready to meet the Bridegroom when he shall come, seemed to characterize the believing and those looking for his soon return.

A QUAKER PRINTER'S PROVERBS.

Never send thou any article for publication without giving the editor thy name, for thy name often secures publication to worthless articles.

Thou shouldst not rap at the door of a printing office, for he that answereth the rap sneereth in his sleeve and loseth time.

Neither do thou loaf about, ask questions or knock down type, or the boys will love thee like they do shade-trees—when thou leavest.

Thou shouldst never read the copy on the printer's case, or on the hooked container thereof, or he may knock thee down.

Never inquire thou of the editor for the news, for behold it is his business, at the appointed time, to give it thee without asking.

It is not right that thou shouldst ask him who is the author of an article, for his duty requireth him to keep such things to himself.

When thou dost enter into his office, take heed unto thyself that thou dost not look at what may be lying open and concerneth thee not, for that is not meet in the sight of good breeding.

Neither examine thou the proof-sheet, for it is not ready to meet thine eye, that thou mayest understand.

Prefer thine own paper to any other, and subscribe for it immediately.

Pay for it in advance, and it shall be well with thee and thine.

MORGAN'S FATE.—The following statement has been made by Mr. James Garlinghouse, Sheriff of Ontario County, with regard to the fate of Morgan, the exposer of Free Masonry. Twelve men met in Buffalo and settled business. Twelve tickets were prepared, nine of which were blank. The place of drawing was approached by each man unobserved and unknown to the rest. He who drew a blank passed away in silence and nevermore asked a question on the subject. The three who drew the fatal tickets, not blank, met at an appointed rendezvous, and decided the fate of Morgan. They took him under cover of darkness from Fort Niagara, and conveyed him in a skiff to the middle of the river, where with a fifty-six pound weight tied to each leg he was sent to the bottom. He begged piteously for his life, and struggled so hard that his abductors came near being engulphed with him; but the deed was accomplished, and Morgan never again appeared among the living.

FEEDING THE COW.

Slowly along the shaded lane,
Cropping the grass from side to side,
Here comes the pretty brindle cow
Home, in the eventide.

She stops at the garden gate and calls,—
"O run, little boy, and bring to me
Some of those apples, round and ripe,
I see lying under the tree."

Little golden head his apron fills
With the ruddy apples, juicy and sweet;
Brindle loves to take with her long, rough tongue
From his dimpled hand and eat.

Tiptoe he stands with eager face,
Holding his bulging apron tight;
As she gently takes each apple he gives,
He laughs with fresh delight.

And now she has eaten the very last,
And "just one more,"—"one little one more";
Then he waits and watches her as she walks
Through the open barnyard door.

It was years ago—yet oft I see,
When the summer's day is nearly done,
My baby boy feeding the pretty cow
In the light of the setting sun.

GIVE YOUR WHOLE MIND TO IT.

Those scholars miss it who manage to slip over their lessons by one trick and another, without giving real hard study to them. They may read off dates from the palms of their hands, and prompt each other slyly, and contrive various ways to deceive the teacher and go through a recitation decently with little study beforehand; but the loss is all theirs, and there is no gain to anybody. You must give close, hard study to your books, or you will never make a scholar. The king and poorest charity lad in school must tread in the same hard path. "There is no royal road." You may imagine yourself a genius, and think that knowledge will come to you,—but you will find yourself in the end sadly mistaken.

While you are engaged with a lesson, whether it is one in spelling or in geometry, give the closest attention in your power to it. That is the only way to get the greatest amount of discipline from it to to your mental powers, and also to fix the points deeply in your memory.

When Dr. Arnold was forty years old he made a long quotation from a book he had read when only eight years old, though he had never seen it since. Do you not think that book was carefully, thoughtfully read? He had more than skimmed over its surface. Depend upon it, if you are ever to excel in any department of knowledge, you must give your whole mind to it.

It is only in this way that you can arrive at the enjoyment of study. The good scholar finds a delight in mastering difficulties, a satisfaction after the battle is over, that the idler never knows. You never hear him fretting over "such a hard lesson," wishing himself away at sea, or anywhere but over his books.—School-day Visitor.

"THOU, GOD, SEEST ME."

Mrs. Golding came home from shopping one day and was not met as usual by the glad welcome of her little son. He seemed shy of her, went into the yard, hung about the garden, and wanted to be more with Bridget than usual. The mother could not account for his manner.

When she had undressed and put him to bed, "Mother," he asked, "can God see through the crack in the closet door?"

"Yes," said his mother.

"And can he see when it is all dark?"

"Yes," answered the mother, "God can see every where and in every place."

"Then God saw me, and he will tell you, mother. When you were gone, I got into your closet, and ate up the cake, and I am sorry, very sorry;" and bowing his head on his mother's shoulder, and placing his arm round her neck, he burst out crying.

Poor little boy! All day he had been wanting to hide from his mother, just as Adam and Eve, after they had disobeyed God, tried to hide from his presence in the garden of Eden. Guilt made him afraid. It put a gulf between him and his mother.

How did George get rid of his feeling of guilt and shame? He took the best, the only true way, by repenting and confessing it. His mother forgave him. He was restored to her confidence and love.

WATCHING ONE'S SELF.

"When I was a boy," said an old man, "we had a schoolmaster who had an odd way of catching idle boys. One day he called out to us:—

'Boys, I must have closer attention to your books. The first one of you that sees another boy idle, I want you to inform me, and I will attend to his case.'

"Ah," thought I to myself, "there is Joe Simmons, that I don't like. I'll watch him, and if I see him look off his book, I'll tell."

It was not long before I saw Joe look off his book, and immediately I informed the master.

'Indeed,' said he; 'and how do you know?'

'I saw him,' said I.

'You did; and were your eyes on your book when you saw him?'

I was caught, and I never watched for idle boys again. If we are sufficiently watchful over our own conduct, we will have no time to find fault with the conduct of our neighbors."

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

HIGH-HEELED BOOTS, CHINESE FEET, AND CROOKED SHINS.—It is worthy of note that while a malignant hatred of Chinese, individually, is fomented under cover of hostility to their immigration, our females have fallen in love with Chinese costumes and customs, in some respects, and accepted them as models. The pictures of Chinese ladies, to which one has been accustomed for many years, bear a close resemblance to the American belle of the present day. The repulsive hump, the crippled feet, and the mincing gait of our women, if they do not fortify the Darwinian theory of the origin of the species from monkeys, at least give the appearance of retrograding monkeywards. The dress, uncouth and deforming as it is, would not of itself deserve notice; but the high heels, crippling the feet and distorting the limbs, are an outrage of grace on anatomy, on humanity, entitling the authors, could they be detected, to criminal responsibility. A convention of corn-doctors, in the interest of their trade, could not devise a better scheme for good times. Women whose pedals are solified may escape with only corns, of which we hope and pray they may have a full and tender crop. But that a whole generation of little girls should have their toes jammed into the points of their boots, to do the work of heels, and that their legs should be thrown out of the natural balance, and the pliant bones bent into semicircles, is a sacrifice to fashion which would disgrace a nation of Hottentots. Should the wicked custom hold a few years, there will not be a decent foot, or an æsthetic leg in our female population, except among washerwomen and the like. And all this is a trifle compared with the mischief done to the pelvis, spine, and chest, by the constrained attitude which the abnormal elevation of the heel must of necessity induce. Fashion is at best a cruel tyrant; but the whole history of her capricious rule does not exhibit a grosser violation of natural laws, and a more unpardonable assault on the beauty and health of woman, than the invention of high-heeled boots.—Pacific Med. Jour.

THE SUNLIGHT.—Mrs. Beecher says in Christian Union:—

"We wish the importance of admitting the light of the sun, freely, as well as building these early and late fires, could be properly impressed upon our housekeepers. No article of furniture should ever be brought to our homes too delicate for the sun to see all day long. His presence should never be excluded, except when so bright as to be uncomfortable to the eyes. And walks should be in bright sunlight, so that the eyes are protected by veil or parasol, when inconveniently intense. A sun bath is of far more importance in preserving a healthful condition of the body, than is generally understood. A sun bath costs nothing, and that is a misfortune, for people are deluded with the idea that those things only can be good or useful which cost money. But remember that pure water, fresh air, sunlight, and homes kept free from dampness, will secure you from many heavy bills of the doctors, and give you health and vigor which no money can procure. It is a well established fact that people who live much in the sun, are usually stronger and more healthy than those whose occupation deprives them of sunlight."

CHILD LIFE.—Every hour that a child lives a quiet, tranquil, joyous life, of such sort as kittens live on hearths, squirrels in sunshine, is just so much investment in strength and steadiness, and growth of the nervous system. Every hour that a child lives a life of excited brain-working, either in a school-room or in a ball-room, is just so much taken away from the reserved force which enables nerves to triumph through the sorrows, and labors, and diseases of later years.—Ex.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

SOON!

I know not if He come at eve,
Or night, or morn, or noon;
I know the breeze of twilight grey,
That fans the cheek of dying day,
Doth ever whisper—Soon!

I know not why our souls should doubt
His promise to appear,
When every flower's opening eye
Looks up into the changing sky,
And seems to murmur—Near!

I know not round his blessed feet
What peerless glories throng;
I only know from rending tomb
The good shall burst in beauty's bloom;
And faith assures—Not long!

I know not if his chariot wheels
Yet near or distant are;
I only know each thunder-roll
Doth wake an echo in my soul,
That saith—Not very far!

I know not if we long must wait
The summer of his smile;
I only know that hope doth sweep
With thrilling touch my heart-strings deep,
And sings—A little while!

I know not on this glorious theme
Why lips so oft are dumb;
I only know the saddened earth
Will flash with beauty and with mirth
At sound of "Lo, I come!

THE PROPHETIC PERIODS.

D. CLOW.

"Therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision."—DAN. 9: 23.

It is conceded by all, who are waiting for the Lord, that the foregoing text contains the leading features of our faith and hope. It is therefore very desirable that every portion of this most interesting portion of the Bible be made to harmonize in itself. It is true, indeed, that the most prominent features of the said text have been thoroughly discussed, and correctly understood. But that some of the details have been misinterpreted, I am fully convinced. For instance, "the covenant," Dan. 9: 27, was formerly understood to relate to the new dispensation, and that it was confirmed by the Savior. This was subsequently abandoned by some, however, and another theory adopted. Not, however, until it was distinctly seen that the pronoun he, in verse 27, ninth chapter, could not with any degree of sense relate to the Savior. But many hold to the first view still.

Now I ask, in all sincerity, why should we travel entirely out of the range of the said vision to find a covenant, when a more significant and positive covenant cannot be found in the Bible, than is found here. "Unto two thousand three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." And this relates entirely to Daniel's people. "Now I am come to tell thee what shall befall thy people in the latter days." And never was there a matter revealed to man (save one) of greater magnitude, and involving greater consequences.

Nay, the introduction of this vision was to establish a covenant with his people that would foreshadow their destiny, and confirm their hope of a future restoration under the personal administration of the son of David, the legal heir of his throne and of the promised inheritance. Hence we hear "one saint speaking, and another saint said unto that certain saint which spake (margin, the numberer of secrets, or the wonderful numberer). How long shall be the vision, concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden unto foot? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days (margin, evening, mornings), then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." A covenant in theology, Webster says, "is that implied in the decrees, commands, prohibitions, and promises of God." Then it follows that the foregoing decree is a covenant of no small consequence, and must be the covenant of Dan. 9: 27. And the seventy weeks, v. 24, is correlative and contingent to this. Nay, this view of the matter establishes the connection of the eighth and ninth chapters beyond all controversy.

"And he shall confirm the covenant . . . . for one week." But who is it that confirms the covenant? and how is it done? It certainly cannot relate to the Savior, for the very good reason that his ministry lasted only three, or three and a half years. I know that it was said in 1843, that the said text must relate to the Messiah, and "the covenant" to the new dispensation. This was subsequently abandoned, however, by some, and the true theory was adopted. This was, that the pronoun he (ver. 27) relates to the "prince that shall come" (ver. 26), and not to the Messiah at all. The first theory was adopted from the necessity of the case, and not from any logical deduction of the text itself. The seventy weeks were supposed to have terminated three and a half years subsequently to the crucifixion; and that Christ confirmed the said covenant of the new testament for one week. Now this, as we shall see, was a forced construction. First, it was granted that the Savior did not labor among the people more than three, or three and a half years, falling short one half of the said week. This was fatal to this theory, in the outset. But it was said the apostles took it up and finished the said week; not regarding the absurdity of a construction. Now "the covenant" certainly relates to Daniel's people, and no other people, as the following clause of Dan. 8: 13 plainly shows: "Concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot." Then it follows that the said confirmation must be with Daniel's people wholly, and not partly with the Gentiles, as was supposed. How easy it would have been to say, "And he shall confirm the covenant with many for a half week," if it relates to the Savior, "or, they shall confirm the covenant with many for one week," if it relates to the Savior and the apostles. Well, who is it that confirms the covenant? We answer, it was the little horn, the Romans, "the people of the prince that shall come."

But many will say, "I cannot see it in that light, for the reason that the Savior came with a new dispensation, and it required confirmation. I think that the said covenant relates to that, as also the said confirmation." We will see more of this as we pass along. I have said that it was supposed the seventy weeks terminated three and a half years subsequently to the crucifixion. It was also supposed that the sixty-two weeks terminated with the crucifixion; the sixty-nine weeks at the baptism of the Savior, and the one week of confirmation with the seventy weeks. All this resulted from the great error of supposing that all the smaller must fall within the greater number. A great error indeed. Standing where we did in 1843, no living man could look at these figures in any other light. We must remember that this great prophecy was given for the benefit of the wise, and not for the foolish virgins. Nay, it was written in a style to cut off the hypocrite and the scoffer, and it has done its work most effectually. Now if the pronoun he (v. 23) relates to the Messiah at all, then in every instance in which it occurs in the said verse, it must relate to him. Let us see. "And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations (margin, with abominable armies), he shall make it desolate, unto the consummation, and that determined, shall be poured upon the desolate (margin, the desolator). Now, while we might admit (merely to gratify preconceived opinions) that the pronoun he, in the first two clauses of this text, relates to the Messiah, we cannot admit that it relates to him in the third clause. Did the blessed Son of God raise "abominable armies" to desolate the land? Nay. Did he desolate the land in any sense? If he did, then we must look for the wrath of God to be poured out upon him, as the desolator. Nay, nay, it was not his mission to desolate and destroy. Nor did he confirm any covenant for one week. He did not even cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, in the sense of the said text. Now mark: it was after the Messiah was cut off, the confirmation takes place. Read and reflect.

"The street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times; and after threescore and two weeks, shall Messiah be cut off. . . . . And the people of the prince that shall come (after the Messiah is cut off) shall destroy the city and the sanctuary. . . . And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease. And for the overspreading of abominations, he shall make it desolate, even unto the consummation."

Now, with our knowledge of the fact that the Roman army, under Titus the prince, did fulfill all this to the last letter, does it not settle the fact that he the said prince was the one appointed to confirm the said covenant? It certainly must be something within the vision, as it would be inadmissible to travel out of the broad field of this prophecy to find a vision to confirm. Now, in looking over the said vision, we fail to find anything in the shape of a covenant till we come to the declaration, "Unto two thousand and three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." This is analogous to the covenant to Abraham, Gen. 15: 13—"Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them, and they shall afflict them four hundred years. And afterward shall they come out with great substance." It is also analogous to many other covenants, where time is coupled with a decree. See Lev. 26: 28–31—"I will chastise you seven times for your sins. . . . . . I will make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation." Gen. 6: 3—"My Spirit shall not always strive with man, . . . yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years." Ver. 18—"But with thee will I establish my covenant."

"How long shall be the vision, . . . to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? . . . Unto two thousand and three hundred days." What then? "Then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." This, like the covenant with Abraham, is of a two-fold character. It contains a covenant of suffering for transgression, and a promise of restoration, implied in the cleansing of the sanctuary. Dan. 9: 23–27—"Understand the matter, and consider the vision. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city [what for?], to finish [restrain] the transgression, to make an end of sins [sin-offerings under the law], and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy." Now this may be considered in the light of a contingent, or supplementary covenant, to show Daniel that his people were not to go immediately into perpetual desolation, as the original covenant would seem to imply, though they were even now in captivity, and their city and sanctuary lay desolate. By this he was left to infer that, in harmony with Jer. 29: 10, they were to be restored to their own land, and allowed to worship God in their own way and manner, under the sacrificial law, for the period of seventy weeks. Very poor consolation indeed, if the time be literal.

"Know, therefore, and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, unto the Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks; the street [margin, breach] and the wall shall be built again, even in troublous times." Now he knows that the time is not literal, because the city and its walls could not be built in so short a period; nor had the commandment as yet gone forth to restore and to build it. It had required ages upon ages to build the former city and walls, and it would be folly to think of rebuilding them in about one year and a half. Now what are the facts as to the time, from the going forth of the said commandment, to the completion of the walls? The commandment went forth B. C. 488 (Thurman). The walls were completed B. C. 406. Then it follows that they were some eighty-two years building them. Nor as yet had the Messiah appeared, nor were there any signs of his appearing. But at the end of sixty-nine weeks from the going forth of said commandment, he did appear. And this must forever settle the fact that the time appointed must be understood to mean years.

And after sixty two years shall Messiah be cut off. Now this is very distinct, and easy to be understood, as it relates to the crucifixion of the Son of God. But what was the epoch of this period? It says "the street shall be built again, and the wall [breach], . . . and after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off." Can we ask for anything more positive than this? Running back from the crucifixion, we come to the completion of the said wall, at the end of four hundred and thirty-four years, or sixty-two weeks, B. C. 406 (Thurman). The commandment went forth from Cyrus B. C. 488. He was the divinely appointed agent to issue the commandment, and it was issued exactly where it must of necessity issue, for the seventy years' captivity run out just at that point; so it matters not what subsequently followed in the shape of orders, or decrees, relating to the said restoration; they must be considered in the light of supplementary orders.

To illustrate. President Lincoln issued a commandment, or proclamation, abolishing slavery in the United States. President Johnson issued his proclamation, and sent out his decrees to organize the people into civil governments. President Grant has done the same. Now suppose the God of the Bible had said by his servant Daniel, that from the going forth of the commandment to abolish slavery in the United States, to the end of the gospel dispensation, there shall be "seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks." From what commandment would you commence to reckon the time? And suppose, again, that there was another prophecy relating to the same people, and positively declaring that they should go into captivity, and remain in bondage in the United States just seventy years, and the history of their bondage told you that the said seventy years terminated the very day that Lincoln issued his proclamation; would you have any doubts of when and where to commence the said "seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks"? Nay, nay; we know you would not. And so it is with this matter. Daniel's people were in bondage, had been in bondage just seventy years—the time appointed of the Lord—and now the commandment must go forth. Now the commandment did go forth.

Sixty-nine weeks, or four hundred and eighty-three years, from the going forth of this commandment, unto the Messiah the Prince, can have but one meaning. It relates to his birth. "After threescore and two weeks" [or four hundred and thirty-four years], the street shall be built again, and the wall" [breach], can have but one meaning; it relates to his death. The epoch of the sixty-two weeks must, therefore, fall far below the epoch of the sixty-nine weeks. All of the events are widely different; hence the necessity of using different periods. "The street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times; and after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off"; i. e., threescore and two weeks after the walls are completed. There is no criticism that can weaken this view of the case. "And the people of the prince that shall come [after the Messiah is cut off—don't forget this] shall destroy the city and the sanctuary. . . . And he [the said prince] shall confirm the covenant . . . for one week, and in the midst of the week he [the said prince] shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations [or with the abominable armies—margin], he [the said prince] shall make it desolate, even unto the consummation."

The confirmation week is also a separate and distinct period, and falls below the seventy weeks just where the Lord designed it to fill the prophetic chart. I know that many honestly suppose that all of the smaller periods, i. e., the sixty-nine, the sixty-two, and the one week, must fall within the seventy weeks. But it must be admitted that our God does not go back (if I may be allowed to use a vulgar expression) on any of his covenants or decrees. Seventy weeks of the vision are cut off, or assigned to thy people, and to thy holy city; no more, nor no less. And when the seventy weeks expired, the "people and the Prince" came and destroyed the city and the sanctuary; just four hundred and ninety years from the day that a decree went out from the king of Babylon to exterminate the whole Jewish race, but which God overruled and prevented; having granted them seventy weeks from this dreadful decree for their national existence. Nay, this great deliverance was equivalent to a resurrection of the whole nation from the dead; and I can see a divine fitness in the epoch of the vision, and this the most dreadful decree that was ever uttered by any monarch upon earth. Not a living soul was to be spared in the whole world. Nay, the bloody messengers of death were ordered to ransack the whole of the king's dominions, westward, and northward, and southward, and not to leave a living soul of the whole Jewish race standing upon the face of the earth. Nor was there any power upon earth to change the decree, or to deliver the people from certain death. There was none to "deliver out of his hand." Nay, the king himself could not arrest the dreadful sentence of the law, for the reason that the laws of the Medes and Persians never changed.

When the seventy weeks were fully expired, the Romans sent Titus, the prince, to suppress the rebellion of the Jews, and the result was the destruction of the city (Jerusalem) and the sanctuary, and the end of their nationality. And this simple fact confirms the covenant. Nay, it establishes the connection, the unity, the manifest oneness, of the eighth and ninth chapters of this book; and no criticism upon earth can weaken this view of the case. I need not stop to argue the matter of the little horn of the eighth chapter. We all understand it to relate to the Romans; and chap. 9: 26, 27, we know relates to Rome, because it was the Romans who came at the time appointed and desolated the land. The host was given over to them for the transgression against the daily sacrifice (margin), and by them "the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down," or, "he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease."

In speaking of the little horn, Dan. 8: 10–12, the angel says "it waxed great, even to the host of heaven [margin, against the host], and it cast down some of the host . . . to the ground; . . . yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, and by him [margin, from him], the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. And an host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground . . . [margin—the host was given over for the transgression against the daily sacrifice]." Dan. 9: 26, 27. "And the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary, and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined [or, it shall be cut off by desolations—margin]. And he shall confirm the covenant . . . for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations [margin—with abominable armies], he shall make it desolate, even unto the consummation." Now, if there is any sense in the law of language, and if we have got a correct translation, these texts are certainly reciprocal, and correlative in every feature.

Now it only remains for us to show who did actually destroy the Jewish nation, take away the daily sacrifice, or cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease; cast down the place of his sanctuary, and spread desolation throughout the broad domain of the Jewish nation.

TIME.

F. H. FAHNESTOCK.

When parted from a dear friend for months or years, we receive word by a kind friend, by whom he promised to send word, that our husband, brother, friend, is going to return upon the day of the first new moon of the next month; we certainly expect to see the same identical brother return, and not his spirit only. We at once go to the almanac and ascertain on what day that new moon comes. We note the time, and from that moment look forward with delight, as day after day passes, increasing our joy in expectancy to see our loved one home. He has sent word he will bring handsome presents. The day arrives. Everything is ready for his reception. All are anxious to see him. Who will go to the cars to meet him? But he has not told us what hour he will arrive. Well, I'm ready. I'll go and meet him. I'll be on time. If he don't come on the first train, I'll wait until midnight or morning. I'll watch until he does come. He will surely come at the appointed time.

So it is with every lover of Jesus, our elder brother. He has gone into a far country, to receive a kingdom, and to return. He has given us signs by which we may know when he is about to return, and commanded us to watch for him; and has promised a rich reward to all who look for and love his appearing. Yes, weary pilgrim, a crown of righteousness awaits your long watching. You will be clothed upon with immortality, and you shall have eternal life. What bliss! Never to be again parted from him. Is this not worth watching for? When he was here, he was a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief.

What did he say to his ancient people, who should then have watched for and received him? He wept over them, "saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes; . . . . because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." Luke 19: 44. "Behold your house is left unto you desolate." Why desolate? "Because thou knewest not the TIME."

Methinks I hear some kind brother say, Do please leave time out of the question. No, no, brother; that's just where God's ancient people made the mistake, and lost their reward. It is very true, our blessed Savior said in answer to the question of his disciples, "Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"—"It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power." And it is equally true that he said, "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Acts 1: 6–8. Power for what? Most undoubtedly to understand just what they asked for; to know the time. If those who were blessed with the personal presence of our dear Redeemer desired to know the time, why should we who live by faith not much more anxiously desire to know the time when we shall behold Him, whom not having seen, yet we love? Yes, "blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, . . . whom having not seen, ye love; in whom though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory; receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls; of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." 1 Pet. 1: 3–11. Brethren, if the spirit of Jesus in the prophets of old searched diligently for time and the glory that should follow, for which Christ endured the cross, despising the shame, why may we not also search for time? But it is written: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

Brethren, time is one of the all things. "Ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day; we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us WATCH! . . . Let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him. Wherefore comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do." 1 Thess. 5: 4–11. "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Heb. 10: 25. Do you think Paul was talking foolishness when he said, "as ye see the day approaching"? Surely not; for as well might you say Jesus was talking foolishness when he said, Ye know that summer is nigh when ye see the fig-tree put forth its leaves; so we know his coming is nigh, even at the door. I verily believe it will yet be revealed through the written word of God, by the Comforter, as it was in the days of Noah. "Come thou and all thy house into the ark, ... for yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain." Gen. 7: 1–4. Was that time? Why discard time, when God's word is full of it? Read the seventh chapter of Revelation, from and including the ninth verse, and with it the first verse of the eighth chapter—"And when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven for about the space of half an hour." Does not that half hour in prophetic time measure seven days? May it not be that then the High Priest of our profession has come out of the holy of holies to bless his people? May it not be the time the Master shall have risen up and shut the door? when our Noah shall have gathered all his family into his ark? when they shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air? Then there will be no Mediator on the throne. Then those who are left will call upon the rocks and mountains to hide them from the face of Him who sitteth upon the throne; but their prayers return unanswered.

O fearful thought! But to those who have loved Jesus, he will say, "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for . . . . the earth shall cast out the dead." "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise." "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." Isa. 26: 19–21. Lift up your heads, brethren, for your redemption draweth nigh. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand." Should we sleep as do others, and not see the glory that is to follow Christ's sufferings, when he comes may we not well merit the withering rebuke he administered to the Jews, when he said: "O ye hypocrites, ... can ye not discern the signs of the times?" Matt. 16: 3. "Ye hypocrites! ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it ye do not discern this time?" Luke 12: 56.

THE END OF SUMMER.

P. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

The leaves are falling, and the signs and emblems of death and decay are seen in all directions. The summer is ended, and soon the harvest will be past, and it is a season for serious reflection. Can we say that we are saved? How will you answer this question? If you are in Christ, then you are safe. Some say they do not know whether they are in Christ or not. If I may express my opinion on this point, I would say, however unsatisfactory and dangerous it may be to stand on this uncertain ground, there is another position still more dangerous. It is that of one who is very positive in regard to his own safety, when it is clearly evident, by his daily walk and conversation, that he is a son of perdition. Yet neither this position nor the other is by any means to be sought or recommended. The true ground to stand upon is that of a joyful confidence in Christ. Reader, are you there? Are you rejoicing in the Lord? The christian may be "sorrowful, yet always rejoicing." 2 Cor. 6: 10.

Suffering by sickness, pain, the loss of friends, and even the loss of all things, yet he rejoices in the hope of the glory of God, and the fulness of bliss in the home of the redeemed. May the Lord grant to you and me that measure of assurance that we need. Then when we see the emblems of death around us, and even death itself, we shall not be greatly moved. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" What shall harm us if we be followers of that which is good? And when the chief among the mighty shall be overcome with the terrors of the great day of wrath, we will lift our heads and rejoice, and say, "Lo this is our God, we have waited for him," and he has come to save us. But, let us not "daub with untempered mortar," or heal the hurt slightly, but be intensely in earnest to make sure work. Let us take heed how we build, and what we build, that our work may not be burned, but stand the fire. Far better to walk carefully and even mournfully now, than to mourn at the last and say, "the harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Jer. 8: 20.

THE CHRISTIAN VOYAGER.

C. R. BARNES.

There is scarcely a word of Jesus, spoken to his immediate hearers, that cannot with propriety be spoken to the children of men at the present time. There is not a miracle performed, but from it we may draw lessons of deep spiritual import. On one occasion, entering a boat with his disciples, weary and worn, he fell asleep. Soon there arose a great tempest in the sea, "the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full." His disciples, alarmed at their peril, awake their Master, saying, "Carest thou not that we perish?" And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, "Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm." (Mark 4: 37–39.

On another occasion, Jesus had left his disciples alone, and had retired to a mountain. In his absence they embarked in their boat to go to Capernaum, but when the night closed in around them, they encountered rough weather, in consequence of the severity of the wind that blew. In this, their distress, they were brought into still greater fear by seeing, what they thought, a spectre or phantom upon the water; but were at once reassured, when they heard the well-known voice of their Master say, "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid." And willingly they received him into their midst, and at once they are at their destined place.

Christian mariner, you have embarked; you are sailing o'er life's great sea, destined, not to any earthly Capernaum, but to the haven of eternal rest, where stands in glorious beauty the heavenly city, the New Jerusalem.

Christian mariner, the sea o'er which you are sailing is wide; it's confines on one side reach to the shores where death reigns; it's terminus at the other is where life reigns, where mortality is swallowed up of life. One shore is astern, the other lies just ahead. Thank God, weary one, that the prow of your boat is headed toward the shores of life.

Christian mariner, the sea o'er which you are sailing is dangerous. Many have launched out upon it's bosom fearlessly, and, alas! many have foundered, many have struck upon a hidden rock, and have sunk from our sight. Many have made shipwreck, even as did Hymeneus and Alexander. (1 Tim. 1: 19, 20.) Upon this sea storms are often experienced. Several gales sweep across it's surface. The water, which to-day seems so calm and pleasant, to-morrow may be lashed into fury. Upon this sea are crafts, flying indeed the christian colors, but 'tis only to allure. There are also beacons, but many of them are false. That beacon-light beyond, beaming so brightly out into the darkness, is the true beacon. All others will draw you into dangerous waters, where there are shoals and reefs. But if you observe them both for a moment, you will readily detect the false ones. See, above the true beacon there's a cross, and above that there's a crown. Now notice the others; you see indeed the crown conspicuously brought to view, but nowhere do you see the cross. Then be attentive, and even direct your course to the one that displays the cross. On no account be allured toward that which shows nothing but a crown. 'Tis a false beacon, and as certainly as you sail for it, so certainly will you meet with shipwreck and ruin.

On your voyage, you will see many gaily-painted barges, laden with apparently joyous companies. These, although sailing upon the same waters with you, are not aiming for the same destination. By them you will be urged to deviate a little from your course, and join them in their chase after pleasure, but do it not. As you value your safety, as you value a safe arrival at the haven of rest, as you value eternal life, I caution you, follow not in their wake. And, after parting with [illegible] craft, the night closes in around you, and the wind rises, and your frail vessel is tossed about like a chip; if the storm seems too severe for you to weather, think not to find safety by running into shallow water; there's the greater danger. The sea, the deep, open sea, is the safest place, notwithstanding the gale; and if you but remain firm at your stations, prompt to duty, ever watchful, if you thus continue, He who came to the relief of the weary and worn disciples on the sea of Galilee, will also come to your relief. He that was mindful of their struggles is also mindful of yours; and He to whom the winds and the sea are subject will speak, "Peace be still," in your behalf, and your tempest-tossed bark will also have quiet and rest.

That you may derive strength, and have encouragement to continue, consult the chart. Keep it often before you, and by so doing, the channels of safety and holiness can be traced and followed, as the shoals of danger and sin can be marked and avoided. If, by so doing, you will also be enabled to note your progress; comparing the buoys you have passed with those marked upon the chart; noticing the prominent headlands of the coast, with their correspondent marks upon your chart, you will be enabled to tell with remarkable definiteness the extent of your progress.

Then on! christian mariner, on! speed away thy little bark. Spread wide thy sail, that thou mayest not receive the grace of God in vain. On! christian, on; the Pilot bids thee on; and, though false beacons abound, though pleasure seekers cry, though persecuting storms rage round thee, heed them not; listen not to them; but, ever mindful of thy chart, with thine eyes ever fixed upon the true beacon, speed on, and Christ himself will give thee a safe passage. He himself will welcome thee into the peaceful haven of rest.

— I don't think we ought to allow of a fretted mind. Every day is often made up of unexpected little matters, needing the help and strength of God, and it is blessed to prove him sufficient for the least to the greatest.

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Oct. 11, 1871.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable in Advance, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

DISCUSSION.—We purpose to begin a discussion at Lisbon, N. H., Monday evening, Oct. 16th, to continue every evening through the week. Mr. Deering, a Baptist minister, is our opponent. The subject for debate is the doctrine of eternal torment, and the immortality of the soul.

CHELSEA MEETINGS.—Our meetings in Chelsea are becoming very interesting. The spirit of holiness is increasing, and many begin to see and feel the importance of entire consecration to Christ in order to be ready to meet him at his coming. Our love-feast yesterday (Oct. 8th) was the best we ever enjoyed in this city. The meetings are to be continued every evening this week, and over the Sabbath, Oct. 15th. We expect the assistance of Bro. J. Couch, C. Goodrich, and L. Boutell.

BRO. B. P. STEVENS.—We learn from Bro. Munger that Bro. B. P. Stevens is at Portsmouth, very sick with slow bilious fever. We hope the brethren and sisters will remember him in their prayers, and also look after his wants after a goodly sort. Direct to Eld. B. P. Stevens, Portsmouth, N. H., care of Eld. E. Owen.

PERPLEXITY.

When observing men look at the signs of the times, they are perplexed. They cannot shake off the impression that some remarkable event is at hand. What they speak and write from time to time shows that they often think seriously about the strange things that are so constantly transpiring throughout the world. The following is from the Philadelphia Daily Press, Sept. 2nd, 1871:—

> "If the Millerites and Second Adventists, and all the other people who take a pleasure in fixing a date for terrestrial combustion, had only announced that the world, in 1871, would come as near to an end as is possible for a globe, in the light of recent events, we should have been inclined to regard the prediction as the announcement of something that was absolutely certain to transpire before the year lapsed into the void of ages.
>
> Not before, in this century, has old mother earth been so shocked and shaken, or her children visited with the same calamities. Pandora's box is open, or else the vials of heaven's wrath are being poured upon our devoted heads. Fire and famine, shipwreck and earthquake, disease and disaster, have followed one another in rapid succession and are not yet past. Luckily we live in an age of enlightenment, in which superstition is almost unknown, or else we might have a bull from the Pope excommunicating the winds, the subterranean forces, engineers and mine inspectors."

"A NEW DISPENSATION."

The above is the heading of an article in The Golden Age, Theodore Tilton's paper. Mr. Tilton was formerly editor of the New York Independent. Mr. Tilton and others think we are just entering the "Golden Age" of humanity. Instead of this being true, it is the age of "iron mixed with miry clay." Dan. 2: 41. Facts are abundant to show that the description of the last days, as given by the prophet Daniel, Jesus and the apostles, are in harmony with surrounding facts. What a mistake to call this the "golden age!" As well call darkness light; error truth, evil good.

But let us hear from the "Golden Age" about "The New Dispensation." The writer says:—

> "The 'Woman's Club' of Washington has to-day (Sept. 20, ,71) taken its place in the history of the future as a corporate body, and numbers already among its members, not only sincere and earnest workers among women, but has admitted also, well-known lawyers, physicians, and leading divines. The tremendous significance of the movement which burst upon the public so unexpectedly one month since, is acknowledged by every one, and encouragement from all sides flows in steadily. The next step, and one to be taken immediately, is the purchase of a large commodious house to be used as the home and headquarters of the club.
>
> There is no question which bears so directly on the happiness and interests of every family in the land, no work which can hope to bring about like results, as this. The abuse of the sexual relation is in its every phrase the ground-work of all evil, and nothing but a perfect balance between the sexes can right the wrongs of both. African slavery is not the only system on which an outraged heaven frowns; and by the blessing of that same heaven, is not the one abuse of power which shall be swept away by the strong arm of right against might. There is no more bitter struggle than that of a world divided against itself. By what has seemed to have become 'a natural law;' one-half the world has gone on sinning with impunity, through all the past, while the other weaker half has borne the punishment meekly and uncomplainingly; but the time has come when woman declines to bear more than her own share of shame, and that share must be in the same proportion as man's—neither more nor less."

By the side of the foregoing, let us put a recent "Lecture-room talk" of Henry Ward Beecher. On the subject of "stealing," he says:—

> "All kinds of business are conducted with a growing per cent. of fraud in them. Frauds by adulteration, by specious and false appearances, by preparing and passing off goods as more or better than they really are, are on the increase; and in some departments of business thorough honesty has ceased to be expected. It is known and admitted that frauds are customary—so much so, that men are not ashamed to speak of them as a matter of course. They have become organic and chronic in many directions.
>
> There is a vast amount of corruption in the use of trust funds committed to men's hands. Officers are wont to administer the funds of institutions over whose affairs they are set, for their own personal benefit not only without leave, but without statute or enactment—that is, to steal all the profits which arise from the use of such funds.
>
> The same is true of public funds, where men are treasurers for the State, or for the nation—city, county or government treasuring agents. But all the modes by which men make indirectly, or by favors gained, or by connivance and understanding, more than their appointed and regulated salary, are, when you take away the soft phrases by which men talk, simply stealing. And every man who takes funds which are entrusted to his hands for safe keeping, or to be used for others, and uses them for his own profit, steals every penny that he makes from such funds. Every such man, varnished as he may be, respectable as he may be, is, before God, simply and absolutely a thief.
>
> Funds that are put into men's hands in the settling of estates, are often employed, not for the benefit of the heirs, or of those for whose benefit it is designed that they shall be employed, but for the benefit of the administrators; and the processes are so hidden, the ways in which men can mystify are so many, that only those who are wont to ferret out these affairs have any idea how much of dishonesty there is in this particular.
>
> I think I may say that railroad management is an organized dishonesty at home and abroad. It has led to vast corruptions which still continue, and which eat out the life of honesty in those who are concerned therein. The majority of the railroads of these United States I honestly believe to be so corruptly used to enrich the managers at the expense of the stockholders, that the managers can be called nothing else but dishonest.
>
> It is not surprising that subordinates in railroad offices and on public conveyances are affected by this immorality. You will hear managers and directors of railroads complaining that the times when they could find anybody that could be relied upon seem to have come to an end. Although they are bloated with that which they have themselves abstracted dishonestly from the community, and although they organize and carry on a system of operations that is swindling, and grossly dishonest, they are shocked that any who are subordinate to them should do the same thing. The manager abstracts the profits of the road that should have gone to the stockholders; the car-conductor abstracts largely from the receipts that should have gone to the managers; and the underlings abstract in their turn; and they are all amazed at each other! It is found very difficult to obtain honest conductors and drivers on omnibus lines and city railroads. There is a universal complaint that men are not as honest as they used to be; that they are more temptable than they used to be in all small matters. What a pity that some of these men could not be elected to the managership; for it is considered stealing if men take in sixpences and quarters, but only peculation when they take in hundreds and thousands of dollars! The buying and selling of votes, especially in large cities, is becoming alarmingly prevalent. There was a time when it was an unthought-of crime. There was a time when a man could not lie under the imputation of selling his vote for an hour and hold up his head among men; but that stigma has passed away. It is not so odious as it was. Men sell their votes openly and shamelessly. It would be well for us if that were the extent of the immorality, the dishonesty practiced by them in connection with politics; but they sell their votes a hundred times over!
>
> Municipal bodies are notoriously and proverbially dishonest. I need not speak of the city government of New York. It will be known as long as Sodom and Gomorrah are known—and for largely the same reasons! The first feature is not that the men who constitute the government are so notoriously corrupt in pecuniary matters, but that they maintain, increase, spread, deepen and heighten their corruption without any proportionate shock to the moral sense on the subject of citizenship. There are a million citizens in whose midst there have grown up the most gigantic dishonesties, which spread from year to year; and, although there are newspaper interjections, and a little cursing and swearing here and there, that is about the extent of the feeling aroused in opposition to these things. There is no organization formed to stay their progress. There is no deep sense of shame and outrage produced by them. Right under the eaves of churches they take place, and ministers drone about dogmas and ordinances, and quarrel about robes and surplices and stoles, while this stealing is going on all around them. They seem to have no part or lot in the welfare of the community in general. Or their time and attention are absorbed by the metaphysical doctrines, the ceremonies, the fandandos, the charlatanry of the sanctuary. The city is weltering and reeking in the most abominable stealing and corruptions, and they seem to be unconscious of them, or at least unmoved by them.
>
> The legislatures of the States are becoming so corrupt that the details would almost produce incredulity in your minds.
>
> The great national legislature, Congress, is not of good reputation; and not to be of good reputation, is to be of bad.
>
> The men who compose our legislative bodies are selected by the people; but it is fair to say that those bodies represent the average morality of the community? If that be so, God help the community. I do not believe that it is so. I believe that the great mass of the common people are more honest than the men that are called their representatives.
>
> Corruption has spread so widely and struck so deeply, that it has reached places which have hitherto been considered unimpeachable, pure, without suspicion of taint, and left them demoralized. I speak of the Judiciary. It is time that judges knew that those who are most conversant with courts believe that honest judges are an exception, and that bribable judges are the rule. And it is needful that those who are honest in judicial stations, should have a character better than the reputation of the average of their fellows."

The foregoing is in harmony with the Bible description of "the last days," when the social and political state of the world is properly represented by a mixture of iron clay. Society has become very corrupt. Political matters are breaking up in confusion. There is but little strength left. It is the weakness of "iron mixed with clay," and we see no prospect of any improvement before the personal coming of Christ.

SHAKER THEOLOGY.

We find but little difference between the theology of the Shakers and the Spiritualists. It is very evident that the demons are the authors of both. The two systems seduce different classes of people. In THE SHAKER for September, we find the following:

> "We believe in the multiplicity of Christs; are individually aiming to be Christ's; and have full faith in the possibility of becoming as good as Jesus was, and as perfect as he is in the home of his Father.
>
> We love the principles that made him the Anointed, or Christ; and believing that 'like causes produce like effects' in religious life, as truly as in worldly philosophy, we have clothed our lives with these principles, and are successfully achieving the regenerative, christian transformation—and we find that it pays, to some five, to others ten, and to many one hundred-fold of superior joys to those it cuts off by self-denial.
>
> We call ourselves christians, and rightfully too, because we have chosen as our pattern the principles that made Jesus, the Christ—'the first-born of many brethren' yet to be born; and not because of any personal attachment to the man Jesus, for some particular act of courtesy on his part. Jesus never did us a personal favor that we know of; while the Spirit Christ has blessed him with salvation and redemption, and will do—is doing the same for us. This Spirit we worship; this Spirit is an emanation from our Father and Mother—God! This same Spirit visited Ann Lee, and transformed her Gentile nature into christian sainthood, the same as it had regenerated a Jewish disposition in Jesus, making it a pioneer in christianity! . . .
> Were there any consistency in the theory of the vicarious atonement; if the blood of Jesus' physical body was any more powerful for salvation than that of any other being—Jew or Gentile—in this degree only, would we be warranted in substituting the person, for the heavenly principles of christianity, in our devotional worship. The medicine which made Jesus, the Christ, is the panacea for all the ills the soul has inherited or may contract; and will make of each and all, Christs, as truly as Jesus became so, by taking the same prescription—being obedient to the same beautiful, resurrecting principles."

It will be observed that the Shakers, like the Spiritualist's, set aside a personal Christ, and substitute what they call a Christ principle; thus denying "that Jesus Christ is coming in the flesh," and thereby showing that they are in sympathy with the anti-Christ. Their entire platform is opposed to the Bible, and salvation through Christ.

TERRIBLE FIRE IN CHICAGO.—About 11 o'clock Saturday evening (Oct. 7th), a fire broke out in Chicago, which has produced terrible results. As we are about to go to press, we can only give a few brief items. It is said ten thousand buildings are burnt, one hundred and fifty millions of property destroyed, and many lives lost. At last dates the fire had extended five miles, and was still raging.

"TALKS ABOUT HEALTH."—Dr. Dio Lewis, 19 Beacon Street, Boston, has just published a work with the above title, which every body should read. There are but few men in the world as well qualified as Dr. Lewis to give good advice concerning what will promote health. He has had a large experience as a physician, has lectured extensively in Europe and America, and consequently has had a very wide field of observation. His large common sense, combined with his marked ability to study cause and effect, have enabled him to say rare things of much value to those who desire to preserve their health. The work contains about 130 pp., and may be had at our office for 25 cts., postage paid.

☞ The second number of the Herald of Salvation is at hand. It is edited and published by Bro. W. Kellaway, Fairhaven, Mass. It is neatly executed, and filled with interesting matter. This monthly is worthy of the patronage of the friends of Jesus. The subscription price is one dollar a year.

THE SOUTHERN FIELD.

I am glad to learn that a good degree of interest was felt at the National Campmeeting in the Southern mission. I hope that interest will be augmented all through our ranks, that Bro. Bowman may be kept in the field as a missionary for a time, to plant the truth in different parts of the South. Shall we let an opportunity like this pass without turning it to a good purpose? Let us be stirred to action at once. Who will hold back now? When the door is opened, shall we refuse to enter? When the very help we need is at hand, shall we refuse to accept it, simply because we lack money to make it availing? We must not act so unwisely. But in order for the A. A. Mission Society to keep Bro. Bowman constantly in the mission field, you must put the funds at their disposal. A goodly number could give $100 apiece, and ought to do it without delay. Others can give $10, and almost every one can give one dollar apiece. We ought to raise $5000 for the Mission work South this winter. Shall we do it?

A word concerning Bro. Bowman's circumstances from myself, seeing I spent some time with him in person, will be admissible. Prior to the war, he was a man of property, but matters so shaped that it was all swept away, since which time he has been dependent on preaching for the support of himself and family. For the truth's sake he has now cut himself off from that resort. We need a man of his ability and long experience, and a man of southern birth, to go through the South, not as a transient visitor, but as a permanent laborer there. This is truly a God send. Let all the people say amen, by sending funds to keep him at work. W. S.

HOLDING THE TRUTH IN UNRIGHTEOUSNESS.—Truth is often dishonored by its advocates, whose hearts are not sanctified. "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord," was an ancient requirement; and the spirit of that requisition still lives in the divine repudiation of the practice of holding the truth in unrighteousness." Alas, how many who advocate the truth are destitute of regenerated hearts, and simply use the sword of the Spirit disconnected from every other part of the heavenly armor, to gratify a carnal passion for pugulistic warfare on theological themes. With them it is theory first, and theory last, and theory only. Not that theory is made too prominent, do we thus speak, for God's theory cannot be elevated too high; but, as Jesus said, "These things aught ye to have done, and not to have left the others undone." But "speaking the truth in love" is the sacred rule. W. S.

SCATTERING SEED.—Several hundred copies of "The Life Beyond Death" have been sent already into different parts of several of the southern states, with a quantity of tracts, and others will soon be on the way. The Wisconsin and Illinois campmeeting donations are gratefully acknowledged as my principal help in this enterprise. Have sent by request to some forty clergymen, of different orders, in different states south, and to many lay members. It is expected that some will rebel against the truth, but others will meditate, and cautiously take steps to re-examine their theology. Our labor will not be in vain, though some of the seed may not spring up at once. Some I have heard cheering reports from already. May God water the seed sown in this new field by his grace. W. S.

SPASMODIC RELIGION.—This kind of religion that alternates between the housetop and the cellar—now elated and now discouraged—is not in harmony with the arrangement of heaven: "Abide in the vine"—not be alternately in and out, but "ABIDE" in Christ. This getting religion when we are destitute of it, is all right; but it is far better to keep it when we get it, than to get it several times a year. It is God's will that the Spirit should "dwell in you," instead of paying you an occasional visit. Then the Spirit will ever be present to indite our petitions, and prayer will thus bring us an every day supply of this sacred influence to stimulate us on our homeward journey. If religion is good at all, it is good all the while. Why not have it? not the spasmodic kind, but that which gets deep into the heart, and lives there. W. S.

RELIGION OF THE HEAD AND HEART.—Religion of the head (intellect) is not to be repudiated, provided it is connected with religion of the heart (affections;) but a religion of the head, disconnected from a religion of the heart, is a poor article. The heart must be pure. Our affections, as well as our intellect, must be enlisted. Then we will not only understand the plan of God, but love the author of that plan. But how many content themselves with a mere head work, and live with unsanctified hearts. Such need a baptism of heavenly love. Consecration to God must be experienced and enjoyed in this life, if we at last possess eternal life. O, for perfect love. Heaven give us all a new and full consecration. W. S.

THE SOUTHERN CAMP.—Our Southern Wis. campmeeting closed on the 1st of Oct. Though it was held so late, the weather favored us, and the Lord smiled on the camp, leading some of the brethren to pronounce it the best meeting they ever enjoyed. Some gave their hearts to the Lord, others were brought into the light anew, and some were buried in baptism. Many of the social meetings seemed to almost translate the saints before the time. It seemed like a cloud of glory overshadowing us, causing the saints to rejoice. W. S.

DEDICATION.

Friday, Sept. 29th, I left home for Hilandville, Mass., to attend a dedication, in company with Bro. Couch, who was to preach the sermon. The hall has been built by Bro. Samuel Low, for the worship of God, and the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom. It is a very pleasant hall, up one flight of stairs, sixty by forty, and well seated. At 2 P. M., the people assembled, when the hall was dedicated by an appropriate and interesting discourse from Bro. Couch. The favor of the Lord, setting his seal upon the exercise, giving the spirit of freedom in Christ, was evident. How important to have Christ with us in every effort we make. I tarried and preached in the evening, also Saturday, and over Sunday, Oct. 1st. The numbers increased, their interest also. There seemed to be a revival spirit, with a desire to hear; so I left an appointment for Sunday, the 8th, when, by the help of God, I go to break the bread of life again. This is a new place, and with the help of the Lord, and Bible management, much good may be done.

Those interested in a permanent, gospel, Advent meeting, were invited to stop and take the necessary steps to carry forward, by combining their influence, prayers, and means, the blessed work of Christ in saving men from sin, and getting them ready for the Lord's coming. About forty stopped, and were ready for any Bible measure or organization that was right and expedient, for their own welfare and the advancement of Christ's truth in the village. I enjoyed the privilege with them. The Lord favored us, and truth seemed to bear its own weight, lifting up those that had counted the cost and given all for Christ. The young people were feelingly interested in the truths relating to the redemption of man.

It is blessed, in these apostate, pleasure-loving times, to see any interested in the great salvation. To see how much God has done by the gift of his only Son to save a lost race, and bring this great gift within the reach of all, urging it upon them by his Spirit; then to see them refuse and neglect the call, brought out the saying of Jesus, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." But Christ will be clear, if all are not saved. He calls; they refuse. All can be saved if they will. And by the grace of God, I will seek and find full pardon; and, glory be to God, I feel the fire burning. Let us all be filled with the Spirit. How blessed it is. All love, love; yes, the love of Jesus and his word, his people, and our enemies. This is better still. Amen. Let us all be imitators of the meek and lowly Savior, and it will be well with us.

Thine, L. BOUTELL.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

BRO. W. J. MACKIE writes:—"I will be one of a hundred to raise the $2500 for him"—(Bro. Bowman.)

BRO. BOWMAN, under date of Oct. 4th, writes as follows:—"If we only had a few hundred dollars to assist us in putting up a house to worship in, we should have gained much. Please send me all the tracts you can; they are in great demand, and are doing a great deal of good. I want all I can get on the doctrines of our church."

Now, brethren and sisters, please send in funds to the Society, that it may be able to sustain Bro. Bowman with the means to procure food and raiment, send him tracts freely, and also erect a house for worship—one or more, as may be best, and as the Society may have the means.

One Sister encloses a draft for $100.00, and writes:—"I am sorry to see so little contributed for the Advent cause by those who profess to believe that the end of all things is just at hand."

We hope our sister's example will stimulate others to give, as they may have the ability, to the glory of God. Please send the funds to the Society, and the Board will see that all is appropriated to the best advantage. G. T. A.

SABBATARIANISM.—No. 2.

L. BOUTELL.

In my former article on Sabbath-keeping, I discussed the "Beast and his mark"; but I have other weighty reasons why the seventh-day-Sabbath keeping is not binding, or saving to the Gentile world. The ten commandments given at Horeb, and written on tables of stone, the Lord calls "the covenant"—"even the tables of the covenant." Deut. 9: 9. Again, "And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments, and he wrote them upon two tables of stone." Deut. 4: 13. And Moses, "as faithful over his house," called all Israel together and bade them to hearken, to learn, to keep, and to do them. And they were so sacredly binding, that a deviation from the letter of them was followed by a death penalty. Moses was the mediator of this covenant, the ten commandments, to see them enforced, and the penalty applied in case they were broken. It was to be superseded by a more excellent and perfect covenant and administration. Moses anticipated it, and looked forward, beholding, as in telescope, the glories of the new covenant, "the new and living way," the mediator of the new testament, or covenant; Jesus the Messiah, the One to come, the Savior, and the only Savior.

This is the very one referred to by Moses, when he said, one "like unto me" "shall the Lord your God raise up"; "him shall ye hear in all things, and whosoever will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." The time that Moses prophesied of came. The one like unto him appeared in due time. The mediator of the new covenant gave himself a ransom, sealed with his own blood—the new testament. Thus we celebrate the Lord's Supper, because he said, "This cup is the new testament in my blood." Here is the new covenant, brought to view by the apostle in Hebrews: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah; not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt." Have those days come? If so, the new covenant has been brought in and is binding. And if this prophet has come to enforce his covenant, or contract, upon the people, he must be heard. It will not do to hearken to Moses now.

Again, the covenant he is to enforce is not like the one given at Horeb; then it cannot be the same. So, dearly beloved, it is Moses and the old covenant, or it is Christ and the new covenant. To which shall we give heed and obey? Shall it be Moses, or Christ? They are as unlike as the law and the gospel. "For if the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." Heb. 8: 7. "Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first [covenant], that he may establish the second" [covenant]. His new covenant, then, is the only one in force now, and must be written by the Spirit of God; not on tables of stone, but on the fleshly tables of the heart.

To look back to Moses and the covenant with its ten commandments given at Mount Horeb, is it not to undervalue and reject Christ and his new covenant? I should not dare be guilty of it. With me, it is Christ—Christ, and the life-giving covenant. I know not how any man can be saved without coming directly to this fountain. And all who make the fourth commandment obligatory, as under the Horeb covenant, say by so doing, Moses, and not Christ. Why? Because we cannot have and serve both at the same time. And how can Jesus Christ save those who will have the Mosaic covenant; when the call of Christ is, Come unto me, by way of my covenant; "by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us"? My prayer and desire is that the sweet spirit of Jesus, our Savior, may draw men to the right fountain, and that is Christ, "the way, the truth, and the life." The Lord help us, by his grace, to look after no other way, at the expense of being lost when Jesus comes.

ANOTHER SAD, SAD NOTE.

A FATHER BEREAVED OF HIS ONLY SON, AND TWO SISTERS LEFT TO MOURN.

Bro. Grant doubtless remembers Bro. A. Fike, of Vallejo, Salano Co., California, and some readers of the Crisis may remember the afflicting death of Sr. Mary L. Fike, while on their way, in 1860, with their four children, to California; and also of the sad death of the youngest, a little girl of nine years, by drowning in Feather river, soon after their arrival. But now comes the third note of woe in a letter just received from our stricken brother, containing a photograph of his son, a beautiful young man, aged twenty-three years, six months, and nine days. The letter says:—

> "The enemy death has again done his work in my family. George is dead; lost his life from falling from a buggy. This is a trial almost unspeakably great. Dear little fellow! he took me out in a buggy to give me a ride on Sunday afternoon, the 27th of August, seemingly on purpose to please me. He told a lady friend that he expected to have a pleasant time to-morrow, for he was going to take his Pa out riding. Dear little innocent fellow! he never seemed more gratified than when he did one a kindness, and especially to me; and the last conscious act of his life was one of filial love, which resulted so fatally to himself.
>
> After driving about seven miles out of the city (San Francisco), while descending a hill upon a hard road, the horse pulling hard on the bit all the time, suddenly the bit in his mouth broke, and the bridle slipping back on his neck, and the lines coming with it, and there being no back to the seat, George fell backward, striking his head so hard on the ground as to fracture the base of the skull, and in twenty-four hours he died.
>
> Dear boy! he was one of the best that lived. I miss him so much, he was always so kind to me. He had a great many friends, both young and old, and was much beloved by all. Some of his schoolmates came nearly a hundred miles to attend his funeral. He was a 'believer,' but had made no public profession; but he was so good that I can not help but hope that I shall meet him in the kingdom when Jesus comes."

And so do we, brother; for David says, "Let us fall now into the hand of the Lord; for his mercies are great." Yes, dear brother, do now as in former years, when the bitterest cup was put to your lips, and you were forced to drink it; fall into the hands of the Lord, and hope in his tender mercies, for you have proved them great. And will you pardon us, while we say, as we look back upon all the way in which the Lord our God has led you, since we gave you the parting hand to go to the Pacific ocean, while we came to the Atlantic, and see how you have humbled yourself even as a weaned child; we can but feel that, as the sharp frost of autumn opens the burr and frees the nut for use; even so have you, by the loosing of these earthly ties, been unbound, and your tongue loosed, and your pen become that of a ready writer, and yourself and substance have been given to the Lord for the past eleven years, to spread the light of life in that land of gold. And now in this last stroke, that has severed from you the light of your eyes, and a father's earthly hopes, do you ask, "Hath God forgotten to be gracious? hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies?" No, not a word of the kind in your letter. You know that God does not afflict willingly, or from his heart, nor grieve the children of men, but that we are now under the reign of sin and death, and that afflictions abide the saints of God. You know, too, that this reign will soon end in the incoming glories of Messiah's kingdom. You know, too, who has said, of the enemy who holds your treasures in his iron grasp, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death; O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction; repentance shall be hid from mine eyes." You know, too, who has said, "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it." And very soon, beloved brother, and most tenderly beloved young sisters, you will know, too, the blessedness of those who will say in that day, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him." Yes, through tears and bereavements, you have waited for him, and now you can say, "He will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

Amen and amen, saith my soul; and may we be there. "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." May we join in that song while the redeemed host crown him Lord of all, is the prayer and hope of your sympathizing friends, R. and E. S. WILLARD.

Haddonfield, N. J., Oct. 2nd, 1871.

OUR TOUR WEST.

L. C. WELLCOME.

Aug. 8th, we arrived at Winona, a beautiful, thriving young city on the Mississippi. We have now traveled in wagon, with our brother, S. C. W., some two hundred miles from the frontier to the eastern edge of the State, during the most busy time of harvest. The crops are generally very heavy. We have seen several hundreds of thousands, perhaps a million of acres of wheat and oats under the hand of harvesters, with horses and several kinds of machinery. At some points we could see from five to ten thousand acres at one view. Truly the Lord provides bread for the eater. But we are told by the Savior that "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

We put up with Bro. Jeffries, who, with his believing wife, look for the Lord soon to come. Here the Advent people have a good house of worship, and a fine prospect for usefulness, if they persevere in united and faithful labor. Bro. E. T. Himes resides here, and preaches here half the time. We preached two evenings to the few who gathered to hear, and visited several families. Found one family of old friends, formerly of Maine—Bro. and Sr. Libby, who have seen the true light on the Lord's soon coming and kingdom, and on the nature of man, and who now rejoice in the blessed hope.

Leaving Winona, we took a steamer on the Mississippi for St. Paul, one hundred and sixty miles up the river. This is a beautiful ride, presenting the most splendid scenery we have ever witnessed. The water being low, we were one day and two nights on the river. We arrived at St. Paul on the 11th. Having an hour to wait for the cars, we looked about the city, and examined its magnificent and extensive stone buildings, its high and important bridge across the Mississippi, resting on stone piers, some eighty or ninety feet high. This city is growing rapidly, and although but twenty years old, seems trying to outdo Boston.

We took cars for Minneapolis, eleven miles up the river, and here, passing through St. Anthony, a thriving and populous place, we cross the Mississippi by rail into Minneapolis, the most interesting and marvelous place we have yet seen. A city built in an oak grove, on a level plain or prairie, up, up, or, north of all our thoughts of cities and factories, here is a city of fifteen thousand inhabitants, on a site well nigh as large as old Boston, with adjoining territory to enlarge to any extent, laid out with broad streets, with side-walks seven feet wide, lined with magnificent stone and brick stores, hotels and warehouses of immense size, or adorned with rich and costly dwellings, gardens and groves; all looking as life-like and flourishing as any New England city, but all new. It is only twenty years since it was unoccupied ground. This is a timber country, where much lumber is sawn. Five mills here saw four hundred thousand feet of lumber per day. Two hundred houses are going up this season. Here resides Bro. O. R. Fassett. He was absent, but we were kindly welcomed and cared for by Sister Fassett, who with her husband has been ministering to the people in this city, and in localities outside, with good results. God has blessed their labors, and raised up others to follow the Lord.

Sunday, Aug. 13th, we preached in a hall to the Advent congregation A. M. and evening, and enjoyed a good season in the Lord. Here we found several old friends formerly of Me.; Sister Norris and family, with Bro. Overlock and family, with whom we used to worship twenty years ago. We visited and enjoyed a pleasant season with them, as also with several other families whose acquaintance we formed, and who look for the Lord.

August 15th, we took cars for Mankato, thence by stage to Garden City, to spend a few days with my parents and eldest brother and family. On arriving, we found all as well as usual, my family having returned from New Ulm. I found an arrangement for me to preach here on the following Sunday. Met the appointment, and preached to an attentive audience A. M. and evening on the duty of obedience to the calls of God, and to the warnings he gives us; also on the signs of Christ's first and second advents. There are several here who look and wait for the Lord, beside my brother and his faithful wife.

I spent a few days in visiting my aged parents, evidently for the last time in this mortal world, also my brothers' and sisters' families. I came west to visit, and intended to rest a little from excessive labor. This privilege the Lord has graciously granted me, yet I could not be idle, but have traveled by cars, team and boat, about twelve hundred miles in Minn. in two months, and have constantly preached "the gospel of the kingdom of God" in the various places I visited, scattering many tracts and some books which should continue to preach. Sunday, Aug. 27th, we preached in the grove in Shelby, and closed our labors in this part of the State, and bade adieu to the brethren, and to our beloved parents and sister, hoping soon to meet in the better land.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Thomas Howell.

BRO. GRANT:—I am happy to say we are still looking forward to the time when Jesus shall come and take us to himself. Our meetings are more interesting every Sabbath. I baptized three last Sunday (Aug. 27th). We had a blessed day. The Spirit of God was with us in power. We expect Bro. Fassett with us soon. We have sent on money to bring him out. I hope he will come safely; and I pray the Lord will come with him, and make him a blessing on this coast. I thank God that there are so many of us standing "fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free."

We are striving to be more like Jesus, and to do all the good we can. I was glad to hear from you by Bro. Badgely. The Seventh-day keepers are holding meetings still. A few have gone over to the law, but, thank God, we have a goodly number who are satisfied with Christ, who "hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." We are trying to follow Paul's advice, to "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and . . . . run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." We had a blessed season together three weeks ago at the communion table. It brought to our minds the last night you were with us. We want to be ready when the Master shall come, that we may sit down with him in his kingdom; and we believe he is near, even at the door. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 23d, 1871.

Bro. Howell writes again Sept. 6th, and says:—"Bro. D. D. Reed was with us for the first time last Sunday (Sept. 3d). He even received the right hand of fellowship. The Lord is with us."

Bro. Howell is a true man, and is the pastor of the church in San Francisco. They have lately hired a meeting-house on Mission street, formerly occupied by Dr. Scudder's church. It is a good place, and central. [ED.

From Bro. S. Woodruff.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I would that tongue could express the depths of the love of God to me. We cannot even express the heart-felt gratitude which we owe to companions in times of trial. Then, too, when we are prostrated by sickness, disease, preying upon these frail, dying bodies, we see then a display of tenderness and deep love and sympathy for our welfare. Long days and weary nights find them still with an unfailing watchcare. Their love reaches beyond self. Everything is done on their part to stop the progress of disease, and the life that is ebbing away, that once more they may see us in health. But their hopes, many times, fail. They follow us to the gates of death, and amid their shrieks and groans we bid them farewell. Their power fails. They can do no more, and the silent tomb separates us ofttimes in early life. But O thanks be to God, there is help laid upon One who is mighty to save all that will look to him.

O the depths of that love that caused a door to be opened for the lost and perishing. God's love excels all other. He loved us while we were rebels to his government. When man had trampled the last ray of hope beneath his feet, God loved him still, and stretched out his mighty arm that he might lean upon it, and be rescued and sheltered from the destructive elements of these last days; and if numbered with the silent dead before Jesus comes, he can rest in hope, knowing Jesus has said, "The hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." What a soul-inspiring thought! This thought burst the dark veil of the tomb, while the rays of heavenly light illuminate the mind while here, and a bright assurance of immortality hereafter. At the voice of Jesus, the graves will give up their dead; loved ones will live again, to die no more. The new earth will never be dotted with grave-yards nor tomb-stones; the gloomy shades of old earth can never enter there. Sin, in all its varied forms and ways, can never enter to mar the home of the saints. The voices that will be heard on that peaceful shore will be from the pure in heart; yea, from those who have followed the Lamb of God. Oh, will you be there? Oh, say, will you be there? Stop, and consider it, ere it be too late. "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come."

From Bro. Geo. Thomson.

BRO. GRANT:—Our first quarterly meeting for the eastern district of Wisconsin was held at Merrimack, from Sept. 22nd to 24th. It was a blessed season. Many of the dear saints gathered in from different points to enjoy the feast, and it was a feast indeed. Not only intellectually rich, but rich in the literal fruits of Canaan. Bro. Jones' home being a type of the goodly land, flowing with milk and honey, and the delicious fruit of the vine. We were ably assisted by Brn. Adams and Graves in preaching the word, and we have reason to believe that the word took effect. We had many warm testimonies to the truth. One sister related a new feature recently introduced in church fairs. The preacher in charge procured a frog, and had it enclosed in a box, to be fished for in the "fish-pond," at ten cents a chance. When the lucky fisher would open the box to ascertain his prize, out would leap the frog, to the amusement of these "lovers of pleasures, more than lovers of God"; and then it would be returned to the pond again, and thus become a source of considerable revenue. One sister thought that they had got the right emblem at last, just what John saw when on the Isle of Patmos—"Three unclean spirits, like frogs, coming out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet."

The gathering at the Lord's table was a season long to be remembered by those who participated. There was one peculiarly touching incident. A doctor, with his family, communed with us for the first time, and for the first time the whole family sat together at the Lord's table. They had been identified with different branches of the Baptist church, and had never before enjoyed the privilege of sitting together at the Lord's table. I tell you there was rejoicing in that family. We have no organization in this place. There are a few lovers of the truth here, who are not afraid to let their light shine, and God will bless them. I think the prospects are very good for future success in this place; from the fact that Satan rages, and honest-hearted ones are interested and inquiring for the truth. May God bless them. There were twelve baptized in connection with our tent-meeting in Arena. The cause is onward here.

Your Bro. in Christ, GEO. THOMSON.

From Bro. E. Owen.

BRO. GRANT:—I removed Bro. Stevens from Great Falls on Thursday to this place. He is a very sick man, though we hope improving in some respects; some symptoms certainly seem better. He is now with me. His mail should be sent to Box 464, Portsmouth, N. H. Your Bro., E. OWEN.

CAMPMEETING REPORT.

We take pleasure in saying to our friends abroad, in relation to our campmeeting held in Belfast, Me., in the month of August last, that it was one of the best held in Maine since 1843, and so acknowledged by those that attended it. The old forty-three hand-felt at home, while seeing the same principle carried out. The union was not a grave-yard union; but a heaven-inspired one, which made all feel they were one in Christ Jesus. This oneness was caused by the Spirit of God. No jars or contentions were known on the ground. Although there were persons of different views, none were brought forward only such as were calculated to lead men to Christ, and show the near coming kingdom of God.

The people listened with interest. The best of order was observed throughout the meeting, without policemen. The prayer of the church was that God would send angels to protect the camp. It was done. All was looked after without charge. No hat was carried around to collect money. All bills were paid with thanksgiving. God's people were quickened, wanderers were reclaimed, sinners converted, and several were baptized, rejoicing in Christ. The Lord's praise was heard echoing through the crowd.

The camp was situated on a beautiful rise of land, one mile and a half from the city of Belfast, having a fair view of the bay, in a beautiful grove, clean, with plenty of room, and well shaded. The tents were noble, good size, and well filled. The prayer-meetings were lively, having much interest for the unsaved. Many expressed their desire to continue another week, but we were reminded of other duties.

The subject of another campmeeting, if time should continue, came up, and it was decided to have one. Voted, to choose out eight men, to act as a committee the present year: Brn. W. Cousins, J. Hamblington, I. Damman, L. Pendleton, V. Davis, J. Clifford, J. Emerson, J. Young. ISRAEL DAMMAN.

PREACH.

"Awake, my voice, and loud proclaim
His glorious day abroad."

Yes, it is very well to say "preach," but I am a man of few words, illiterate, and poor in this world's goods; yet the echo returns—"preach." I know just such an one as you speak of, but with all these difficulties he "preaches" some weeks to twenty, thirty, and fifty persons, and how many more I cannot tell; but his motto is,

"Purchased and bought by blood divine."

But you ask, How does he preach? Just exactly the way you should preach. He does not use cigars, tobacco, snuff, liquors, tea, coffee, or any thing but the absolute necessaries of life, by which means he is able to purchase from twenty to fifty copies of the "World's Crisis," published in Boston, to distribute among his acquaintances every week; and he says he is distributing besides a large number of other publications pertaining to the kingdom of our God; and in this way he is "preaching."

How is it, brother, with you, or with me? Am I improving my talents? or am I hiding it away in a napkin? Am I offering my body a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto the Lord, denying all ungodliness? or am I treasuring up wrath? These are momentous reflections, and call loudly upon each one of us, as the Lord gives us opportunity, to do likewise,—"preach." The night is far spent, the day is at hand. V.

"WHAT HATH GOD WROUGHT?"

THOS. HOWELL.

BRO. GRANT:—In looking back over the past six months, I have been led to ask the question, "What hath God wrought?" Truly he has done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Since you left here, we have passed through a hard struggle and dark clouds; but, blessed be God, he is bringing us out into the light. Our place of worship in Excelsior Hall has become too small; but God has opened for us another place. We have taken a church on Mission Street, used some time ago by Dr. Scudder's people, and we expect to go into it next Sunday (Oct. 1st). We expect Bro. Reed with us, and we are praying the Lord to go with us.

The last month we have had blessed times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. We want to consecrate ourselves entirely to the Lord, and be ready for his coming. The seed which you sowed here is growing, and we are looking for a glorious harvest. We expect Bro. Fassett here next month. May the Lord come with him. Pray for us. Yours in the blessed hope, THOS. HOWELL.

San Francisco, Sept. 25th, 1871.

McMAHON'S DEFENCE.

Marshal McMahon is one of those frank, chivalrous, single-souled old warriors, who comprise a type almost peculiar to the French character, and who recall the memory of such men as Turenne, Coligny and the great Conde. With a moral courage which must yield him a nobler fame even than the dauntless bravery which won Magenta, he exonerates Napoleon III. from the responsibility of the disaster at Sedan, and transfers it to his own broad shoulders. The plan of concentrating his forces with those of Bazaine northwest of Metz was of his own conception; and the Emperor "exercised no influence whatever upon his resolution." That he did not accomplish an impossibility and snatch victory from overwhelming odds, was a failure which will surely be overbalanced by his magnanimity in confessing that upon him alone the blame—if blame there is—must rest. Who will soon forget the news of that disastrous day at Sedan? How the rapid and forced concentration of the French availed naught against the serried ranks of the German hosts, inspired as they were by the recent and decisive triumph of Gravellotte; how the conquering army encircled and encaged their enemy in an immense amphitheatre, and closed gradually on them until they were penned in beyond hope of extrication about the old historic town; how the Emperor, seeing that the cause was lost, held himself sadly calm, and rode away, cigarette in mouth, to pen his famous surrender to his royal brother and foe; and how the gallant conquered, who had fought nobly though their strife was vain, laid down their arms and their victors exultingly led them into captivity; all these things recur with startling vividness as we hear the voice of the brave old Marshal, loyally shielding his liege lord from the imputations of faults which were not his, and in the face of the world declaring, "It was I."

Thus is shattered and whiffed off by a loyal breath one of the thousand slanders which were showered upon Napoleon's name in the day of his misfortunes, when his power had vanished and his fame lay defencelessly at the mercy of his enemies. The vulgar adjuration, "Hit him—he has no friends," was obeyed on every hand; he was a fool, an imbecile, dotard, a meddling busybody, a vacillating marplot, a conceited and weak old man. Every error of the campaign, every mishap, was thrown upon his shoulders. It was his foolish interference which had caused the successive series of French defeats, and at last resulted in the fall of Paris; while McMahon was eloquently pitied as having been the unwilling victim of the Emperor's bad generalship, ignorance of war, and obstinacy in conducting the campaign himself. The Marshal's noble avowal will have the effect of relieving Napoleon from the odium of weakness and self-inflicted defeat, which has certainly rested upon him in the eyes of a large majority of men up to this time; while it will only prove that the ablest generals cannot hope to contend with a persistently adverse fate; that military genius cannot always cope with superior numbers and stricter discipline, and that defeat does not inevitably prove an absence of the highest military and moral virtues.

While France still continues to produce such soldiers as McMahon, she need not despair. A loyal heart, a bold sword and an honest tongue are qualities which do not always serve as the handmaidens of defeat, but more often compel victory. France will be fortunate if, with the proposed reorganization of her army, she can place at its head two or three men who possess them. The old Marshal's course is all the more striking, contrasted as it is with the struggles of selfish partisanship and the acrimonious rivalries of ambition in the Assembly; and it proves that the Empire, which nourished and advanced him to what he is, must have had more virtues within it than its enemies give credit for.—Boston Post.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

ROME, Oct. 7. Two convents have been occupied by Italian troops. The inmates quietly withdrew at the approach of the military.

The Italian Parliament will be opened about the middle of November.

DOMESTIC.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 3. In Court this morning the counsel for Brigham Young, having stated that Young was sick and unable to appear, moved that he be admitted to bail. Judge McKean said that if the prisoner was sick he might remain in his house unguarded for the present, but that a motion to admit to bail could not be entertained until the prisoner appeared at the bar of the Court.

In the Hawkins case a motion was made to quash the indictment, which was overruled, but time was granted to file a plea of abatement. All is quiet and there are no indications of trouble.

Daniel H. Wells, Mayor of the city and third President of the Mormon church, was arrested this evening by United States Marshal Patrick, upon an indictment of the Grand Jury charging him under the Utah statutes with lewdly and lasciviously cohabiting with one Louisa Free, whom Wells claims as one of his wives. The accused was taken before Judge McKean and held to bail in $5000 to answer at the present term of the Court. In this case, as in that of Brigham Young upon a similar charge, Major Charles H. Hempstead and Hon. T. Fitch are counsel for the defence.

Gen. Henry A. Morrow, formerly in command here, arrived last night and was enthusiastically received. He is under orders to report at Camp Douglas.

A company of cavalry from Fort Steele and a full battery from Fort Halleck are expected to-morrow. There are now about 5000 troops in camp.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 4. The fires in the woods above Green Bay have extended across Peshtigo river, and cover a strip thirty miles wide in Shawanaw and Oconto counties. The large lumbering towns of Marinette and Peshtigo are threatened with destruction. Fires are now raging over three thousand square miles of territory.

About a hundred families are burned out, and the refugees are in Green Bay and other towns. At least a hundred other families are in danger of being burned out. Farm buildings, bridges, fences and absolutely everything are swept away.

Thousands of square miles of valuable pine forests are destroyed. Bears and other wild beasts have been driven from the woods, and are flying in every direction.

The entire population is fighting the fires without success. Many people were prostrated, suffocated by the heat and smoke, and had to be carried by their comrades to places of safety.

The supplies of food, &c., for man and beast have been destroyed, and starvation during the coming winter stares them in the face.

GREEN BAY, Wis., Oct. 4. The fires that prevail in six or seven of the northwestern counties of Wisconsin, have never had a parallel since the settlement of the country.

Fearful Fire in Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 9, 10 A. M. The entire business portion of the city is destroyed, all the Banks, Express and Telegraph offices, all the newspaper offices except the Tribune, six Elevators and the Water Works have been burned. There is no water in the city and not less than ten thousand buildings have already been destroyed.

The fire has burned a distance of five miles, and is still raging. The wind is blowing a gale, and it will will be impossible to get any reliable detailed particulars for some time, as there is only one telegraph wire working, and that only to the suburbs.

One of our principal merchants has received the following dispatch from a leading lawyer and large real estate owner:

CHICAGO, Oct. 9, '71.

To Geo. C. Richardson, No. 96 Devonshire street, Boston: Chicago is in ashes. The calamity is awful. Miles are burned over. Send donations from Boston for the suffering people. The Water Works are burned, and the telegraph destroyed.

C. A. GREGORY.

Cincinnati, Oct. 9. Information from Chicago this morning, said to be reliable, states that the following buildings were burned: The Sherman House, Chamber of Commerce, Court House, Western Union Telegraph building, and all that part of the city covering over thirty blocks.

The following message signed by the Mayor of Chicago, was sent the Mayor of St. Louis this morning: "Send us food for the suffering. Our city is in ashes. Our Water Works are burned."

LATER.

Chicago, Oct. 9—5 P. M. The awful work of destruction still goes on with relentless fury from Harrison street in the south to Division street in the north, and from the river to the lake—an area of four miles long by one mile wide.

The flames have swept everything before them. It is estimated that at least 100,000 people are homeless and in a suffering condition. The streets in the districts still unburned are lined for miles with such household goods as have been saved from destruction.

It is impossible now to give, even approximately, a correct statement of the loss, but a fair idea may be formed when it is stated that every bank in the city, except two small savings institutions, one on 22d street, in the south division, and one on Randolph street, in the west division, are destroyed; all the wholesale stores, all the leading retail establishments, the Post Office, Court House, Chamber of Commerce, every hotel in the South Division, except the Michigan Avenue Hotel, which, standing on the extreme southern limit, escaped, though it is badly scorched; every newspaper office (the Tribune Building, which was supposed to be fire-proof, finally succumbed); every theatre, the six largest elevators, the immense depots of the Michigan Southern and Illinois Central Railroads—both the passenger and freight depots of the latter; more than a score of churches, and much shipping in the river—all destroyed.

Men who were millionaires yesterday morning are nearly penniless to-day, but more terrible than this is the awful certainty that many human beings have perished in the flames. How many, no one can tell, and perhaps no one will ever be able to tell, but it is known that some perished, and it is feared that the victims of the fiery monster may be counted by scores.

Hundreds of horses and cows have been burned in the stables, and on the north side hundreds of animals, though released from confinement, were so bewildered and confused by the sea of fire which surrounded them that they rushed wildly too and fro, uttering cries of fright and pain until scorched and killed.

The entire loss cannot be much less than one hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

LATEST.

New York, Oct. 9—1 20 P. M. The telegraph office improvised in the southern part of Chicago, as was supposed beyond the reach of the flames, has been abandoned, and communication with the city is again suspended. It is expected that another office will be opened during the night at a point two miles south of the last place of refuge.

The operators, before leaving their instruments, reported that the wind had veered round to the north and was driving the flames back southward, and the flames had already reached the neighborhood of the office. The men were compelled to flee, and their last words were: "There now appears no hope of saving the southern portion of the city."

In Brief.

—— There is a lady telegraph operator in the west who can receive a message on one circuit and transmit it on a second, simultaneously, with ease and rapidity.——Very recently Martha Walker, a young Englishwoman, climbed the famous Matterhorn, over 14,700 feet high, in company with her father, aged sixty-five years. The Matterhorn is one of the most difficult of all the Alpine peaks to ascend, and has rarely been attempted by a woman.——Great alarm appears to be felt in England about the cholera. The alarm is considered to be useful in many ways.——Nearly twenty persons have committed suicide by jumping from the St. Louis ferry-boats during the past three months.——Columns of hot water three hundred feet high are among the wonders of the Yellowstone Valley in Wyoming. They surpass the geysers of California.——A lady in Ipswich, N. H., on the 11th of September, picked two quarts of ripe raspberries, and one quart on the 19th. These were gathered from bushes which had previously borne one crop this year.——Grapes are selling in Iowa at three cents a bushel.——Vegetable leather, manufactured of caoutchouc and naptha, at about one third the the cost of ordinary leather, is coming into use.——

The following: To the Advent Churches in New Hampshire. Will some brother, in every place in New Hampshire where Advent meetings are held, send me immediately the following information:

1. The number of Adventists in their place and vicinity.
2. Whether the church has a chapel or hall of their own, or do they hire one, or are they building one in which to hold meetings.
3. The names of the officers of the church in their place.
4. If you have no regular meeting in your place, how many Adventists are there in your vicinity.

Do attend to this request as soon as you read this notice, for it will be for the interest of the cause in your place to do so. Send without delay. My P. O. address is Sandy Hill, N. Y.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary
N. H. Adv. Chris. Conf.

Three Works in One.

To accommodate my scattered friends, who may want my recent works in a convenient form to lend, or in a permanent form for preservation, I have had the following three bound together, both in paper and cloth:—"The Life beyond Death," "Immaterialism," and "Life and Death Theology," making a volume of 224 pp., which can be obtained by addressing Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis., at the following prices: In paper, 40 cts., postpaid; in cloth, 65 cts., postpaid. W. S.

Conference.

The next session of the Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held at Lincolnville Center, Me., at the free house, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and continue over Sunday. Ministers and people are invited to come and unite in laboring for the salvation of sinners, and the building up of the brethren and sisters in Christ. Provision will be made for all who come.

For the brethren, F. A. BAKER, JER. CARR.

Protracted Meeting.

Providence permitting, a protracted meeting will commence at Steep Falls, Me., Tuesday evening, Nov. 7th, to continue as long as may seem duty. Come, dear brethren and sisters, from the surrounding country, and labor with us for the salvation of those who must soon perish in the fires of the last day, if they do not find a refuge in Christ. A. A. ROBINSON. C. H. SWEET.

Notice.

Brn. B. S. Emery and I. Damman will commence a meeting at Second Advent Hall, 353½ Congress St., Portland, Me., Oct. 19th, and hold over the following Sunday.

NOTICE.

At a meeting of the ministers and some of the delegates, representing South Western Massachusetts, South Western Vermont, and Eastern New York, held on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 29th, 1871, it was deemed absolutely necessary, in order for a better co-operation on the part of ministers and churches, and for the advancement of the cause of the soon coming kingdom of Christ, that a conference be organized, comprising the churches and ministers of the above territory, who are looking for the "return of the Nobleman," and speedy redemption of the faithful of all ages, and the eternal reign of Christ on this earth. We, the undersigned, ministers of the gospel, therefore, do hereby make a call for such a Conference, to be held at Hoosac, N. Y., in the Advent Church, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1871, and to hold over the following Sunday; and for all the churches, who desire the cause of truth advanced in their midst, and who co-operate with the objects and interests of such a conference, to represent themselves by delegates duly appointed, and where there are no churches holding regular meetings, but where isolated brethren live, that they also come, that the Conference may know what can be done to build up the cause in their locality.

Each church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every twenty-five members.

Let there be a general rally, from all parts of the Hoosac Valley, of our brethren and sisters to this meeting. Come in the name of our soon coming King. Come filled with the Spirit. Come to speak for God, that you may comfort the church, and admonish the sinner. Make every possible effort to attend this great gathering of the saints. Ample accommodations will be made for all who come.

We expect to see the following churches in Western Mass., represented by delegates: Plainfield, Savoy, Charlemont, North Adams, and others in that section of the State.

From Eastern New York: Sandy Hill, Fort Edward, Saratoga, Hebron, Hoosac, Low Hampton, and all others in that part of the State.

West. Vermont: Rutland, Castleton, Poultney, Woodford, and all others this side the mountains.

Hoosac is located on the Boston and Troy R. R. Those coming to the meeting will stop at Hoosac Corners. Teams will be at the depot on the arrival of the two and three o'clock P. M. trains, to take those who come to the meeting to the place of the conference.

J. WILBER, E. MOSHER,
B. L HARRISON, C. PIKE,
Z. D. BAIRD, H. K. FLAGG,
A. W. SIBLEY, H. A. KING,
A. P. BUMP.

P. S. Let us hear from other ministers and churches, located in the Hoosac Valley, immediately. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.
Sandy Hill,, N. Y.

Notice.

The New Hampshire State Conference will meet Wednesday before the third Sunday in November. Particulars hereafter. JOHN COUCH.

A Request.

Will the clerks of the various Advent churches in Massachusetts, that are in sympathy with the Mass. A. C. Conference, please send to the undersigned, as soon as convenient, the number of members belonging to their respective churches? Also, will those who worship in chapels of their own please say so? By complying with the above request, a favor will be conferred upon the cause at large. C. E. BARNES, Salem, Mass.

Dedication.

The Advent Chapel, built at Springwater, N. Y., this season, will be dedicated Thursday, Oct. 26th. Sermon by Elder John Couch, of Chelsea, Mass. Services to commence at 1 o'clock P. M. We cordially invite our sister churches to represent themselves at this meeting. In behalf of the church at Springwater, WARREN J. HOBBS.

Conference.

A Quarterly Conference will be held at Weeks' Mills, Me., Thursday evening, Oct. 19th, and hold over Sunday. Preaching Brn., sisters and laymen are invited to come and work for holiness of heart, and the salvation of sinners. We hope the conference will be well represented, and decide where our coming quarterly conference shall be held.

S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Ct. Conference.

The next annual session of the A. C. Conference of Connecticut will be held in Bristol, Ct., commencing Oct. 18th, and holding over the following Sabbath. It is earnestly hoped that every church in the State will be represented at this conference by their delegates. There is important business to be attended to. Our beloved President, Bro. Dickinson, has been removed from us by the hand of death. His sweet counsel and advice we shall have no more. The chair is vacated. Some one must be chosen to fill it. Brethren, do attend to this call.

B. HITCHCOCK, Secretary.

Notice.

The Advent Quarterly Conference of Nova Scotia will be held at Bear Point, Shelburn Co., N. S., commencing Saturday, Oct. 14th. A general invitation is extended to all. Come, brethren, praying that the Lord may direct us in all our work, and make the conference a blessing to his cause.

WM. HALLIAY.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference, for this year, will be held at Parkersburg, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing October 26th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Lord's day. All are cordially invited. Eld. Ramsey will be at the meeting, and many others. Let the churches and delegates, and all ministers who can attend, be at this meeting. ALONZO RAYMOND.

Notice.

All letters for A. E. Smith, or "Star of Hope Mission," should be directed to Box 75, Station A., New York City. All who have written the past year, and received no answer, are requested to write again immediately, and direct as above, saying when their letters were sent, from what post-office, and, if any money was sent, how much.

Notice.

Eld. A. G. Newell will fill my appointment in Steuben county, N. Y., Oct. 28th and 29th. At Wallace, on the 28th, fellowship meeting at 2 P. M.; and 29th at 10½ A. M. At Avoca at 2½ P. M., same day. Quarterly meeting at Wallace Nov. 25th and 26th. C. F. SWEET.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting at Hollis Centre, Me., commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 18th, to continue over Sunday. Brn. Jesse Gay and — Hill are expected to preach the word. We hope all will come that can.

S. G. RUMERY.

Notice.

The A. C. Conference, for the State of Ohio, will hold its annual meeting in Nevada, Wyandot Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and continuing over the following Sunday. Eld. H. G. McCulloch and other preaching brethren from abroad are expected, together with those who belong to the conference. Let every church in the State be represented by delegates, and come prepared to build up and not to pull down. The church in Nevada send greeting to all.

W. F. JEFFERSON, Secretary.

Notice.

The Iowa Mission Tent will be pitched at Belle Plain, Tama Co., Iowa, to commence Oct. 11th, and continue over Lord's day.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Notice.

I expect, the Lord willing, to begin a series of meetings Oct. 18th, in Oshawa, Ontario, to continue over two Sundays. WM. A. FERN.

Dedication.

The dedication of the Union Chapel, at South Foster, R. I., will take place Sunday, Oct. 15th, at twelve o'clock. H. L. Hastings is expected to be present and preach the word. Elders Durfee, Louber, and others, will be present and assist.

S. L. ROUND.

Notice.

There will be a protracted meeting in Vienna Village, Maine, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 19th, to continue over Sunday, and longer if thought best. This is a new field for our blessed hope. Brn. and Srs., come and help in the name of the Lord. Provision will be made for all who come. In behalf of the friends.

H. B. SEVEY.
WM. DOUGHTY.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Society of Suncook, N. H., have hired the Odd Fellow's Hall to hold meetings in on the Sabbath, and if any of God's servants feel like coming to preach the word, the door is open to such. Please give notice of your appointments, if convenient, in the "Crisis."

THOMAS B. DUSTON.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books, tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

NEW TRACTS.

WHO ARE SADDUCEES? OR, TRUTH VINDICATED. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By GEO. THOMSON.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A COLPORTEUR'S NOTES, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor; a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. AG'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. LIFE AND DEATH THEOLOGY; or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. IMMATERIALISM; or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. DEATH AND THE DEAD, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. THE COMING JUDGMENT: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

JESUS OUR GUIDE.

LOUISA A. DEWEY.

Lonely pilgrim, worn and weary,
Pressed with trials day by day;
Does the path seem rough and dreary,
As you toil along the way?
List! I hear a sweet voice saying,
If you'll trust me for your guide,
I will help you bear your burdens,
If you will in me confide.

Come ye weary, heavy laden,
Jesus says I'll give you rest;
All ye suffering ones of sorrow,
Come and lean upon my breast.
Far beyond the surging billow,
Far beyond this rolling tide,
I will guide thy frail bark over
Safely on the other side.

Let not earthly toys allure you,
Do not slumber by the way;
Linger not, nor look behind you,
O be faithful, watch and pray.
Little flock, O be not fearful,
Soon your conflicts will be o'er;
Then you'll reign with me forever,
Over on the shining shore.

Rose Vale, Kansas.

HERESY.

O. R. FASSETT.

Heresy is terribly odious in the estimation of some men. Orthodoxy may be esteemed heterodoxy by those who would be the most orthodox people in the world. The orthodoxy of one generation or age may be regarded heterodoxy in another, and the children "build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous, and say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets." Whereas they witness against themselves, "that they are the children of them which killed the prophets," in that they despise and reject the doctrines advocated by those prophets and righteous men, and contemptuously treat or persecute those maintaining them in their own generation.

I know churches claiming to believe in the scriptural doctrine of the Bible, yet are so ignorant of what the Bible teaches, that they reject the very doctrines they read in their churches every Sabbath day. And I know persons, who boast in the names of Luther, Wesley, Calvin, and others of past generations, and as being the followers of them as they were of Christ in doctrine, and yet scout contemptuously at the very doctrines taught by these men, which are essential and vital truths, and treat with a lack of christian charity and even persecution the faithful christian men who maintain these same truths, at the hazard of their reputation and all they hold dear in life.

Paul, in his day, was arrested and brought before the Jewish council, and condemned for heresy, and was miraculously delivered from being "torn in pieces" by contending factions, on the interposition of a third, and almost disinterested party. The inveterate hate, however, of the Jews against him, was exhibited in their pursuing him to Cesarea, a distance of about seventy miles from Jerusalem, and in employing an artful and eloquent lawyer as counsel against him. In the speech of lawyer Tertullus, before the governor Felix, recorded in Acts 24th chapter, we have the characteristics of these venal pleaders of the law, whose effort is to make "the worse appear the better cause."

Dr. Doddridge says: "Almost every word of this oration is false, both in his accusation against Paul, and in his encomiums of the governor." Tertullus declares Paul to have been "found a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes," etc., while he endeavors to ingratiate himself into the favor of the governor by addressing him with the title, "Most noble Felix," and flattering him that it was a high honor to have the clemency of a hearing before his dignity; and by puffing up his pride of heart, by asserting that under his admirable administration the province of Judea enjoyed "great quietness," and also that by him "very worthy deeds had been done unto that nation." All history shows, however, that Felix was a man of disreputable character, and an oppressive tyrant. Josephus says of him: "The Jews accused him before Nero of insufferable oppression." And as to Paul, the charge was untrue; and the effort of Tertullus was to turn the case against him by a false issue from the real facts. At the end of the speech, the Jews in attendance, who were "Ananias the high priest, with the elders," confirmed it by "saying these things were so." Thus these sainted Jewish authorities were ready to swear to falsehood, in order to condemn Paul as a heretic. Whitefield has said, "There never was a persecution but was headed by a chief priest."

A Sabbath school teacher recently instructed the young ladies in her class, in a Protestant Sabbath school, that "saints were those who having died had gone to heaven." These men, "the high priest and elders," though they were not "saints" on earth, are now such "in heaven," according to this signification of the word; since they have died and passed through "the gate" as popularly sung: "Death is the gate to endless joys."

Paul follows this plea of lawyer Tertullus with a truthful and honest statement of facts in his own defence, and brings to his notice the true issue of the case before him in this masterly manner: "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call HERESY, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." And in Paul's final appeal he thus addresses the governor before his accusers: "The Jews from Asia found me neither with multitudes nor with tumult. Who ought to have been here before thee, and object, if they had aught against me. Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil doing in me, while I stood before the council, except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, touching the resurrection of the dead, I am called in question by you this day." This speech, confounding his accusers before him, and convincing to the governor of the innocence of Paul against the accusations brought against him, gave Felix a "more perfect knowledge of" the real case on trial, and that it was in a mere spirit of persecution these men hunted the apostle for what they deemed some "heresy"; therefore he dismissed the case for the time being for a future hearing; and also for another reason; he wanted to loose Paul and give him his liberty, and "hoped that money would be given him by Paul" for this purpose. But this not forthcoming, "Felix willing to show the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound." And Paul remained in bonds as a heretic, until he was compelled to appeal to Cæsar at Rome. Reaching that city, he declared to his countrymen, for whom he sent to see them, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." Acts 28.

From Paul's own defence, and this history, we learn the fact that he was condemned as a heretic by his own nation for preaching and defending the doctrine of "the resurrection of the dead," a doctrine held sacred by the Jewish Fathers, and the twelve tribes of Israel (Acts 26: 6–8.) This is the repeated history of our fallen race in every successive generation, and will be to its end. During "the dark ages," "the saints of the Most High," those "of whom the world was not worthy," were tortured, imprisoned, thrown to wild and ravenous beasts to be torn, mangled, and killed by them, and were by other means tormented and slaughtered because they were considered and condemned as "heretics" by a church calling herself "The holy Catholic church!"

But why was Paul regarded a heretic, and his doctrine heresy, while preaching and maintaining the doctrine of "the resurrection of the dead," which was "the hope of Israel?"

1. It was because he, together with the apostles, preached the resurrection of the dead through Jesus Christ of Nazareth, as the Messiah, whom that nation, through its authorities, had despised, rejected, denied, and caused to be crucified as an imposter. Hence it is written in the Acts of the Apostles, by the Evangelist Luke, that they were "grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead." Acts 4: 2. The Jews, with the exception of the Sadducees, looked for a resurrection of the dead through the promised Messiah; but they could not be persuaded that this Jesus of Nazareth was that Messiah; and to have men preach that he, whom they had rejected, despised, and caused to be crucified as a malefactor, was the long predicted and looked for coming one; and to preach also that by him the dead were to be raised, was too humiliating to their pride, and was a virtual condemnation of their wicked act in which they sought to justify their conduct that he was not the Christ of God. The manner in which Paul preached the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead through Christ, is seen by a reference to Acts 26: 22–23; 1 Cor. 15th chapter. The Sadducees were annoyed that the doctrine of the resurrection was preached at all. Hence both parties, the Pharisees and the Sadducees, conspired against the apostles to desist from their teaching of what they were pleased to regard as heresy, as they had already "filled Jerusalem with their doctrine."

2. Because Paul preached the resurrection of the dead by Jesus as the only hope of future life. "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, . . . then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. . . . If the dead rise not at all, . . . what advantageth it me? . . . Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die." "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." So he reasons with the Corinthians. 1 Cor. 15th chap. See also 1 Thess. 4.

The Sadducees did not believe in any future life whatever, either by a resurrection, or otherwise. Acts 23: 8. They maintained that Moses taught neither; and for this they contended with Christ (Matt. 21st chap.) that he (Moses) did not teach a future resurrection of the dead; and they only received the books of Moses as divinely inspired. This position would be seemingly strange, were it not for the fact that there are learned divines in our day, who contend that a future life is not revealed anywhere in the Old Testament. This arises from ignoring the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, taught both in the law and in the prophets; and in not being able to find the doctrine of "the immortality of the soul" and conscious rewards in death, which they advocate and preach for true doctrine. Owing to the fact that the sect of the Sadducees did not believe in the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, or in any future existence at all, they were embittered against Paul, who was forever contending for the resurrection of the dead throughout the whole world. The Pharisees were themselves divided into two sects or parties; those who believed in the resurrection from the dead as the only hope of future life, and who were what is called the "Aramaic Jews," or "Hebrews"; and those who had incorporated into their faith the Platonic doctrine of "the immortality of the soul"; i. e., "all souls are immortal" (Plato), and a conscious intermediate state of rewards in "hades," and who were called "Hellenistic Jews." These "Hellenists" among the Pharisees were opposed to St. Paul, because he preached the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead, pure and unadulterated, from the Platonic doctrine, he being "a Pharisee of the Pharisees," "a Hebrew of the Hebrews."

ORIGIN OF THE DOCTRINE OF THE HELLENISTIC JEWS.

"The doctrine of the immortality of the soul sprung from Greek philosophy. The ancient Hebrew writings contain no trace of it. Some Jews embraced the Hellenic culture, not to speak of the Jewish school of Egypt, in which attempts to amalgamate Hellenism and Judaism had been continued for nearly two hundred years. Josephus furnishes us with a Jew completely Hellenized." (M. Renan, p. 74.) "To the authority of Scripture the Pharisees added that of tradition; several speculative tenets from the philosophy or religion of the eastern nations; and as the Pharisees, by their austerity of manner, had drawn into their party the body of the Jewish people, the immortality of the soul became the prevailing sentiment of the synagogue, under the Asmonæan princes and pontiffs." (Gibbon, vol. 1, p. 530, 5.) "The Hebrews, Greeks and Romans located the souls of all the dead under the ground. Were it either desirable or necessary to demonstrate that the receptacle of human spirits were undestood by the ancient nations, Egyptians, Jews, and Pagans, of all superstitions, to be deeper than the ground, a very long induction of authorities could be introduced. We might fill a documentary evidence in controvertality clear and definite." (Alex. Campbell.)

THE DOCTRINE OF HELLENISTIC JEWS.

"The Pharisees believe that souls have an immortal vigor in them, and that under the earth there will be rewards and punishments, according as they have lived virtuously or viciously in this life." (Josephus.) "God hath determined the rising again of those very bodies, which you Greeks seeing to be dissolved, do not believe (their resurrection), for while you believe the soul is created, and yet is made immortal by God, according to the doctrine of Plato, and this in time, be not incredulous; but believe that God is able, when he hath raised to life that body which was made as a compound of the same elements to make it immortal." (Josephus).

The popularity of this sect may be inferred from this remark: "There was no lack of Hellenistic synagogues at Jerusalem, which at the seasons of the festivals would be crowded with foreign pilgrims, and become the scene of animated discussions." ("The Life, Times, and Travels of St. Paul, by Conybeare and Howson." Introduction by Bishop Simpson, chap. 2.) The doctrine of "the Sadducees," "Hellenistic Pharisees," and "the Hebrews," thus stands out before us in the days of Paul.

SADDUCEES.

"They denied the resurrection of the dead, . . . that angels nor spirits have a distinct existence separate from the corporeal vestment; the soul of man does not remain therefore after this life, but expires with the body; yea, they denied all future existence." (Enfield, p. 170.

HELLENIC PHARISEES.

"The seeds of the Cabalistic doctrine were first sown under the Ptolemies, when the Jews began to learn the Egyptian and oriental theology, and to incorporate their foreign dogmas with the ancient creed. And the Pharisees arose soon after the return from the Babylonian captivity, in consequence of the introduction of traditionary instructions, and allegorical interpretations. They maintain that "the soul of man is spiritual and immortal. In the invisible world beneath the earth, rewards and punishments will be dispensed to the virtuous and vicious. The resurrection of the body is to be expected. And they hold, too, the migration of souls from one body to another." (Enfield.)

THE ARAMAIC HEBREWS.

"Hebrew is used for an Aramaic Jew as opposed to a Grecian or an 'Hellenist.' The pious Hebrew was always in the attitude of the expectation of the coming One. It may be considered as certain that the family of St. Paul, though Hellenistic in speech (spoke Greek) were no Hellenizers in theology. The manner in which St. Paul speaks, implies the most uncontaminated hereditary Judaism. 'Are they Hebrews? so am I.'" (The Life, Times, and Travels of St. Paul, chap. 2.)

While, therefore, Paul declares himself to be "a Pharisee" before the Jewish council, where were the two contending sects, the Sadducees and the Pharisees, he only commits himself to the faith of those of the "uncontaminated Hebrews" thus: "Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee; of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." But who will, in the light of the history of his times and of his theology, affirm that he was an "Hellenistic Pharisee," or ever contended for the Platonic doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and rewards in death? I covet not the ignorance of those preachers or editors who will thus scandalize the name of that bold and fearless defender of the ancient and uncorrupted faith and "hope of Israel," for which he was "bound in chains." He stood condemned by both the Sadducees and the Hellenic Pharisees as a heretic, because he contended alone for "the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." While the faith of the one sect denied, and the faith of the other nullified that "blessed hope," he finally lost his life and died a triumphant martyr for the true and only hope of the gospel—"the resurrection of the dead." Take away from this apostle the resurrection of the dead, and you take away his only hope of future life, and he is ready to declare himself a Sadducee; for as to the doctrine of Plato, or "Hellenism," he had no faith whatever in it. "If the dead rise not, . . . and if Christ be not raised, . . . then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. If the dead rise not at all . . . what advantageth it me? Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die." Here is where we stand to-day.

In the Platonic doctrine of "the immortality of the soul," or of any future life independent of Christ and the resurrection, or rewards in an intermediate state, "under the ground," or above it, we have not the least faith. It is all a visionary fable to us; and then convince us that "the dead rise not," and we become Sadducees! Alas! how dark the prospect in this direction. "We are of all men most miserable," for we have had hope in Christ, and that he would "redeem Israel."

But why talk this:—"Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." Thanks be to God for the hope of the resurrection of the dead. Our Redeemer lives, and we shall live also; and "them also who sleep in Jesus."

TRUSTING IN CHRIST.

L. J. ADAMS.

I am trusting in Christ. I have found him in all-sufficient Savior. My sins which were many have been washed away in his blood. I am weak, but Christ is strong. With child-like faith and confidence I am leaning on him. My life is consecrated to his service. I am trusting in him for strength to do his will. I have grieved him so many times since I first loved him that I dare not trust in my own strength for a moment. So I ask him to help me day by day, hour by hour, and minute by minute, to live to his glory.

Remembering the many words that my lips have spoken, I am praying, "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer." The seeds of life or death are in our uttered thoughts. O that in mine henceforth may be the seeds of life, springing up and bearing fruit unto life eternal. It grieves me to think that I have ever brought reproach upon the cause so dear to me. I see perfection in Christ, and I long to be like him. It is the one great, the only aim of my life to do his will. I am glad that Jesus knows all about me, for his perfect knowledge of my imperfections makes him my perfect Savior.

I am trusting in him. "He knoweth the way that I take; when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold." I do not expect to overcome without a struggle; so I am not discouraged because I meet with trials. James says, "The trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire; wanting nothing. . . . . Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." Trusting in Christ, I shall overcome and live forever, when life has lost all its sorrow and suffering and disease, decay, and death have passed away. I love life. The present life though marked with sorrows and trials is sweet to me, for God's blessing rests like a halo of glory on my brow while I trust in Christ. I am very happy in the service of my master. Obedience to his requirements brings such sweet peace and happiness that the sorrows and trials of life seem very small. I fear not the record of the years that have rolled by, for Jesus stands between me and the past. I dread not the future, though I know that it may have more sorrow in store for me than my heart dreams of, for I am trusting in Christ. I know he will bring me safely through.

Perfect trust dispels doubts and fears, and brings perfect rest. "The name of the Lord is a strong tower; the righteous runneth into it and is safe." The storm may rage violently without, and threaten instant destruction; but as Noah in the ark was borne safely on the waters, which rolled over the ungodly, and became their winding sheet, so the Christian is borne safely above the storms of this life to the haven of eternal rest.

Reader, are you trusting in Christ? Is he your refuge and defence? God bless you, whoever you are, and if you have left the path of sin for the highway of holiness, help you to press your way onward and upward, stopping not to rest till your feet are safe within the pearly portals of the golden city. If you are a wanderer from Christ, remember that his heart yearns for you; that he longs for your restoration to his favor. His love for you has remained unchanged during the years of your separation from him. All the while he has longed to fold you in his arms again. Hear him: "I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, the transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins; return unto me; for I have redeemed thee." He is willing to trust you again. Are you afraid to trust him? Let him give you again the peace of other days.

Sinner, he calls for you too. Listen to him. "Incline your ear and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live." Come and wash in the blood which cleanses from sin. You may be better than many professors of religion (not possessors); but moral goodness, although an essential element of Christianity, is not God's standard for justification or condemnation. Christ alone can save. Trust in him.

I AM THE LORD'S.

I am the Lord's!
My gladsome heart those words repeat,
And every time they seem more sweet,
For I am now at Jesus' feet.
I am the Lord's.

I am the Lord's!
Too long did I from Jesus stray;
He called me, but I turned away.
Now I am in the narrow way—
I am the Lord's.

I am the Lord's!
Yes, all thine own, thanks be to thee;
It was the Lamb of Calvary
That broke my chain and set me free.
I am the Lord's.

I am the Lord's!
Forever thine; oh, blessed thought!
By Jesus' blood my soul was bought;
He found me whom he long had sought.
I am the Lord's.

I am the Lord's!
This is the burden of my song,
As hour by hour glides along;
And this would grace an angel's tongue—
I am the Lord's.

THE BROAD WAY TO DESTRUCTION.

L. F. LILLIE.

The subject about which I purpose to speak is one of importance, and is applicable in a degree to the whole world, but more especially to professed christians. I refer to the circus. There are those who profess to be disciples of Christ, who attend these wicked associations. How would they feel if Jesus should come and find them at such a place? Would be be pleased? I think not. The apostle tells us that we must abstain from evil communications, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes. Never was there a solemn prayer offered to God in the circus company. Never was there a true christian who belonged to their band. And shall we, as christians, as often as they come into our villages, hasten to join them, and give them our money to further them on in their sin and wickedness? or shall we give our money for the benefit of the gospel, to those who are laboring hard in the vineyard, and trying to rescue poor souls from a lost and perishing condition? I think it would be far better to give to those poor laborers in Christ, who are trying to save some poor sinner from eternal destruction, than to give to those wicked and sinful institutions, to further them on in their wickedness, and sink them together with ourselves in perdition at last. The apostle says not only those who commit such things are worthy of death, but those that have pleasure in those that do them.

Says one, I went because my children wanted to go. Dear reader, do you think this is a good way to bring up your children? do you think it is a good example to set before the rising generation? going with them to such wicked places, where their minds will be filled with those things that will lead them into the broad road to destruction?

Dear readers, I advise you, as one who loves you, one who is journeying together with you to the judgment, one who expects soon to see Jesus; if you have done these things, ask the Lord to forgive you, and do them no more, but let your works be such that the world cannot speak evil of you.

LOVE.

A man who loved Christ and christians much, wrote: "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." This is a pleasant test of one's spiritual state; yet, as love is very sensitive, it sometimes endures anguish, as when one has to say to christian brethren,—"The more abundantly I love you, the less I am loved." There is no denying the painful fact that there is such an anomaly as this; several persons since Paul's day have found it out for themselves, and there are some men living who thoroughly understand Paul's feelings at the time he penned these words. To his manly heart they were deeply distressing. Loving christians covet christian love; they wish their brethren of the household of faith to be as ingenuous, unsuspecting, and warm-hearted as they know themselves to be; but when they meet with averted looks and a cold demeanor, where they had a right to expect a smile of love, clear and warm as a sunbeam a pang of disappointment chills the heart; a heavy burden falls upon it; the love that yearned for recognition is rejected; the price-less treasure is scorned.

Why do christian men use each other so shamefully, cruelly? It is keen, subtle, cowardly persecution; and it is absolutely unjustifiable. It can say nothing for itself; it can put in no plea that will bear a moment's examination; it is simply a gratuitous transgression of the first law of our Father's house. We think we could bear the black scowls of the inquisitor without flinching; but the sinister look of a brother christian—ugh!

But it is not the personal feeling that chiefly wounds the heart, when christian affection is not reciprocated; it is the feeling that the Christ-like spirit is not exhibited. No wise man wishes for a moment to judge his brother. The temptation to do so must be resisted; and yet, under the circumstances supposed, that temptation will insinuate itself like a subtle deleterious element, hurtful to the tempted and, perhaps, unjust to the man whose conduct has called it into being. "Is the man a christian at all?"—this is the form it takes—"is he not a mere professor of a faith he neither feels nor understands?" We feel that our beloved Lord is wounded in the house of his friends; but as it is not our province to judge before the time, we must crush the temptation, leaving the matter with the unerring Judge of all.

"Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God towards us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." These wonderful words of inspiration proclaim their own character, and distinctly express their own meaning. Effort of ours to call attention to their supreme beauty, their heart, force, and life, is not needed. Suffice it to say, they embody our noblest and purest conception of living christianity. To teach us to love one another as God has loved us is clearly the purpose of the gospel. John says we "ought" to do it. The obligation is most manifest; it is a holy duty from which the followers of Christ cannot be discharged, and a precious privilege for which they should fervently give thanks. It is the Lord's bond of union for his followers: "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you; continue ye in my love. . . . This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

Such is the spirit, meaning, purpose,—such is the very heart of Christ's religion. But we have improved upon it, and, as usual, with disastrous results. It would never do to make such an ethereal thing as love the bond of fellowship; we must have something more tangible upon which we can rely as a guarantee of unity and uniformity. We must get men to think alike in all religious matters. And so we compiled a series of theological propositions, which all "who would be saved" had to believe; which all religious teachers had to sign, to prevent the possibility of schism in the body; and then we legalized the document as the book of the church, that the civil magistrate might have power to punish any one who, notwithstanding all these safeguards, might be so foolish as to think for himself on a subject in which his eternal interests were involved. Well, what was the result of our prudent forethought? Read the story of the ages when Rome was in her prime, and you will find it; read the history of our own dear England before our countrymen understood the words liberty of conscience, and you will find it; nay, read events transpiring around you to-day, when every man of average intelligence knows that uniformity of thought is the wildest dream that ever crossed the fancy of fanaticism, and you will find it. For though we have got rid of inquisitions and Smithfields, and all the outrageous crimes against heaven and earth which these words recall, we inherit the spirit of persecution, which was fostered by the mad attempt to compel men to think alike, which merely means, and can only mean, not to think at all. Hence, even to-day, men laying claim to a high degree of sanctity avoid the company of others whom they nevertheless know to be christians, simply because they differ in opinion as to the interpretation of a few verses of Scripture. With what words of moral loathing can we describe such an outrage upon the gentle loving spirit of the gospel? No, we shall not describe it; but this is what we have secured by our improved plan of christian fellowship. We would not have LOVE, and so she has left us and winged her way back to her home,—the heart of Christ. We wonder if He will take her with him when he returns; for assuredly we do not deserve ever to see her sweet face again.—Rainbow.

OUR PRAYER MEETING.

"Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

1. I purpose to be there regularly and punctually. "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together."

2. I will endeavor to draw others to the meeting. "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good."

3. Before entering the place of prayer, I will ask the Savior's presence. "We would see Jesus."

4. I will not, unless it is necessary, occupy a back seat. "How pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

5. I will not so seat myself as to hinder others from occupying the same pew with me. "Be courteous."

6. I will refrain from fault-finding, and will not indulge a criticising spirit. "Be ye kindly affectioned one to another."

7. I will not expressly dissent from any one who has spoken, and will avoid giving the impression of variance of feeling. "That they may be made perfect in one."

8. So far as is consistent, I will assist actively in the exercises, by testifying to the love of Christ, by exhortation, by a passage of Scripture, a hymn, a stanza, or otherwise. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs."

9. I will not decline to lead in prayer, and, in offering prayer, will begin with the subject in hand, and in aid of what has just been said. "Ye also helping together by prayer for us."

10. If I offer the first prayer, it shall be chiefly an invocation, asking the Savior's special presence and aid. "For without me ye can do nothing."

11. My prayers and remarks shall not be long. "For God is in heaven, and thou upon earth, therefore let thy words be few."

12. I will not seem to harangue or teach in prayer, as though I were thinking of man more than God. "We speak before God in Christ."

13. I will not offer prayer simply to fill a vacancy, but will rather offer prayer during pauses in the meeting. "That thy benefit should not be as it were of necessity, but willingly."

14. I will not heedlessly expose any want of faith and discouragement. "Who is fearful and faint-hearted, let him return."

15. I will cultivate enlargement of faith and desires. "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace."

16. On leaving the place, I will endeavor to maintain a devout frame of mind. "Continue in prayer."

17. I will also endeavor to use all means suited to secure the blessings for which I have prayed. "Faith, without works, is dead."—Advocate of Christian Holiness.

Gems.

— The love of Christ is the only atmosphere in which a child of God can live and thrive.

— Let our path to the fountain be worn with daily journeys; let our key to the treasury of grace be bright with constant use.

It should be ours the oil and wine to pour
Into the bleeding wounds of stricken ones;
To take the outcast and the sick and sore,
And bear them where a stream of blessing runs;
Instead we look about—the way is wide,
And so we pass upon the other side.

— Man, without a knowledge of the holy Scriptures, is like a soldier without weapons, a horse without a bridle, a ship without a rudder, a writer without a pen.

— The sinner and the Savior are made for one another.

— My Redeemer, when he bought me, bought my time and talents, and requires all to be used to his glory.

— We only really live when we can truthfully say, "To me to live is Christ."

Make haste, O man, to do
Whatever must be done;
Thou hast no time to lose in sloth,
Thy day will soon be gone.

— Self-sacrifice is the ground of church harmony.

— We are married to Christ; and what God hath joined together can in no wise be cut asunder.

— How livest thou in thy heart, in thy home, in thy private ways, is God's question to all.

— Whatever Midas touched turned into gold. In these days, touch a man with gold, and he'll turn into anything.

Man can but work; God can create;
But they who work and watch and wait,
Have their reward, though it come late.

— Deep is the joy of social silence, when we speak not with the loved, but feel their presence.

— The existence of moral evil is a far profounder mystery than the awful punishment of it.

— The greatest sinner, who trusts only in Christ's blood, will assuredly be saved. The best man in the world, who trusts in his own goodness, will be lost.

CHRISTIANS AND CHRISTENDOM.

In the course of a lecture delivered last week by Dean Stanley, the lecturer remarked: "It is reported that John Wesley once in the crisis of the night found himself, as he thought, at the gates of hell. He knocked, and asked who were within. 'Are there any Protestants here?' he asked. 'Yes,' was the answer, 'a great many.' 'Any Roman Catholics?' 'Yes, a great many.' 'Any Church of England men?' 'Yes, a great many.' 'Any Presbyterians?' 'Yes, a great many.' 'Any Wesleyans?' 'Yes, a great many.' Disappointed and discouraged, especially at the last reply, he traced his steps upward, found himself at the gates of Paradise, and here he repeated the same questions. 'Any Wesleyans here?' 'No.' 'Any Presbyterians?' 'No.' 'Any Church of England men?' 'No.'

'Any Roman Catholics?' 'No.' 'Whom have you then here?' he asked in astonishment. 'We know nothing here,' was the reply, 'of any of the names you have mentioned. The only name of which we no anything here is Christian. We are all christians here, and of those we have a great multitude (which no man can number), of all nations, and kindreds, and peoples, and tongues.'

That is the truth which we shall have to learn hereafter about the name 'christian'; it may be as well for us to learn it here. It includes, and comprises, and overrides all the others by which men have been divided, because it is the name, derived from him to whom they all look, from whom they are all descended, in whom they all live. 'Christianity' is a nobler name than any particular form of Christians. 'Christendom' is a more magnificent name than any particular creed or section of 'Christians,' because 'Christian' is a greater name than any particular opinion or custom, and because Christ is a greater name than any other person, or teacher, or doctrine, or custom, which has appeared on earth."

THE sooner the preacher forgets all that is special in his calling, and peculiar to the pulpit, and speaks like a living man to living men on the mightiest themes, training voice and manner so as to speak in the most persuasive, forcible and impressive way, the sooner will he win the attention and command the respect of intelligent minds, and the sooner will the pulpit overtop the world.

A WISE ANSWER.

"A little black girl, eight years old, was setting the table, when a boy who was in the room said to her,—

'Mollie, do you pray?' The suddenness of the question confused her a little; but she answered,—

'Yes, sir: every night.'

'Do you think God hears you?' the boy asked. And she answered promptly,—

'Yes: I know he does.'

'But do you think,' said he, trying to puzzle her, 'that he hears your prayer as he does those of white children?'

For full three minutes, the child kept on with her work without speaking; then she slowly said,—

'Master George, I pray into God's ears, and not his eyes. My voice is just like any other little girl's; and, if I say what I ought to say, God doesn't stop to think anything about my skin.'

George did not question her any further. The answer he felt to be a wiser one than he could have given."

KEEP AWAY FROM THE WHEELS.

Little Charles Williams lived near a manufactory, and he was very fond of going among the workmen and the young people that were at work. The foreman would say to him, "Keep away from the wheels, Charlie."

Charlie did not mind, and would sometimes say, "I can take care of myself." Often he went so near that the wind of the wheels would almost suck him in; and two or three times he grew so dizzy that he scarcely knew which way to go.

At length, one day he staggered while amid the wheels, and fell the wrong way, and the band caught his little coat, and drew him in and he was dreadfully mangled.

So it is, boys, when you go in the way of temptation. You may think you can take care of yourselves, and keep clear of the wheels; but oh! you may find yourselves dreadfully mistaken. Before you are aware of it, the band may catch you. Keep away from the wheels, and daily pray, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil."

IN SEARCH OF A BOY.

A gentleman wanted a trusty boy. His friend came to his office one day saying, "I've got a boy for you; smart, active, intelligent; just the boy that will please you."

"Who is he?" said the gentleman. The friend told his name. Just at that minute the boy passed the window, and was pointed out to him.

"Don't want him," said the gentleman; "he has a bad mark; I met him the other day with a cigar in his mouth. I do not want a smoker."

While they were talking another gentleman entered the office. "I understand you want a good, trusty boy, Mr. ——!"

"Yes, sir; have you got one for me?"

"I think I have," he replied.

"Well, sir," said the gentleman, "what do you know of him?"

"I don't know much," said the other; "he is in my Sunday-school, always has his lessons, and never smokes."

"He is the boy for me. The boy that gets his Sunday-school lesson, and never smokes, can be trusted."

A LESSON FOR BOYS.

One day, a fine Newfoundland dog and a mastiff had a sharp discussion over a bone or some other trifling matter, and warred away as angrily as two boys. They were fighting on a bridge; and being blind with rage, as is often the case, the first thing they knew, over they went into the water.

The banks were so high, that they were forced to swim some distance before they came to a landing-place. It was very easy for the Newfoundlander; he was as much at home in the water as a seal. But not so poor Bruce, he struggled and tried his best to swim, but made little headway.

Old Bravo (the Newfoundlander) had reached the land, and then turned to look at his old enemy. He saw plainly that his strength was fast failing, and that he was likely to drown. So what should that noble fellow do but plunge in, seize him gently by the collar, and, keeping his nose above water, tow him safely into port. It was funny to see these dogs look at each other as soon as they shook their wet coats. Their glance said as plainly as words, "We'll never quarrel any more!"—Presbyterian.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

DIVISION OF TIME, SLEEP, Etc.

Probably no better division of time has ever been made than that into three equal periods of eight hours each; eight hours being given to business, eight to eating and amusements, and the remaining eight to sleep. The celebrated Alfred divided his time in this way.

I have long thought that the native American requires more sleep than the average European. For myself, I find that nine or ten hours of sleep in a single night will cure me of all the trifling maladies with which, from time to time, I may be afflicted. Some extraordinary advice has been given, by certain distinguished persons, with reference to the time devoted to sleep; but each writer falls into the common blunder of applying a rule to all, which he finds good in his own case. Bishop Taylor advises three hours. Wesley suggests six as the least time that will answer. He declares that during his life he never knew any one to retain vigorous health, even for a year, with a less quantity of sleep than six hours, and he thought that women required more than men. Willich advises students to go to bed at eight o'clock and rise at three or four in the morning. Not bad on some accounts, but liable to injure the eyes.

Excess of sleep is very bad in its influence, producing dullness of mind and body, corpulency, disposition to apoplexy; hence, Galen calls sleep the brother of death, and says nothing is more pernicious when carried to excess. Thin Yankees should go to bed at nine o'clock, and rise between five and six. I do not mean to say that circumstances may never justify their sitting up till midnight, or later, but I am simply interpreting the voice of physiology. If the average American, with his narrow chest and small vitality, would retire at nine o'clock, he would live some years longer, and each year would afford him more happiness, and ability to work.

But Yankee women most need a change to early hours. Their crazy nerves, neuralgia, and other evidences of premature decay, would be at once checked, and they would become younger and fairer.—From Talks about People's Stomachs, by Dr. Dio Lewis.

WARM BATHING.—The warm bath is a grand remedy, and will often prevent the most virulent diseases. A person who may be in fear of having received infection of any kind, should speedily plunge into a warm bath, suffer perspiration to ensue, and then rub dry, dress securely to guard against taking cold. If the system has imbibed any infectious matter, it will certainly be removed by this process if it be resorted to before the infection has time to spread over the system; and even if some time has elapsed, the drenching perspiration that may be induced in a hot bath, will be pretty sure to remove it.—Family Herald.

PERSPIRATION.—Perspiration contains at least one per cent of solid matter compounded of substances noxious to life. The quantity perspired daily by an average-sized adult, ranges from twenty-five to thirty-five ounces. If exercise be neglected, the poisonous matter can only be partly carried away from the blood by the insensible perspiration, through the medium of the lungs, liver, kidneys, and bowels, which, it is hardly necessary to observe, imposes additional labor upon these organs, and eventually occasions their disease.

POISON REMEDY.—We find the following in an exchange:—"A standing antidote for poison by dew, poison oak, ivy, etc., is to take a handful of quick lime, dissolve in water, let it stand half an hour, then paint the poisoned parts with it. Three or four applications will never fail to cure the most aggravated cases. Poison from bees, hornets, spider bites, etc., is instantly arrested by the application of equal parts of common salt and bicarbonate of soda, well rubbed in on the place bitten or stung."

THE COMING BRIDEGROOM.

E. E. ALEXANDER.

"Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him."

What means this sound of many voices,
Why these signs on earth and sky?
The wicked mourn, the saint rejoices,
For the Bridegroom draweth nigh.
The day of grace will soon be o'er,
And mercy's call be heard no more.

For lo! we hear the trumpet sounding,
And the dead in Christ arise,
With shouts of joy, their Lord surrounding,
As he descendeth from the skies.
There can no bliss with this compare,
For they the victor's crown shall wear.

Sinner, rouse thee from thy slumbering,
Strive eternal life to win;
For God each fleeting day is numbering,
Soon his judgments will begin.
Oh! fly to Jesus while you may,
And share the triumphs of that day.

Christian, is your lamp now burning
With a clear and steady flame?
Waiting for your Lord's returning,
Bearing all things for his name?
Soon the reaping time will come,
And angels shout the harvest home.

God grant that when the Master calleth,
We may listen and obey;
Then whatever ills befalleth,
He'll keep us safe from day to day.
And when we reach the better shore,
We'll chant God's praise forevermore.

HERESY.—Part II.

O. R. FASSETT.

Why is it that Adventists are looked upon as "heretics," and their doctrine regarded as "heretical," while they believe in and contend for "the resurrection of the dead"; a doctrine which has constituted "the blessed hope" of the church of God in all ages?

1st. It is because they maintain the actual resurrection of the dead, at the personal appearing of the Lord from heaven, as did Paul: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4th chap; 1 Cor. 15th chap. But say "the evangelical" and "orthodox churches," so denominated, "We belive in the coming of the Lord, and in the resurrection." Do! And who would know it from the character of the preaching, or the profession of faith made public? Let us illustrate by facts, which are common the world over, as to how these doctrines are held by these churches at large.

An Advent minister in this state (Minnesota) on going to our annual campmeeting, called on a brother, a member of another denomination, and requested him to accompany him to that meeting. He consented to do so. During this brother's absence, a clergyman of the same denomination called, and learning that this brother had gone to attend an Advent campmeeting, expressed much surprise. To whom the wife of the absent brother remarked, to relieve his fears and apprehensions that he would get evil,—"The Adventists are a christian people, and they believe in the coming of our Lord, and in the resurrection of the dead." "Oh," said he, "and we believe it too." "Yes," replied the ready and intelligent wife, "but you don't preach it too." Why is not this faith preached "too," if it is believed in sincerity? Why is it not found in the exhortations of God's professed people, and expressed in their prayers also, if believed? We are afraid that the doctrine of the Lord's coming to raise the dead, finds but little faith and but little love in the hearts of the professed Christian church throughout the world. And how can the doctrine be reconciled with this leading article of faith?

"Art. 1. There is but one living and true God, everlasting, without body or parts, of infinite power, wisdom, and goodness; the maker and preserver of all things visible and invisible, and in unity of this godhead, there are three persons, of one substance, power, and eternity; the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost."—Methodist.

"There is but one living and true God, who is infinite in being and perfection, a most pure spirit, invisible, without body, parts, or passions. In unity of the Godhead, there are three persons of one substance, power, and eternity; God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost." (Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Baptists.)

With the doctrine of the "trinity," as thus expressed, how "a most pure spirit, without body or parts," can be three persons of one substance, would take a Philadelphia lawyer, equalling "lawyer Tertullus" in subtlety of reasoning, to explain, and then leave the subject muddled! And how such "a pure spirit, invisible, without body or parts," can ever be seen coming in the clouds of heaven" (Matt. 24, Mark 13, Luke 21, Acts 1, Rev. 1), we should like these D.D.'s to explain. Either the "creed" or the Bible doctrine is to be given up. Which shall it be? Or shall the "creed" be used to bring scriptural doctrine, and dismemembered the divine promise? I say, no one believing in the above doctrine of the "trinity," and of the "Godhead," as expressed in that article of faith," can ever consistently believe in, preach, or maintain the personal coming of the Lord Jesus and the resurrection. Will some of the Doctors tell us how they can do it? I put them to the trial to do so. Yes, verily, they are challenged to the effort. Where is the Goliah of the churches that will step forth and defend his "creed," as in harmony with the scriptural doctrine of the coming of the Lord, and the resurrection of the dead?

But, say these men when crowded to meet this question, "The Lord's coming is to be spiritual." "It takes place at death." And how often is our Savior's language, "In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh," quoted as applicable to the occurrence of death; and invariably used on funeral occasions to give the impression that the Lord comes at death; and thus "the word of God" is "made void by their tradition"!

After addressing a christian audience, and after having quoted largely from the Bible in proof of the personal coming of our divine Lord from heaven, a minister rose in the congregation of the Methodist persuasion, and endeavored to divert the minds of the congregation from the real subject of contemplation with the following remark: "I have been looking for the Lord these many years. I have looked for him every morning when I have arisen from my bed, and all through the hours of the day I look for him. I am still looking for him, and when I die I expect he will come to me."

It is well known that this is a general view taken of this subject. It is no slander to say that this is one interpretation put upon the texts announcing "the glorious appearing of the Son of man"; and another is, that Christ is to come in a spiritual revelation, in a world-wide revival, etc. Now I do solemnly protest, as a minister of the gospel, called with my brethren to the defense of the same, against this interpretation of Christ's promise of return, and against such a terrible perversion of the word of God. In the name of Jesus, our common Lord and Master, and in the name of truth, and righteousness, and honesty, I protest now and forever. Brethren in the ministry, why peril your own souls and those of your flocks, and put a stumbling block in the way of sinners, by this method of explaining away the clearest portions of the word of God, and of that promise which above all others stands out as the crowning glory of all promise to the church, and as a warning to unconverted men? I appeal, who are the "heretics" in this case? Who has "departed from the faith"? Why should we be denounced as heretical in doctrine, when we defend the true Bible testimony, and follow the faith of the church in her purest ages?

But "we believe in the resurrection of the dead," say these christian friends. Please will you define what you mean by resurrection; and when does it occur? They do not like to be crowded to a definite answer, and will evade a definite reply if possible. Finally, if pressed, we get this exposition of the scriptural doctrine: "The resurrection is a spiritual elimination at death. . . . . . It is like the seed which is sown and springs up into a new harvest of grain; it is more of a growth than of a resurrection,—the growth of the spirit-man in its exit out of the cloggy tabernacle into a new body prepared for it. . . . . There is no death; what seemeth so is transition. . . . . Death is the birth of the soul into a new life and new world." And these, with a thousand other as silly and foolish explanations, are the evasive answers obtained from every quarter; but to those of us who have sounded these men, we know that they are answers which are proof that the doctrine of the resurrection, as taught in the Bible, is not only disbelieved, but ignored and ridiculed by them; and they are ready, finally, to boldly say, "As to the resurrection of the body, we do not believe in the doctrine, and we do not see how any man can believe in it."

So this is the faith in the resurrection of the dead held by thousands in the christian churches! Who will deny it? These views are not only utterly subversive of the doctrine as taught in the Scriptures, but is destructive of the meaning of the word "resurrection" (anastasis—Greek); the signification of which is "standing up," "a rising up," a resurrection of that which is fallen down.

According to the view entertained by those mentioned above, the resurrection takes place at the period of death, or the instant a man dies; as though a man could fall and rise simultaneously, at one and the same time; and the further absurdity of making that to be a resurrection (anastasis) which has never fallen in death. The spirit, or soul, which makes its exit at the death of the body, according to the above view, does not die, nor fall in death. How can that be "a resurrection of the dead" which has never fallen in death, but merely makes its exit? If the spirit, or soul, does not fall in death, "the resurrection of the dead" must refer to that which does so fall, and this can refer only to the defunct body. The escape or departure of the spirit can in no sense be called anastasis, or resurrection. Suppose a bird in a cage, by the fall of the cage, or some other accident, should escape from the cage at the time of its destruction; would the escape of the bird which flies off unhurt, and is by the accident to the cage set at liberty, the resurrection of the bird? Who will maintain the absurdity who has the least understanding of the word anastasis? To be the resurrection of the bird, it must be itself killed, and raised to life again by miraculous power.

The idea that the spirit enters into another "house," or body, at death, as it leaves the present body, and that this constitutes the resurrection, is detrimental to the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead body; for of what use is the resurrection of the dead body, if the spirit enters into its new house at death? or, must the individual go through the process of death to get rid of the body, or "house," in order to be clothed upon anew with his old body in the resurrection? or, will the spirit dwell in two "houses" having need of both? Let some one skilled in the subtilty of scriptural interpretations in support of popular theology come forward, and explain this entire subject to the satisfaction of the inquiring. If this cannot be harmonized and explained with the doctrine of a real resurrection of the body that dies, then let them abandon the fable, or give proof that their theology is more reliable than that of the Bible. For to maintain that the Bible teaches both the entrance of the spirit into a new house at death, and into the old house again in the resurrection, is to maintain a doctrinal monstrosity, hideous to every reflecting mind.

Now because Adventists will not be guilty of teaching such gross absurdities,—that a dead man is risen from the dead, and is alive; that we can be dead and alive at one and the same time; that a person may die and rise from the dead simultaneously at the same moment; and that to rise from the dead is for the spirit to enter into a new body when the old body dies, and yet look for the resurrection of the old body in which the spirit is to be finally vested forever, being clothed upon with two houses; they are called heretics; while those maintaining these manifest inconsistencies and incongruities are orthodox and evangelical! But who are the truly orthodox and evangelical? We are willing to leave it for men possessing common sense and reflection, divested of bigotry and tradition, or the Bible, to decide. Our own judgments and consciences cast a verdict satisfactory to our minds and hearts, which we challenge the other class of interpreters to give witness that they possess.

PRECIOUS JESUS.

I. W. THOMAS.

"Unto you which believe, he is precious."—1 Pet. 2:7.

"I need thee, precious Jesus,
For I am very poor;
A pilgrim and a stranger,
I have no earthly store.
I need thy cheering presence,
To tread the thorny way,
To guide my erring footsteps,
And be my strength and stay."

Precious Jesus. Who is like him? The more we get acquainted with him, the more we see to admire and love. How different this from many we see in this world. There are persons that we do not care to be intimate with, they are so cross, and proud, and stingy, and mean. But there is nothing repulsive about Jesus. He is all loveliness. How sweet the hours spent in communion with him. How delightful to sit before his cross, and drink the refreshing draughts that flow from his wounded side.

"Sweet the moments, rich in blessing,
Which before the cross I spend;
Life and health and peace possessing,
From the sinner's dying friend.
Here I sit, forever viewing
Mercy streaming in his blood;
Precious drops, my soul bedewing,
Claim and make my peace with God.
May I still enjoy this feeling,
In all needs to Jesus go;
Prove each day his blood more healing,
And himself more deeply know."

Precious Jesus. Mortal tongue is too feeble to describe the excellence of thy character, the riches of thy grace. How deep and pure and lasting is thy love. Thou blessed, holy, changeless one, may I transcribe the excellence of thy life into my own, until I am completely transformed into thine image. "Unto you which believe he is precious." Precious in life, precious in death, precious under all circumstances. In him there is every thing we need to make us happy. How can we ever murmur or be discontented with Jesus for our portion? O shame on us that we think so little of Jesus. He is more valuable than all the treasures of earth's richest mines. How poor is the richest king without Jesus, but how rich is the proudest beggar with Jesus. "All things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." This is enough.

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were an offering far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my life, my time, my all."

Reader, are you unhappy? Believe in Jesus.

"Think what Spirit dwells within thee,
Think what Father's smiles are thine;
Think that Jesus died to win thee;
Child of heaven, canst thou repine?"

ONE RESULT OF LOVE.

G. T. CLIBBY.

Love should induce us to watch over one another. "Am I my brother's keeper?" was an inquiry suitable enough in the lips of a murderer, but most unsuitable and inconsistent from a Christian. We are brought into fellowship for the very purpose of being keepers of each other. We are to watch over our brethren, and admonish and reprove them as circumstances may require. I do not mean that members should pry into each other's secrets, or be busybodies in other men's matters; for that is forbidden by God, and abominable in the sight of man. 1 Thess. 3: 11; 1 Pet. 4: 15. Much less are they to assume authority over each other, and act the part of proud and tyrannical inquisitors. But still we are to "exhort one another daily, . . . lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin." Heb. 3: 13. We are not to suffer sin to be committed, or duty to be omitted by a brother, without affectionately admonishing him. What can be more incumbent, more obligatory, than this? Can we indeed love any one, and at the same time see him do that which we know will injure him, without entreating him to desist? "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness." Gal. 6: 1. Let us then take heed against that Cain-like spirit, which is so prevalent among us, and which leads many to act as if their fellow members were no more to them than the stranger at the ends of the earth.

Striking are the words of God to the Jews: "Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart; thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbor, and not suffer sin upon him." Lev. 19: 17. Not to rebuke him, then, when he sins, is instead of loving him to hate him. This neglect is what the apostle means of being partakers of other men's sins. 1 Tim. 5: 22. The admonition to "warn them that are unruly" (Thess. 5: 14), was delivered not to ministers only, but to all christians. I know no duty more neglected than this. Many a backslider would have been prevented from going far astray, if in the very first stages of his declension some brother, who had observed his critical state, had faithfully and affectionately warned and admonished him. What shame, and anguish, and disgrace, would the offender himself have been spared, and what dishonor and scandal would have been averted from the church by this one act of faithful love. I am aware it is a difficult and self-denying duty; but that cannot excuse its neglect. Love will enable us to perform it, and the neglect of it violates the law of Christ.

Lee, N. H.

HOLINESS.

F. M. CHAMBERLAIN.

"How long halt ye between two opinions?"—1 Kings 18: 21.

What is the question? It is this: "Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?" The day of decision is drawing near, the final day, and it is now high time to decide whether we will serve the true God or idols. There are two opinions in regard to holiness, which may be thus stated:

1. The prevailing or negative opinion. It is said that we cannot be free from sin in this life. Sin is mixed with all our best actions, and must be so always while in this state. The mass of professors hold this view; at least those in the nominal churches. Being themselves under the dominion of sin, they argue that it is so with all, and must continue thus to the end.

2. But let us hear the answer of the Spirit by Paul in Romans 6: 2. Remember the question in verse 1,—"Shall we continue in sin?" "By no means. How shall we who have died by sin, live any longer in it?"—Diaglott Translation. If poor, weak human nature was left alone in the struggle, then sin and Satan would surely have the dominion. But it is not so, unless we make it so. We are at liberty to array the infinite power of God on the one hand, against sin on the other. Man alone can do nothing against the powers of darkness. Yet we have the command given us, "Ye shall be holy, for I am holy." "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect."

Reader, where are you to-day? You have resolved to serve God, and live for him only. And you have failed to do it. Sin has had dominion over you, and you have been living all this time in the seventh chapter of Romans. When you would do good, evil was present with you. You have been carrying about with you a dead body, one that ought long ago to have been buried out of sight. And you cry out, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Ans., "Jesus Christ our Lord." He is the "Lion of the tribe of Judah," the strong Deliverer, mighty to save. Put your case fully into his hands. When he says, "I will, be thou clean," do you respond from the heart, amen, let thy will be done. Then sin shall no longer have dominion over you.

LIGHT.

WM. A. FENN.

"Ye are the light of the world."

The subjects embraced in the pronoun YE, are the disciples of Christ. This language is still applicable to the true disciples of Jesus, who constitute his church, and who are truly the light of the world. What our physical world would be without the natural light, so is the moral world without the light of the church. But few ever think of the importance of the church of Christ in this otherwise dark world. Thousands feast upon the products of the earth, without once thinking of the means employed in bringing forth the rich and luxurious fruits that satisfy hunger, and are so pleasing to the taste. Like the beasts, they only look for the productions, and never stop to inquire after the producer. They fill their gluttonous man with the richest fruits, and lie down to sleep without thinking of the Giver of every good and perfect gift; much less return Him thanks.

Equally true is it with the fruits that spring forth from the church of Christ. Men pluck their hands full, and then turn and curse the tree that bore the fruit. The indifference shown this great source of moral light makes it none the less a blessing to the world. The church of Christ is really an institution, ordained of God, and placed in the world as the great moral luminary of mankind, and it shines equally bright when beclouded by the dark folds of sin and opposition, and the darkness will only be a curse to those who create it by their own willful blindness and ignorance. The sun shines equally bright in the darkest night. That we do not see its rays is no evidence that it does not shine. It is only the shadow of the earth intensified by that angry cloud that prevents us seeing the light. So the church shines as brightly in the world, though Egyptian darkness surround us; and the fact that we do not see its light is no evidence that it does not shine. Let the dark shadows of sin be swept away, and see whether the illuminating power of the light of the church will not find its way into your hearts. Rend the veil from your minds, and the flashings of gospel light will be quickly seen.

The church of Christ is a moving body, as well as a centre of illumination. While the inhabitants of the world revolve around it, it drives on through the world spreading its pathway with blessings. Here is a college for the development of mental powers; there is a house of worship for the weary pilgrim to refresh his moral nature, and drink of the waters of life. Here is an asylum for the unfortunate blind, and deaf, and dumb; there is a retreat for the victim of insanity. Here is the house for the poor, where want and hunger may be relieved; yonder is an academy, where those who will may receive a gratuitous education. These are a few of the paving stones over which the world rolls in hurried pace, and hardly stops to inquire who built the road, or who runs it.

While the world has seemed to grasp the machinery of the church, and drive its conquests from pole to pole, the fact is still apparent that the true light that leads the whole flashes forth from the true disciples of Jesus. With the ensign of truth lifted high, the church marches on amid the countless foes of right and purity; while the world follows in the wake, eating of the fruits her love and industry have produced, and then has the impudence to turn around and say that "the VEDA of the Hindoos, or the Koran of the Mohammedans, or the assertions of Confucius so sacred to the Chinese, are as good as the gospel of Christ." Were the gospel of Christ no better than these productions, we might reasonably look for as good fruit from Buddhism, or Mohammedanism, or the sixty-two thousand pigs and rabbits that were annually immolated to the memory of Confucius, as we find in the gospel field. But alas! for this infidel claim. We find nothing but darkness and death following these false systems of religion. Were Christ no better than Mahomet, we should be badly off for light in the world. But the ever-living Jesus warrants an everlasting light to the world.

The advantage the disciple of Christ has over the Mohammedan is very great. The christian's Jesus lives. The Mohammedan's savior is dead. "A living dog is better than a dead lion"; and I am quite sure a living Christ is better than a dead Mahomet. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Let the world show the fruits of righteousness that flow from the gospel to bless the race, as coming from any other system, and we will then consider their claim.

There are a thousand blessings springing from the church that men are unable to see as the fruit she bears. She forms the foundation of civilization. Science, and art, and mechanism, are only the results of her reflective power. She spreads the table of science with boundless resources. She bids the missionary push his explorations into the darkened corners of barbarism, and throw open the windows of heaven, till light fills every land and nation in the earth. She breaks the shackles of tyranny, bursts the bonds of slavery, and bids the genius of man to rise and shine amid freedom and liberty, till the flashings of the lightnings speak words of knowledge, and throw back the dark folds of ignorance; till light is seen dancing on Egyptian hieroglyphics, and the once unintelligible characters of long-buried stones now reflect the light of gospel day, corroborating the records of holy men of old.

Go into the fields of the Hindoo, and behold him dragging his wooden plow, and crawling from town to town on camel or elephant, and admire the fruits of Buddhism if you can. Then turn your eyes on the countries whose subjects bow the knee to the God of the Bible, and where the gospel of Christ has left its footprints; and listen to the rattle of the mower and reaper, the humming of ten thousand factories, the screaming of thousands of locomotives, and the roar of lightning trains that dash through every valley and around every mountain. Look at the shining steamers that make seas, lakes and rivers "boil like a pot." Job 41: 31. Behold the glittering of civilization, and ask why the difference? and the answer you must hear will be: Jesus, the true light, that which lighteth every man that cometh into the world, hath shone here.

Though corrupt men may pervert the blessings that flow out so rich and full from the gospel train; and demons may grasp the very engines of good, and of God, and accomplish their devilish purposes, until one would think Satan the author of all; yet, when we lift the covering, and find the under force that drives the machinery, it is found to be the church of Christ. "Ye are the light of the world." The devil's emissaries take the lever of science and open up the highways of iniquity; but it is the church that creates the levers. That institution of learning may develop the genius of an infidel, but the church planted the institution, and the object was to educate the philanthropist, though the infidel may steal its privileges, and pervert its object.

The printing press may stamp its tons of paper with light and love; and again its use may be perverted, and it become an engine of corruption and darkness. The loom that weaves the fabric from which the saint of God is clothed, rattles on as briskly while it furnishes a garment for the servant of the devil. The vessel that bears away the missionary of Jesus to the slothful Chinaman, carries its drugs to chain thousands in everlasting sleep. The field that waves so gracefully under the summer breeze, as its golden fruits are ripening up for food to the hungry, appears no less beautiful, though its products be perverted from a right use, and converted into the field of death. The sun that ripens one crop ripens the other. The wind that drives the merchantman may drive the man-of-war. No blessings that light our pathway but can be perverted and made a curse to man. The very gospel of Christ is to one the savor of life unto life, and to another the savor of death unto death. The light that reflects the beauties of purity and grace exposes the corruption and vice of the godless.

The gospel church shall shine on, though devils pervert her blessings; and when her work of illumination here is done, she will shine as the sun and the stars for ever and ever, in the everlasting ages to come.

THE STRAY SHEEP.

I was a straying sheep,
I wandered from my guide
Along the broad and flowery road,
My lambkin by my side.
A warning call I heard—
Come back to me, it said;
I knew it was the Shepherd's voice,
Yet turned away my head.
Among the giddy throng
I wandered far and wide,
By the green margin of the brooks,
My lambkin at my side.
But clouds obscured the sky,
I stood alone that day;
I knew it was the Shepherd's hand
That took my lamb away.
He took it to his fold,
My eyes with tears were dim;
Then through the darkness and the storm
I rose and followed him.
The steep and narrow way,
With humbled heart I took;
I knew it was the path he went,
The path that I forsook.
So still I'll climb and pray,
Till this short life is o'er,
And try to find my folded lamb,
And never wander more.

HE KNOWS.

JENNIE E. WHIPPLE.

When we read those beautiful lines in the Crisis, entitled "He knows," they came home with force to my heart. "He knows." Yes, the Savior, God's blessed Son, was a "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." How blessed it is to know that in every condition and circumstance of life, in every temptation, sorrow, and trial, Jesus knows. "For in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted." Heb. 2: 18. Are any mourning the loss of friends, taken in their youth and beauty, and bidden from sight in the silent tomb? The blessed One who wept by the tomb of Lazarus knows, and the same words that comforted the hearts of the sisters, so many long years ago, have power to comfort the mourning heart to-day. Thy loved ones shall live again. "I am the resurrection, and the life."

Are any tried and tempted? Do dark clouds sometimes gather over your head? clouds so dark and dense, that not one ray of light pierces the inky blackness? Are poverty, sickness, and pain your portion? Are you reviled? Is your name cast out as evil? In all these trials Jesus knows. "He was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." He was despised and rejected of men. He was reviled, yet he reviled not again; and in his life and death he exhibited the most wonderful examples of love and forgiveness the world ever knew. "Jesus knows." He knoweth our frame. He remembereth we are dust. He knows our weakness, and our failings. He knows our hungering and thirsting after righteousness. He knows our heart struggles over sin, and in every trying hour he has promised to be with us, and his grace will be sufficient; and so intimate is the connection between Christ and the believer, that what affects one, affects the other also. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

If we are one with Christ here in suffering, we shall reign with him in glory, and in that day when God makes up his jewels, many a poor, despised child of God will then see and know what they have so blindly asked in their weakness, why these trials were permitted. They will then know it was needful for them to pass through tribulation, that they might be purified, and made white, fit for the marriage supper of the Lamb. The process may be painful, but the result will be glorious.

BRINGING IN SHEAVES.

D. N. SMITH.

We know that every season of the year has its peculiar attractions, but autumn is the crowning glory of them all. It comes to us laden with the rich fruits of the year, causing joy and gladness in the heart of man. It is the season of all the year most interesting to mankind; and what makes it so is the bountiful harvest culminating at this point. But what in importance is the revolving season to the great harvest of the world, which we believe has already dawned? In the parable of the wheat and tares, defined the harvest, which he says is the end of the world, and it is evident that it is about to be gathered. Yes, the final harvest. And if so, how important that the reapers should be diligent, yea, doubly so. Every other consideration should be left in the rear. Salvation of lost sinners should be the watch-word. No age of the church has presented such momentous consequences. The present time is almost the last grain of sand in the hour glass. When the harvesters in the field see the angry clouds gathering ominous of the approaching storm, how do they hasten their steps. Not a moment is lost till the sheaves are all safely housed.

And we would say to the reapers in the Lord's vineyard, leave all other issues, and gather in the sheaves, old and young. What a multitude of souls could be gathered into the fold, if every christian in the land should devote all his talents and energies to this one work. We don't know what more we can say to interest the church in this subject; only if it wants to have joy, which is the richest blessing God can confer upon it, let its energies and talents and prayers and labors be for the salvation of the lost; and to secure this end, there must be special work. The ordinary work of the church does not often eventuate in the conversion of many souls. It is only the individual and special work that tells upon this subject. And once more we would say, Go into the Lord's vineyard and reap, for we read, "He that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal." "Behold he cometh with clouds."

RESURRECTION vs. IMMORTAL SOUL.

J. RIDLEY.

Did the heathen Greeks believe in the "soul's continuance in existence without the body?" They did. Did they believe in the "resurrection of the dead?" They did not. Did the apostle Paul teach the "resurrection of the dead?" He did. Did he teach the doctrine of the immortality of the soul? He did not. And he did not shun to declare "all the counsel of God." Acts 20: 27. The following shows how "men of learning" contradict themselves, when they comment on the Scriptures, and hold to the immortality of the soul.

C. G. Barth, D. D., in his Chronological Commentary (just published in this country by Hoit Fogg & Breed of Portland), when commenting on 1 Corinthians 15th chapter, says:

"No doctrine of Christianity was more repugnant to the mind of the heathen Greeks (or still is to our heathen philosophers) than the resurrection of the dead. It was this at which the Athenians took most offence. (Acts 17: 32.) We need not wonder, therefore, that their old scruples occasionally returned, even after they had embraced the faith; and thus we find in Corinth persons who denied the resurrection. . . . Paul, however, shows that with the resurrection of the dead, that of Christ himself, and with Christ the whole of Christianity, either stands or falls."

And in commenting on verse 18, of the same chapter, he says: "The doctrine of the soul's continuance in existence without the body, or in other words, the common philosophical doctrine of immortality, seems to have been quite unknown to the Corinthians, and is therefore not alluded to by Paul."

If they did not believe in the resurrection, neither in the "soul's continuance without the body," what did they believe in concerning a future state? And if they did not know anything about it, and knew that, as some affirm now, that "there could be no resurrection of the dead if the soul was not immortal," would he not have preached it to them, for he says he declared unto them the gospel which he preached unto them? He certainly would. O how much easier it is to make the Scriptures agree with themselves, than to reconcile the different statements of Doctors of Divinity.

Prospect Ferry.

WHO IS ALL READY?

J. R. CLARK.

Rolling years bring their changes. Several years ago, thousands of people went forth with uplifted eyes to heaven in expectation of the speedy advent of the Savior. But the vision seemed to tarry, and many have turned away from the blessed hope to seek the vanities of this perishing world. When I view the many changes that have taken place during the past twenty-five years, my heart is sad. The world affords us no substitute for our blessed hope. Our business should be to prepare for the soon coming kingdom, and try to have others go with us to the New Jerusalem, to sing the song of victory and redeeming love.

The great day of the Lord is upon us. It is our duty and work to proclaim this solemn truth to a sleeping church, and unbelieving world. We all have a duty to perform. If we cannot preach ourselves, we can do something to aid and sustain those who can, and thus render a helping hand to aid and carry forward one of the best causes under the sun. This must and will be done by somebody. No apology will be taken if our duty is not done. God will hold us accountable at the great day. It is the last time. Shall we turn away to foolish and minor questions? No. Now is our time of effort. O ye saints of God, let us not stop to patch the breach in our reputations, made by some ungodly croaker. Eternity opens before us with all of its glories, or dire reflections. Let us put away all evil speaking, selfishness, and anger, and prepare to meet the Judge of quick and dead. This is more than mere theory, or idle talk. The judgment! O the judgment! God fit us for it. Who of us will be able to stand.

The great day is almost here. This is no fiction. Jesus is soon coming. Let us put on the wedding garments; let us haste to be ready. O backslider, slanderer, false-accuser, evil-speaker, man or woman of strife, cold professor, sinner, the Judge of all the earth is at the door. Your race of iniquity is almost run. Your bitter words and vile acts will pierce your own soul through and through, and shame your shrinking spirit. What will you do in that great day? What can you say? You will be speechless when the mighty One shall be seen coming with his flaming chariots to gather his elect, and you be left behind to weep and wail?

O you who have once known the truth, and the power of God, and have turned away from the true God to serve the evil one, remember the perils of the last times will fall heavily upon you. O let us haste away to prayer and serious reflections. Have we wounded the spirit of a brother? Go to him at once and settle, before it shall be too late. A few golden moments only remain for us to do a great humiliating work. God only can aid us, and give us grace to perform the duty. Now is the time; delay not, for soon it will be too late. When the great white throne appears, then it will be too late to correct mistakes, or confess our faults one to the other. Are our names written in the book of life? for remember, all whose names are not found written in the book of life, will be cast into the lake of fire (Rev. 20: 15, and destroyed.)

☞ Drop a piece of wool on the floor. Do you hear it? No. It is noiseless. How about the snow? Does it make a great shout to tell us it is coming? Certainly not. "He giveth snow like wool." It is noiseless. "And this is altogether characteristic of divine operations. The great forces of the universe are mute. The sun never speaks. The atmosphere is mute. Gravitation has no tongue.

"A HIGHER STANDARD."—Do not fail to read what our corresponding Editor has said on the subject of "a higher standard." The subject demands special attention. All things indicate that we are very near the coming of Christ. It is high time that every one, who expects to be ready to meet the Savior, was entirely consecrated to him for ever, like a true bride. There is danger that many will be found without oil (the Holy Spirit) "in their vessels." Unless filled with the Spirit of God, we are not right, nor ready for the coming of the Son of man. These are times of great peril, when we need to have on "the whole armor of God" in order to stand against the wiles of the devil. Dear Brn. and Srs., let us awake and trim our lamps. Jesus is coming. "The pure in heart . . . shall see God." Matt. 5: 8.

☞ APPOINTMENTS.—We wish to make a suggestion in relation to appointments. It will be observed that "our paper" frequently contains two, three, or more columns of appointments. Some of these are from four to ten weeks in advance, thus making a long list. Our suggestion is this: that it would be better not to take up so much space in the paper by appointments reaching so far into the future. As a general rule, we think appointments one month in advance would be satisfactory. Please remember this suggestion.

HELP THE NEEDY.—Would it not be pleasing to the Lord, if our Brn. and Srs. in the various churches would send relief to the members of the Green Street church, in Chicago, who are sufferers in consequence of the great fire? Clothing or money can be sent, addressed to Elder Frank Burr, 230 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. Bro. Burr is the pastor of the church, and will dispose of all donations in a faithful manner.

BRO P. G. BOWMAN, Lydia, S. C., writes Oct. 3d, 1871:—

"I preached yesterday to two large, attentive, and serious congregations." "Glory to Jesus, there is not an unkind feeling in my heart towards any human being on earth. My mind is at all times staid on the promises and prospects of the glorious gospel of the grace of God. I have an abiding trust that the truth of God will triumph over Satan's falsehood."

Bro. Bowman needs our prayers, sympathies, and material aid. He is stripped of every thing. Let him feel that he has fallen into the hands of the "Good Samaritan."

Another article in this paper will show the state of feeling manifested towards him. May the Lord help him to return good for evil.

THE SPIRIT OF SPIRITUALISM.

The true spirit of spiritualism is beginning to develope itself more fully. It has been under cover as far as it could be, and do its demoniacal work, but its real nature cannot be longer concealed. A Spiritualist writes to us as follows:—

"Say, Elder Grant, isn't it about time for you to stop this damned nonsense about the second coming? You have played the damned fool long enough."

The italics are his. In addition to this plain talk were other expressions too foul and vulgar to be published. If such men had the power in their hands, which is a special object of Spiritualism, we should fare no better than the lovers of Jesus, who were seized by the Papal power in the dark ages.

LABOR REFORM CONVENTION.

A "Labor Reform" Convention was held at Framingham, Mass., Oct. 4th, for the purpose of taking steps to put the control of political matters in the State into the hands of the laboring classes, or their chosen representatives. Wendell Phillips was chosen President of the convention. The Boston Journal gives the following statement concerning Mr. Phillips:—

"Mr. Phillips was then conducted to the platform, and on taking the chair was received with demonstrations of the most hearty character. After thanking the Convention for the honor conferred upon him, he said he was profoundly sensible that the movement with which the Convention was connected was the grandest and most comprehensive of the age. All over the world, he said, any man can see that the great movement of the masses has begun. Humanity goes by logical steps. Once it was citizenship. When that was gained they claimed the ballot, and when that was opened the field was clear, and if there is any one feature you can distinguish under all names and flags, there is one great movement for the people to take peaceably their own. He looked upon this Convention as the great peace society of the world.

To-day the people have chosen a wiser method than force. They say that we come neither to attack nor injure capital, but come by the right of possession to that which belongs to us. This is a peaceable marshalling of the forces of peace. This convention he also looked upon as the great insurance company of the age. In spite of the Column of Vendome shattered, he honored Paris as the vanguard of the Internationals of the world. When he wanted to find the vanguard of the people he would go and learn the dreams of the aristocracy, and ascertain those which startle them most. France is the land of the Internationals, therefore this movement is the great Insurance Company; but with the ballot in our hands we need not write in fire and blood, but in the majority at the ballot box.

This is the movement of humanity to protect itself, the movement of labor against capital or a waste of capital. It is the most comprehensive, the grandest movement of the age. He congratulated the convention on the auspices under which it assembled."

There is great uneasiness among the laboring classes. They are earnestly demanding a change in the management of financial matters. The movement is world-wide, and measures of action. A powerful combination is being formed that will make capitalists and kings tremble like Belshazzar before the handwriting on the wall. A state of unrest is pervading all classes. This is one of the last day signs, and indicates that we are near the end of this dispensation.

BRO. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN is in need of means to make him comfortable. He is a cripple, but we think he should not be left to go among the town poor. Our readers are familiar with his choice articles in the Crisis. Send him something to gladden his heart. Address F. H. Chamberlain, Oxford, Mass.

BRO. W. A. FENN writes from Leroy, N. Y., Sept. 18th, 1871:—"Four new ones have started in the Master's cause, and several others are trembling with conviction." This is the result of the tent-meeting.

"HERALD OF SALVATION."—The "Herald of Salvation" is an unsectarian monthly magazine, devoted to Christian literature, and containing short, pithy articles, on themes of greatest moment, by ministers and members of different denominations. It promises to contain much interesting matter of an original nature, also brief notices of things least understood, besides general matter of a profitable tendency. It is edited by our brother, W. Kellaway, pastor of the church at Fairhaven, Mass., who offers to send it for a year to any address for $1, or with the Christian for $1.25. The first three numbers are out, and will be sent for 25 cents. The Advent Christian Times says of it:—"We have received the initial number of the Herald of Salvation, which adds one more to the heralds of the cross through the agency of the press. It is conducted by Wm. Kellaway. Of the quality of his pen our readers have had a taste, and know that he is an able writer. The Herald is in magazine form, and contains sixteen pages. We wish it unbounded success." The Herald of Salvation, No. 2, is at hand, and fully sustains the promise of the first number. The editor informs us that the club rates are $8 for ten copies, or $5 for six copies, by the year. Brethren, send on your subscriptions and sustain the monthly. Address W. Kellaway, Fairhaven, Mass.

FIRST HELPS IN ACCIDENTS AND IN SICKNESS.—This is the title of a new book, just issued by Alexander Moore, Boston. It is a valuable book for every family—just what is needed. It is "published with the recommendation of the highest medical authority." It contains 264 pp. Price $1.50. For sale at the Crisis office.

DOMESTIC JOURNAL is the title of a new weekly paper, published by Bro. S. G. Otis & Co., 387 Maine Street, Springfield, Mass. Price $1 a year in advance. Judging from the first number, we think it will be well worth the money.

THE CHICAGO FIRE.

We give a few more sad facts concerning the terrible fire in Chicago, for the benefit of our readers, who receive most of their news from weekly papers. About twenty-five hundred acres have been burnt over, taking out the heart of the business portion of the city. The people in Chicago think two thousand lives have been lost in the fire. It is said there are not less than eighty thousand homeless persons. Not a house is standing between Congress street and Lincoln Park, a distance of four miles. Several were caught setting fires and robbing, who were shot by the police, or hung to lamp posts. The city is under martial law. Fifteen hundred extra police are on duty to guard the city from incendiaries, thieves and robbers. Comparative order is now restored, and rascals are shy.

INCIDENTS.

"It is reported from Chicago that seventy convicts were burned in the prison attached to the Court House. A large number of people gathered about the building and clamored for the turnkey to release the prisoners. He showed himself and said the building was perfectly fire-proof, and no harm could result to those confined, and he should not release the convicts. Soon the building was enveloped in flames."

"Gentlemen from Chicago say the Post Office, which was built for fire-proof, went up like a paper box."

"The total loss of grain is now definitely ascertained to be 1,600,000 bushels. Four vessels loaded with grain left for the East today, and the eastern movement will continue, as fully 5,000,000 bushels are now in store."

"The Secretary of War authorized Gen. Sheridan to employ all available troops for a guard, and issued an order for ten thousand rations. Five hundred soldiers are on duty. This precaution was necessary, for as remarkable as it may seem, there were fiends who still sought to extend the disaster."

HUNG TO A LAMP POST.

"Two fiends caught in the act of firing a house on the west side were arrested and immediately hung to lamp posts—one on 15th street, near the river, and the other three miles away on Claiborne Avenue, north side."

REBUILDING.

"A few business men with some nerve are seeking houses for business on the west side. Rooms that were rented last week for $50 now readily command $5000. There are not many of these, but enough to allow a few business men to start."

HEARTRENDING SCENES.

"The suffering on the north side is heartrending. Fifty thousand men, women and children are huddled together like wild animals, and in other places 70,000 Germans and Irish are praying for relief. Helpless children are asking for bread of heart-broken parents, who know not which way to turn or what to say, and there is nothing to do but await the distribution of supplies, which must be slow. Women in pains of childbirth, and patients moved from beds of sickness to save their lives, were all exposed to the rain last night and the cold winds to-day. Several deaths have occurred at Lincoln Park, and three women brought children into the world only to die. Another night must be spent in Lincoln Park and the brick fields at Division street, and yet another and another. Each train is loaded to its fullest capacity, taking people away, and every train is obliged to leave five times as many passengers.

"Men, driven by that blind instinct which makes them, though hopeless, return to the scene of that disaster which has ruined them, sought the spots where once their homes had stood, and sitting down on some pieces of fallen timber, actually wept and wrung their hands in anguish. One of these wretched beings sought his home, and in stepping on a half-charred beam, caused it to spring up, and from beneath it came a sickly odor. He madly turned and pried away the timber, and saw beneath it the dead body of his son, a young man of about twenty years of age, who, probably returning to the house to save something he prized, had fallen in the flames and been burned to death—roasted alive."

THE DESTRUCTION OF LUMBER.

It is ascertained from official reports that fifty million feet of lumber has been destroyed, leaving twenty-four million still on hand.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

A hundred thousand dollars was subscribed to-day towards rebuilding the Chamber of Commerce on the site of the ruins.

Chicago, Oct. 11—Noon. Forty-one persons were shot in making arrests last night. The number of bodies recovered from the ruins now reaches ninety.

New York, Oct. 13. Several additional arrivals from Chicago report the details of incidents. One villian caught in the act of incendiarism was hung up by the heels and then stoned to death, and a young boy who was caught had his own arm tore off by the excited crowd, who then hung him to a tree. Fifty persons perished in one tenement house. Thousands are still on the lake in boats.

APPALLING SCENES.

A Mr. Farrar reports the scenes in Chicago during Monday and Monday night as appalling in the extreme. Many persons became crazed and jumped into the river, while several stabbed and killed themselves in their desperation. Those in the immediate neighborhood of the fire attempted to save their property, loading it on wagons. The horses, becoming wild and unmanageable, rushed through the streets, knocking down men, women and children; and dashed on into the flames, and were destroyed. Children were left to care for themselves, and sat on the curbstones waiting for their fathers and mothers. The fire would seem to cease for a few moments, then rush on with redoubled vigor, sweeping everything before it, eating its way into the Nicholson pavement, which was one sheet of flame for miles.

MICHIGAN.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 9. Large fires are reported in half a dozen different places in Michigan. There has been no telegraphic or railroad communication with Saginaw valley since last night in consequence of these conflagrations. The village of Holland, Ottawa county, was entirely destroyed by fire to-day.

Oct. 11. The news from St. Clair and Huron counties of this date is of the most distressing character. All of that portion of the State east of Saginaw Bay and north of a point forty miles above Port Huron has been completely swept by a fire. A number of persons have perished, and it is feared that we have not heard the worst. The villages of Forestville, White Rock, Elm Creek, Sand Beach and Huron City are entirely destroyed. Rock Falls and Port Hope are partially destroyed. Nothing has yet been heard from Port Austin or Port Crescent, but it is hardly possible that they have escaped.

At all these towns there were large stores, many filled with winter stocks, extensive saw mills, shingle mills, and docks covered with lumber, all of which were swept away. It is said that but one block is left on the shore about Forestville. A steamer which left Port Huron last night for the relief of the sufferers returned this evening with about forty men, women and children, five being severely burned. The revenue cutter Fessenden, which started for Port Austin, picked up a sailboat, containing Isaac Green, the principal owner of Forestville, with his family and eighteen others who escaped the flames at Forestville. The telegraph operator at Forestville escaped through the fire back into the country. All telegraph offices along the shore are destroyed, but communication will be restored soon. Five children perished near Rock Falls. R. B. Hubbard, at Huron City, shot all his horses and cattle to prevent their perishing by fire. He loses heavily, having a large store, mills, docks, etc.

Oct. 12. News has been received that the largest portion of the city of Manistee, Mich., has been destroyed by fire. Manistee is on the east coast of Lake Michigan, has four thousand inhabitants, and is one of the greatest lumber producing towns in the State. There is no telegraph station within thirty miles. The fire broke out at ten o'clock Sunday night, and raged until five Monday morning, destroying two hundred buildings, six large mills and a vessel at the dock. Half of the town was burned. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

Chicago, Oct. 12. A dispatch has been received from Green Bay, Wis., stating that a steamer had arrived bringing a report that three hundred bodies had been buried at Peshtego last night, and as many more are still missing.

Seventy-five persons were burned to death at Little Sturgeon Bay, and the suffering throughout the north is terrible. With the exception of the loss of property the fire is almost as appalling as the burning of Chicago.

Further accounts from Green Bay of the terrible calamity have been received. They state that 150 men were burned to death in a large barn where they had taken refuge. Hundreds of people were driven by the flames into the river, where most of them perished. A later dispatch says that a fire broke out in the Belgian settlement of Brussells, in Dorn Co., Wis., destroying 180 houses, all that the place contained, excepting five. The inhabitants lost everything. Active measures for their relief are being taken from Duluth and other places, but they must suffer severely.

RATHER SEVERE.

The following is from the Christian Neighbor (Methodist), published in Columbia, S. C., dated Sept. 21st, 1871. We think our readers will be interested in reading what is said about Bro. Bowman and New England. We think if Bro. Walker was better acquainted with us he would write differently. He says:

REV. P. G. BOWMAN.

"Mr. Editor:—I have seldom been more surprised than by Bro. Bowman's publication of his own trial and suspension, in a Boston paper—the World's Crisis. Why publish this matter in New England—hundreds of miles from the scene of action? Is it because, as New England's nod gives direction to governmental affairs in all the land, therefore New England is to control the religious concerns also of the country; and especially of the wicked, benighted South, which New England loves with such tender mercy?

The law in Bro. Bowman's case provides: 'If the accused be clearly convicted, he shall be suspended till the ensuing annual conference.' The minutes of the trial are 'to be transmitted to the annual conference; by which his case shall be fully considered or determined.'

Query: Does Bro. Bowman think that, in his arrested condition, awaiting his trial before the annual conference, he can legally withdraw from the church?

Does Bro. Bowman think there is no 'blessed light and truth of gospel salvation' anywhere in the whole South, that he should invoke his 'brethren and sisters' of New England to aid him to roll this light and truth over these sunny lands—alas! so dark and false, morally and religiously?

Does Bro. Bowman think that he is treating us of the South well, in so representing us to his New England co-religionists?

Does Bro. Bowman think that authority from Boston to preach this New England gospel, will render him and his mission acceptable and grateful 'throughout the State' (South Carolina) and 'the whole South'?

Of all places in the whole country, why go for association and authority to New England—that fen of blue lights—that source of nearly all the evil isms that threaten desolation throughout the land to the good and true?

What means this, from Bro. Bowman to 'Elder Miles Grant' of Boston?—'I now offer myself as a member and minister to the Advent church. Will you send me without delay authority to preach among you as a people?' 'Can you not make South Carolina a mission field, and appoint me as missionary in this field?' [Poor South Carolina! as if she were not already sufficiently New England-ridden!] 'Send me your rules of church government, your plan of organizing churches, doctrines, etc., etc.' Does Bro. Bowman 'go it blind?' Put himself into the leading-strings of 'Elder Miles Grant?'—first go into the 'Advent church,' and then apply for the 'rules, plan, doctrines, etc., etc.,' which 'Elder Miles Grant' and his associates may teach or impose? Bro. Bowman has seen the day when he would put the keeping of his faith and judgment into the hands of no living man or men, after that style!

Is Bro. Bowman going to stultify himself so far as to say that he was a Methodist minister for upwards of thirty years, honored, esteemed and useful, and yet had not preached the gospel all this time; and now, only now, has found 'the blessed light and truth of gospel salvation?'

Is Bro. Bowman going to tell us his ignorance—if ignorant—of these 'isms' which he had embraced was unavoidable, when these very errors are presented in our standard theological authors for the purpose of refuting them—where he might have seen them and it was his duty to see them?

Is Bro. Bowman going to teach, as some of the 'Elders' of the 'Advent church' teach, that man is merely 'organized matter, animated;' that he is body or matter alone, and that there is no soul separate from matter, and thus ally himself with the Sadducees of our Lord's time, and with materialists of all times? Is he going to teach, as these same 'Elders' teach, that there is no hell; that the righteous dead in the resurrection will be immortalized and be made forever happy, and that the wicked dead in the resurrection shall be annihilated; thus virtually allying himself with Universalism? Is he going to do all this, and all else in the way of 'doctrines, etc., etc.,' which 'Elder Miles Grant' may impose, and still hope to be regarded in the dark and false South, and in South Carolina especially, as a Christian minister? Is he?—and the more when his 'resurrected,' quasi, new-fangled errors proceed from the self-styled 'land of steady habits!' . . . .

I exceedingly deplore the course that Bro. Bowman has taken in this whole business, and deeply lament the infatuation under which he labors, as I think, in reference to the views he has lately embraced: for I have loved him long and well, nor is there aught within me now contrary to love and charity for him, deeply, heartily as I condemn the doctrinal views in question." . . . .

HOLINESS.

Much is said in the Scriptures about holiness as a qualification for an entrance into the joys of the future world. But what is holiness? It is simply freedom from sin, blended with perfect love. Some beings are created holy, as the "holy angels"; and others become holy after having been stained with sin, as "holy men of old"; and the divine requirement is, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." Holiness involves unconditional and unreserved affinity to the divine will, and an ardent relish for the service of God. Then every sacrifice and every task required by the Savior is acquiesced in with a sacred relish. Holiness involves a crucifixion of self, the supremacy of the divine will over the carnal or fleshly mind, and a consecration of all our powers to God. In short, holiness is but another word for sanctification—a setting apart of the human heart from the sensual affections and carnal aspirations of the world, to the will and work of God. It signifies more than a nominal assent to the principles of righteousness, or a formal espousal of the theme of devotion. It is nothing less than a sweet surrender of all our affections, and our entire will, into the hand of Deity. And then comes peace in its heavenly sweetness, and divine richness, to happify the heart, and the delightful assurance that we are accepted of the Lord.

But when is holiness obtained? Just when we become fully dedicated to the Lord, let that be at conversion (as it should be), or at some other epoch of life. So many conversions are of a surface character, that another consecration is often needed to give a taste of the higher life; and others have retrograded, and need to be consecrated anew; but the attainment of holiness is not necessarily the result of a blessing distinct from, and subsequent to, conversion.

A HIGHER STANDARD.

As a people looking for the Lord from heaven soon, we ought to raise the standard of christianity high—very high. The standard of Bible doctrine is not here referred to, though it is well always to keep that elevated, provided it be done in the spirit of Christ; but we now refer to the standard of vital godliness, or experimental religion, that gives a communion with God, and access to the throne of grace. We ought to present to the world the model of true consecration to God. Every intelligent man instinctively feels, If that people really believe what they profess to, they ought to be a devoted people—patterns of piety. And why should they not think so? If we see the judgment nearing, we ought to be so impressed with the thought as to live in communion with God every day.

We are a spectacle to the world. They know what kind of people we ought to be, to be consistent with our faith. They apprehend that our faith is well calculated to make us the best people in the world, if lived out, and we are watched more than any other class of professors in the wide world; and unless they see us alive, and filled with heavenly zeal, they come to the conclusion that we are not hearty believers in our adopted faith. Do we correctly represent our precious faith by our lives? Let us lift the standard higher, and have more of the heavenly fire. Let our practical motto be, "Holiness to the Lord." Then will our influence be more powerful.

W. S.

"EXPELLED."

This heading to Bro. Grant's kind note, concerning Bro. Bowman of S. C., is a little at fault. It should have read suspended instead of "expelled"; for he could not be expelled before the annual Conference; but several presiding elders united have the power to suspend a minister, after an examination, till the arrival of Conference, where he has a chance for defence; and Bro. Bowman was merely thus suspended on the charge of "holding and disseminating doctrines which are contrary to our recognized standards [Methodist standards] of doctrine." He was not even charged with holding doctrines contrary to the Scriptures; if he had been, he would have gladly stood a trial before the Conference, in defense of the truth. They doubtless knew that he wished that opportunity of defending his faith before that large body of ministers, and very wisely framed their charge so as to rob him of the chance; so Bro. Bowman, instead of waiting to be tried on such a charge as holding views contrary to Methodist authors, sent in his resignation. Having no chance left him for a defense from the Bible, his best course was to resign. Considering the Bible a higher standard than the Methodist "standards," he has decided to be in harmony with that, if he has to be out of harmony with the others; nor does he propose to put his light under a bushel, but to let it shine all through South Carolina. Trials await him; his former friends will be changed to enemies; but regarding the Author of truth a preferable friend, he has decided to give that Friend the preference by honoring his truth. Who will help the A. A. M. S. to help him?

W. S.

RECTIFICATION.—In a recent article, in speaking of the doctrine of immortality when first accepted by believers in the Bible, the printer made me say, "They received it from the brethren." It should have read "from the heathen."

ANNUAL REPORT
OF THE
American Advent Mission Society.
FOR THE YEAR ENDING AUGUST 23d, 1871.

The sixth annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society was held in Springfield, Mass. (Chapin's Grove), August 23d, 1871. The meeting was called to order by the President, Eld. Miles Grant. Eld. John Couch offered prayer. This meeting had the following membership: Ministers—A. Ross, L. C. McKinstry, J. Hemenway, J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, Geo. A. Streeter, Charles Goodrich, J. W. Brittan, I. I. Leslie, T. J. Cox, B. P. Stevens, B. Hitchcock, H. K Flagg, W. A. Durand, J. H. Whitmore, H. A. King, H. F. Carpenter, M. Grant, L. T. Cunningham, J. Porter, M. A. Potter, J. B. Cook, J. Wilbur, S. Cook, M. Batchelor, Z D. Baird, J. C. Smith, W. L. Himes, H. T. Taylor, D. R. Mansfield, R. Stark, H. Davis, H. Smith, R. Mosher, N. Reed, M. R. Phetteplace, A. P. Bump, L. Boutell, O. R. Fassett, and A. W. Sibley. Delegates—J. Wiswell, D. S. Blanchard, W. E. Brown, J. C. Allen, G. Johnson, Z. S. Harwood, W. O. Munson, D. Brown, E. G. Higgins, J. B. White, W. Higley. G. T. Adams and J. G. Hamblin, members of the Board of the A. C. Association.

On motion, the Chair appointed J. Couch, H. A. King, and L. Boutell, a committee on business. While the committee on business were preparing to report, a hymn was sung, and some very interesting remarks were made by several of the brethren on mission work. The business committee made the following report: 1. The reading of the Secretary's minutes. 2. Report of the Executive Board. 3. Treasurer's report. 4. Election of officers for the year ensuing. 5. Promiscuous business. The business committee's report was adopted. Elder L. Boutell, chairman of the Executive Board, read the following brief report of the Board, which was adopted:

Report of the Executive Board.

Dear Brethren:—Being connected with the Executive Board of the A. A. M. Society for the last year, something may be expected by way of a report. Although but little, comparatively, has been done by us yet, something vastly interesting to the cause of Christ, the spread of truth, and the sowing of the good seed in various directions, has been accomplished. The greatest drawback to this mission enterprise is the want of laborers adapted to the mission work. They should be men that can deny themselves of the comforts of home, or domestic life, of ease, and the pleasure of daily or weekly association with those they love, and from those that love them dearly. They must love the self-denying work so deeply, that even life itself could be freely given for Christ and the spread of this gospel among the poor and ignorant, both north and south, yea, anywhere and everywhere. They should be those that could not help responding to the Macedonian cry when heard, whether they were compensated in scrip, or imprisonment; those that could and would preach the gospel to all that could be reached, whatever might be the consequences. Such laborers are few, but some are ready to respond and say, Lord, "thy servant heareth." The calls are many, and the field is white for harvest. Our prayer should be that the Lord would raise up and send forth more laborers into the vineyard.

Means is the next thing necessary to carry on mission work. The treasury has not been empty the last year, and with the means put into our hands, our object has been to do the greatest possible amount of good to the most people; feeling as duty might demand, we would send the gospel east or west, north or south, and that we would not be restricted by State lines or southern boundaries. To the best of our judgment, we have disbursed the funds of the Society.

California called for mission aid, and we felt in duty bound to respond to the call. After prayer, with deep solicitude for the path of duty, the President concluded it was the will of the Lord for him to go, and said to the Board, "I'll go." This mission with its beneficial results has been somewhat laid before you. The sowing of the seed on the Pacific coast, and the interest awakened in the community relative to the coming of Jesus, by hearing the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" and the amount of good accomplished, will never be known until the judgment of the great day. Mission help is called for, and it is needed on the Pacific coast more than ever before, and it should be heeded so as to save the well-begun work. This should receive our earliest attention. What shall we do?

The Southern mission has received some attention. Bro. Wm. Sheldon's three-month mission at the South was attended with good results, we doubt not. The prejudice against the colored man and "northern interference" make it almost impossible to reach the people and do them good as a whole; but by patient continuance in well doing, kindness and perseverance, we hope and expect prejudice to give way, and the way be opened for the gospel, relative to Christ's coming, to be taught among them.

Mission labor, by tent and otherwise, has been under our direction to some extent, to say the least. We commenced the work at Gloucester. The mission tent was pitched and we continued meeting ten days, including three Sundays. The interest was good. Some were converted, and many heard the word of life, and some were baptized. A strong desire to hear more. Also in New Hampshire calls were heard for missionary labor, and accordingly I have been to E. Deering, N. H., and labored some little time, and was blest in the deed.

But, dear brethren, the calls come from every quarter—calls for help. And shall we be awake to the calls and respond, or shall we be negligent and indifferent and let the people go down to death for lack of the light God has entrusted to us? California, Canada Europe, and the South, and a multitude of places nearer home, all call loudly upon our sympathies, prayers and contributions. Shall they be heard? And lastly, the Lord calls upon his watchmen to cry, The sword is coming! and shall we neglect to sound the alarm and cry "Behold the Bridegroom cometh"? Arouse to the work—the last work of mercy and salvation.

L. BOUTELL.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER A. A. M. SOCIETY.

BOSTON, AUG. 17, 1871.

I have examined the accounts of the Treasurer, and find them correctly cast and rightly vouched, and the balance on hand in cash, four hundred and sixty-nine dollars, and thirty-six cents.

L. BOUTELL, Auditor.

The Treasurer's report was accepted and adopted. Brn. L. C. McKinstry, H. F. Carpenter, and I. I. Leslie, were appointed a committee to receive, assort and count ballots. On motion, the Secretary read the list of membership, and the committee received the vote of each as his name was called. While the committee were counting the ballots and preparing to report, Elder H. A. King and others made some very interesting remarks relative to mission work, etc. The committee on ballots reported the following—elected for officers the year ensuing: President—Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass. Vice Presidents—C. S. Sherman, Sam'l Ayres, and S. Hall. Secretary—Eld. A. W. Sibley, Sandy Hill, N. Y. Treasurer—George T. Adams, Boston, Mass. Auditor—Elder L. Boutell, Chelsea, Mass. Executive Board—Elds. L. T. Cunningham, J. Couch, and H. A. King

Bro. Grant read a very interesting letter from Elder W. Sheldon, respecting mission work south, after which by vote the meeting adjourned till 8½ o'clock Thursday, Aug 24th.

Met as adjourned. Bro. Grant in the chair. Meeting opened with singing, and prayer by Eld. O. R. Fassett. The President read a letter from Dr. P. G. Bowman, Lydia, S. C., who is deeply interested in the great truths due this generation. Several made some very interesting remarks relative to the manner in which mission work should be conducted, and of different mission fields, etc., etc. The meeting was characterized by harmony of action, and a deep devotional feeling throughout. Adjourned, sine die.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec. A. A. M. Society.

P. S.—At a meeting of the Executive Board, held after the annual session, Eld. L. Boutell was chosen chairman, and Eld. L. T. Cunningham Secretary of the Board. The following committees were then appointed by the Chair: On Finance—Geo. T. Adams, L. Boutell, and A. W. Sibley. On Publications—Miles Grant, H. A. King, and L. T. Cunningham. On Tent—G. T. Adams, L. Boutell, and John Couch.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the coming year, and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

SOUTHERN MEETING-HOUSE.

Elder Miles Grant:—Dear Bro.,—At our last meeting, a committee of three was appointed to correspond with you for the purpose of soliciting aid to build us a church. As you are aware, Bro. Bowman has been arrested and brought before a committee, and was suspended for preaching doctrine contrary to the Methodist standards; whereupon he withdrew from the Methodist church. And as we could no longer subscribe to the doctrines and traditions of men, we have joined the Advent church, amidst great opposition from those who think differently from us. We are called by many names, such as "heretics," "radicals," "abolitionists," etc., etc., and some deny that the Advent church is a Christian communion; and assert that there is not an Advent church this side of Boston. We do not give the assertion credit. Thus you see what trials and persecutions we are passing through here, simply because we believe in a literal fulfillment of the Holy Scriptures. And if the Lord will, and we can get the necessary help, we purpose building a church here in So. Carolina.

The meeting-house that we helped to build is now closed against us, and we are driven to the grove to hear the word preached. In consequence of a partial failure of the cotton crop, and other adverse circumstances, we are unable just now to build a meeting-house without help. We hope that you will do all you can to aid us. Ask the subscribers of the Crisis, and friends generally, who favor the course we have taken in laying aside the traditions of men, and taking for our guide the Holy Scriptures, to lend us a helping hand. A little from all would raise an amount sufficient to build a good meeting-house. Let all contributions be sent to you, and you can forward the amount by express to Timmonsville, S. C. Let much prayer be offered for our success. Hoping that the Bible may soon be put in its true light before the world, we subscribe ourselves very truly yours,

Those who wish to aid in building the meeting-house, can forward their gifts and pledges to the Missionary Society, addressed to the Treasurer, Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass. We think means provided for building a plain, cheap meeting-house, for Bro. Bowman, would be money well appropriated. He is having a hard conflict. Lend him a helping hand.—ED.

Correspondence.

From Sr. E. S. Willard.

BRO. GRANT:—We feel that you have struck the rock from whence will flow living waters through the paper to refresh God's dear children, by opening its columns, and calling for Christian Experience. We are satisfied that it is timely. Like the sudden torch to the onward way, it has made duty plain to us, over which we have been praying for the past year. God is visiting his people with salvation, to prepare them for the incoming glory, and we want to hear their testimony. Our souls were set all aglow in a recent epistle from a friend, whom the Lord has just visited with this sweet and unspeakable fulness, as set forth in Eph. 3: 16–19. This prayer of the apostle must be answered to the virgin church, to prepare her for her espousals. He says:—

"For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God."

In giving these experiences, some may tell us at once of their delectable things wherein they, like "Christian," were conducted again to the armory, and were harnessed from head to foot with that which was of proof; while others, to help the inexperienced, may invite us to accompany them through all the way in which the Lord our God has led them up to this "palace called Beautiful." Thus while each for himself looks to God for wisdom, and is led by the Holy Spirit, we shall have a rich variety and no satiety. To us the "still small voice" seems to say—

"Begin where God began with you,
And simply tell the story through."

"Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen."

From Bro. P. S. W. Daye.

BRO. GRANT:—I wrote you last spring about the work of the Lord in Tama City, Iowa. My first visit lasted about fourteen days. Then I visited them the last of May, and baptized a number more. The church at this time numbers forty-three. I visited them Aug. 23d. There was not as good a interest as before, as I did not take my tent, and, through a mistake in appointment, the congregation gathered in two places in the city, and four miles out. So I went out on Monday to the country, and spoke to them in a basket meeting. Of late Bro. M. A. Newcomb has been addressing the church to good acceptance, and a Bro. from Wisconsin is now stopping there on business, who also preaches to them, so that they keep up a good interest. I was told by an outsider that they were holding good prayer-meetings, and keeping them up well. Coming from that source it spoke well for them. The M. E. preacher, who spoke so strong against us when I was first there, has gone into business, and is to quit preaching.

The tent-meeting on the Little Cedar, from Aug. 30th to Sept. 4th, was of much interest. It being in a farming country, and a busy time, but few came out at first, but the number increased till a large audience was present. One old Bro. over eighty years of age walked ten miles. One Bro., his wife, two boys, and little girl, walked ten miles. Two families came twenty miles with oxen. Two brethren came from the State line some forty or fifty miles on foot to hear, and get some one to go home with them and preach to their neighbors. There were two converts for baptism, and about forty sat around the table of the Lord. One half of them were members of other churches, particularly the Disciple and Christian.

Preachers present were Bro. Ramsay, Wilbur, Lamphire, Raymond, Bessaman, and Goodwin. We had good order, but had no watch. We trust that the Lord will take care of the seed sown. I started from this meeting for the Ill. campmeeting.

From Bro. L. H. Little.

Bro. Grant:—There are two families of us in this beautiful western country, who are waiting and looking for the soon coming of our beloved Savior. O how we long to hear some of those who preach the coming of Christ and the resurrection and translation as the only hope of a home with the redeemed in glory. Here are Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, three large and lovely States, and not one to preach the coming of Christ to them, to my knowledge. Come, and warn the people, lest they perish for ever. We are poor in this world's goods, but have a bright hope of a home on the new earth. If there are any in Mo. who love the coming of Jesus, I would be pleased to correspond with them.

Rose Hill, Johnson Co., Mo.

Extracts from Letters.

Sr. C. Greenslit writes:—Our Vermont campmeeting has passed, and I find myself at home, surrounded by the comforts that a loving Father has so kindly provided. It was but a few days that I was permitted to be there, but how much I have been encouraged, and what strength I have received. Truly, that loving Jesus is no respecter of persons; and how glad I am that he ever put it into my heart to trust him. I can truthfully add my testimony to that of others, that it was good for me that I was there. The deep and burning words of wisdom and experience of dear Bro. Mathewson will be a help and guide as long as memory holds her sway. Then I seem to hear Bro. Hastings' 'What think ye of Christ?' ringing out with startling clearness. And I think of him as the babe of Bethlehem, the teacher, comforter, the great physician, and at last of his ignominious death. Then the sublimity, the impressive melancholy of the Lord's supper, when our hearts bled anew as it carried the beholder back to the stuff rings of him in whose lips guile was never found. Then I think this same Jesus is alive to-day, and just as willing to bless. And how he verified his promise in our morning prayer meeting, and Bro. Carpenter's deep and earnest response, as he seemed to feel—

'I will follow thee, my Savior,
Where-so'er my lot may be;
Where thou goest I will follow,
Yes, my Lord, I'll follow thee.'

And too soon came the hour for the parting circle; the clasp of hands, the tears, the good bye's spoken, and the third Vermont campmeeting is in the past. May the Lord keep us from the evils that are in the world, and preserve us until his coming and kingdom."

Bro. A. J. Young writes from Vallejo, Cal., Oct. 21:—"We are getting along splendidly; not a jar, or discord, with our little band of believers. A perfect 'oneness' seems to exist, all searching for the truth. We are holding meetings two evenings each week. Bro. Howell was with us yesterday, and preached the word in the Spirit. Bro. and Sr. Reed will be with us until Bro. Fassett comes. They are blessed people. Sr. W. has embraced the truth, and others in the M. E. church have resolved to renounce the immortal-soul dogma. We are anxiously waiting, expecting, and praying to be ready for the appearing of our Savior. How precious his name to the true children of God. We are steadfast in the truth, striving to be sanctified through it. The brethren in San Francisco are prospering finely. We have been hoping to see something that would indicate that you were coming to this coast this fall. Our prayer is that the Lord will direct you in the line of duty. I hope it will be to this coast.

I hear of many places in the outskirts, or small places, where preaching of the personal coming of Christ, and its kindred truths, is desired. May the Lord direct some of our preaching brethren here. I am glad that some are contemplating coming. I shall do all that I can to get the truth before the people, though it is called heresy. Pray for us, that we may stand in the hour of temptation, and be saved in the kingdom. All send their christian regards. Yours in Christ."

(Vallejo is about twenty-five miles south of San Francisco.—Ed.

Bro. Geo. Thomson, Arena, Wis., writes Sept. 13th, 1871:—"Our tent meeting here is progressing very favorably. Nine happy souls were planted in the likeness of Christ's death and resurrection on last Lord's day. Others are expected to follow next Lord's day. Pray for us."

Bro. Stevens.—Bro. Owen writes:—"Bro. Stevens, in some respects, is better, although his fever (being of the obstinate remittent type) is very difficult to control. He is much reduced, but we hope the worst is over. He feels very grateful for favors received."

Obituaries.

Merriam. Died suddenly, while laboring under an attack of temporary insanity, Phila Maria, eldest daughter of Levi and Maria Allen, of Chicopee Falls, and wife of Eld. Joseph D. Merriam, of Fitchburg, Mass.

Sister Merriam was born in Mansfield, Ct., Nov. 6th, 1821, and died at Fitchburg, Mass., Sept. 29th, 1871, aged forty-nine years and ten months. Funeral services were conducted by H. L. Hastings, who had been an acquaintance and friend of the family for many years. Converted at a Methodist campmeeting about the year 1841, she laid aside the trappings of pride and fashion, and united herself with the M. E. church, remaining there until the glad tidings of the coming and kingdom of the Lord reached her ears, and led her, in company with her pastor and a large portion of the church, to withdraw from their denominational connection, and take their stand among those who waited for the Son of God from heaven.

About the year 1842, she became acquainted with Bro. Merriam, and in 1845 they were married "in the Lord," who crowned their union with his blessing and his favor. Their two children have been early called by death, and now the wife and mother has followed them to the tomb.

As a wife and mother, Sister Merriam has been a pattern of fidelity; as a follower of Christ, she has adorned the doctrine of God our Savior. Their home has ever been open to the weary pilgrims, who have never lacked her kindly greeting nor her sunny smile. Naturally predisposed to mental disease, and inheriting tendencies to insanity, it was not strange that she was sometimes inclined to melancholy, but the grace of Christ enabled her to overcome her infirmities, and hold fast her faith. About five months before her death, in consequence of great bodily weakness, she became apprehensive of mental derangement, and for the last four weeks of her life reason seemed dethroned under the pressure of dark and sad forebodings, which terminated in a week of silence and gloom, during which she ended her days—a shadowy sunset, to be followed by a cloudless day.

Not how she died, but how she lived, and labored, and trusted, and hoped, and prayed,—this is what christians love to know. True, it is better to repent and pray upon a death bed, than to launch out careless and unsubdued into the dark beyond; but the christian's privilege is to live the daily life of faith all through the years of pilgrim toil and conflict, and leave behind not the evidence gleaned amid the incoherencies of a death-bed scene, but the steady testimony of one who for years has shined as a light in the world, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation. Such is our joy in the sorrow that has so suddenly fallen upon the wide circle of the friends of Sister Merriam. We remember her Christian life, and how she gave her years of health and strength to the service of the Lord, and we "sorrow not even as others which have no hope." May God give comfort to the surviving friends, and fit them for a swifter race and a more earnest warfare, till the King shall come and call his exiles home.

Potter. Died in Cambria, Mich., Sept. 30th, 1871, Sr. Louisa T., wife of Myron A. Potter, aged twenty-eight years.

The funeral services on the 3d inst. was largely attended by a sympathizing audience. A discourse by the writer, from Job 19: 23-27. Special attention was called to the importance, of all who love and sympathize with the truth, to make no delays in a preparation of heart to meet death and the judgment.

A. N. Seymour.

Mayhew. Fell asleep at Manchester, N. H., Sept. 26th, Carrie R., only daughter of Bro. Geo E. and Sr. Nancy J. Mayhew, aged six years, eight months, and ten days.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved parents with the blessed hope of eternal life when Jesus comes. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from the text found in Prov. 14: 32.

O. W. Kimball.

Blackmar. Died in Oakville, Monroe Co., Mich., Sept. 23d, 1871, Herbert, infant son of James A. and Ursula Blackmar, aged two months and twenty-six days.

Sweetly sleep, dear babe, until Jesus comes.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Rome, Oct. 11. The Italian government wants the ground occupied by the Convent of Saint Andre, near Quirinal palace, for the enlargement of the King's stables. The Jesuits have an American college there, and hence the ministry hesitate about appropriating the place. The Republican journals reproach the government for hesitating before a convent after cannonading the gates of Rome. By the Pope's order the convent will yield only to force. This applies to all religious institutions.

Rome, Oct. 13. It is asserted that many of the congregations of the Roman Catholic orders are about to leave and go to England and America, where they propose to found convents.

BRIGHTER PROSPECTS DAWNING.

Chicago, Oct. 13. The dawn of each succeeding day brings brighter prospects, and the hope of the energetic men who made Chicago what it was is strengthened. Twenty-one columns of the Tribune this morning were filled with advertisements of business changes.

Builders are overwhelmed with applications to put up new houses. One man made sixteen contracts last night.

Little is doing in produce circles, but commission merchants and grain dealers are hard at work preparing to open on their usual scale by next week.

GRATIFYING ANNOUNCEMENT BY MAYOR MASON.

The Mayor of Chicago is happy to announce that the city remains quiet and peaceable. There is no lawlessness, incendiarism or riotous conduct. Order reigns supreme, and life and property are as secure as before the burning of the city. The City Government in all departments is now in full and complete operation. None of our inhabitants are without shelter of some kind. Food to relieve present necessities has flowed in upon us in abundance from all quarters, but a long winter is before us, and we shall need all the aid sympathising humanity can render. Such an exhibition of sympathy and generous aid as was called forth by our great calamity never before was equalled in the history of the world. It has cheered and encouraged our citizens. Business largely has been resumed. Houses, mostly of a temporary character, are springing up in all parts of the two thousand acres of ruins. Many permanent buildings are being erected, and the energy of our citizens is being everywhere displayed. In the name of our citizens I tender heartfelt thanks to all who so nobly and generously have sympathized with and aided us in our great distress.

(Signed) R. B. Mason, Mayor.

The people who fled to Lincoln Park are suffering terribly. From 50,000 the number has swelled to 72,000. Those who were in the vacant lots near Division street have gone up to the park, and the scene now presented is beyond the power of words to describe. Every one is demoralized. Hundreds are lying on pallets of straw, having been rudely aroused from sick beds to save their lives. How many perished in the vain attempt to save themselves will probably never be known. There have been five deaths and eight births in Lincoln Park in twenty-four hours. Families who were formerly in comfortable circumstances are absolutely without a cent or a home. The whole city is absolutely wild with grief and despair.

SHELTER AND FOOD.

Ninety thousand inhabitants have found temporary abiding places in the west division. Food in profusion is distributed in the churches and school-houses.

General Sheridan thinks that seventy thousand people will have to be cared for during the winter.

Thousands and thousands of tons of coal, laid in by gas companies, manufacturers and dealers, for the winter, are burning, defying all efforts to extinguish, and all through the ruins of the south side, little blue and red flames are seen at night, indicating the piles of coal laid in for the winter's use.

The demoralization of the masses is subsiding and good order is beginning to rule.

Gov. Bross of Chicago gives his estimate of the loss at $300,000,000.

The light of the fire was seen at Cheresa, Ill., a distance of 110 miles.

Janesville, Wis., Oct. 13. Gov. Fairchild telegraphed as follows from Green Bay in relation to the Wisconsin fires:

"The appalling calamity is not exaggerated. Over three thousand men, women and children destitute. Loss of life very great. Not less than five hundred persons were burned at Pishtego and vicinity, and three hundred on the eastern shore. Scores of men, women and children are now in temporary hospitals, burned and maimed. Money, clothing, bedding, boots and shoes and provisions of all kinds uncooked, are wanted; also building materials, and everything needed by a family to commence life with. The people are responding nobly, but there is no danger of too much being received. The destitute must be provided for during the winter.

MICHIGAN.

THE TERRIBLE CONFLAGRATION AT MANISTEE, LOSS NEARLY ONE MILLION DOLLARS.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 13. Full particulars of the burning of Manistee, Mich., Sunday night, were received to-day. About 10 o'clock the fire engine gave out, after which the flames raged without resistance to the helpless town, the wind blowing a gale all night. The loss is estimated at nearly a million, upon which there is only $80,000 insurance.

The suffering of the people is beyond description. The people of Grand Rapids and Grand Haven supplied their immediate necessities, and Senator Ferry and the Mayor of Grand Rapids have issued very earnest appeals to the whole State for aid. They say that the latest news from Manistee more than confirms all previous reports. The necessities of the people are imperative. They need immediately flour, wheat and clothing. Direct supplies to Senator Ferry, Grand Haven. A Government vessel will carry all contributions. The people of Detroit and other cities in Michigan are responding nobly. A car load of provisions leaves to-night and one from Lansing in the morning.

Large quantities of clothing, bedding and provisions are being forwarded by boats to Port Huron, Lexington and Port Sanilace for the relief of the sufferers. Hundreds of destitute people are congregated at these places.

THE TERRIBLE CONFLAGRATIONS IN WISCONSIN AND MICHIGAN.

New York, 16th. A letter from the West states that the fire at Peshtego occurred the evening of the 8th, commencing shortly after the people returned from church. An ominous roaring sound was heard, then balls of fire like meteors fell in different parts of the town, igniting whatever they touched. The whole population were then seized with a panic, caught up their children and fled to the river and other places for safety.

Shortly after, a horrible tornado enveloped everything in fire, smoke, hot sand and cinders. Three who had not then reached the river were suffocated and burned before they could advance many steps. The storm was a flame borne by a hurricane accompanied by electrical sparks, and electricity flashed in the air and danced over the whole earth. It lasted only half an hour, but the buildings and woods burned all night. About one hundred and fifty fled to a low meadow below the bridge and were all saved. A large number took refuge in a millpond, where they kept themselves and babies under water, constantly wetting their heads to keep from roasting. Several were drowned by cattle fleeing to the pond and trampling them down.

The tornado came from the southwest and was about ten miles wide, sweeping every vestige of fences, buildings and timber before it with fire. The editor of the Menomenee Herald states that over fifteen hundred men, women and children burned to death in the track of the tornado in Wisconsin. All roots, crops and provisions were destroyed in seven counties of Wisconsin and throughout the western portion of Michigan.

The Lewd and Blasphemous Spiritists.—The National Convention of Spiritualists, recently held at Troy, has adjourned, fortunately for the cause of virtue and good morals. It was characterized throughout by contempt of everything sacred in religion and open and unqualified repudiation of every requirement of established law as to social and marital relations. Many of the speakers indulged in the wildest blasphemy. One of them, opposing a resolution rebuking profanity, said: "I can swear in more than twenty different languages if you will give me time, and all the resolutions in the world won't stop me. I assert my God-given right to damn everything and everybody whenever I please." Another said: "It's just as natural for me to swear as it is for some people to pray, and swearing does just as much good," with much more of the same sort, but yet more infamous. Other speakers proclaimed themselves Atheists, while still others—one of them a woman—declared unblushingly in favor of abolishing the institution of marriage and substituting that of "natural affinities."—N. Y. Times.

The Vendome Column.—It appears that the overthrow by the Paris Commune of the famous column in the Place Vendome involved no serious destruction of property after all, and that its reconstruction can be accomplished in a short time so that it will present the precise appearance which characterized it before the Communists commenced their mad career. A competent architect, it is said, estimates the cost of its restoration at a trifle over fifty thousand dollars. This appears incredible. But the prostration of the column only injured ten of the two hundred and seventy-four bronze plates of which its exterior was composed, and these require but comparatively slight repairs. A few bars of the balustrade and some pieces of the capital have disappeared; but these can be easily replaced.

In Brief.

—— The subscriptions for Chicago in this country and in Europe, up to noon Friday, (Oct. 13th) amounted, as far as known, to $1,977,622.—— A Protestant church is about to be built in Rome. The ground has been purchased by an American company, who propose to build an edifice of great magnificence.—— An experienced reader of manuscripts for a book-publishing house expresses the opinion that "a man's judgment on a book is good for nothing after he has read two hours. He must then rest." This coincides with the opinion of the Spectator, that there is no work so exhausting as the reading of Mss.

Conference.

The next session of the Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held at Lincolnville Center, Me., at the free house, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and continue over Sunday. Ministers and people are invited to come and unite in laboring for the salvation of sinners, and the building up of the brethren and sisters in Christ. Provision will be made for all who come.

For the brethren, F. A. Baker,
Jer. Carr.

Protracted Meeting.

Providence permitting, a protracted meeting will commence at Steep Falls, Me., Tuesday evening, Nov. 7th, to continue as long as may seem duty. Come, dear brethren and sisters, from the surrounding country, and labor with us for the salvation of those who must soon perish in the fires of the last day, if they do not find a refuge in Christ.

A. A. Robinson.
C. H. Sweet.

Dedication.

The dedication of "Zion's Chapel," at Springville, Vernon Co., Wis., will take place Sunday, Nov. 26th. Eld. Joshua V. Himes will be present to preach the word. The public in that vicinity are invited, and the lovers of Jesus everywhere, also, with their means, if possible; but with their prayers especially, that God may make it a time of power in building up the saints, and saving some perishing ones.

By order of the church, F. W. Hoges.

Notice.

Eld. A. G. Newell will fill my appointment in Steuben county, N. Y., Oct. 28th and 29th. At Wallace, on the 28th, fellowship meeting at 2 P. M.; and 29th at 10½ A. M. At Avoca at 2½ P. M., same day. Quarterly meeting at Wallace Nov. 25th and 26th. C. F. Sweet.

NOTICE.

At a meeting of the ministers and some of the delegates, representing South Western Massachusetts, South Western Vermont, and Eastern New York, held on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 26th, 1871, it was deemed absolutely necessary, in order for a better co-operation on the part of ministers and churches, and for the advancement of the cause of the soon coming kingdom of Christ, that a conference be organized, comprising the churches and ministers of the above territory, who are looking for the "return of the Nobleman," and speedy redemption of the faithful of all ages, and the eternal reign of Christ on this earth. We, the undersigned, ministers of the gospel, therefore, do hereby make a call for such a Conference, to be held at Hoosac, N. Y., in the Advent Church, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1871, and to hold over the following Sunday; and for all the churches, who desire the cause of truth advanced in their midst, and who co-operate with the objects and interests of such a conference, to represent themselves by delegates duly appointed, and where there are no churches holding regular meetings, but where isolated brethren live, that they also come, that the Conference may know what can be done to build up the cause in their locality.

Each church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every twenty-five members:

Let there be a general rally, from all parts of the Hoosac Valley, of our brethren and sisters to this meeting. Come in the name of our soon coming King. Come filled with the Spirit. Come to speak for God, that you may comfort the church, and admonish the sinner. Make every possible effort to attend this great gathering of the saints. Ample accommodations will be made for all who come.

We expect to see the following churches in Western Mass., represented by delegates: Plainfield, Savoy, Charlemont, North Adams, and others in that section of the State.

From Eastern New York: Sandy Hill, Fort Edward, Saratoga, Hebron, Hoosac, Low Hampton, and all others in that part of the State.

West. Vermont: Rutland, Chittenden, Poultney, Woodford, and all others this side the mountains.

Hoosac is located on the Boston and Troy R. R. Those coming to the meeting will stop at Hoosac Corners. Teams will be at the depot on the arrival of the two and three o'clock P. M. trains, to take those who come to the meeting to the place of the conference.

J. Wilbee, R. Mosher,
R. L. Harrison, C. Pike,
Z. D. Baird, H. K. Flagg,
A. W. Sibley, H. A. King,
A. P. Bump.

P. S. Let us hear from other ministers and churches, located in the Hoosac Valley, immediately. A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The annual session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be holden at Manchester, commencing Wednesday, Nov. 15th, at seven o'clock P. M., to hold over the following Sabbath. Fare will be reduced on the railroads as follows: Concord road, two cents per mile. Call for N. H. State Conference tickets at the following offices:—Concord, Pittsfield, Suncook, Candia, New Market Junction, Greenland, Portsmouth, Lawrence, Salem, Derry, Auburn, Nashua. Northern road, fare same as Concord. Special tickets sold at the following offices:—Fisherville, North Boscawen, Franklin, Bristol, East Andover, Danbury, East Canaan, White River Junction. Bradford, Roby's Corner, Warner, Mast Yard, Hillsborough Bridge, C. and M. R. R., half fare. Purchase regular tickets to Concord. Purchase conference tickets at Concord for Manchester, and receive free return passes at the meeting, signed by J. Couch.

These annual meetings for the past few years have been the very richest seasons of christian devotion that have been enjoyed in the State. It is hoped that all who can will avail themselves of the privilege of attending this convocation of the lovers of Jesus' appearing in the old Granite State. Let every church be represented by delegates or letter. It is expected that every minister who is a member of the conference will be present or send a letter. O ye faithful in Christ, while the shadows of the judgment are gathering around us, and the incipient wail of the last day woes begin to startle the slumbering multitudes, let us rally to strengthen ourselves in christian union, and lift our united voices in warning to save our perishing friends.

The church in Manchester extends a hearty invitation to all to come, and will do all in its power for their comfort and accommodation.

J. Couch, President.

Notice.

It is proposed, the Lord willing, to have a protracted meeting at the chapel in Freedom, N. H., to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Bro. Mark Stevens, Allen Damon, and D. F. Leavitt, are expected to be present to preach the word. We hope all of God's dear children living in the adjoining towns will be at this meeting, to unite with us in the work of saving some, if possible, from the impending judgment. Chas. H. Hurd.

Notice.

The New Hampshire State Conference will meet Wednesday before the third Sunday in November. Particulars hereafter. John Couch.

A Request.

Will the clerks of the various Advent churches in Massachusetts, that are in sympathy with the Mass. A. C. Conference, please send to the undersigned, as soon as convenient, the number of members belonging to their respective churches? Also, will those who worship in chapels of their own please say so? By complying with the above request, a favor will be conferred upon the cause at large. C. E. Barnes, Salem, Mass.

Dedication.

The Advent Chapel, built at Springwater, N. Y., this season, will be dedicated Thursday, Oct. 26th. Sermon by Elder John Couch, of Chelsea, Mass. Services to commence at 1 o'clock P. M. We cordially invite our sister churches to represent themselves at this meeting. In behalf of the church at Springwater, Warren J. Hobbs.

Conference.

A Quarterly Conference will be held at Weeks' Mills, Me., Thursday evening, Oct. 19th, and hold over Sunday. Preaching Brn., sisters and laymen are invited to come and work for holiness of heart, and the salvation of sinners. We hope the conference will be well represented, and decide where our coming quarterly conference shall be held.

S. K. Partridge.

Ct. Conference.

The next annual session of the A. C. Conference of Connecticut will be held in Bristol, Ct., commencing Oct. 18th, and holding over the following Sabbath. It is earnestly hoped that every church in the State will be represented at this conference by their delegates. There is important business to be attended to. Our beloved President, Bro. Dickinson, has been removed from us by the hand of death. His sweet counsel and advice we shall have no more. The chair is vacated. Some one must be chosen to fill it. Brethren, do attend to this call.

B. Hitchcock, Secretary.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference, for this year, will be held at Parkersburg, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing October 26th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Lord's day. All are cordially invited. Eld. Ramsay will be at the meeting, and many others. Let the churches and delegates, and all ministers who can attend, be at this meeting. Alonzo Raymond.

Notice.

The A. C. Conference, for the State of Ohio, will hold its annual meeting in Nevada, Wyandot Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and continuing over the following Sunday. Eld H. G. McCulloch and other preaching brethren from abroad are expected, together with those who belong to the conference. Let every church in the State be represented by delegates, and come prepared to build up and not to pull down. The church in Nevada send greeting to all.

W. F. Jefferson, Secretary.

Notice.

I expect, the Lord willing, to begin a series of meetings Oct. 18th, in Oshawa, Ontario, to continue over Sunday, the 22d. Wm. A. Fenn.

Notice.

There will be a protracted meeting in Vienna Village, Maine, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 19th, to continue over Sunday, and longer if thought best. This is a new field for our blessed hope. Brn. and Srs., come and help in the name of the Lord. Provision will be made for all who come. In behalf of the friends,

H. B. Sevey.
Wm. Dockerty.

Notice.

My post office address hereafter will be "Richmond Switch," R. I., to which place all letters and papers for me should be sent, instead of Westerly, R. I., as heretofore. A. Durfee.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at White & Bauer's.

NEW TRACTS.

Who are Sadducees? or, Truth Vindicated. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By Geo Thomson.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A Colporteur's Notes, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. Ag't.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. Life and Death Theology: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. Immaterialism: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. Death and the Dead, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. The Coming Judgment: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

NEW TRACTS BY S. S. BREWER.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. Sent by mail for 18 cents. Postage 2 cents. $1.20 per dozen by express.

Evangels of the Coming One. Price by mail, 10 cts. single copy; per dozen, 70 cts.; per hundred by express, $5.00.

The Mystery of Iniquity. This is a work on the man of sin, as viewed in the light of historic testimony. Price by mail, single copy, 5 cts.; postage 2 cts.; 50 cts. per dozen; $3.00 per hundred.

"TALKS ABOUT PEOPLE'S STOMACHS,"

Is the title of a new work just issued by Dr. Dio Lewis, of Boston.

"Like all of his works, it is brimful of common sense. We do not know of another writer on matters pertaining to health, who says so many good things as Dr. Lewis."—Crisis of Dec. 7th.

"HEALTH BY GOOD LIVING."

A VALUABLE WORK, BY W. W. HALL, M. D.

These two works are for sale at this office, and will be sent by mail, on receipt of publisher's price. $1.50 each. Ag't.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY.

OR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

By Elder James H. Whitmore. Published by the Western Advent Christian Association.

This little volume of three hundred pages is a valuable contribution to the literature of the subject on which it treats, and is worthy of a wide circulation, not only among those who hold to the views advocated therein, but among others who have not given them due thought and investigation.

Price, single copy, postpaid, $1.00. Six copies, by mail, $5.00; by express, $4.20.

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy, $9.00 per dozen.
Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.00 per dozen.
Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.
☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

"THE MIDNIGHT CRY."

This is the title of a pamphlet of one hundred pages, presenting evidences for the coming of the Lord in 1873. By Nelson H. Barbour. Price 25 cents per copy; $1.80 per dozen. For sale at this office, and by D. T. Cooper, 73 Mount Hope Avenue, Rochester, N. Y. Ag't.

"LEST COMING SUDDENLY, HE FIND YOU SLEEPING."—Mark 13: 36.

F. M. DUDLEY.

'Tis not in my power
To know the exact hour,
But the angel of death still is reaping;
I must be on my guard,
Keep strict watch and ward,
Lest suddenly coming, he find me sleeping.

He may come in the morning,
He gave me the warning,
And time ever onward is creeping;
He may come to-day,
Let us all watch and pray,
Lest suddenly coming, he find us sleeping.

We know 'twill be soon,
It may be at noon,
There are those who ought to be weeping:
O sinner, beware,
Go to him in prayer,
Lest suddenly coming, he find you sleeping.

He may come in the night,
In his vesture so bright,
And he left a charge in our keeping;
If he should not be nigh,
We know we must die—
And oh! should he find us all sleeping.

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

To the Crisis Editor:—I have been disappointed while in the eastern States, during the past summer months, in not seeing any tidings from California in your paper. There are so many here who have announced their deep interest in Second Advent truths, and who are evidently competent to begin and maintain a news-correspondence, that I wonder at the lack of at least a brief weekly budget from California. And now that I have personal reason to know that many persons in the eastern States are anxious to hear Advent mission tidings from the Golden State, the general sense of the deficiency in the columns of the national Advent paper, to which I refer, is deepened to a "weight of responsibility" which I must occasionally relieve. So I write again.

Well: glad to get back to California. O, garden of summer sunshine all the year round; very beautiful are thy mountain tops and valleys, thy streams and bays; and thy breezes, so cool and refreshing, greet the returned traveler with a delightful welcome. The land never looked so fair, the winds never seemed so inspiriting. Now this is not sentiment; it is raw fact. This is not written for the Ledger, but for the CRISIS. And it has to go in as a proper preface! The most charming land reserved for the touch of civilization to the closing days of the old world; often, often filling the mind with hints of that new earth, that Paradise restored. Enough. Glad to get back to California. "And how do you find things?" That's the practical question, for an answer to which some home-bragging talk may be tolerated—once.

During my absence, as you are aware, Elder, there has been an appendix to your work—in a separate volume. Some people insist that the former don't belong to your "copy"; but it is properly described, I think. Those who came after did not credit you with much success, but it is obvious they did build on your work. The Seventh-day Adventists have a very shrewd and devoted minister in Eld Loughborough; and he and his associates have gathered a "church" represented in a usual congregation of fifty or sixty persons,—meeting on Minna St., between new Montgomery and 2nd Sts. I speak first of him and his audience.

Last Sunday afternoon, I attended service in Eld. Loughborough's hall, and found a congregation of sixty assembled. He spoke at length of the "thousand years," mentioned six times in seven opening verses in one of the chapters in Revelation. He argued against the Whitbyan theory of a spiritual millennium, etc.; spoke rapidly (too fast—a common infirmity in Second Advent preachers), and spoke well. While he was speaking, some boys threw in pebbles into the hall, and distracted the attention of the portion of the audience seated nearest the door. I had good reason to believe, from remarks I heard made as we passed out, that mothers in the neighborhood encouraged this youthful Sunday amusement, to show contempt for the "crazy critters" in the meeting.

I saw in the audience only two persons whom I recognized as of the number of those who attended regularly the preaching of Eld. Grant while here. Eld. L. announced that he would preach in the evening on the Inheritance, and the old and present mode of obtaining an heirship. So I understood the announcement. The Minna St. Hall is entered directly from the street—first story; the place being intended for a store. It is a new building; paint and plastering new and damp. In the course of a few weeks it will be a much more healthy place than it now is for a sitting. Such damp quarters never should be taken for assembly rooms.

Yesterday morning, I attended service at Excelsior Hall; Elder Howell preaching. An audience of between forty and fifty. I saw many familiar faces, from their frequent presence at the Minna St. church, where Eld. G. officiated. Elder H. preached from the text, "Thy kingdom come." It was a plain, direct discourse, full of the right kind of orthodoxy (if you can mend that ugly old word by a straight adjective). He preached a literal kingdom; and he brought up living Scripture in overwhelming force to substantiate his proposition. The Elder is very ready with the word of truth; and if he was a little more deliberate in his enunciation, he would be exceedingly effective as a preacher, as a speaker. That is to say: he comes close up to the point of being what is termed eloquent on many occasions; and just misses the magnetism, because he does not wait and allow his sentences or paragraphs to take effect, before he opens a new division of the subject.

This matter of art, in clear and impressive delivery, may be despised by some, and others may think it almost irreligious to dwell upon its necessity or commendableness; but ought it not to be occasionally attended to? And is n't it provoking, both to the natural and the spiritual man—if the spiritual man can be said to be provoked—to have a good discourse tamed down from a deserved height of impressiveness by a jumping habit of declamation? This is said by way of apology to Elder Howell, and must not be said again in the same personal connection.

The Elder, by notice direct to the audience and in prayer, spoke of the ministering brethren expected soon from the East—alluding to Elder Fassett, and who else? I see you have a sort of condoling notice of Eld. F's resolution to come hither; as if he made great sacrifices for the journey and (perhaps) change of residence. If time lasts so long, I desire to know of the stated salary that will induce him to return to the East after three years sojourn in this comfortable country. 'Tis hard to break up old ties and associations anywhere in the East, and depart for another section of the country; and it ought to be so in every case—except in the event of a removal to California. Elder Howell further announced that his people would meet in their newly purchased chapel on Mission St., near the Mint, on Sunday next. I do not remember the building, but will describe it in my next letter. It has passed through several denominations—has been Presbyterian, and then Colored Baptist. It is about a block distant from the Minna St. church.

I have not yet revisited the principal scene of your labors, Elder, but I will try to do so next Sunday, and report. Many of the members of Mr. Bailey's congregation have inquired for you, and "hoped" for your return. You must come again.

While in Chicago, three weeks ago, I purchased a little book called "The Study of the Bible: A series of chapters intended to promote truth and unity"; written and compiled by Henry Dunn, of the British and Foreign School Society, and published by the well-known house of G. P. Putnam & Sons, New York City. I have wished many times, since the purchase and reading, that every subscriber of the Crisis had a copy. It would "do them good," and they would appreciate it. This I say for its general scope and fulfillment of "intention"; but it has special points of interest for Advent people. (Indeed, I could refer to several new books which I have procured lately, in which orthodox folks talk wiser than they know, and unwittingly confess the truth of valuable items in our mode and fact of interpretation.)

For instance (page 83): "To avoid practical untruthfulness, the word sheol, which is commonly translated in the Old Testament 'hell,' should never be used as if it implied the place of future punishment. When the Psalmist says, 'The wicked shall be turned into hell (Ps. 9: 18), why should we shrink from admitting that he simply means the grave? It is the same word which is used prophetically of Messiah, 'Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell' (Ps. 16: 10). It is the same word that Jacob uses when he speaks of his 'gray hairs' being brought 'with sorrow to the grave' (Gen. 42: 38)." And so read on—remaining paragraphs on p. 83, and pp. 84-85. All worthy of being quoted in the Crisis, because of the supporting acknowledgment of truths of interpretation, coming from an orthodox but candid source. And I venture to say that your readers would be gratified and edified if you should quote entire Dr. Maitland's remarks "on the study of unfulfilled prophecy, as connected with the interpretation of Scripture generally." Prefixed to the chapter is the first verse of one of Bonar's most beautiful hymns—(why was it not inserted in the Jubilee Harp? I cannot find it there); reading,

"The church has waited long
Her absent Lord to see;
And still in loneliness she waits,
A friendless stranger she.
Age after age has gone,
Sun after sun has set,
And still in weeds of widowhood
She weeps a mourner yet.
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!"

After giving Dr. Maitland's remarks—which I trust you will republish—under the head cited, the author says:—

"We add nothing to these admirable words, beyond expressing our firm belief, uttered under a deep sense of responsibility that, 'to those who have made their calling and election sure,' a right understanding of the purposes of God in regard to the coming kingdom of Christ is the most important object to which they can direct their attention." ☞ The italics are the author's. The succeeding chapter, "On a right understanding of the dispensation under which we live," is scarcely less interesting to the reader who has embraced the Advent doctrine. Again Bonar's pious poetical fervor supplies the sweet introductory verse:

"Far down the ages now,
Her journey well nigh done,
The pilgrim church pursues her way,
In haste to reach the crown;
The story of the past
Comes up before her view;
How well it seems to suit her still,
Old and yet ever new!"

On p. 151, the author says: "The apostle clearly associates the triumph of Christ with the Resurrection. [Italics are the author's.] When he quotes Isaiah's prophecy, 'Unto him every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess' (45: 23), he connects it with the day when 'every one of us shall give account of himself to God.' Rom. 14: 11. And again, when he quotes the same prophet as predicting a period when the 'vail that is spread over the face of all nations' shall be removed (Isa. 25: 6-8), he, like the prophet, looks for its fulfillment only at the resurrection—the period when 'death is swallowed up in victory.' 1 Cor. 15: 54.

If I have created or nursed an appetite for this little manual, I have not illy occupied so much space in quoting and commending.

Well, my friends, the end is near. Travel all over the country and see things as they are, here and there; read the daily record of the world's "goings on"; above all, read the best and only book in the midst of present strife and confusion, haste, and material progress and exclusive pride therein; and it comes upon us more and more with awful force—the judgment is near! Hedged about by the rules and respectabilities of sect, and so prejudiced against the simple truth, earnest christians of all denominations are beginning to see the light; manifesting their partial enlightenment in one or another odd or dazzled fashion; seeming—O, strange phenomena!—to be rejoicing over and helping forward a revelation which they in their creeds and articles and formal, personal statements deny; admitting away, one by one, the once asserted force of the comparatively few points of Revelation on which the anti-Advent formula repose.

And yet, when I go into a little Advent chapel, and see the smallness of the number gathered there, and realize something of the blameable coldness that is in the hearts of many of the most highly privileged in Scripture illumination, I wonder where faith is to be found on earth; and then I see visions of an infinite compassion that considers the infirmities of man. Then it is not for any neighbor that regret or censure spring, but one feels as if in his own shortcomings he knew of a wide waste of barren soil;—in a multitude of unbelievers the sense of desolation and of individual responsibility seem alike enhanced. It is only to strive, strive, strive; if by any possibility we may attain the prize of eternal life,—so soon to be conferred or forever refused. Then how the wisdom which Christ imparts—and concerning which I recently heard Eld. Hastings speak so comfortingly—comes to the mind. What is this world and its troubles and plans?

"Our little systems have their day,
They have their day and cease to be;
They are but broken lights of thee,
And thou, O Lord, art more than they."

A few shall be waiting and longing, in sufficient hope and trust, while millions will be mocking when He cometh. Talk of revolutions? When the despised of this world shall become the princes of the new earth, these discords which now concern us so mightily will fade away into everlasting contempt. And the strain of the whole meditation comes again: This Revolution is at hand, even at the doors! Our minds sweep over thousands of indications that correspond to the prophecy; and in this we cannot be mistaken. We seem to be past the day and the hour when in any promiscuous audience it is necessary to enumerate testimonies of the fulfillment of Paul's picture of the last seconds of time.

A few score of people, in all this crowded city of two hundred thousand inhabitants, openly and specially signify their understanding of this season, as the Book has foretold it. This truth is no longer hid, as far as any lack of mere proclamation is concerned. Yet only a handful are gathered in acceptance of the Revelation which closes the volume. The devil says, It cannot be worthy of acceptance, or the heralds would be counted by thousands, and the waiting children of Christ by tens of thousands. But we know of a verity that the end is at hand.

Thank God, that Book which distinctly marks the signs of the closing age of this earth tells us in the brightest letters how to get ready for the change of residence—to that eternal world, which the righteous alone shall enjoy. C.

OUR TOUR WEST.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Our last account brought us to Utica (Minn.) quarterly meeting, Sept. 1st., in company with Eld. M. Wellcome, from Mankato, on the cars. Vice President Colfax and Senator Windham were in the same car, returning from a tour through the northern part of the State. We had an introduction to them, and a very pleasant conversation with them on the resources and rapid development of this rich and beautiful State. Mr. Colfax is a true gentleman, of free and easy manners, very social and unassuming. At Utica we enjoyed very precious interviews with the Lord's dear ones, who look for his return, and formed some new acquaintances with ministers from Iowa, and with others in the vicinity of the meeting. This meeting was an interesting and precious season in the Lord.

My wife was taken ill at the close of the meeting, and was kindly cared for by some of those who love to do good. After several days, we went to fill an appointment at Winona, and spent several days in visiting, in company with our brothers, Eld. M. and S. C. Wellcome, until the time came when they must go to their places of labor, and we parted from them not expecting to see them again until Jesus comes to give us immortality.

Sept. 10th, we preached on the "Kingdom of God" and "Bible Materialism," by request. The subjects had been advertised, which brought out some new hearers, and our preaching furnished thoughts for discussion in families, offices, and in business places during the whole week following. We also preached to them on Monday and Tuesday evenings.

Thursday, the 14th, we went to Minneapolis again, to meet an engagement there. On arriving at Bro. O. R. Fassett's with my family, we were kindly welcomed and cared for by Sr. F. We found the town filled with visitors, in attendance upon their county fair. This was the greatest fair ever held either in the State or county. Twenty-five thousand dollars had been expended by the managers to make it thus. Having a ticket given us, we spent an hour in examining the products of the soil, the efforts of the mechanics, and the beautiful stock. We were obliged to say, it exceeds all exhibitions of the kind we ever saw. Here we saw the Hon. Horace Greeley, who had come to speak to the farmers of this county, but we did not hear him speak. Our business was to attend to publishing the message of salvation to dying men. Arrangements had been made for me to preach at Castle Rock. I took the train for Farmington, where I was met by Bro. and Sister Fellows, formerly of Mass., who took me to their home at Castle Rock, where I found a home indeed for the Lord's children.

Sunday, Sept. 17th, I preached to a company of attentive listeners, who are becoming enlightened upon the blessed hope under the labors of Sister Fassett. May the Lord lead them on in the way to his eternal kingdom. We returned the same evening to Farmington, to take the train to Minneapolis on Monday, and were kindly entertained by Mr. Webster, who feels some interest in the truth, but not enough. Before the cars arrived Monday, Brn. Geo. and Robert S. Miller, two of the sons of Father Miller, unexpectedly met me, and we spent an hour in pleasant conversation. We used to meet these brethren some twenty years ago in our general conferences, in Boston. How singular have been the providences which have attended our history. God has been very merciful to us, in preserving us alive, and granting us so much light from his word, so many privileges and blessings, and now permits us to meet in this far West, to rejoice together in hope of eternal life.

Returning to Minneapolis, we visited the chief places and acquaintences in the city, and in St. Anthony; then returned down the river to Winona, and on the 22nd we bade the friends and State farewell, then crossed the Mississippi into Wisconsin, and proceeded to our appointment in West Salem, on our way our home in Maine, thankful to God for his care and blessings.

BE OF GOOD CHEER.

L. H. LITTLE.

Brothers and sisters, who are looking for the soon coming of the blessed Savior, be of good cheer. The victory will soon be won, our sorrows past, and we shall meet on the new earth, and be made like unto the angels. O bless the Lord. We are almost home. Yes, the sweet home of heaven. Lift up your heads, weary pilgrim, for the day is dawning. Will you, with me, be ready to hail him with enraptured joy? You will have to wait but a little while before you will see Jesus. Then let us cheer each other with this blessed truth—our Savior is soon coming. Your brother, looking for redemption soon.

Ross Hill, Johnson Co., Mo.

☞ Henry Ward Beecher is of opinion that if our Lord was upon the earth now, there are very few churches into which he could get, or in which he would be considered as sufficiently orthodox.

POWER OF THE WORD OF GOD.

Is not my word like as a fire? saith the Lord; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces? Do all christians fully believe this? In fine, do they know the wonderful, heart-searching power of the word of God? We know the apostle says—"The word of God is quick (living), and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword;" but do we thoroughly realize the fact? If so, should not the word of God be the great magazine of power for the christian teacher? The world's great poets, orators, and artists, have borrowed their most thrilling conceptions and expressions from the Bible. If men of the world so prize the sacred writings, shall the christian instructor neglect them? O for ministers and religious teachers of every grade, who with Wesley will say—"I am homo unius libri—a man of one book."

The great power coming from reading God's word without comment, simply "comparing spiritual things with spiritual,' is known to but few. Said holy William Bramwell to a correspondent—"I want you also to be a preacher; and, in order to this, would it not be well to read the Scriptures without comment, find out the breadth and length, depth and height, by digging, prayer, and receiving light from God? Whoever depends on comments will be very superficial, and will never speak with proper confidence. You may sometimes examine a comment after your own labor, to see what difference, etc., never before it."

The mighty, divine power of the Scriptures, is lost on many of our hearts, because, instead of meditating and praying over the command of God, we carefully receive the interpretation of some commentator, whose own heart is not thoroughly in subjection to the word of God, and who, like some of the commentators of Christ's time, "do err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God." In this age of rationalistic commentaries, is it not well to heed the command of Jesus, "Search the Scriptures," and to beware lest "the command of God be made of none effect by the tradition of the elders."—Guide to Holiness.

A PRAYER.

E. OWEN.

I pray, my God, to-morrow's cares,
Which I approach with tears and prayers,
May be acceptably performed;
My heart with love to Christ well warmed.

I pray thy saints, so dull and cold,
May readjust the faith they hold;
May it affect their daily lives—
Daughters and sons, husbands and wives.

Oh! for a real, living faith,
To cleanse in life, and calm in death;
Making the daily actions pure,
The faint assurance doubly sure.

We've theoretic faith enough,
But times demand a sterner stuff
Than simply words, uttered abroad,
That we are looking for the Lord.

Oh! make thy children—those in name—
All feel anew love's holy flame;
May they arouse to pray and weep,
Oh! wake them from this dreadful sleep.

May the poor sinner, bound to death,
Hear what the living preacher saith;
Though tremblingly he speaks thy word,
Attend it with thy Spirit, Lord.

OUR HOPE.

C. NAOMI.

A lively hope, a hope that maketh not ashamed, is the hope that will save us. But few, O how few, have that hope to-day. Last Sabbath, as Sr. Otis was led in her discourse to portray our blessed hope, as I had never heard it from the desk before, my soul was glad, and I rejoiced in heart, and felt I must testify, before leaving, how blessed I felt, whether the rest did or not. But I did not. I came away, but felt conscience-smitten, and that God would not bear with me if I thus quenched the Spirit. I thought how could our sister feel, after she had done what she could, and not one was willing to bear testimony to the truth of what she had said. It seems almost a waste upon such half converted congregations. They have got a little truth, but have no saving grace, neither faith nor works. Are we taught and led by the Spirit of the Lord? Not if we are following the fashions of this world.

Let us examine ourselves before God, by his word, and pray him to give us faith, to the saving of our souls. The just shall live by faith. We must walk by faith.

Gems.

— The true christian is "patient in tribulation," and if God denies his request to be delivered from any trouble, he can even praise him for the denial.

— Heart knowledge, through God's teaching, is true wealth, and they are often poorest who deem themselves most rich.

— Human oratory often clouds divine truth.

— We should always keep in God's way, that we may be prepared for God's work.

Oh! how many might be reapers,
Bringing in rich, golden sheaves,
Who have laid aside their sickles,
And are gathering only leaves.

— Some truths do not influence the mind, but every Scripture truth does when rightly received.

— Time may be redeemed as it is passing, but never when it is gone by.

— We look most effectually to the Lord, when we find ourselves helpless and empty.

— If prayer does not cause us to leave off sinning, sinning will soon make us leave off praying.

— The impurity of dross cannot be united with the purity of God.

— It is not so much what we have done in the days of our ignorance, as what we have done in the days of our light and knowledge, that should lay us in the dust before the Lord.

Strive, endeavor; it profits more
To fight and fall, than on time's dull shore
To sit an idler ever;
For to him who bares his arm to the strife,
Firm at his post in the battle of life,
The victory faileth never.

— We never so effectually repel Satan's temptations as when we fasten on a gracious promise, and with it contend against him.

— The children of God are wise; every moment fresh wisdom is communicated to them, that they may "walk wisely towards them that are without."

— If we are alive to God, we shall never be contented but as we keep on the heavenly journey.

— If we have been made to feel the evil of sin, no one can persuade us that it is not an evil.

— A thief, coming to rob a house, said, "I dare not, there is a light in it." So christians should have the light of grace burning in their hearts, as the best preservative against their spiritual enemies.

— There is no sweeter spirit than a yielding spirit, submitting to God, and saying, "thy will be done."

— Affliction's rods are made of many twigs, but they are all cut from the tree of life.

Go onward, up the rugged steep,
Beyond the lagging throng;
Thy own heart's counsel wisely keep,
And in the right be strong.

BAPTISMAL SCENE.

For several weeks past, there has been a revival in progress in the Shiloh Baptist church (colored) in this city, and this Sabbath morning, twenty-one converts were immersed in the Hudson river, and never have I witnessed a more interesting scene of this nature. A large crowd of spectators had assembled, from two to three thousand, and at the time appointed the candidates came marching along in procession, headed by the pastor, singing an invitation hymn. At the shore they were arranged in a semi-circle, and addressed by the pastor; and after the preliminary exercises of singing, prayer, etc., the pastor, with an assistant, took his stand in the water, and the converts were led out to them two at a time. They almost invariably came out of the water with demonstrations of joy, shouting, clapping of hands, praising God, etc. The pastor, in his remarks, said that baptism was typical of the resurrection of the body; and their demonstrations of joy reminded me of the Scripture which says, "Awake, and sing, ye that dwell in dust." There will be a time of rejoicing, such as the world has never witnessed, when the graves are unlocked, and the sleeping ones come up clothed in immortality. May we live to see that event.

LOT LINGERED.

In that strangely lingering man I see a type of every unconverted reader who holds this sheet in his hand. The duty of the moment for you is to escape to Jesus as the one "mountain of refuge." It must be prompt; for the Bible has no to-morrow" in its offers of eternal life. Every promise of acceptance to the sinner bear the date of "to-day."

Your escape to Jesus must not only be prompt, it must be decisive. "Look not behind thee!" The angels knew well that the fascinations of gay and guilty Sodom would lay a strong grasp on the hearts of Lot's household. Therefore there must be no backward longings, or backward lookings. So must it be with you. If you would escape hell, look not behind. Old indulgences and old habits will soon magnetize your heart as with a spell. If they do not stop you entirely, they will divide the mind, and a divided mind never wins a battle. Half a heart never carried a man to Jesus. You have got to give the Savior all or none. "Ye shall seek for me and find me when ye search for me with all the heart."

You claim that you are really on the road to Jesus, and are desirous to be saved. Lot's wife was on the road to safety, and yet perished. She was warned of her danger; yet she was lost. She wanted to be saved; but she "looked behind her," and was turned into a monument of righteous retribution on the spot. Her fate is the more sorrowful and sickening because she perished in full view of Zoar, the mount of safety, and while on the direct road to it. She was awakened; but she was not saved. Every congregation has in it more or less persons who have been awakened in past revivals. Their fears were excited. Their consciences troubled them. They attended inquiry meetings. They shed tears, and perhaps "rose for prayer" amid the wonder and the joy of an assembly of God's people. Yet they were never converted. For "convert" means to turn into an opposite path, and they never turned away from their sins to their Savior. Friend! here is your danger. You have not cut loose from sin, or cut loose from pride and self-reliance, or cut loose from what you once loved most, and fastened your soul's grip on Jesus Christ. If you were to die this very night, probably your pastor would write down beside your name, "Awakened, but not converted."

One more urgent direction was given to Lot and his family by the messenger of God: "Stay not in all the plain!" Never was a vale more verdant in that whole Orient than the vale of Jordan beside the walls of Sodom. The fields were purpled with flowers, and perfumed with spices. But Lot was not to halt long enough to pluck an ear of barley, or a purple cluster from the vines. The whole plain was under the coming curse of God. "Stay not in the plain!"

I have seen a man shed tears under a plain sermon, and stop and tell his pastor afterwards how anxious he was to be a Christian. But nothing came of it. He lingered in the plain. I have stood by the bedside of a sick man, who fervently promised that if God would restore him, he would give to Him the added days. He got well—but only to linger in the plain! Poor A—! How often be has promised me that he would give attention to his soul. But he is secretly bound by an evil habit which he will not renounce. He wants to get to heaven, but he will not "pluck out the right eye" of a favorite sin. Often awakened, he is not yet saved.

Still lingering in the plain, is many an one who reads this article. Let me lay hold upon you as the messenger did upon the household of Lot, and shout into your ears, "Escape for thy life! look not behind thee; neither stay thou in all the plain!" Escape to Calvary lest thou be consumed! Quit the first sin that comes to hand! Do the first duty that comes to hand! You are only safe when you reach Christ.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

HOW TO MAKE MISCHIEF.—Keep your eye on your neighbors. Take care of them. Do not let them stir without watching. They may do something wrong if you do. To be sure you never knew them to do anything very bad, but it may be on your account they have not. Perhaps if it had not been for your kind care, they might have disgraced themselves long time ago. Therefore do not relax any effort to keep them where they ought to be. Never mind your own business—that will take care of itself. There is a man passing along—he is looking over the fence—be suspicious of him; perhaps he contemplates stealing one of these dark nights; there is no knowing what queer fancies he may have got into his head. If you find any symptoms of any one passing out of the path of duty, tell every one else what you see, and be particular to see a great many.

It is a good way to circulate such things, though it may not benefit yourself or any one else particularly. Do keep something going—silence is a dreadful thing; though it is said there was silence in heaven for the space of half an hour, do not let any such a thing occur on earth; it would be too much for this mundane sphere.

WASTE PAPER.—Few housekeepers are aware of the many uses to which waste paper may be put. After a stove has been blackened, it can be kept looking very well for a long time by rubbing it with paper every morning. Rubbing with paper is a much nicer way of keeping the outside of a tea-kettle, coffee-pot and tea-pot bright and clean, than the old way of washing them in suds. Rubbing with paper is also the best way of polishing knives and tin-ware after scouring. This saves wetting the knife handles. If a little flour be held on the paper in rubbing tin-ware and spoons, they shine like new silver. For polishing mirrors, windows, lamp-chimneys, etc., paper is better than dry cloth. Preserves and pickles keep much better if brown paper, instead of cloth, is tied over the jar. Canned fruit is not so apt to mould, if a piece of writing paper, cut to fit the can, is laid directly on the fruit. Paper is much better to put under a carpet than straw. It is warmer, thinner, and makes less noise when one walks over it. Two thicknesses of paper placed between other coverings on a bed are as warm as a quilt. If it is necessary to step upon a chair, always lay a paper on it and thus save the paint or wood-work from damage.

THE BREWER'S DOG.

A gentleman taking an evening walk along the road near Granstown, Scotland, saw two men supporting a third, who appeared unable to walk.

"What is the matter?" he inquired.

"Why," was the reply, "that poor man has been sadly bitten by the brewer's dog."

"Indeed," said I, feeling rather concerned at the disaster.

"Yes, sir, and he is not the first by a good many that he has done a mischief to."

"Why is the dog not made away with!"

"Ah, sir, he ought to have been made away with long ago, but it wants resolution to do it. It is the strong drink, sir,—that's the BREWER'S DOG."

EFFECTS OF PREACHING ON COUNTING.—There is an island on the coast of Virginia where the people in times past have not been "righteous overmuch." During the past year a missionary has labored among them with considerable success. Not long ago, as this good man was busy working in his shirt-sleeves in a new church which was in process of erection, a stout sea captain hailed him:

"Are you the minister here?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I've got ten dollars for you."

"For the church?"

"No, for yourself. I like your way of doing things here. I have come to this island for clams a good many years, and have always found them a thousand or fifteen hundred short when I got home. It pays me to have you keep on preaching doctrines which make the people count their clams honestly."

THE INSPIRED WRITERS.—The writers of the Bible were brought up in very different stations. Some were princes or priests, others were shepherds or fishermen; they lived in various places, and wrote at various times, through a period of one thousand years. They treated on various subjects—laws, history, psalms, proverbs, prophecies, biography, and letters on doctrine and practice. Yet, how remarkable is their agreement! and how powerfully they support and illustrate each other; all testifying to the same truth, whether relating to God or man, or the means of salvation in type or substance. Truth is the characteristic of their writings; they are faithful in declaring and in denouncing judgment to those they addressed.

FRANK KINGSTON'S RESOLVE.

"Halloo, Frank! where 're your bound for!" cried Ned Hillary to his friend Frank Kingston.

"Just going home," said Frank; "they kept us pretty busy at the shop, to-night, and we couldn't shut up till late."

"Well, say, don't stay home and mope all the evening. It's a splendid night; let's have some fun!"

"What kind of fun?" asked Frank.

"Oh, most anything. A game of billiards, perhaps, for variety."

Frank hesitated. He knew very well that his parents did not approve of his going to the billiard room, but his fondness for the game sometimes overcame his scruples.

"Well, I'll come if I can," he said as he moved on.

Ned called after him, "Don't fail, that's a good fellow. I'll meet you at the corner."

It had been a busy day, and Frank was tired and hungry. The table was waiting for him when he reached home, and his mother met him at the door, with a smile and a pleasant word, but her voice had a weary sound which Frank's ear could not fail to catch. He did not think of it again however, until, having finished his supper, he was about to leave the house, his glance fell on her troubled face. She was rocking the baby, who was wakeful and worrying; the table was yet to be cleared, and the girl was away on a visit to a sick sister. For an instant Frank deliberated, then back went the old straw hat to its nail behind the door, and the next moment he had coaxed baby from mother's arms, and was quieting it as gently as a girl. It was a pretty picture they made in the golden twilight—the curly headed boy hushing the baby sister to sleep—and the pleased smile on their mother's face told that to her eye, no painting by any of the mas'ers could be half so sweet.

Eight o'clock came and baby was sleeping soundly. Mother had seated herself darning stockings, and Frank was wondering whether it was not still early enough to meet Ned, when his father came in with the evening papers.

"Very busy to-night, Frank?" he asked. "My eyes feel badly and I don't like to use them much. Suppose you read awhile to mother and me."

It was something of a disappointment, and Frank began the task reluctantly, but quickly becoming interested, all thoughts of Ned, and the evening's amusements vanished. After the reading, there was a pleasant chat over the events of the day, and when Frank knelt with his father and mother at prayers, he felt that it had been a happy and restful evening.

"Heard the news?" said one of the shop boys, the next morning.

"What news?" asked Frank.

"Ned Hillary had his eye put out last night—got into a quarrel in the billiard saloon."

Frank shuddered when he thought how narrowly he had escaped being mixed up in the same quarrel, and, then and there, he resolved to have nothing more to do with the billiard-room.

At noon he told his mother of Ned Hillary's misfortune.

"Had he been home, making others happy, like my Frank, it would not have happened," she said, with her loving hand on his shoulder.

Frank hung his head; and then, because his sense of honor was too fine to let him take praise that was undeserved, he confessed how many times he had been at the billiard room, and how near he had come to being one of the party, that night.

"But I shall never go there again, mother dear," he said, seeing the tears in her eyes.

"My boy has need to pray, 'Lead us not into temptation,'" she said, softly. And Frank did pray those words in a way he had never prayed them before, and though he sometimes found it hard to refuse an invitation to play his favorite game, He who gave that prayer to His disciples gave him strength to resist the temptation.—Alta Grant, in Little Corporal.

THE BRAVE BOY.

As two boys were on their way home from school, one day, in passing a corn-field where were some plum-trees full of fine, ripe fruit, Henry said to Thomas:

"Let us jump over and get some plums. Nobody will see us, and we can scud along through the tall corn and come out safe on the other side."

"I cannot do it," said Thomas, "it is wrong. I do not want plums if I have to steal them."

"You are a coward," said Henry, "I always knew you were a coward; and if you don't want any plums, you may go without them; but I shall have some very quick."

Just as Henry was climbing the fence, the owner of the field rose up from the other side of the wall. On seeing him, Henry jumped back, and ran off as fast as his legs could carry him.

Thomas, who had no reason to be afraid, stood still. The owner, having heard the conversation, told Thomas to step over and help himself to as many plums as he wished.

The boy accepted the invitation, and very soon filled his pockets with the ripe fruit.

Which of the two boys was brave—the one who called the other a coward and ran away himself, or the one who said he was afraid to steal, and stood his ground?

DRUNK BUT ONCE.—"You have but five minutes to live," said the sheriff. "If you have anything to say, speak now." The young man burst into tears, and said: "I have to die. I had one little brother. He had beautiful blue eyes and flaxen hair, and I loved him. But one day I got drunk, for the first time in my life, and coming home I found my little brother getting berries in the garden, and I became angry without a cause, and killed him with one blow of the rake. I did not know anything about it until next morning, when I awoke and found myself bound and guarded, and was told that my little brother was found, his hair clotted with blood and brains, and he was dead. Whisky had done it. It had ruined me. I never was drunk but once. I have only one more word to say, and then I am going to my Judge. I say to young persons—never, never, never touch anything that can intoxicate." In another moment the young man was ushered into eternity.—The Children's Album.

TREATMENT OF SPRAINS.

Sprains are usually very painful, and are accompanied with a high degree of inflammation and soreness. The indications are to secure perfect rest of the injured part, and to reduce the inflammation. The inflammation may be reduced by cold wet compresses, renewed as often as they become warm. When the patient has a great deal of vitality and there is a high degree of inflammation, the injured part may be immersed in cold water, or a stream of cold water may be poured over it until the pain and soreness have been partially removed, when the cold compresses should be applied. When there is much pain and tenderness and but little heat, hot fomentations, followed by cold compresses, are preferable. When the inflammation and soreness have subsided, friction is useful to promote absorption and strengthen the part. Great care should be exercised about using the injured part until the strength is restored, as it then requires but very little to sprain it again. A second sprain is more difficult to cure than the first.—Herald of Health.

CARE OF CHILDREN'S FEET.

Life-long disease and sudden death often come upon children through the inattention of the parents. A child should never be allowed to go to sleep with cold feet; the thing to be last attended to, in putting a child to bed, should be to see that the feet are perfectly dry and warm; neglect of this has often resulted in a dangerous attack of croup, diphtheria, or fatal sore throat.

Always on coming from school, on entering the house from a visit or errand in rainy, muddy, or thawy weather, the child's shoes should be removed, and the mother should herself ascertain if the stockings are the least damp; and if so, should require them to be taken off, the feet held before the fire and rubbed with the hand till perfectly dry, and another pair of stockings be put on, and another pair of shoes, while the other stockings and shoes should be placed where they can be well dried, so as to be ready for future use at a moment's notice.

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT.—Much injury is done to the eye by the improper use of lamp or gas light. Many persons suppose that a bright light, in reading, is injurious to the eye, and therefore attempt to read with a low, unsteady light. This is wrong. Let the light be bright and steady—the brighter the better, but let it be so placed that it may not shine directly into the face, but over the shoulder. No harm is done in illuminating the book well—the error is in allowing the light to fall directly in the face. Gas light is better than lamp light, if it is steady and brilliant. The student's lamp is the best kerosene lamp for reading purposes. Remember to sit with your back to the light; then let it burn brightly and illuminate your book well.

ANIMAL FOOD.—Many of the ancients never ate animal food. Plutarch, a learned Grecian, abstained from it altogether. He lived to be nearly eighty years old and was a hard worker. He is said to have written three hundred philosophical works. One hundred and twenty-five of them are extant. This celebrated man once wrote: "You ask me for what reason Pythagoras abstained from eating the flesh of brutes; for my part I am astonished to think what appetite first induced man to taste of a dead carcass; or what motive could suggest the notion of nourishing himself with the flesh of dead animals." People could live much cheaper if they were to adopt Plutarch's views.—Ex.

NIGHTMARE is caused by remaining so long in one position that the blood ceases to circulate. How hard we try to run in our sleep sometimes to get out of the way of some terrible danger! It does such a person no good to ask what's the matter. Don't waste time in asking a question, but give relief to the sleeper by an instantaneous shake, or even a touch of the body, that breaks the dreadful spell in an instant, because it sets the blood going toward the heart.—Health Reformer.

MEDICAL STATISTICS in France have developed two facts which are of great importance to ladies; namely, that the mortality of the female sex has decreased in the ratio of eighteen and one-half per cent., since corsets have gone out of fashion; and secondly, that brain fever has increased among ladies seventy-two and three-fourths per cent., since they have worn chignons.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

CHEER THEE, PILGRIM!

Cheer thee, pilgrim! just before thee,
Lo! the land of promise lies;
Harps of gold and crowns of glory;
Haste thee to secure the prize.
CHO.—Just beyond the narrow river,
See the mansions of the blest;
There the righteous dwell forever,
There the weary are at rest.

Seems thy journey long and dreary?
Is there sorrow in thy breast?
Does thy fainting soul get weary?
Cheer thee, pilgrim! yonder's rest!

Do the storms of life assail thee?
Do the billows round thee foam?
Do thy strength and courage fail thee?
Cheer thee, brother! yonder's home!

HERESY.—Part III.

O. R. FASSETT.

2. While contending for the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, Adventists are regarded heretical, because they maintain that death is a state of unconsciousness, or as the Scriptures describe, "sleep"; and the resurrection from the dead a revival to a state of consciousness, or an "awaking out of sleep." But do not the Scriptures of both the Old and New Testaments describe death as a sleep? They do. "David after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption." "Lazarus sleepeth." "The maid sleepeth." "We shall not all sleep." Such is the language common to the Scriptures, however much men may ridicule the phraseology. And death must resemble sleep, or there would be an unfitness in the use of the word. What is the condition of one in natural sleep? Has he knowledge? Is he conscious of all transpiring about him? Does he know more than all the world awake about him? If not, why should the sleeping dead be regarded as having more consciousness and knowledge than those who are yet alive?

Of man it is said: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4. "The dead know not any thing." Eccl. 9. It is "the living" who have "knowledge," and who can "praise the Lord." As those who are asleep know not that they are in the condition of sleep, or where they are asleep, and have no knowledge of what is going on in the world around them; so it is with the sleeping dead. They know not that they are dead, where they lie encoffined or buried, or what is going on in the busy world above them; nor will they again have knowledge until they awake from death's slumbers.

As death is likened to a state of sleep, the awakening from that sleep must be the resurrection of the dead. So the Bible teaches, and is consistent with itself. It, therefore, nowhere teaches that men fall asleep in death, and awake from the sleep of death at the same instant. Jesus said to his disciples: "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of sleep." John 11: 11. The awakening of Lazarus from his slumbers of death had not as yet occurred when Jesus said this, and he had been dead nearly four days. Nor was it until the fourth day that he was awakened from his sleep; and that was when Jesus "cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth." The time of the awakening of the sleepers in death is set forth in the following Scriptures. Daniel 12; 1 Cor. 15; 1 Thess. 4.

Now because Adventists so teach, and cannot believe and preach the unphilosophical, and unreasonable, and unscriptural dogma that men may fall asleep in death, and awake at the same time, they are to be denounced as heretics. But who are the heretics in fact? We leave the believers, and those who have the knowledge of the Scriptures, as well as every man of common sense, to judge.

Martin Luther was dogged at the heels by both Roman Catholics and Protestants for his belief in "the sleep of the dead." Against Catholic aspersion, Luther's apologist says: "He, with many fathers of the ancient church, believed the dead lay in profound rest and sleep." Cardinal Du Perrin affirmed as Luther's faith: "He held that the soul died with the body, and that God would hereafter raise both the one and the other." Sir Thomas Moore takes off Luther's faith in the old quaint Saxon style thus: "Luther holds that all souls lie and sleep till domes-day." And he objects to the doctrine in this language, which we often hear repeated in this our day: "What shall he care how long he lives in sinne that believeth Luther, that he shall after this life feel neyther good nor evil in bodye nor soule, until the daye of dome?"

Wm. Tyndal replies to Thomas Moore in defence of Luther's faith, and charges him with having the Pope's added doctrine of heathen philosophers joined to that of the Bible doctrine of the resurrection: "The heathen philosophers denying that, did put that the souls did ever live. And the Pope joineth the spiritual doctrine of Christ (the resurrection) and the fleshly doctrine of philosophers (immortality of the soul) together; things so contrary that they cannot agree. And if the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be? And then what cause is there of a resurrection?"

Calvin was most bitter against the doctrine, though for a time quite favorable to it; but he endeavors to cover his convictions before the world by "hot, furious, and abusive language" respecting those of the faith; calling them "hipnologists, babblers, madmen, dreamers, drunkards." Some have taken lessons, or follow in the spirit of Calvin in our day, thinking, or pretending to think, before the world, thereby to save their reputation for orthodoxy. "Calvin published a small tract in 1534, called 'Psychopannychia,' by which is signified, that the soul wakes throughout the night of death with all the consciousness and sensibility necessary to enjoyment of happiness." But this effort, like all others since, proved an abortion; for the Bible doctrine of "the sleep of the dead" is destined to live and survive all these puerile and senseless reasonings against stern scriptural, scientific, and philosophical facts, not to be gainsayed. And what is sustained by these must be orthodox, though some would have it "heterodox."

3. Adventists maintain and preach the resurrection of the identical body which falls in death, against the Sadducean doctrine of "no resurrection." But this literal resurrection of the actual defunct body is come to be disbelieved and scouted by many in the Christian church, and its resurrection considered an utter impossibility by men who ought to have faith in God, and in the power of the Almighty, and be ashamed of their diminutive estimation of the omniscient and omnipotent One. If our God was a lilliputian deity, possessed of only finite wisdom and power, it would be nothing strange for christian men to imagine a thousand difficulties, insurmountable to the accomplishment of the resurrection of the dead. But why should any impossibilities confront Omnipotence? "Why should it be thought incredible . . . that God should raise the dead"?

The two leading difficulties in the way of the resurrection of the identical body are,—1. The constant changes the body undergoes during lifetime. 2. The transmigration of particles on dissolution in the condition of death; both of which, it is argued, destroy the bodily identity. It is claimed that the human body undergoes a complete change once in seven years, so that if a man should live to the age of seventy years, he has had no less than ten different bodies. Now it is asked, which body of the ten will be raised in the resurrection? Or will a man be raised with all the bodies he has had during his mortal existence? And if so, will there not be exceeding large giants in those days? If this doctrine was true that a man had a new body every seven years, it would not militate against the Bible doctrine of the resurrection of the dead body, or the body that dies and is buried in the grave. For Christ teaches that "all that are in the graves" "shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and shall come forth." John 5th chapter.

But it is far from being proved that our bodies change so as to lose their identity in seven or more years, and it can by no possible means be demonstrated. It is rather contradicted by stern and irrefutable facts to the contrary. That the identity of the body is preserved during all the period from childhood up to manhood and old age, amid all the growth, changes, and decay of the physical organism, is apparent from the fact that, if there is any physical defect, or scar, or peculiarity of organism and of feature, they are preserved from the beginning to the end. Also, certain diseases, as measles, scarlatina, small pox, etc., which usually attack persons but once in a lifetime, would, if such a change took place, make individuals subject to them as often as the change takes place, for these are diseases which affect the physical organism. This indisputable fact stands forth to refute this philosophy, and confront it beyond hope of successful contradiction.

The transmigration of particles, on the dissolution and dispersion of the body, through the agency of death, and by whatever other means, may scatter them abroad, or make them, if it could be proved to be, the constituent parts of another animal, or man, can by no means be an argument against the resurrection of the dead, if we admit an all-wise and all-powerful Being as supreme over the universe. Every denial of the resurrection, from conceived difficulties of this kind, meets the rebuke of Christ himself to the Sadducees: "Ye know not the Scriptures, nor the power of God." Let us believe in "the living God, who raiseth the dead;" and be joyful in this "blessed hope," and comforted with it in all the bereavements through which we are called to pass in this vale of tears, in the loss of near and dear ones, called to slumber in death. Should we die, let us be, through the riches of redeeming grace, partakers of the "better resurrection," and rise among "the just" in the great rising day. If honored to be among those who shall be alive and remain unto the coming of our glorious Redeemer, may we experience the marvellous change from mortality to immortality, when "death shall be swallowed up of victory."

A GREAT SAVIOR.—It is said that once, in a company of literary gentlemen, Mr. Webster was asked if he could comprehend how Jesus Christ could be both God and man. "No, sir," he replied, and added, "I should be ashamed to acknowledge him as my Savior if I could comprehend him. If I could comprehend him, he could be no greater than myself. Such is my sense of sin, and consciousness of my inability to save myself, that I feel I need a superhuman Savior, one so great and glorious that I cannot comprehend him."

THINGS NEW AND OLD.

We are charged with "heresy," and are grateful to the Lord that the charge is merited; for the heresy has no relation to his word, but to certain teachings which, on diligent examination, we find inconsistent with his word. Those who brand us with heresy in relation to revelation, bear false witness against their neighbor; for we believe, with faith unfeigned, what holy men of God, moved by the Holy Spirit, have spoken. Those who limit the charge to portions of creeds and theological systems which have no authority over conscience, pay us a compliment when they intend a censure; for truth is so unutterably important that the man who has determined to test her claims for himself by the only infallible standard, thereby gives evidence that he is profoundly in earnest. If we are content to knock away props which many generations have deemed necessary to the safety of the building, whilst acknowledging that our all depends upon its safety, it must be admitted that we have faith in the Builder. If ours were the hands of bold scepticism, bent upon the overthrow in one common ruin of all that is venerable for age and beautiful for truth, we should richly deserve all the bitter things which have been said concerning us. But it so happens that the men who know us best, are the men who can bear the most emphatic testimony to our loyalty. After more than thirty years' service in the cause of Christianity, by the pen and the living voice, it would be passing strange if our hearty allegiance to this divine system should be justly suspected now. Scattered through our writings are certain sentiments which we would not utter to-day, not because our admiration of the system they were intended to vindicate is less, but because experience and study have convinced us that they are not tenable. Their orthodoxy is unimpeachable; but when that is all that can be said for a doctrine, it is time to sacrifice it on the altar of truth, notwithstanding the honored names that have given it their suffrage, and the length of time it has dwelt in the church. If we had not unlearnt as well as learnt something all these years, ours would be a blank retrospect.

There are men who make it their boast that they never changed an opinion in religion. Of the fact we have no doubt, but whether it is something to glory in is another question. This is the class of mind that cannot comprehend the action of increased light on minds of a different order. One of our censors insinuates that for a quarter of a century we have concealed our views on the destiny of the wicked. Whether falsehood or malignity is the strongest element in this statement, it is not worth our while to inquire; but men of this type are the dead weight of the church; they are the merest echoes of everything that has been stereotyped in creed or catechism; and if a man, using his protestant birthright of going to the Bible for himself, finds reason there to change his views on any subject, they immediately brand him as a base hypocrite, who always held his present "heresy," but concealed it in the pulpit for the sake of a piece of bread. Such men will not cease to measure others by themselves; for they are incapable of imagining any higher standard. Minerva sprang full grown and completely armed from the head of Jupiter, and these wise men expect theologians as soon as the pulpit is entered. In everything—in all departments of science, literature, philosophy—we are encouraged to go on by these infallibles who denounce the Pope's infallibility, on the principle that they do not like a rival; but when we touch the accumulated priestly rubbish of centuries, that has covered the book of salvation with darkness, and filled every corner of the temple with dust and cobwebs, we are denounced as heretics, dangerous innovators, teachers of "new doctrines;" and—as a worthy minister said in a pious passion the other day—"Burn the Rainbow!"

But now let us look at this matter without prejudice. You would not condemn us, or any who think with us, unheard? That would not be worthy of Englishmen. You would not charge us, or any who think with us, falsely? That would not be Christian. Well, now, is it the case that this magazine—and a graceful magazine it is, an ornament on any drawing-room or study table; its very name a glory!—is it really the case that it teaches new and dangerous doctrines? If they are absolutely new, they must be dangerous; for there was a faith once delivered to the saints, and we have no belief in any new revelation whilst this age lasts. So, having granted the danger if the novelty can be proved, we have narrowed the issue to a point, and shall be able to proceed without embarrassment. But "new" is a relative term. What if it should be found that our doctrines are "things new and old?"—new in relation to current theology, but old as the days of prophets and apostles notwithstanding? This is what we have repeatedly proved to be the fact. We challenge certain points in the theology of Christendom—both papal and protestant—with a departure from the ancient faith, with "heresy" in the evil sense of that word; and we affirm, on inspired authority, that our maligned doctrines were the common heritage of the Christian church before either popery or protestantism was heard of. As religious conservatives we have gone back, not to the era of the Reformation, not to the time of hair-splitting scholasticism, when men turned Scripture into riddles to test their ingenuity, and not to the age of the "Fathers," when the fatal compromise between pagan philosophy and Christian truth was effected; but to the days of our Lord and his apostles, when truth shone forth in her virgin purity, a thing of beauty and joy unspeakable; and there at the fountain-head and source of all that is "true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report," we have found proof irresistible that several of the leading doctrines of the orthodox faith are not of God but of men.

Take one point in illustration—the subjugation of the world to God. That great and wonderful event is to be effected, says orthodoxy, by the agency of the church in preaching the gospel to every creature. The chief object we had in view in establishing the Rainbow, an object which will maintain its supremacy over all others as long as the magazine exists—was to teach that this is a fundamental and bewildering mistake, causing endless confusion as to the nature and calling of the church, the meaning of the present dispensation, the return of Christ in glory, and the setting up of his everlasting kingdom. We teach—thanks be to God for the privilege!—that our blessed Lord returns from heaven before his kingdom or any part of it can be manifested; that the time of his return is purposely concealed, and may be at any moment; that the church is an election out of the nations; and that the subjugation of the world will be the result of Christ's royal authority as visibly manifested Sovereign of mankind. It this teaching "new?" It is, in relation to modern orthodoxy. Is it "old?" It is as old as the holy documents from which every item of it is derived, and by which its truth is absolutely proved. It is vain therefore to ask us to act otherwise than we are doing. We have no choice in the matter. Whether men applaud or censure, smile or frown, help or hinder, we teach and preach the speedy coming of our divine Lord in power, majesty, and glory ineffable!—Rainbow.

THE GREAT QUESTION.

Friend, is the question on thy heart engraved,
"What must I do to be forever saved?"
Believe in Jesus, is the sole reply;
Believe in him, and thou shalt never die:
His precious blood gives pardon, life, and peace;
Freedom from guilt, and joys that never cease.
Go search the Scriptures in true faith and prayer;
The Spirit will reveal the Savior there.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The simplicity of the gospel is certainly made manifest unto those who recognize the truths of the resurrection doctrine—essential to the new life. "Without" are contentions, doubts, innumerable and bitter. The things that are of sound doctrine are full of peace, and they make all incidental matters clear and strengthening. I can hardly read a chapter, now-a-days, of the Book without observing the illumination that comes from the perceiving and acceptance of the truth on the Life and Death question.

Then, again,—the reacting yet confirming experience: one can rarely read and consider the argument or dogmatic statement of the fable which revelation has dissipated in the Advent church, without being at the same time strongly moved by sentiments of pity and gratitude and a desire to do more for the dissemination of the whole truth. For instance: I was in one of our largest libraries this morning. It occurred to me that I would look at the definitions of "soul," "intermediate state," "future punishment," in several standard theological dictionaries, etc. In all I observed a reliance upon texts, and arguments from nature, which have long since been passed over as inapt and forceless in cotemporary argument. The latest editions of the "standard" dictionaries are not up with the printed book and pamphlet of the day. (Does it take so long a time to enforce and re-set the matter in the bulky volumes in which orthodox theology reposes?) As Eld. Fassett indicates, in one of his recent admirable, unanswerable articles in the Crisis, some, much Scripture, once thought to prove intermediate consciousness and eternal misery, has been relinquished by intelligent combatants for the "regular doctrine."

The gift of God to the true of heart is made virtually of none effect as a converting solicitation by the orthodox faith. Because taught of their fathers that they are by nature immortal, the children will go no further, in a majority of cases; relying upon redemption from misery somehow, despite all the threats of the preacher. The magnitude and the magnificence of the offer—Eternal Life—is never considered. If so bald a word might be pardoned in such a connection, it should be said that the orthodox creeds debauch the faith once delivered to the saints—having reference to this very matter.

Here is a book of Doctrines—written by a Presbyterian—purporting to give a history of "Faiths." The "Second Advent doctrines" are "new," yet "old heresies revived"; and the people who believe in them are treated to the complacency of the learned writer. Then pity, wholly unmixed with any contemptuous retaliation, will spring up in my heart. For again and again names are mentioned of men admitted to have been among the most pious and scholarly of their day and generation, who embraced the despised truths; having found them after much diligence, held them with a patience and perseverance that could not be broken; proclaiming them in every way they could trust as decent and influential.

Rev. Dr. A. L. Stone of this city, formerly of the straight-streeted city of Boston, is lecturing on "Questions of Doubt." He invites inquiries. He holds forth at the large skating rink, corner of Stockton and Post streets. I believe that he has been written to this week and asked to discourse on the questions—"Do the Scriptures prove the natural immortality of man?" and, "Are the finally impenitent eternally tormented for their sins?" The doubter who sends these questions was not satisfied with Dr. Scott's Commentary, delivered last winter and spring; for Dr. Scott confined himself to confessedly "exploded" proofs. That Dr. Stone may be inclined, if possible, to new lines of argument, and fresh attempts at temporarily tormenting Scripture, be is kindly supplied with a copy of Whitmore's "Immortality," and Hastings' "Apostolic Doctrine of Future Punishment." He is respectfully requested to glance at the book and tract which are sent him with the letter of questions, if he concludes to preach on the topics named. It is intimated to him that some points of the ancient "argument" in favor of inherent immortality in man and eternal misery have been destroyed lately by irreverent disputants; and the anxious doubter supposed in this instance would like a "new departure" in the process of reasoning and Scripture quotation. From this we may have something worth making a note of for the Crisis. It was thought best not to send the Dr. a larger library, lest he should suspect that some heretic was trying to proselyte him. C.

HOUSEHOLD VISITING—HOUSEHOLD PREACHING.

D. P. NEWTON, Author of "Shining Light," etc.

"I have taught you publicly, and from house to house."—ACTS 20: 20.

VISIT AND PREACH—PREACH AND VISIT.

"Feed my lambs," . . . "Feed my sheep." John 21: 16. "Feed the church of God which he hath purchased with his blood." Acts 20: 28.

"Hast thou a lamb in all thy flock
I would disdain to feed?
Hast thou a foe before whose face
I'd fear thy cause to plead?"

"Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones. . . . It is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish." Matt. 18: 10, 14. What we need, must have, is household visitation, household preaching, disciples of the Lord Jesus, of soul-kindling piety, of holy zeal, fire pentecostal, to go from house to house to read and expound the Scriptures; pray, sing, give thanks, administer consolation, "reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine;" comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak; and carry the lambs in the bosom of love. Is the family altar burning brightly morning and evening, in families professedly christian? If not, whose duty is it, if not the pastor's, to see to it, and set it on fire, blazing out?

"Come to the place of prayer!
Parents and children, come and kneel before
Your God, and with united hearts adore
Him whose alone your life and being are."

The Bible, the book of books, is this first, midst, last, always, in the closet, the family circle, meetings for prayer, preaching and praise? Pastors, do you see to this in visiting from house to house? In social worship, in family prayer, around the sick-bed, be sure and let God speak previously to bowing the knee at the mercy-seat. The influence of God's word in families is most salutary and happifying on the juveniles and all present.

"The Bible, the Bible! more precious than gold,
The hopes and the glories its pages unfold;
It speaks of a Savior, and tells of his love,
It shows us the way to the mansions above."

Without constant, healthful nourishment for the body we perish—we die. So also in furthering our speed heavenward, in sustaining life eternal, we need constant aliment, angel's food, whereof if a man eat he shall never die. The children of Israel gathered manna daily. "Lord, evermore give us this bread."

How are the little folks trained? In "the way they should go," reared gospelly, brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, unreservedly—made olive plants around the table—and stones polished after the similitude of a palace—mild, gentle, lovely as heaven can make them? If not thus educated exclusively Godward, whose duty and privilege is it to see to it if not the godly, faithful visitor from house to house, to lay the axe at the root of the first and slightest deviation of parental delinquency? In the domestic circle is where heaven begins, a second Eden; else misrule, a little bedlam, sparks of hell fire of Satan's kindling. Take heed,

"Seek to make your home most lovely,
Let it be a smiling spot,
Where, in sweet contentment resting,
Care and sorrow are forgot."

First of all, gather the lambs for Christ. "Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages."

"Little feet may find the pathway Leading upward unto God."

Again, are any sheep or lambs in "doubting castle," locked up by "Giant Despair?" Who so wise, gracious, merciful, as a loving, faithful pastor, to apply the key of promise and let the captives go free?

Again, are any sick, on beds of languishment, nigh unto death? What now? Is the godly visitor at the bedside, to pour in the oil and the wine of consolation? Are any pressed down under manifold temptations, pierced on every side by the fiery darts of Satan, as though some strange thing had happened unto them? At a crisis like this, how exceedingly important for some one strong in faith, or a "Mr. Great Heart," to say to these tempest-tossed souls, "Look up!" Say as Jesus did, "Get thee hence, Satan." Look up to the hills whence cometh help—to the Lamb slain. "Cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you."

"He careth for thee; weary as thou art,
And heavy-laden, he will give thee rest.
Look to thy Savior; he has ransomed thee,
And paid thy debt of sin on Calvary."

Look, moreover, at the flood-gates open wide of the Satanic in the form of periodicals, "coiled serpents," the curse of the land in libraries and on centre-tables; poisoning the little folks and the big folks to death. What now? solicit bonfires? or run for your life! cry "Fire, fire, fire!"

One of the saddest mistakes—and a prevalent one too—is the neglect of pastors to see and know what is read in families; on what kind of moral, mental, and spiritual food, parents and children are feasting, whether good or bad, poisonous or otherwise.

Books and papers are preaching, will continue to preach, salvation or condemnation. Our whole nation is being moulded by the press this very day. And, rest assured, God holds his ministers responsible for the consequences of this "light bread," to the extent of their office and ability to discern between the precious and the vile.

A church prosper, grow in grace, mount up on angels' wings, be as Mount Zion, without this constant, persevering, family visitation, and supervision? When? where? Preach publicly? Suppose you do with angelic tongues, while a positive precept is omitted or trampled upon? Pastoral visitation a duty? Open the big book and see. What did Christ, and Paul the apostle? Any household visitations or household preaching with them? How readest thou? Turn to Acts 20: 20, 21.

Our Savior likewise visited the abodes of the poor, he took lodgings with the meek, the lowly, those in humble life. Is it so now? Do the ministers, bishops and elders at the present day follow the example of our blessed Redeemer in condescending to men of low estate? Do they not rather pass the poor of this world, and seek the wealthy, the rich in this world's goods, where they can feast sumptuously, receive the honors of a full and luxurious table; go where they can have their warm Sunday dinners prepared by toiling servants on the Lord's day, deprived of sanctuary privileges? Thus the poor are neglected and grieved. Ministers pampered and flattered by rich and aristocratic church members are tempted to wink at their sins, their covetousness, pride, fashion, folly and intemperate habits. By thus covering the sins of the rich, the church becomes corrupt, gradually departs from the purity and simplicity of the gospel, like that of Rome, till the whole head is sick, the whole heart faint. "From the sole of the foot, even unto the head, there is no soundness in it." Is it not so, beloved reader? "We speak the truth in Christ and lie not." "My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons, . . . Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?"

It is lamentable, truly, to witness the neglect of one of the most important and soul-saving duties, viz., pastoral visitation. Who expects a church to prosper, thrive, become a light-house, the salt of the earth, without a regular, systematic, faithful, practical oversight of the under shepherd? When was there such a thing? As soon expect the sun to beam forth brilliantly when thick clouds obscure the sky.

No minister can preach to his people as he ought, unless he knows the state of mind and heart they are in. How is it possible, without this knowledge, to administer reproof, rebuke, comfort and consolation, divide to each a portion in due season? And how is he to know their state and standing except by pastoral visitation,—unless he goes from house to house, weeping, bearing precious seed, pouring in the oil and the wine? Such a pastor is a pastor and only such; prepared to "feed" the flock of God, to carry the lambs in his bosom, to reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine, preach as he ought to preach. Wo be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! Should not the shepherds feed the flock?

Very many of the choicest materials for sermonizing are gathered by the pastor during his regular systematical pastoral visitations. "The elders which are among you," says Peter, "I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed. Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory, that fadeth not away."

"Sow by all waters and fail not,
Thou who the seeds of truth art sowing;
Lift up thy voice, cry and spare not,
Thou who the trump of truth art blowing:
Great is thy trust, truth to divide."

We repeat, and re-repeat emphatically, it's the household preaching that does the work; going from house to house in the name of the Lord, with a heart full of love, on fire, for the salvation of the poor and perishing. "As ye go, preach;" preach and pray, pray and preach. Visit the people, go through lanes and alleys, the most obscure and dark places, up-stairs and down-stairs, in the cellars, search out the poor, the afflicted, the degraded, the outcasts, administer to their wants, and cause the widow's heart to sing for joy.

"No matter where, if duty calls thee, go,
Amid contagion, poverty, and death;
Do, suffer, die, at duty's call divine,
Nor rest from battle till the victory's won;
Then, soldier of the cross, a crown is thine—
Thou faithful servant, hear thy glad well done."

By administering to the temporal necessities of the poor you gain their confidence, prepare the way for spiritual instruction.

How did Christ, our great Exemplar? The blessed Savior never forgot the bodies of men. He always relieved their physical as well as mental and spiritual wants. Is it so now? What avail the most pointed warnings and admonitions? Will the poor listen to spiritual instruction when destitute of the comforts of life, when famishing for bread and shivering with cold? Will a starving man hear you expiate on the sweets of religion, the importance of seeking first the kingdom of God? Minister to his wants, speak kindly to him, feed him, take off his rags, clothe him, instantly his soul is filled with gratitude and praise. His confidence in your sincerity is gained. Then pour in the oil and wine of redeeming love.

Thus the souls of the poor may be saved. Friends, will you do it? Imitate Christ and the apostles—go about doing good! Christ says: "The poor ye have with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good."

Multitudes in our large cities are perishing for lack of spiritual food, the bread of eternal life. Will you minister to them, open your heart and your purse? "Blessed is he that considereth the poor." "He that hath pity on the poor lendeth to the Lord." "Deal thy bread to the hungry, . . . bring the poor, that are cast out, to thy house. When thou seest the naked . . . cover him, and . . . hide not thyself from thine own flesh. Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily. . . . Then shalt thou call and the Lord will answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am." (Isa. 58: 6–12.)

ANCIENT AND MODERN.

WM. A. FENN.

The christian of to-day wonders at the strange amusements of antiquity, and says in his musings, Could the spectators who witnessed the contests of the ancient gladiators have been christians? He thinks not, as he sees the character of the sport, and listens to the wild shouts of enthusiasm which rang through the amphitheatres of old pagan Rome when the infuriated beast dashed upon the foolish gladiator, and overcame him. No, the christian of to-day says in his heart that was pure barbarism. But are we aware that the same spirit that made the Roman amphitheatre a success rules to-day?

While engaged in a tent-meeting recently in a flourishing village, there chanced to be one of our most modern entertainments opened up, in the way of a three-days' horse fair (a very plausible name, by the way); when all the country around was seen swarming towards the show. A curious mixture of classes characterized the mighty throng. City blacklegs, country loafers, village roughs, gentleman gamblers, fancy men (and women), with church deacons, stewards, and plenty of laymen generally, a fair representation of the clerical profession, with some of the first class ladies in town, made up the spectators of this modern theatre of barbaric amusement. What is all this gathering for? Why, to witness the horse fair, to be sure. But why not call this a horse race, and let its true character be at once discernible? Ah! that would be showing the cloven foot so plainly that few christians would feel at liberty to go.

A little chat with a fast man, leading a fast horse.

Question. What do you value that horse at, sir?

Answer. Five thousand dollars, sir.

Que. What should make that horse worth so much money? he is quite an ordinary looking animal.

Ans. O, he is fast. He can go inside of two twenty-two.

Que. Really, that is going very fast; but what is the object of all this racing?

Ans. O, it is to develop speed, sir.

Que. Yes, I see; but for what particular purpose can you apply this speed? you would not think of driving at that rate with your wife and children in, would you?

Ans. O, no; it would tear everything all to pieces on an ordinary road.

Que. You could not use such speed to draw produce to market; or apply it to any truck, express, or coach business, could you?

Ans. O no, of course not; but it is desirable to know how fast a horse can go.

Que. I suppose you could not risk a quicker speed, on an ordinary road, than about a mile in six minutes, could you?

Ans. Well, I should not want to furnish wagon at even that rate.

Que. About what would a horse of the appearance of yours be worth, that could not go a mile in less than six minutes?

Ans. I would not give one hundred and fifty dollars for him.

Que. Then the four thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars is for extra speed, that cannot be applied to any business save horse-racing, is it?

Ans. Well, that is about as it is, I guess.

Que. How much enterprise would characterize horse fairs, were it not for the excitement in betting, etc.?

Ans. Of course, I would not pay seven thousand dollars for a horse, unless I thought I could get some satisfaction out of his speed.

Que. You sometimes kill these valuable horses in the act of racing, do you not?

Ans. O yes, there was one killed at Buffalo last week, worth ten thousand; and one killed here yesterday worth seven thousand; and there is hardly a race, but what some one loses a good horse.

Now is it not plain to be seen that the real motive power of all this horse fair business can be summed up in one word—GAMBLING? Go to the popular hotels in town before the race comes off, and see the fast men buying pools for the race, and you can find the centre of interest in the whole affair. But says one, "I love to see them go." No doubt of that; and so did the pagans love to see the bull fights anciently, and they doubtless had the same spirit that prompts the horse race of to-day. Let these horse fairs, and church fairs, with their gambling appendages, be called by their right names, and the devil's traps would rust out before he would catch some people who now fall into them.

Let the word GAMBLING be hung up in large letters over the gateway to the fair grounds; and many who enter now would turn aside. Let the sign "CHURCH GAMBLING" be hung over the door of that hall, where a lot of bed-quilts (very useful articles) are to be disposed of by a system of chance (which is gambling), and many who now overlook the true character of the thing would be disgusted at once.

"ANGEL OF LIGHT" is but another name for the devil himself; and we shall have to look into his wares many times, to discover his true character. O the depth of iniquity that is carried on in these days of liberty and boundless privileges.

The institution of learning that qualifies one for a life of usefulness, fits another to the more effectually serve the devil undetected. The train that carries the missionary of the cross carries the emissary of the devil. The same ship that carries the knowledge of a Christ crucified for the race carries the devil's food for the gratification of lustful and never satisfied appetites. The same pathway of lightning that heralds the glad song of peace flickers with the unwelcome news of carnage and war. O what a confused and conflicting scenery the theatre of the world presents. May Judah's Lion roar soon, when the devil and his hosts shall be hid in everlasting death.

DISTRESS OF NATIONS.

The tidal wave of distress is heaving up in all directions, and sad news comes pouring in from various parts of our globe. While cities and villages are falling before the devouring flames, famine and pestilence are on the march also. A correspondent from Persia writes:—

"At Meshed, the capital of the province of Khorrassan, a town of 120,000 inhabitants, 80,000 perished of hunger or disease, 20,000 have fled, and the residue have been seized and carried away into slavery by the Turcoman and Afghan banditti."

We may expect to hear soon of more and greater calamities. The last days are upon us. Warning after warning is being sounded in our ears; but how few heed the alarm. The people have fallen into a deep sleep. Let us not sleep as do others."

The Discussion at Lisbon, N. H., is now (Oct. 20th) progressing with very satisfactory results to our friends. Some fifteen ministers have been present from the different denominations. The town hall is crowded with those who listen with deep interest. We are to have ten sessions of two hours each. The discussion will close Saturday, P. M., Oct. 21st. The following week we purpose to be at St. Johnsbury.

Strange things are happening in these last days that cause men to wonder and tremble. This has been a year of great calamities. The storms and fires have been truly alarming. Men may well inquire, What do these things mean? In addition to the late awful fires at Chicago and in Michigan, we have the news that another of a terrible nature has just transpired in Wisconsin.

A WAR BREEZE.

The people in Gloucester, Mass., have been much excited in relation to the movements of an English man-of-war in Massachusetts Bay, which is waiting to seize the fishing vessel E. A. Horton. Sometime in last September, this vessel was seized by British authorities, on the charge that it had violated the fishery law, and was taken to Guysborough, Nova Scotia, and retained for further examination, and consequent condemnation or acquittal. The investigation was delayed from week to week, till the crew became tired of waiting; and accordingly, one dark, stormy night, when but few would have dared to venture upon the sea, the E. A. Horton took silent leave of Guysborough, and sailed for her Gloucester home. The next day there was no small stir among the British authorities over the escape of the prisoner. It was at once decided to send a man-of-war in pursuit. This man-of-war ("Sweepstakes)" is now cruising off Cape Ann, watching for the appearance of the E. A. Horton. (Later dispatches mention her safe arrival in port.) This fact has stirred up the American authorities to send the U. S. gunboat (Leyden) to watch the movements of events; and besides the Leyden, two or three American revenue cutters are also cruising about on a close lookout for what is coming.

The cloud looks squally. Terrible results often arise from smaller beginnings. There is much excitement over the matter, and some sharp talk. It takes but little in these days to make a great quarrel like the one between France and Germany. These are perilous times.

TESTIMONY TO TRUTH.

In the Methodist Home Journal, Oct. 17th, 1871, is a phonographic report of an able sermon by John Quincy Adams, from the following text:—"Verily, verily I say unto thee, we speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness."—John 3: 11. He says:—

> In the domain of reason, a matter must be understood before it is believed. In the domain of faith, it must be believed before it can be understood. Faith is the only door through which we can pass into the temple of divine mystery, and behold what reason fails to discern. This truth is applicable to all christian doctrine; but we wish to apply it to the doctrine of sanctification.
>
> There are multitudes of God's dear children who can testify to what they experience to the power of Jesus' blood to cleanse from all sin; and I think they are forced to make the same complaint to their brethren that Jesus made to Nicodemus: "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen, and ye receive not our witness."
>
> The theme to which I invite your attention is: Objections to the doctrine and experience of sanctification as unobtainable.
>
> It will be necessary for me to state just here what we understand by the experience of sanctification. Time will not allow me to enlarge in this direction. Suffice it to say, by the experience of entire sanctification on the part of the believer, we mean that a redeemed sinner, constrained by the love of Jesus, in obedience to the precepts of the gospel and in the strength of the Holy Spirit sought and received specially for that purpose, has made an entire, unreserved consecration of himself and all that he is, and has, and hopes to be and have, unto the Lord. Literally, not in a figurative manner, merely, so far as mental and spiritual exercises are concerned—parting with everything for Jesus; and that the redeemed sinner thus found, consecrated all to the Lord, has been enabled by the power of the Holy Spirit, and on the authority and warrant of the word of God, to believe that God has received, for Jesus' sake only, the offering thus made, and that he has sealed it as his own, for himself, and sanctified or made it holy for his own service the individual and all he has given to God; and especially that this redeemed sinner is brought to realize that the blood of Jesus cleanses him from all sin, so that through faith he feels his heart is purified.
>
> This experience, in its continuity, involves the duty of keeping that consecration intact. If a man was worth a thousand dollars when he made the consecration, and the next day received a million, it all goes on the altar. If he has been imbecile, and then raised to intellectual power, all must go upon the altar. He must realize, moment by moment, Christ's blood cleansing him; not that the process was done when it was first made at the consecration, but a continual process of cleansing his heart, moment by moment, through the blood of Christ. That is what we mean briefly by the experience of sanctification.
>
> This experience is usually, I think I might say, more clear, more distinct, more definite than the exerience of pardon. It is accompanied by greater struggles and deeper evidence than was the experience of justification. To the individual who is its subject, it becomes a reality; so that a believer can say, "I speak that I do know, and testify that I have seen;" and yet there are those who bring objections against this definite and distinct experience to which multitudes testify. I shall speak only of the most common and popular of these.
>
> Says the objector: "I do not believe in this experience of sanctification." If this is a valid objection, then it is good against every doctrine of the gospel, all that one need say against any doctrine is, "I do not believe it." Any precept you should urge upon him, he would say he didn't believe it was commanded. If it is valid against this experience, it is valid against the experience of any number of christians that can testify to it. All the infidel, the self-righteous, the Pharisee has to say, is, "I do not believe in any such experience"—it is valid against the whole word of God.
>
> But let us stop for a moment. If this be your objection, what do you mean by it when you say, I do not believe in this experience which christians profess, when they say that Christ is their sanctification? Is not God able to give christians such an experience? Do you think it is beyond the power of God to work such a work in the hearts of his believing ones? He declares he is able to do exceedingly above what we ask or think. Now you are a christian, have you never asked God to keep you from all sin? Have you never asked him to give you a clean heart or to make you pure? Well, he says he is able to do "exceeding abundantly" above all you ask or think. Have you thought what a happy life you might lead if you should gain the victory over the tempter, and rest sweetly in the peace of God? And yet God is able to do exceeding above what you ask or think. If he has done everything that you can conceive of, there is an infinite margin yet.

It is a glorious fact that a new, and a rapidly increasing interest, is being awakened among the real christians in all denominations, on the subject of Bible holiness. The Spirit of God is impressing them with the necessity of entire consecration to him, if they would be ready for coming events. With this interest about holiness comes also the impression, that Christ is soon coming. This is felt by those who have not heard a sermon, nor read any book on the subject, excepting the Bible. This interest in relation to entire sanctification to the Lord, we hail as a bright omen that we are very near the coming of the King of kings, and Lord of lords.

Is the reader ready? Is your lamp trimmed and burning? Is your heart pure? Are you filled with the Spirit of God? Are you "patient toward all men?" Are you kind to all in the family, and to all your neighbors? Does the peace of God rule in your heart? Are you "dead indeed unto sin"? Can you say the "old man is crucified"? Are you truly a "new creature" in Christ Jesus? Is your heart filled with "perfect love"? Jesus is coming. Let us all be ready and longing to see him appear in his great glory to gather his waiting bride.

WRITING ON NEWSPAPERS.

It may be some of our readers are not acquainted with the law in relation to writing on newspapers, or other periodicals, sent by mail. The following is the Act of Congress:

"If any person shall enclose or conceal a letter, or other thing, or any memorandum, in writing, in a newspaper, pamphlet or magazine, or make any writing thereon, which he shall have delivered into any post office, or to any person for that purpose, in order that the same may be sent by post free of letter postage, he shall forfeit the sum of $5 for every offence—and the letter, newspaper, packages, memorandums, or other things, shall not be delivered to the person to whom it is directed, until the amount of single letter postage is paid for each article of which the package is composed."—United States Statutes, Section 316.

FROM CHICAGO.

Bro. F. Burr writes from Chicago, Oct. 16th:—"Yours of the 14th inst. is just received. In reply to your kind inquiries, I would say that many of our brethren were sufferers by the great fire, but some of them only partially so. A few lost all they had of this world's goods pretty much, but they are being cared for by the brethren here, as far as we are able to supply their wants. The Lord is good to us, and what we have we gladly divide with those who suffer. All the brethren living on the north side were burned out. Some of them had time to bury part of their household effects in the earth, and so saved them. Among these were Brn. Andrews, Foyen, and John Williams. Brn. Pell and Mitchell lost all they had. Bro. Pell has friends in Europe, who will assist him, he thinks, as soon as they receive his letter. In the mean time, the church cares for his family of six, over and above what he can earn. He has permanent work. Bro. Mitchell's family are cared for by charity entirely at present. They number seven. He expects soon to get work. These two families, together with a sick family, who are wholly dependent on charity, are all we have to look after.

Bro. Andrews has gone to Rock Island. Bro. Williams has gone to Ottawa, Canada. Bro. Foyen is with us, as happy and good as ever. Bro. M. Smith was near where the fire first started on the west side, and was burned out. He lost most of his things. He goes to Cincinnati on a short visit to-morrow. Those who leave the city, because of the fire burning them out, have a free pass to any point. Bro. H. P. Wright, our first Elder, was burned out on the Tuesday previous to this fire, and was promised his insurance money—$800, on Monday morning, but Sunday night the Insurance Company was broke. He is in the Board of Health office, as before, and has his salary, and makes out to live.

We thank you for your kind offer of clothing. We could use some if we had it sent to us, both for our own church-members and others; but we are in no pressing need. No one of the church shall suffer while we have anything left to divide. If anything is sent, we will see it applied among those who are in need. The calamity upon the city is a fearful one, and unparalleled in our history.

Bro. Billings may lose something in his banking interest, but he says that is nothing. He was thrown from his wagon to-day, and so injured that he will not probably be able to be around again for a few days. He has been very efficient, and, I think I may say, the most efficient man in the city in preserving order since the fire. He has rode over the city night and day, stationing guards and directing in all kinds of business, and a rest is needed. Now he will get it. The brethren all feel happy. We are near the end, when we may look for such things, and the sooner they are over the better. The church here are well united, and God is blessing us.

[Those who wish to send aid to the church at Chicago, can send it to Bro. Frank Burr, 230 West Randolph St.—Ed.

IS CHRIST THE FATHER?

We fully believe in the divinity of Christ, but recognize him as the divine Son of the divine Father, instead of believing that he is both his own Son and his own Father. The following testimony from his own lips is not meaningless—"I came down from heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of him that sent me." John 6: 38.

Humanity did not come down from heaven, having never been there. It will avail nothing to insist that it came from heaven by genealogy—by being traced back to Adam, who came from the hand of God—for every wicked man in the world just as really came from heaven in that sense as Christ did. Here is the sender and the sent, the latter to do the will of the former.

It cannot be insisted that his humanity was the son of his divinity, as that claim would make every human sinner a son of God in the same sense in which Christ is. He was "with God" as a distinct but divine personage, and he "was God" the Son; "and the world was made by him," as the Father's agent, "by whom he made the worlds." Humanity was not thus with the Father, and did not thus make the worlds. Nor was it humanity to whom God said, "Let us make man in our image." The great mystery—"God manifest in the flesh"—the divine Son of God miraculously compounded with humanity, thus rendering it possible for him to die for man, will never be solved in this world; but it is a fundamental truth of christianity. But the impression that God the Father was manifest in the flesh is a sentiment not taught in the Bible.

To support the theory that Christ is God the Father, we are often referred to the following text: "Philip saith unto him, Show us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." John 14: 8, 9. Could Philip, with his natural eyes, see anything but the physical form of Christ? Certainly not. In no other sense could Philip see Jesus except through his character, in which there was a manifestation of the Father so perfectly that Jesus could assert, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father"; for he proceeds to thus explain his meaning—"Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me?" Not personally, but in the same sense in which he says in the next chapter—"Abide in me, and I in you." The Father was seen in the character of Christ, for in no other sense was Christ ever seen by man only as a fleshly personality; and certainly Christ's flesh was not God the Father.

We are also informed that Isaiah calls him "The everlasting Father." This appellation is given to the very child that was "born" of the virgin; and who will say that God the Father was born of the woman? Critics render this text, "The Father of the age." The Douay version reads—"The Father of the world to come." In this sense only is he ever styled Father. God is not his own Son, nor is Christ his own Father, yet both are divine beings.

MAKING THE SOUL VISIBLE.

I was somewhat amused recently in hearing of a so-called new scientific discovery, to the effect that the immortal soul, which is invisible to the naked eye, can be seen when magnified four hundred times. Thus, from this hypothesis, the soul approximates the consistency of a shadow, when magnified four hundred times; or, in other words, merge four hundred souls into one, and it could be seen, perhaps not quite as plainly as a shadow, but so as to be recognized as a soul by those who know how souls look. Well, this entirely eclipses the theology of the heathen philosophers of ancient times, who talked so much about the "shades" of the dead, for it now appears that it takes at least four hundred souls to produce one shade. It is hard to suppress the query, Are such souls worth saving? and could fire inflict pain on such souls? I have often seen a shadow cast over a burning log-heap without any symptoms of pain. Can a soul four hundred times less than a shadow feel pain in the fire? Rather let me believe that the material man will be saved or damned. Did Christ "come in the flesh" to save such thin shadows?

Give Notice of Preaching.—People will not come to meeting unless they know there is a meeting to come to; hence, it becomes us to take much pains in circulating the notice of meetings. Much is lost by omitting to do this. A minister can preach to scores at a time much easier than to a baker's dozen; besides, as we reach the hearts of people through their ears, the more ears present, the better the opportunity for doing good. Always make a stir about the meeting beforehand. Do not keep it a secret, by whispering it to a few that you think would like to attend, but boldly tell it to everybody, to the bigoted, the haters of truth, to the man that will curse you for telling him. Do not say within yourself, I know that man will not come if I do tell him. It may be he will not, but very possibly he will speak in a derisive manner to some one else about the meeting, and that one may come and get interested.

When an appointment is sent to a country neighborhood, never fail to send several boys around, two miles each way from the schoolhouse, to notify every family, high and low. In large villages and cities, where notice is given on circulars, send out a thousand circulars for every hundred people you wish to see present, till the meeting gets under headway; for generally not over one in ten who receive the notice will attend at first.

A Consecrated Ministry.—If we would become pre-eminently a consecrated people, we must have a consecrated ministry—a sanctified, devoted ministry. A minister with a head full of good theology, and but little grace in his heart, is only half prepared to preach. Not that he has too much theology, for that is impossible, provided he has the right kind; but that he has too little grace. As "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," if the heart is fully consecrated, it will pour forth a sanctified stream through the mouth, and thus the spirit and the word will go together, augmenting spirituality in the church, as well as enlightening the intellect. But graceless theologians are apt to succeed best in winning graceless converts, and thus the church is replenished only with unconsecrated members. A consecrated ministry is the safeguard of the church. Let us grow in grace.

"THE BIBLE BANNER."

A WORD TO PREACHERS.

1. We will send the Bible Banner to any preacher or theological student for 75 cents, with choice of a book from our valuable list, or for 50 cents without a book.

2. We will send the Banner free to any preacher who devotes his whole time and energies to the gospel ministry, provided he desires it and will endeavor to secure subscribers.

3. Let all who answer to this description, whose names are not already on our list, give us their address without delay. And let all our preaching brethren who now take the Banner tell us if they would like to have it continued, and send us such communications, selections, facts, incidents, suggestions, and words of cheer as will make the paper still more excellent in its contents and more efficient in its truth-telling mission. Address, "The Bible Banner," 14 Murray Street, New York City. In behalf of our common cause,

A. A. Phelps.

PERPLEXITIES OF A PASTOR.

J. Porter.

I have now been twenty years in the pastoral charge of the little flock in Danville, P. Q., and have preached to them almost every Sabbath,—upwards of ten hundred times. It is well known that the construction of the human mind calls for what may not always be had—variety. The constant ministry of one man alone, to one people, is a ministry which must try the intellectual powers of an intelligent giant, instead of an intellectual dwarf. I have long since gone over all the ground, telling my brethren all that I know, and perhaps sometimes a little more. They are not babes now, to be sent back to be fed upon milk with a teaspoon. A number of these full grown men and women come from a distance on the Sabbath morning, and they reasonably expect a full meal of strong wholesome food; but when collected in their seats, it is almost the same people that I have preached to the last Sabbath, and for years past, and I cannot get rid of the conviction that they know as much as their teacher.

But still they come, and still we maintain our standing, with our eyes open and our head to the wind, looking for a better day to dawn, and a brighter sun to shine upon us, and no discord among ourselves. I sometimes get aground; the Bible will shut up itself against me, refusing to furnish one text from Gen. to Rev. Well, as the hour draws nigh, the fever increases. I go to the Lord, and lodge a hurried complaint against the obstinacy of his book, and I am sometimes allowed to go within a few rods of the desk, or even into it, before the strife is settled in my favor. O, the Lord is good!

I am sometimes called out to preach a funeral sermon in a strange congregation. I will then have such liberty and freedom of speech, that on my way home I feel like a new man, and after all begin to think that I am somebody. Then I ruminate upon the easy times that my preaching brethren in the States have—one Sunday in Lowell St. Chapel, Boston, and the next in N. Y., Vt., or Me.; and here I am tied up from June to January, and from one week's end to another. Well, were it not the unbounded field of truth which the Lord has spread out before us through the last twenty-eight or nine years, by pouring a flood of light upon his Scriptures, I would, as far as preaching is concerned, have gone into dry dock long ago.

Should the Lord not come by the first train in '73, we will watch for the second in '75; not forgetting at the same time the probability that our ears may be joyfully saluted by the startling sound of the whistle from a "special" much sooner. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Amen.

Danville, P. Q., Oct. 16th, 1871.

A Lady, one hundred and nine years of age, recently attended a love-feast in Niles, Mich. She arose and said: "I am glad to be with you. I am one hundred and nine years old. I love the Savior, and have now enjoyed religion one hundred years."

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

READ THIS!

We wish all the sisters who read the Crisis would put their names to this list, and with it one dollar to scatter tracts. There is a loud call for the sisters to give to the "American Advent Mission Society." Shall we heed the call now? Time is short, and if ever we do anything, it must be done now. Jesus said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Come, sisters, you remember many of you have said, you wish you could preach or do something. You have felt for a long time you wanted to do something for the truth. The Lord has opened the way; now is your chance. I know you do not want any urging; you only want a chance. Let us have your name. We want to know who is interested in this great work. There is no secret giving here. This is not to the poor, this is preaching the gospel to a soon ruined world; so do not keep your name back. As soon as you read this, get a sheet of paper and pencil, and carry it to meeting, show it to the sisters, and urge your case, and I know they will give their name and dollar; then get your money in a large bill, put it in a letter, and send it to Bro. Geo. T. Adams, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass.

Come, sisters, of every church, I want to hear from you all. If any of the brethren wish to join in this good work, they can do so, for we do not believe in woman's rights any way. May the Lord help. All for Jesus now. I will head this list. There are no Adventists here, or I should have more on my list.

RUINED.

"I am ruined. I have lost everything." Such was the exclamation of many people in Chicago who had been sufferers in the great fire of Oct. 9th, 1871. And I presume they told nearly the truth. Their only possessions were of a temporal kind. Their whole dependence was upon this world, and when their worldly goods were burned, their only support in their estimation was gone, and they fell prostrate. Strong men wept and agonized over their losses.

But it was not so with all. There were those who lost all the Lord permitted them to possess as his stewards here, but whose greatest possessions were in the bank of heaven, to insure them a home in the world to come, and their treasures were safe. These were as rich as ever, and took joyfully the spoiling of their goods, knowing that in heaven they had a more enduring substance. These were not ruined. They felt amid the devastation some as I anticipate the child of God will feel in the judgment day, victorious amid the surrounding gloom, and happy in a Father's care.

How sad must that heart feel whose only possessions are swept away by a temporal fire. How pitiable the condition of the man who puts his whole trust in earthly things. Thousands there are of sincere, earnest, honest, large-hearted men, as far as this world goes, but who are just foolish enough to rely entirely upon this world for support. Probably no city contained more such men than Chicago. Proverbial for their benevolence and vigor of enterprise, they have dealt forth their treasures with a lavish hand, only to receive in return a hundred fold of this world's goods, until wealth and prosperity in this life had become the great foundation on which were built all their hopes. And when those were swept away by the flames, the chill and gloom that came over them was terrible as death almost.

Some are rallying from the first effects of the loss, and are taking heart again in the same course of earthly hopes, only at last to see their labors come to an end forever, and they themselves lost in the great vortex of destruction at the judgment day.

How much better it is to lay up a sure foundation against the time to come, and possess a hope that reaches within the vail. The child of God is not ruined by temporal calamities. His condition may be changed in this world, and his experiences may be new to him, but the same promises are his to enjoy, and the same Father watches over him as ever, and his courage and peace are unimpaired. The lesson of calamity which the worldling takes so sadly to heart, is studied by the true christian with cheerfulness, and from the knowledge of it he derives a permanent benefit, richly enjoyed in the present, but to be reaped in its fullness in the "sweet by and by."

☞ The present population of Constantinople is said to be about one million, of whom about three hundred thousand are Christians—all the others Mohammedans, of the most bigoted character. The Moslems generally occupy the city—the old Byzantium; while the Christians occupy the larger part of Pera, and are scattered throughout other suburbs of the city. There is no law compelling such separation; but upon the well-understood principle that "birds of a feather flock together," the Moslems keep by themselves, and the Christians as far off as circumstances admit.

Bro. Owen writes:—"I am happy to write that Bro. Stevens is improving, sits up a little. His wife and son arrived here (Portsmouth) the 17th. Pray for him."

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Finding myself, as usual, left to clear up the camp-ground after our Springfield campmeeting broke up, it gave rise to many reflections. The saints being all gone, and worship all closed, it brought to mind the desolation of the earth after the saints leave it to be cleansed by the Lord for the reception of the glorified, when they return to inherit it for ever. Our meeting was a good one, the best in many respects we ever had on that ground for harmony. There were more tents, or tent-room, than ever before; but not as many people. This was a relief to us. Two other meetings in Ct. had a tendency to lessen our numbers, but not the interest.

Next to Plainville campmeeting. Here, also, was harmony, and a good meeting, with forty tents. This meeting was needed in that vicinity.

Next to Alton Bay. I found the same harmony, more tents, and more people. The meetings were spiritual and good in the tents, which always gives vitality to the whole meeting. This and the Springfield ought not to be any larger. Such very large gatherings cannot be as judicially managed as a smaller one. Part of the expense laid out in other localities will be of more advantage to the cause generally.

Next to Portland, to preach to the few who could not get to the campmeeting, together with an unusual number of strangers, made a good congregation, and a good, profitable time. Some of the seed took on new ground, we learned after the meeting was over.

Next out of the city into the country, where the people live by economy, temporally and spiritually,—live plainly, dress plainly, and save all they earn, taking the advantage of nature's lessons, which taught them that a natural crook was the strongest and cheapest. I saw a shaving-horse made from a natural crook; also a scythe snath, a wagon thill, and a crotched tree for a drag. The girls and boys pick berries; all trying to live by their own industry, instead of speculation, which is so common in these days. It is much easier to preach to and benefit such people than city spectators, who know but little about getting a living by their own economy and labor.

We had a good time in Bath and Brunswick. When going to Bath I saw an eagle's nest on a tall pine tree, over one hundred feet from the ground. Here again was a lesson from nature. On inquiring, I found this nest had been there for over thirty years, being repaired up every spring. There are sticks in it, for the frame work, as large as a broom-stick, woven in sea grass and fish net, picked up on the shore of the fishing places, until it is as large as a large cock of hay. Each of the parents have been in mourning within thirty years, one having been killed, the other would get a partner in a few days. These are of the largest size, and have been known to take lambs three weeks old, and one was known to kill a twelve-pound goose in January, and would have carried it off, but was prevented by the woman of the house. The eagle, being hungry, went to the next house, and seeing a cat in the door-yard, scooped it up for a dinner; but puss set up such caterwauling and scratching of feathers, the eagle carried her about eighty rods and dropped her. The cat fell in the snow, and went back to the house after an unpleasant ride of eighty to one hundred yards. In the summer time they live mostly by robbing fish-hawks, as follows: they hide in a tall pine tree, watching the hawk, and when he gets a fish and rises in the air, as they always do, the eagle will put for the hawk. The hawk will go up, up, crying bitterly; but it is of no use; the eagle rises the fastest. When above the hawk, he makes a dive for the hawk, which, to save his own life, drops the fish, and the eagle catches the fish before it reaches the ground, carrying it off to feed their young, and poor Mr. Hawk must catch another, or go without his dinner. How much like a sectarian the eagle acts.

One more interesting fact, noted in Scripture about the eagle stirring up her nest, is demonstrated. When the young get feathered out, the old ones stir up their nest in such a way as to throw the young ones out, which causes them to spread their wings and try to save their lives by flying, the old ones watching their efforts to fly for the first time. When the young ones are tired, the old one dives under them, taking the young ones on its back, and then soars up very high, slipping out from under them, leaving them again to try the strength of their wings, to save them from falling to the ground, and dashing themselves to pieces. They say that the third time the young eagles will fly to a tree and light. Such works of nature are worthy of notice. They show how God deals with young christians by stirring up their nest to throw them out upon their own resources, and then take them up on high, as on eagle's wings. Some know what it is to be thrown out of their nest before they are worth anything to the cause of God; others ought to be.

After writing the above facts, another was told by an old inhabitant. Years ago an old colored lady lived in that town where this eagle's nest was. She was poor and a good christian. One day she had nothing in the house for dinner. She heard a noise, and on looking up she saw this eagle after the fish-hawk as usual. When near her cottage, the hawk dropped the fish, and the eagle failed to catch it, and it fell to the ground. She got it, and made her a dinner, and thanked the Lord. Bro. Storer, who told me this fact, heard the old lady tell of it.

Next to Richmond. I found them holding on. We had a large house full Sabbath. Five towns were represented. The word was well received. At the Corners Monday evening. A still larger gathering to hear on the state of the nations, and the prophetic state of the Pope. I never witnessed a better effect. I put up at the town poor-house with Bro. Kiss. I felt so blessed. I had as lief be in the poor-house as a palace. Next day I caught a large string of fish for the paupers, and left them for my board. The truth is gaining here. The people want to hear more on prophecy.

Next to Bowdoin. A good time for a rainy evening. Thence to Lewiston. We had a large company in the new hall; the distracting elements have run themselves nearly out, while the true children's influence is on the increase.

At Poland, held four good meetings. Father Magquire's place was empty in the house of worship and the neighborhood, and Aunt Hannah's in the old homestead; but Bro. Aldrich makes it yet the pilgrim's home. Bro. Libby, Jordan and Whitman were there as shining lights, ready yet to face the storms. God has a people in West Poland, also at Mayberry Hill and Casco. Here I introduced the fishing tackle literally, and the first two hours caught twenty-five pounds of pickerel, some two feet long, and weighing four pounds. I treated the neighbors to a meal of fish before preaching to them, as in nearly every other place on this trip. I never saw a greater interest to hear on our faith, than this time out. I never had a better time in presenting the truth. I do not know whether I preached better, that caused such interest, or whether they were more hungry. There is much more interest in new places than for years. God still blesses his truth. If time should continue a few years, the world will have a theological shaking. It is beginning to work in every church in this country, more or less. They are dissatisfied with the expositions given them, when pressed to do it. Let us watch and work. God will pay us when the warfare is over.

Hiram Munger.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

When churches are once established, and become self-supporting, they have a duty to perform to others who are without the light of gospel truth. The Adventist church at Rochester, N. Y., last Sunday placed on record an example worthy of imitation elsewhere. At the conference meeting in the morning the utmost unity of sentiment prevailed. The spirit of love seemed to cement all hearts, and unite all minds. Every selfish consideration, and every worldly motive, were cast aside, and each one seemed to ask, "What can I do to advance the Master's cause?" An opportunity to show their faith by their works soon presented itself. Two or three young men, residents of Rochester, who had but recently given themselves to the work of the ministry, were present and took an active part in the meeting. They wished to give their whole time to the proclamation of the gospel, but the meagre support they received when out preaching precluded them from doing so.

One of these young men, in an earnest and impassioned speech that aroused the sympathies and thrilled the hearts of all present, told of his strong desire to preach the gospel of the kingdom, and to proclaim the second advent near in places where this great truth had not been proclaimed, and of his inability to do this on account of lack of support for himself and family. He had to labor six days in the week at a mechanical trade in order to be able to supply his family with the necessaries of life. When he had concluded, a Bro. well known and prized for his works' sake arose, and after expressing his deep sympathy for the brother who had just spoken, proposed a fund for the partial support of these young men while absent from their homes and families preaching the gospel, and said he would head a subscription to this fund with one hundred and fifty dollars. Stimulated by his noble example, others followed with pledges and cash, until the handsome sum of four hundred and fifty dollars was raised for this most laudable purpose.

We cannot do good without getting good, and the Rochester church may expect to be blessed, for they have remembered "the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." Who will imitate their example? Is it not a good one? Let us all pray that we may have the true missionary spirit. Let us bear "one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

James H. Whitmore.

Correspondence.

From M. E. Graham.

Bro. Grant:—The coming of the great and terrible day of the Lord is near at hand; and how important that all should strive to be ready. There are many who believe Jesus is coming again, but they do not realize that it is so near. If we realized these things as we should, our hearts would tremble with fear; fear of coming short of entering into that rest prepared for the saints of God. O, it is a great thing to be accounted worthy of entering into Christ's kingdom when he comes. It should be our continual aim; we cannot be too well prepared to receive him. Let us think of these things seriously, and watch, lest we enter into temptation. The tempter is slyly lurking round in these last days, seeking whom he may devour, and deprive of the privilege of entering into the kingdom. But Christ has promised to be with us even down to the end. Therefore let us take courage, and claim this precious promise for our own, and wait patiently for his coming to deliver us from the power of the enemy.

Portland, Me.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. D. Cogswell writes:—"Brethren and sisters of New York State Conference, let us look well to the wants of our dear Bro. B. P. Stevens. He is far away from home, very sick. See that his dear family at home, in South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., are provided for. You can send to him, in care of Eld. E. Owen, Portsmouth, N. H."

Bro. C. C. Marston writes:—"I should not know how to do without your excellent paper. Although denominationally devoted to Adventism at the east, yet upon the whole its work and interests are the same. This makes it valuable to Adventists living in the western States. As a family paper the Crisis is excelled by none. I have been a constant reader of it for a year, and like it better now than ever before. I shall do what I can to enlarge its list of paying subscribers. I feel a deep interest in the success of every means that has for its object the spread and dissemination of 'the present truth.' That Jesus will soon come the second time without sin unto salvation to his waiting bride, I most firmly believe. The tarrying time is nearly passed. We may expect him soon. God grant that we may be fully prepared to welcome him with gladness."

Bro. C. H. Hurd writes:—"A precious season of revival is in progress at West Parsonsfield, Me. At the close of the coming meeting yesterday (Sunday, Oct. 15th), some ten or twelve came forward for prayers, all young people, from the age of ten to twenty years; also two others, a mother and her daughter, started in the meeting some two weeks ago on the heavenly journey, and a deep conviction is resting on the minds of a goodly number more in the place. The Lord has done a great work here, and still it is going on, abounding more and more, and may it not cease, in the earnest cry of the church, until many more shall come to Jesus."

Bro. N. H. Berry writes:—"We are still trying to get ready for the great day of the Lord. I want to be holy, for it is written, 'Be ye holy, for I am holy'; and I want to be a doer of the words of the blessed Savior. I think we are living down in the toes of the image. And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, and I am glad, glory to the God of heaven."

Obituaries.

ALEXANDER. Died in Lafayette, N. J., Oct. 3d, 1871, Sr. Viola S., wife of Albert H. Alexander, and daughter of Warren and Lucretia Hucklins, of Lake Village, N. H., aged twenty-three years, ten months.

The bereaved parents and friends of Lake Village were favored with a visit from our deceased sister but a few days before her death, and heard her speak of her faith in Jesus, her love for his children, and her determination to go through to the end, believing it would not be long. Our sister is safe. Words of comfort by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 18. GEO. H. WALLACE.

PAYNE. Died in Philadelphia, Oct. 3d, Charles W., son of Stephen and Mary Ann Payne, aged fifteen years.

Charles was early taught to believe in the truth of God's word, which he did with all his heart, and was often found contending for the same. His parents and friends sustain a great loss in his death. They sorrow not as others which have no hope. Almost his last words were—"Jesus is mine, and I am his." Funeral services were attended by the writer. H. T. TAYLOR.

DEMING. Died at Dixon, Ill., Oct. 15th, Curtis Deming, formerly of Sandisfield, Mass., aged sixty-two years, eight months, and six days.

Sermon preached by Eld. Clark, of Amboy. Thus has passed away, "gone down among the dead," a kind, loving-hearted husband and father, a good neighbor, an honest man, truthful in word and deed. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for those that sleep in Jesus will come again in the morning. N. M. HENRY.

CHAPMAN. Died, in Nashua, N. H., Oct. 4th, 1871, Sr. Frances R. W., wife of Isaac Chapman, aged seventy-one years.

She has long been a lover of Jesus, and looked for his coming. Although death has slain her, she rests in hope. Discourse by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 14. J. H. DADMUN.

LUCAS. Died at Dover, N. H., Sept. 30th, 1871, of consumption, Bro. Charles E., son of William and Mary Lucas, aged twenty-four years and one month.

Our brother has fallen asleep in Jesus. He will live again. Words of comfort by the writer. Text, Job 14: 14. D. M. LEAVITT.

JOHNSON. Died in Worcester, Mass., Sept. 29th, 1871, Arthur D. Johnson, aged one year and twenty days.

Another of my loved ones has been slain by the cruel enemy, death; but I am expecting soon to meet those who have fallen asleep in Jesus, in the resurrection. H. E. F. STONE.

WENTWORTH. Fell asleep in Jesus, at Hope, Me., Oct. 13th, 1871, Bro. Lewis Wentworth, aged seventy-three years and ten months.

Funeral services attended by the writer. Text selected by the deceased,—1 Cor. 15: 51-53. A. WALKER.

NICHOLS. Died in Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 9th, 1871, of consumption, Oliver F. Nichols.

Words of consolation were spoken by J. C. EMERY.

Married.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

THE TREATY WITH GERMANY.

PARIS, Oct. 18. The final ratification by France of the treaty with Germany has been dispatched to Berlin. By the terms the six Departments to be evacuated by the Germans are declared neutral territory in a military point of view, until the stipulated payment of the indemnity is completed. During that time these departments will not be occupied by the French troops, and should France not fulfill her financial obligations, they might be reoccupied by the Germans.

AID FOR CHICAGO.

BERLIN, Oct. 18. Prince Frederick William and Princess Victoria, recognizing the cordial sympathy shown in America for the German soldiers during the late war, unite in a contribution of 500 thalers for the relief of the victims of the Chicago calamity.

PARIS, Oct. 19. The amount contributed for the relief of Chicago by Americans in Paris is 181,055 francs.

LONDON, Oct. 19. The subscriptions at the Mansion House for Chicago amounted to thirty thousand pounds up to last night. The Manchester subscription is eight thousand pounds. At a meeting at Kidderminster last night three hundred pounds were paid in and further contributions guaranteed.

SUPPRESSION OF THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY.

A special dispatch from London says it is now certain that the Gastein conference agreed upon energetic measures for the suppression of the International Society. Italy refuses to combine with the other Powers in the repressive movement, alleging as a reason that the Italian labor agitators are opposed to the International Society.

THE POPE ADVISED TO LEAVE ROME.

A special from Rome says that the Cardinals have held a meeting and advised the Pope to quit Rome, to preserve spiritual independence. The Pope almost made up his mind to depart at the time of the convocation of the Italian Parliament.

A special from Berlin says that a distinguished prelate emissary of the Pope obtained an audience with the Emperor to ascertain if it be allowable for the approaching conclave to sit outside of Rome, for instance in some French city. The emissary was referred to Bismarck, who evaded a reply. The Emperor has sent an autographic letter of sympathy to the Pope.

LONDON, Oct. 23. The Times states that ex-Emperor Napoleon declared that the recent reports from France of the Bonapartist conspiracy and the intended descent upon the coast of France entirely foundationless; the Emperor claiming that he is the only legitimate sovereign of France, advocates no violent measures for the restoration of his dynasty, but believe his partizans should urge taking the will of the French people upon the settlement of the Government by means of plebiscite.

The Liverpool subscriptions for Chicago amount to 16,000 pounds and Nottingham has contributed 1000 pounds.

The steamer Russia, Saturday, took a large consignment of clothing and blankets for the victims of the late western fires. The National Choral Society, numbering one thousand, will perform the "Messiah" at Albert Hall, for the benefit of Chicago.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 23. A Yokohama letter of September 11th, states that a typhoon Aug. 24th destroyed a lighter load of teas, sunk another and blew down coal sheds, all belonging to the Pacific Steam Ship Company. It also destroyed considerable of the road and several buildings on the water front, killing three people and wounding several others, sunk a pilot boat, blew a steamboat ashore, sunk two large junks, damaged nearly all the shipping in the harbor, and put the American gunboat Idaho in such jeopardy that it was feared she would have to be abandoned, but she finally escaped with the loss of four boats.

Chicago, Oct. 19. Six new steam fire engines arrived last night from New York, and no further apprehension is felt from fires.

THE CITY AND COUNTY DEBT.

There have been many false reports circulated in regard to the city and county debt; these reports stated the city debt at $20,400,000. The entire county debt does not exceed $5,000,000.

LAND RENT FREE.

William S. Johnson, owner of two hundred lots in Milwaukee avenue, offers them rent free three years for the purpose of erecting cheap houses for the homeless.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FIRES.

Mrs. Leroy of Dekoven street, in whose barn the fire originated, pronounces the story false that the fire occurred owing to her carrying a kerosene lamp into the stable, as she was in bed and asleep when the fire commenced.

REVIVAL OF BUSINESS IN EVERY DIRECTION.

Chicago, Oct. 20. Business is being resumed in the most rapid manner imaginable. Many permanent buildings are in the course of construction on the burnt district, and a large number of temporary structures.

The burnt district is full of workmen, and every department of business is active. The Water Works are in full operation, all parts of the city being bountifully supplied with water, and the fire Department and Fire Alarm are all perfectly organized. The utmost activity prevails in all directions.

A rumor from New York that the Chicago banks had suspended is untrue, nearly all receiving large amounts on deposit. All are paying depositors in full, and there is no run on any of them nor any diminution in the confidence of the community.

The fire-proof vault in the Tribune building was opened yesterday and the entire contents were intact.

GOVERNMENT MONEY FOR CHICAGO.—The Secretary of the National Treasury has dispatched a messenger to Chicago with seven hundred thousand or a million dollars in currency of all denominations from ten cent to five hundred dollars. This sum is to supply the place of the money destroyed by the conflagration, and will speedily find its way into the general business circulation of the distressed city.

THE WISCONSIN FIRES.—A letter from De Pere, Wis., to the Western Hampden Times, says: "I have just been up to Green Bay. The excitement is intense. The reports are not exaggerated—indeed they cannot be. The news is more terrible every moment. Reports of loss of life come in from every direction. I will simply cite one instance to show the grief that pervades families in all quarters. A lady next door has received intelligence that her daughter, husband and child have perished, also that the husband's brother and father, and another brother and his wife, are burned, making seven from one family. Forestville is burned. Out of fifty-two inhabitants only two escaped. These two saved themselves by getting in a well. Sturgeon Bay is also in ashes, with great loss of life. Scores of small settlements are burned, with a loss of from four or five upward. In one place forty bodies were found in one pile, having been overcome by the flames and smoke before they could reach the river. At another place twenty-nine bodies were found under similar circumstances. Unless a river or lake is accessible there is no escape, and they all perish."

The writer declares, from personal observation, that ground burned over a week or two ago has burned the second time, owing, probably, to the great depth of vegetable matter.

THE VERY LATEST CATASTROPHE.—To the long catalogue of fire, tempest, earthquake shocks, volcanic eruptions, tornadoes and convulsions generally, is now to be added the following—the story is told by the Times of India:

"Advices from Ihangara state that at a place about forty miles distant on the hills a thunderbolt fell on the 22d of August after a heavy downpour of rain. The ground was literally cut up in consequence, and the whole of the huts standing there as well as their inmates were swallowed up in the chasm. Such a catastrophe has never been known in Sind. Some fifty or sixty persons perished."

JEWS IN RUSSIA AND GERMANY.—Both in Russia and Germany there is a growing disposition to place the Jews on an equality with other subjects, and measures are being elaborated to remove further disqualifications, and in Germany even to break down the last barrier separating Jews from Christians. This disposition is due partly, no doubt, to the greater enlightenment of the present age, but in a great measure it is owing to the action of the Jews themselves, and finally it claims recognition as an indirect consequence of the late war, which has not only shown that Jews may be excellent soldiers and citizens in spite of their creed, but has also helped their cause by arousing strong indignation among the public at the frequent injustice to which well-deserving Jews are exposed.

CHRISTIAN REVIVAL IN SYRIA.—An extraordinary christianizing movement is reported to be in progress in Syria, although desperately opposed by the civil authorities, who have gone so far as to imprison converts and afterwards banish them from the country, under circumstances of great cruelty. It is affirmed that there are now five thousand neophytes in Damascus alone. There are reports of Syrian villages en masse voluntarily offering themselves for conversion to christianity, and among the converts are not only the poor, but many of the richest Moslems about Damascus.—Boston Journal.

PROGRESS OF MODERN IDEAS.

New York, Oct. 20. A letter from Egypt states that the Khed has granted an elective franchise to the people. He allows women to be unveiled in public, and has made other liberal innovations. Prince Heretyr is to visit the United States soon.

Augusta, Me. A severe shock of an earthquake was felt here to-day at twenty minutes before five P. M., lasting ten or twelve seconds.

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 18. Rev. Charles J. Hinsdale, for twenty-five years pastor of the Blandford Congregational church, was thrown from his carriage in that town yesterday and instantly killed.

New York, Oct. 10. The World's London correspondence of the 7th instant states that an alliance has been made between eminent peers and representatives of the workingmen, by which a formidable new political party will be formed. The platform has seven planks, providing that the workingmen shall have houses in the country; that counties, towns and villages be self-governing; that eight hours be a day's labor; that additional schools be established in the midst of the workingmen's homesteads; that the places of recreation and education be under government rule; that public markets be erected; that the organization of public services be largely extended for the public good. The seven planks are to be separately adopted by distinct bills in Parliament. Earl Littlefield, Marquis of Salisbury, Lord Lennox, Sir John Pakington, Earl Carnarvan, Marquis of Lorne, Lord Manners, Sir Stafford Northcote and Gatherne Hardy are the peers who have signed the alliance, and Disraeli and the Duke of Richmond are both in the scheme. The same correspondent says that the condition of the Queen is alarming, and she may die at any moment.

THE FOREST FIRES IN WISCONSIN.—A correspondent of the Haverhill Gazette, writing from Oshkosh, Wisconsin, 13th inst., gives the following account of the terrible conflagration that has been wasting portions of that State:

"The past three months have been the dryest ever known in this section. Any one acquainted in northern Wisconsin knows that it is one vast limitless forest of beech, maple, hickory, pine, tamarack and hemlock. Thousands and tens of thousands of acres lie between Oshkosh on the south, Marinette on the north, and Wausau and Grand Rapids on the west. For the past three weeks, in different sections of this vast area, fires have been burning—increasing with the wind—leaving destruction and death in their train. In scores of instances whole townships have been devasted, farms, farmhouses, barns, grains, cattle and stock of all kinds have been swept out of existence by the devouring element. Churches, schoolhouses, stores, villages of from 300 to 1500 inhabitants and human beings by hundreds have been burned, so that nothing remains where once was heard the busy hum of industry, the lowing of grazing herd, the sighing of lofty pines, but complete and awful destruction, and blackness of darkness. Nothing can be compared to the utter desolation to be witnessed in the path of the fire.

The village of Peshtigo, about forty miles north of Green Bay, containing about 1500 inhabitants, where was located the largest tub and pail factory in the world, owned and operated by the Peshtigo Company, with a working capital of over two millions of dollars, in ten minutes' time was completely swept away by the flames, the large factories over 500 feet long, 100 feet wide, and three stories high, the company boarding houses, where the men working for the company boarded to the number of five hundred or more, the large store of the company, containing probably a stock of $50,000, all the books and papers, the head bookkeeper, his wife, mother and two children, the stately residences of the officers of the company, four large-sized hotels, six general stores, about one hundred private residences, and three hundred human beings were thus destroyed in less time than I can write the account of this appalling and heart-rending event. The village of Menekanne suffered to the same extent, with the exception of the loss of life, which was much less.

We have just received the news of the destruction of a hamlet in Door county, with fifty-five lives, and all around us fires are continually raging. When rain will come God only knows. Nothing can stop the flames but thorough drenching rains, and that for days in succession. In Oshkosh, so far, no lives have been lost, and thanks to our effective fire department no great amount of damage has been done.

A relief committee has been organized to render assistance with provisions, money, clothing, etc., and cars are being filled and dispatched hourly to the different afflicted communities in the country north of us. A call has been made for all the surgeons and nurses that could be spared to go to points on Green Bay Shore, and in response nine doctors and twice as many nurses left on last night's train."

A NEW CHARITY. A fine mansion and eight acres of land at Alturas, Rockland county, N. Y., have been given to found a home and school for the daughters of drunken parents. Another large tract of land is to be sold to furnish funds for the institution.

☞ NOTICE.

The Springfield National Advent Committee are requested to meet at Springfield, Tuesday, Oct. 31st, at 12 o'clock M. GEO. T. ADAMS, Sec.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The annual session of the New Hampshire Advent Christian Conference will be holden at Manchester, commencing Wednesday, Nov. 15th, at seven o'clock P. M., to hold over the following Sabbath. Fare will be reduced on the railroads as follows: Concord road, two cents per mile. Call for N. H. State Conference tickets at the following offices:—Concord, Pittsfield, Suncook, Candia, New Market Junction, Greenland, Portsmouth, Lawrence, Salem, Derry, Auburn, Nashua. Northern road, fare same as Concord. Special tickets sold at the following offices:—Fisherville, North Boscawen, Franklin, Bristol, East Andover, Danbury, East Canaan, White River Junction, Bradford, Roby's Corner, Warner, Mast Yard, Hillsborough Bridge. C. and M. R. R., half fare. Purchase regular tickets to Concord. Purchase conference tickets at Concord for Manchester, and receive free return passes at the meeting, signed by J. Couch.

These annual meetings for the past few years have been the very richest seasons of christian devotion that have been enjoyed in the State. It is hoped that all who can will avail themselves of the privilege of attending this convocation of the lovers of Jesus' appearing in the old Granite State. Let every church be represented by delegates or letter. It is expected that every minister who is a member of the conference will be present or send a letter. O ye faithful in Christ, while the shadows of the judgment are gathering around us, and the incipient wail of the last day woes begin to startle the slumbering multitudes, let us rally to strengthen ourselves in christian union, and lift our united voices in warning to save our perishing friends.

The church in Manchester extends a hearty invitation to all to come, and will do all in its power for their comfort and accommodation.

J. COUCH, President.

Notice.

It is proposed, the Lord willing, to have a protracted meeting at the chapel in Freedom, N. H., to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Brn. Mark Stevens, Allen Damon, and D. F. Leavitt, are expected to be present to preach the word. We hope all of God's dear children living in the adjoining towns will be at this meeting, to unite with us in the work of saving some, if possible, from the impending judgment. CHAS. H. HURD.

A Request.

Will the clerks of the various Advent churches in Massachusetts, that are in sympathy with the Mass. A. C. Conference, please send to the undersigned, as soon as convenient, the number of members belonging to their respective churches? Also, will those who worship in chapels of their own please say so? By complying with the above request, a favor will be conferred upon the cause at large. C. E. BARNES, Salem, Mass.

Protracted Meeting.

There will be a protracted meeting held in Cabot, Vt., commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 31st, at half past six o'clock. Brethren from surrounding towns are invited to work with us and the Lord in saving the lost. Bro. Allen Damon is expected to be present. A. A. HOYT, Pastor.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of days in Litchfield, Me. (Baker school-house), commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 9th, to continue over Sunday, and longer if thought best. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and help in the work of God. Call on Orren Berry, James Hopkins, Benjamin Berry, and others.
H. B. SEVEY.
LEVI RHODES. WM. DOUGHTY.

Dedication.

The Advent Chapel, built at Springwater, N. Y., this season, will be dedicated Thursday, Oct. 26th. Sermon by Elder John Couch, of Chelsea, Mass. Services to commence at 1 o'clock P. M. We cordially invite our sister churches to represent themselves at this meeting. In behalf of the church at Springwater, WARREN J. HOBBS.

Notice.

The New Hampshire State Conference will meet Wednesday before the third Sunday in November. Particulars hereafter. JOHN COUCH.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference, for this year, will be held at Parkersburg, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing October 26th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Lord's day. All are cordially invited. Eld. Ramsay will be at the meeting, and many others. Let the churches and delegates, and all ministers who can attend, be at this meeting. ALONZO RAYMOND.

Notice.

The A. C. Conference, for the State of Ohio, will hold its annual meeting in Nevada, Wyandot Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, and continuing over the following Sunday. Eld. H. G. McCulloch and other preaching brethren from abroad are expected, together with those who belong to the conference. Let every church in the State be represented by delegates, and come prepared to build up and not to pull down. The church in Nevada send greeting to all.

W. F. JEFFERSON, Secretary.

Read! Read!! Read!!!

The following: To the Advent Churches in New Hampshire. Will some brother, in every place in New Hampshire where Advent meetings are held, send me immediately the following information:

1. The number of Adventists in their place and vicinity.
2. Whether the church has a chapel or hall of their own, or do they hire one, or are they building one in which to hold meetings.
3. The names of the officers of the church in their place.
4. If you have no regular meeting in your place, how many Adventists are there in your vicinity.

Do attend to this request as soon as you read this notice, for it will be for the interest of the cause in your place to do so. Send without delay. My P. O. address is Sandy Hill, N. Y.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary
N. H. Adv. Chris. Conf.

Protracted Meeting.

Providence permitting, a protracted meeting will commence at Steep Falls, Me., Tuesday evening, Nov. 7th, to continue as long as may seem duty. Come, dear brethren and sisters, from the surrounding country, and labor with us for the salvation of those who must soon perish in the fires of the last day, if they do not find a refuge in Christ.

A. A. ROBINSON.
C. H. SWEET.

Dedication.

The dedication of "Zion's Chapel," at Springville, Vernon Co., Wis., will take place Sunday, Nov. 26th. Eld. Joshua V. Himes will be present to preach the word. The public in that vicinity are invited, and the lovers of Jesus everywhere, also, with their means, if possible; but with their prayers especially, that God may make it a time of power in building up the saints, and saving some perishing ones.

By order of the church, P. W. HOUGH.

Dedication and Quarterly Meeting.

The Christian Chapel at Floyd, Iowa, being completed, will be dedicated Nov. 19th. Sermon by Eld. C. C. Ramsay.

Also, the second quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at the same place, commencing Nov. 16th, at seven o'clock P. M. All are cordially invited.

ALONZO RAYMOND, Secretary.

Notice.

TO THE READERS OF THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE."

In the general destruction which a righteous God has visited upon Chicago, the Cynosure has suffered with the rest. Books, mailing lists, type, press, manuscripts—every thing is lost. Nevertheless we shall, with God's help, resume publication immediately; and in again establishing our office, the assistance of all our readers is needed in the following particulars:

1. All who were in arrears, or whose subscriptions were soon to expire, can help by immediately renewing. Our sincere thanks will be due to any who will commence anew without regard to former accounts.

2. All who are able, and are moved by God's Spirit, can send donations.

3. Every subscriber is requested to cut off the printed address pasted on his last paper and send it. Clubs can send together. We want the name and P. O. address of every subscriber, and the date when his subscription expires. All but the P. O. address are on the printed slip. Please send this slip and your P. O. address at once.

4. GET NEW SUBSCRIBERS. Now is the best time for work.

Contributions and items of interest needed more than ever. If money is sent, state carefully for what purpose. Direct to "Christian Cynosure," Chicago, Ill.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

NEW TRACTS.

WHO ARE SADDUCEES? OR, TRUTH VINDICATED. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By GEO. THOMSON.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A COLPORTEUR'S NOTES, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. AG'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. LIFE AND DEATH THEOLOGY: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. IMMATERIALISM: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. DEATH AND THE DEAD, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. THE COMING JUDGMENT: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10 00 per one hundred.

"GREEN PASTURES AND STILL WATERS."

O, Father dear,
Whate'er betide, no more I'll doubt and fear,
Unconsoled;
So sweet to-day the rest I feel in thee,
So sweet the peace thou givest unto me—
Thy wayward child.

Thy way was best,
Though oft I doubted, in my wild unrest,
Thy guiding hand.
Though weary with the desert way, I see
Through paths unknown thou wert but leading me
To this fair land.

With joy complete,
Once more, with trust, I sit at thy dear feet,
To know thy will.
In thy great, loving care, all things I leave;
Thy word is sure, O Lord, I do believe
Thou wilt fulfill.

WHAT SHALL BE DONE?

H. J. MUNSON.

For a few evenings past, the people of Girard, Kansas, have been led in throngs, through very deep mud, to our village schoolhouse, by a demoniac influence, said to possess one C. Fannie Allyn, who appears among us (from whence we know not) in the form of a small, youngerly woman, of reddish curled hair, and, when unentranced, of rather light, flirtish manners. She spoke with freedom, and a degree of eloquence, on the subject of the resurrection; her discourse being after the manner of that "vain philosophy," "science, falsely so called," which denies the resurrection of the Bible; making dead men, dead horses, and all other corrruptible things, immortal; declaring that the very decaying of the dead carcasses of horses, etc., was diffused into immortalities.

Although the roads were worse than at any other time this season, the audience was unusually large, comprised of all classes from the minister and church member, down to the common infidel and skeptic: all listened with apparent profound attention. It is evident that the "strong delusion" was drank deeply by many "unwary souls." The audience was dismissed at the close of her "entranced" performance, without ceremony and opportunity. After she had made a few significant passes of the hand over the eyebrows (as bidding the departure of the spiritual entrancement), combined with a few peculiar yawnings, she entered into glib conversation, when we ventured to advance, inquire her name, and submit a few questions. At first she was not inclined to attempt satisfactory replies, saying that she had no opinions or knowledge of her own; she gave the subjects little or no thought, devoted her time principally to her own sewing, and the reading of love-stories. Not feeling quite satisfied, however, with this "turn," we imposed still further our interrogations, which drew her finally into a pertinently sarcastic defense. She pronounced us "Advent," and proclaimed her devil far better and superior to our God.

Our own feelings became still more deeply impressed with the importance and peculiarity of the times in which we live. Of course, we were marked by the bystanders as an opponent to the doctrines and influences of what is known moderuly as Spiritualism. In our rounds of business this morning, we found a general readiness manifested to confront us in the slight opposition we had dared to make to the baneful influences and ravages of what we regard Satan's last device, and to support the delusive sophistries which have been proclaimed through this C. Fannie Allyn.

Since our arrival here, over one year ago, we never have found so many ready advocates and supporters of christianity, as we now find of this devilish device. While we view these things, our heart sickens, and we sometimes feel sad; but again, we lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh. We have preached Jesus and his coming and resurrection some since we came here, but our names have been "cast out as evil." We have been "reviled and persecuted" by base, wicked, secret, and absolutely unfounded slanders, suffering in the house of what should have been our friends—the professed gospel ministry and church—with whom we have sought no quarrel, but whose animosities have been aroused by our proclaiming a free gospel, and those whom Christ makes free to be free indeed. But we are not dismayed, for the word has declared all these things would come to pass in the last days. We do not expect the masses to "endure sound doctrine," but that they will turn unto fables, and the love of many will wax cold. We look for yet greater distinctions between true christians, and more marked persecutions from an apostate church and the world to them who dare to hold steadfast unto the end the doctrine of Christ.

But what shall be done? Here we find in the nineteenth century two (to the present age) new and opposite influences and doctrines engineering their way abroad among the inhabitants of the civilized world. Spiritualism, supporting and making its unclean the common dogmatic theory of the natural immortality of man, whereby it is deceiving and drawing under its influence and to its support many unwary souls, who have claimed, and still do claim, church membership, as well as the ungodly and rank infidel. Spiritualism, bringing up the dead, as did the witch of Endor, to converse with, or prophesy and prescribe to, their living friends; while inquiry from the word of the Lord is abrogated. Adventism, on the other hand, receiving and proclaiming the cardinal doctrines of the Bible—the coming of Christ to establish his kingdom, by raising his dead saints to its inheritance, with his living ones at the time, and then, and only till then, giving them immortality; while the wicked shall then be utterly cut off and destroyed, and that without remedy. Adventism says, hold on to the old faith that was once delivered to the saints; while Spiritualism says, "We are far in advance of the old fables of the Bible, making Jesus a Savior, and his coming necessary to the resurrection, redemption, and immortal life of man; for we have discovered that everything is immortal, and no such power or Savior is required." And really, the demonstrations are so wonderful, and the delusion so enticing, that it would seem that only those well fortified by "the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever," have any assurance of escape.

But again we inquire, What shall be done? The masses of the professed christian world, instead of opposing and exposing the demon influence, are directly or indirectly supporting it. If the preachers in the popular [illegible] of the day dare in private or public to utter a warning word, they are almost sure in every discourse to support that falsehood of Satan, which forms the grand basis of the delusion; this being so, there can be no hope that anything can or will be done to open the eyes of the multitudes to the dangers to which they are exposed, and show them the sure way of escape. We respond, we think there can be something done, and that the leaven is already at work, by which those who will may see and discern the truth from the error, and that by the truths as generally held by those looking for the coming of Christ.

It appears to me that modern Spiritism and Adventism are the two great contending doctrines of the last days; and that, before the close of the present dispensation, each will have been generally proclaimed, and brought to the knowledge of the civilized world; and that those who cannot be saved by the truths of God, being prepared for his coming, will be destroyed by the work of the other, when he shall come. Those who hold the faith of the soon coming of Christ, the resurrection from the dead, and the immortal crown only to be given to the Lord's faithful, while the wicked shall be burned up root and branch; we think have a great mission to perform in these last days. We do not expect every one who assents to, or professes this faith, to prove themselves faithful and diligent; for the love of many is waxing cold, and we expect some of this professed faith will be found among the number; but those who entertain this faith as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, must see the importance of the times, and the mission that we have to fill. Spiritism is making its inroads into almost every hamlet in the land, while the gospel of the coming kingdom, to be established by a personal, real King, seems to have become understood by, or to have been taught to but comparatively few.

And now, brethren in the Lord, should this find its way into the Crisis, and so we shall be able to speak to you, we say, while we place low estimate on church partisanship and ecclesiastical arbitration, believing that the spirit is one, the hope and faith, and consequently the church should be one; the time is at hand when a more united, energetic, and self-sacrificing effort should be made to disseminate these great truths, which is the only thing that can successfully meet Satan's device in the form of modern Spiritism, and so save God's elect from its destroying power. Shall we not all arise, and with the earnest prayer of faith make vigorous effort to snatch as it were some brands from the burning?

Girard, Crawford Co., Kansas.

P. S.—We had thought to suggest that Bro. Grant consider the matter of a few weeks' sojourn and labor in southern Kansas. We could not ensure support, to any extent, if he should do so; i. e., as far as our own place is concerned; as we are poor ourselves, and comparatively alone in the faith. But we should really be glad to have some able advocate from abroad visit and labor some here. Myself and wife would be glad indeed to be scattering tracts that would enlighten the public mind on the great truths we hold dear; but at present are unable to purchase them. We lend the Crisis to some of our neighbors who will read, and contend for the faith in private or general conversation; and this is all at present. We pray that the way may open for a greater work here. H. J. M.

OUR TOUR WEST.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Sept. 24th, we preached in West Salem, Wis., three discourses to an interesting class of believers, and others, of the town and surrounding country. There is an open door for the word of life in this community, and several real friends to the cause of our coming Lord. They need a faithful minister.

Monday, the 25th, we went to Sparta, and visited Dea. T. Barker, Eld. S. W. Thurber, and several localities of that beautiful city. Found them glad indeed to see us. Bro. Thurber is doing a good work among this people, and his labors are highly appreciated. In the evening a goodly number of the brethren and sisters gathered at Bro. Barker's, to greet us and bid us God speed on our journey homeward. After prayers for the safety of us all, through the pilgrim journey, to the coming of Jesus, we parted from the brethren to take the night train for Chicago. But the Lord had such care for us as to prevent our going. The train was full, no seats to be obtained, and many were standing, to ride one hundred and seventy miles to the State Fair at Milwaukee. We returned to Bro. Barker's hospitable home, and in the course of the night my wife was taken violently ill. The car would have been a bad sick-[illegible] but in Sr. Barker's care, at her comfortable residence, it was quite endurable.

Tuesday eve we accompanied Brn. Thurber and Barker to Angelo, to a meeting, and heard Bro. Thurber preach to a full house of deeply interested hearers. This was his first visit to them. We predict a good harvest of souls in that place, if he follows up the work among them.

Wednesday A. M., we left Sparta at seven o'clock, arriving safely in Chicago at eight o'clock P. M., and called on Eld. Frank Burr, who with his family received us kindly and welcomed us to their hospitality. Bro. Burr is doing a good work in Chicago, and the gospel light on the coming and kingdom of our Lord is making good progress throughout the city. While in this city we looked after several old friends; found but one; with him we dined, and found he had left the ministry among the Methodists, and is pursuing a lucrative business. Elds. Wm. L. Himes and H. A. King met us at Bro. Burr's, and accompanied us to Buchanan, where we put up with Bro. Himes, and shared their kindness, as on our journey out. And as then, so now, Brn. J. V. Himes and D. R. Mansfield, with Sister Mansfield, were absent from home; thus we were deprived of the privilege of seeing them. We did, however, see the Western Fort, and new battery (the new and splendid printing press) which is planted at Buchanan, to send out the word of life, and do battle for the truth in the western field. May the Lord use it for his glory, in the salvation of sinners and the building up of his people.

Leaving Buchanan, we passed homeward to Montreal, P. Q., to fill our appointment there, arriving Saturday evening. We put up with Bro. John Ward, who, with his believing wife, made us welcome indeed.

Sunday, Oct. 1st, we preached two discourses to small but intelligent and deeply interested audiences. They love "the blessed hope," and are real Bereans, searching the Scriptures daily. They have no preacher, but maintain public meetings constantly on Sundays, under the watch-care of Bro. Buckingham.

After enjoying a social meeting with them Monday evening, we bade them adieu, and took the train for home, where we arrived in safety Oct. 4th, finding friends waiting to greet us, and glad to see us, after an absence in the "far West" of three and a half months, during which time I had traveled about five thousand five hundred miles, and preached the word of life to several thousands of strangers, and formed many very pleasant acquaintances with dear children of the Lord, and received much kindness from them. I do hope to meet them soon in the kingdom of God. The Lord has been very merciful in preserving us from harm, and in returning us in safety to pursue gospel work in the East. I. C. WELLCOME.

PATIENT WAITING FOR CHRIST.

D. H. SMITH.

This is a grace much needed at this time. The christian who has had his soul all enraptured with the glories of the coming kingdom, and drawn out in love to the Savior, longs for the time when he will be released from bondage, and often sings,

"How long, dear Savior, O how long
Shall this bright hour delay?
Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

But how shall he content himself while waiting for the Master's return? A man in the business of the world, who has much of it on his hands, is never impatient for time to pass away; nay, he almost covets every hour and minute as it passes, fearing he will not be able to accomplish the duties of the day. His mind is so intent upon the present duties, that he seldom looks far into the future.

Now we think the christian can learn an important lesson from this. Let him look about him, and see how much work there should be done for the Savior, and how short the time is in which to accomplish it, and he will not be impatient. Is there no dear relative, or friend, out of Christ, having claim upon his sympathy and prayers? Let him put himself in his place, and, if possible, enter into his standing, exposed to the frowns of the Savior, and if he has a soul not insensible, we think he will say from his heart, let me occupy until my Master comes, that he may say to me, "Well done, good and faithful servant, . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

TOUCHY.

GEO. THOMSON.

Once upon a time, a certain church grew lukewarm and indifferent, as churches are likely to do sometimes, and the enemy got the advantage of them, as he is very apt to do, if he gets the opportunity; for he goeth about as a roaring lion, "seeking whom he may devour." Under these circumstances, the preacher came along, and was invited to preach. Now the preacher, as a general thing, if he is a man of discernment, can detect pretty clearly the condition of things. If the members of the church are wide awake, thoroughly in earnest, and harmonious, it will be indicated in a number of ways. They will be punctual in attendance, they will look pleasant when they enter the meeting-house. Bro. B. will not distort his face with a dark frown, as he passes a certain pew, occupied by a certain brother. Sr. C. will not turn up her nose in disgust, as she passes Sister somebody-else. Bro. D. will not look dull and drowsy, stale and stupid, from the effects of a certain narcotic. Sr. E. will not come flaunting through the broad aisle with all the external insignia of worldly-mindedness, and fashion's votaries. In short, the members of the church will look just like christians. So it is not to be wondered at if the preacher on this occasion observed the state of affairs, and took in the situation at a glance. And it is quite probable that he shaped his discourse in accordance with the facts, if he was a preacher who rightly divided the word of truth. However, I was not informed what his text was, nor the nature of the discourse, except this one sentence, which was uttered by him during his remarks: "Some are evidently no better than they should be."

This would seem to be a simple, unobjectionable remark, and truthfully considered, capable of an universal application; but it created a mighty flutter in the church. Bro. D. took offense at once. He knew the preacher meant him. Somebody had been telling him, he knew, that he used tobacco. He wanted his name stricken off. He wasn't agoing to stay among a people who would'nt mind their own business. This was some of Deacon Smith's work, he knew. It was he that told the preacher, because he was complaining only last week that he, Bro. D., had expended twelve dollars per year for tobacco, and only six dollars for the gospel. He wished people would mind their own business. And Sr. E. flared up wonderfully. The preacher was just throwing clubs at her, because she wore her new hat to meeting. She knew he was; and just because she had a few innocent trinkets and flowers in it; and besides, it was'nt any grander than Miss Tippet's, who belongs over to the other church. She did wish that they would preach the gospel, and not be harping on dress. It was nobody's business if she did spend all her money on dress, as long as she did not set her heart on it; and besides, it was the men's duty to pay the preacher. She was'nt agoing to stand it any longer. She would join the other church, where she would not be continually annoyed in reference to her dress and adornings.

Bro. B. also had corns on his toes. There, now, the elder had reference to that little difficulty between myself and Bro. T. He's told the Elder all about it, I know, and of course, he's given his version of the affair, a one-sided account. Yes, the Elder staid there all night, and he has taken pains to set him against me. I can't stand it much longer; and just to think that he would refer to it in the pulpit. This is adding insult to indignity. He'll get no more of my money. Yes, of course, the Elder will make common cause with Bro. T., because I couldn't sign anything for the cause this year, in consequence of being in debt for that last piece of property I bought. I won't stand it any longer. Quite a number of others were also "touched" in tender spots, among whom was Sister C., who was compelled to spend the following day in calling upon her female friends for the purpose of stating her grievances. She knew there would be something up, when that Mrs. P. went a visiting over to Bro. T.'s, where the preacher staid all night. She had accused her of being a tattler, but she guessed there was some tattling done there that night, or the preacher would not have said what he did in the pulpit. This must have a stop put to it; if she didn't leave the church, she would; she couldn't stand it any longer. And so things fermented.

How true that "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." But we are glad to be able to record, that in this case the proper remedy was applied ere it was too late. Fortunately at the next prayer-meeting there was a large attendance, more for the purpose of culminating than of ameliorating their difficulties, however. But at a proper stage of the meeting, good old Sister I. arose, and spoke about as follows:—"Dear brethren and sisters, I have many confessions to make. I feel that I have been too cold. I want to love the Savior more. I feel that I have been unfaithful. I want to be more faithful. I am afraid I may have grieved some of my dear brethren and sisters; if so, I want you to forgive me. I am not as good as I should be." And the old mother in Israel sat down. There was silence for a moment, when a brother, full to overflowing, arose and exclaimed, "If Mother I, who was never known to speak evil of any one, who cherishes no bad habits, whose mite has ever been forthcoming, whose place in the prayer-meeting is never vacant; who is ever and everywhere regarded as a burning and shining light; if she is not as good as she should be, what am I?" And here followed a general breaking down, and self-humblings, mutual forgivings, and heart-searchings. Bro. D. said he would give up his tobacco, and thus "cleansing himself from all filthiness of the flesh," consecrate himself wholly to the Lord. Sr. E. thought she would feel better if she exchanged Madame Demorest for Peter as a leader of fashion (1 Pet. 3: 3, 4), and resolved never more to sail under false colors. Bro. B. concluded that he would sell that "additional piece of property," as he had no absolute need of it, and thus have something for the cause of God. And I understood that when the preacher came round again, and repeated his former remark, nobody was offended, but all responded most heartily—Amen.

CONFIDENCE MEN.

I. C. WELLCOME.

We promised to give some account of a "confidence man," for the benefit of travelers. What is a confidence man? He is a man who gains your confidence, and gets your money, and leaves you to find yourself deceived after he has stepped out.

While preparing to leave Chicago, on our tour west, we learned that we must wait four hours for the St. Paul train. Just then a sweet, mellow voice behind me said,

"Then you have several hours to spare?"

We turned to see who was interesting himself in our matters, and saw a finely dressed, mild, gentlemanly-looking, middle-aged man, who at once repeated his statement, adding—

"You have plenty of time to go out and see the pleasant things of the city."

We replied that we were weary and did not wish to, but that wife would gladly see all the pretty things.

"Do you go to St. Paul's?" he asked.

No, to Mankato, we replied.

"Well, it is the same road I go. I belong in St. Paul; am here on a little business, and go on the same train. My wife, daughter and aunt are with me, and I promised them a ride about the city this afternoon. My uncle, with whom they are stopping, offered us his coach. We would like to have you accompany us. I am just now going up town to get them. I have a valise with $7000 in specie, left me by my uncle, who recently died in California. I deemed it not quite safe to bring it down until we all came to take the train."

We declined the proposed ride. He then asked me to accompany him across the bridge, some six blocks, to his uncle's, a very beautiful walk, and fine scenery. I consented and started. We traveled on, and on, over a mile. I was determined to watch and pray, and not enter any lane, nor building, but keep in the open street. After starting out, he asked my name. I gave it, and asked his.

"Johnson, of St. Paul, formerly from Vermont," he said; and added, "My father sold out for $6000 thirty years ago, and came to Chicago to invest in real estate; but concluded to go to Wisconsin and settle. We did so, and we have added $4000 to our property. Are you a merchant?" he asked.

No, I am a preacher.

He then said he had just been to bury a brother, who had died in Vt., and had left his family $45,000.

Just then I heard a voice behind calling, "Johnson! Johnson!" We turned and met a fine-looking man, of about fifty years. Mr. Johnson introduced him as his "uncle, Mr. McLean, a merchant." He immediately asked me,

"Are you buying goods to-day?"

"No, I am not a trader." Mr. Johnson then told him he had come for the horse and carriage to give his family a ride, and had proposed to give us a ride also, as we were strangers in the city, and waiting the same train with himself. Mr. McLean said,

"I have just sent your family to the station in the carriage. You may tell my man to take the coach and go with you."

Mr. Johnson replied,

"Did you send that valise with the $7000 in gold to the station?"

"Yes, it will be all safe," said Mr. McLean. "I was obliged to do so, as I must go down to the wharf to ship a stock of goods at three o'clock. I am on my way now."

Mr. J. then asked, "Did Aunt settle that little bill for the goods this morning?"

"No," said Mr. McLean.

"She is very absent-minded," said Johnson. "I had $2000 in greenbacks which I did not wish to use, and passed it to Aunt, telling her to pay her bill out of it, and keep the balance for me until we arrived at the station. She ought to have paid it. I think I can pay it now, if you can change a $1000 bond. The bill due you is a little over $200, is it?"

"Yes, but I will be obliged to go to the store down town to change it, and I have not time."

Johnson replied, "I have two $3000 drafts with me, but you cannot change them any better; but I will see if I have money enough to pay it. Taking out his pocket book, and opening it, a $50 bill and several tens appear.

"Mr. Wellcome, can you lend me some money to close up this bill? I will meet you at the station and hand it back to you."

I replied, I have no money to spare.

"How many greenbacks have you with you?" asked Johnson.

None to spare, I replied.

"Can you not lend me $100, or $500 even? But perhaps you are afraid of me, being a stranger. I will secure you with this $1000 bond, until I meet you at the station. My family are there, and we go in the same train with you."

The bond was passed toward me, but I was making off a proper distance from them. "I cannot spare you a dollar. I will return to the station," I replied.

"Well," said Johnson, "I must go down town and get this bond changed, and settle this bill. As you go to the station, you will find my family. Tell them I will be there in a few moments with the coach to give them a ride. Your wife had better go with us. Please look after my valise with the specie. I feel a little uneasy about it."

"Good bye, Mr. Johnson," said I, and returned to the station as fast as possible, finding my wife much distressed lest I had been led off and robbed. But Johnson's family, the specie, or himself, did not appear. All this talk about an abundance of money, an uncle, a bill due, etc., was to get my money. Travelers, beware of such men.

VICTORIA C. WOODHULL.—Theodore Tilton has written a life of Victoria C. Woodhull, which for blasphemy, indecency and lunacy combined, has probably never been equalled. She is gravely declared to be possessed by the spirit of Demosthenes, who in bodily form appears to her, sits by her side and dictates those fearful and wonderful pronunciamentos which flow from her unconscious lips and are taken down by one of her husbands and given to the world in print. She is declared to have watched unceasingly for ten days and nights without rest or food over a sick woman till the latter was restored to health, she herself growing all the time fair and ethereal and her flesh wearing a look of transparency, thus leading her to believe that at last in this way will the mortal body be refined away and the soul only remain. She is declared to have held to her bosom in a seven hour trance the body of her dead son, till perspiration broke from his clammy skin and the child came back to life; and her veracious biographer adds that it is "her belief that the spirit of Jesus Christ brooded over the lifeless form and re-wrought the miracle of Lazarus for a sorrowing woman's sake." Her "marriage" to her second husband and her support under the same roof of her first are treated as exhibitions of moral courage, "for which she has received not so much censure on earth as I think she will receive reward in heaven." And to crown the absurdity and wickedness of this dreadful production, the author says: "Twice (as she unshakenly believes) she has seen a vision of Jesus Christ—honored thus doubly over St. Paul, who saw his Master but once, and then was overcome by the sight." Verily, since the red-handed atheists of the first French revolution elevated and worshiped a harlot in the place of the God of heaven, there has been no parallel to this deification of Victoria C. Woodhull by Theodore Tilton.—Boston Traveller.

GOD THE GIVER.

Blessed be thy name forever,
Thou of life the guide and giver;
Thou canst guard the creatures sleeping,
Heal the heart long broke with weeping,
God of stillness and of motion,
God of desert and of ocean,
Of the mountain, rock, and river—
Blessed be thy name forever.
Thou who slumberest not, nor sleepest,
Blest are they thou kindly keepest;
God of evening's parting ray,
Of midnight's gloom, and dawning day,
That rises from the azure sea
Like breathings of eternity;
God of life! that fade shall never—
Blessed be thy name forever!

NECK TWISTING IN CHURCH.—There are practices tolerated in religious congregations which christians who are jealous for the honor of their Master's house should utterly condemn. Decorum is the handmaid of devotional feeling, and for this reason the house of God should never be disturbed by the slightest approach to irreverence.

"It is a part of my religion," said a pious old lady, when asked why she went early to church—"it is part of my religion not to interrupt the religion of others." And we believe if many a country congregation made it a part of their religion not to twist their necks almost out of joint to witness the entrance of every person who passes up the aisle during service, it would be better both for their necks and their religion.

A gross abuse of religious decorum sometimes needs harsh medicine as a remedy. We give that adopted by Henry Clay Dean, who was at one time Chaplain of Congress. The anecdote is from the Pacific Methodist:

"Being worried one afternoon by this turning practice in his congregation, Mr. Dean stopped in his sermon and said:

"'Now, you listen to me, and I'll tell who the people are as each one of them comes in.

"He then went on with his discourse, until a gentleman entered, when he bawled out like an usher, 'Deacon A——, who keeps the shop over the way,' and then went on with his sermon. Presently another man passed up the aisle, and his name, residence and occupation were given. So he continued for some time. At length some one entered the door who was unknown to Mr. Dean, when he cried out, 'A little old man, with drab coat and an old white hat; don't know him—look for yourselves.' That congregation was cured."—Cent. Baptist.

Gems.

— When the arrow of a saint's prayer is put into the bow of Christ's intercession, it pierceth the very heavens.

— God's commands are not an arbitrary display of power. He prohibits nothing because he has the power to prohibit, but because the thing forbidden is destructive to our real happiness and best good.

Clouds and conflicts round us press;
Would we have one sorrow less?
All the sharpness of the cross,
All that tells the world is loss,
Death, and darkness, and the tomb,
Only whisper, "till He come."

— There is a tree in California called the Maganeta—so full of life and vital force, that it is constantly pressing off the bark from the wood as fast as it forms. O! for Maganeta Christians, that by the fulness of life within, shall crowd off the bark and excrescences of worldliness that would otherwise gather about them.

ROWLAND HILL once exclaimed: "There is a perpetual frost in the pockets of some wealthy people. As soon as they put their hands in them, they are frozen and unable to draw out their purses. Had I my way, I would hang all misers. I would hang them up by the heels, that their money might run out of their pockets, and make a famous scramble for you to pick up and put in the plate."

MINISTERS' WAGES.—Hardly truer words were ever uttered than by the editor of Scribner's Monthly, in some observations on "Shepherds and their Flocks"—for instance: "Good, manly pastors and preachers," says he, "do not want gifts; they want wages. It is not kindness to eke out insufficient salaries by donation parties and by benefactions from the richer members of the flock. It is not a merit, as they seem to regard it, for parishes or individuals to do this. It is an acknowledgment of indebtedness which they are too mean to pay in a business way. The pastor needs it, but they take to themselves the credit of benefactors, and place him in an awkward and false position. The influence of this state of things upon the world that lies outside of the sphere of a christian belief and activity is bad beyond calculation. We have had enough of the patronage of christians by a half scoffing, half tolerating world. If christians do not sufficiently recognize the legitimacy of the pastor's calling to render him fully his wages, and to assist him to maintain his manly independence before the world, they must not blame the world for looking upon him with a contempt that forbids approach and precludes influence. The world will be quite ready to take the pastor at the valuation of his friends, and the religion he preaches at the price its professors are willing to pay, in a business way, for its ministry."

DAISY'S CROSS.

"Must I, mamma?"

It was a very mournful tone in which these words were spoken, while Daisy held up before her mother's eyes a much-worn dress. The tucks had been let down one after another to meet the growing wants of their little owner. It had been badly torn at the pleasant berrying party last year, and Mrs. Strong had just spent a busy hour in repairing it again. But Daisy's eyes were brimming full of tears as she thought of wearing it still another year. Visions of her little playmates, neatly dressed in the prettiest of new prints, danced before her eyes; and she already saw the curious glances directed toward her old, worn dress, which, as she had one day overheard a thoughtless one among them say, "looked just fit for the rag-bag." How could she appear in it again!

Mrs. Strong drew her little girl toward her, and lovingly kissed the burning cheeks.

"I am sorry, darling! You should have pretty new dresses all the time if I were able to give them to you; but you know we need a great many things. The rent will soon be due, and we must have enough to eat. So try and be thankful, dear, that we have a roof over our heads, and as many nice things as we have. Our heavenly Father has given us health and strength for so long, and spared us to one another!

"Can you not bear this cross, my child, for Jesus' sake? I know it is a heavy one for young shoulders; but you must ask Him to help you."

Daisy was gazing down into her dear mother's face. She saw the old sad look stealing into her eyes, and noted the pretty brown hair, now streaked here and there with a thread of silver; while the fingers were busy with the never completed work, by means of which every comfort they had must be purchased.

Then she felt very sorry and ashamed of herself. She could do so little to help, why need she ever add a feather's weight to her mother's burden?

She wiped the tears quickly away, saying, "Forgive me mamma! I am so sorry I said a word. You will forgive me, won't you? While I have you to be thankful for, I ought not to care for anything." She busied herself about the small room, washed the tea dishes, and arranged everything neatly in its place; stopping every few minutes to kiss her mother, as if to assure herself that the wound caused by her words was healed.

Then she prepared her lessons for the next day; and, after the evening prayer was said, Daisy lay down to sleep leaving her mother still sewing by the little table. It would be three or four hours before she, too, could rest her tired hands and aching head.

When Daisy awoke, the patched dress was the first thing that greeted her eyes. She smothered the rising sigh, and kneeling down by the bed, asked the Savior to help her not to care, but to make her so gentle and sweet-tempered all day that the girls would love her in spite of her clothes; for a very loving little heart beat in Daisy's breast; and ever since she could remember she had prayed that she might have love from those around her, whatever else she might lack.

She felt very brave and strong as she bade her mother good-by and started for school. Jesus was helping her, and the light of victory over self beamed in her eyes. She kept repeating the sweet lines she had learned at the Sabbath School not long before:

"I ne'er took up my cross,
But Christ, the Savior, bore
The heaviest end and all the weight,
While pressing on before."

How wonderful it was that she did not really seem to care any longer!

One or two of the girls looked at her rather scornfully; but it seemed as if most of them were never half so good to her. The teacher praised her perfect lessons; Mamie Day brought her a big, juicy orange, which she saved, as she always did, "to share at home with mamma;" and another little girl asked her to spend the afternoon with her. So Daisy went home a very happy child, in spite of her dress.

Before many days went by, her mother was able to gladden her eyes with a new one; and, when Daisy wore it for the first time, I think the Savior was glad, too; because He saw, down underneath the pretty pink dress, a humble, thankful, and a victorious little heart, to which the cross had proved a "blessing in disguise."—Christian Herald.

NEVER ANSWERED BACK.

The words might be sharp, harsh, censorious, or even bitter, it mattered not, she threw nothing back, but met them all with the same sweet spirit of calm endurance. She was often placed in very trying circumstances, but her self-control never left her; her patient kindness remained unchanged.

When a mere child, her mother gave as it were, the care of the entire family into her tender hands, and kissed her a last farewell. Tender, delicate child that she was, and yet so strong, so firm in goodness! Her father, hasty, irritable, at times unreasonable, was most exacting in his requirements; but she met his various moods with patient, forgiving love.

Her brothers and sisters were passionate, fitful, and trying; but their misdemeanors were never visited with sharp rebuke. She never answered back to their peevish and complaining words.

I have seen sadness come over her countenance like a heavy cloud, and large teardrops roll slowly down her fair cheeks, but no temper-flashes ever disturbed the quiet beauty of her face, no violent emphasis or unlovely accents broke the melody of her sweet voice. I've seen her slowly leave the room to avoid a conflict, and once, through some misunderstanding, she received a painfully upbraiding letter, she stole away softly to her chamber, and afterward she told me "That she hastened to God to get right feelings quickly."

One day she was telling me of a particular trial with one of the wayward children, and I asked, "Well, what did you say?"

She answered, "O, nothing. I only kept still. You know it does not make things better to answer back."

"But what did you do?" I again asked.

"I just waited, as patiently as I could, until she got over it."

"Kept still." How wise, how heroic, how beautiful to keep still and bear in silence sharp, passionate words. "Just waited." How admirable the grace of patience, to wait until the furious storm of anger is over, and never increase it by the utterance of a single word.

How sweet to see little children turn silently away from contention; and how beautiful for young people to abstain from answering back. How admirable for older ones to meet with quiet dignity unmerited censure, and how magnanimous for public individuals to bear abuse without retaliating.—Congregationalist.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

ADVANTAGES OF TEMPERANCE IN EATING.

The ancient physicians of Egypt ascribed all diseases to the overloading of the stomach, and their materia medica was limited to emetics and cathartics, and abstinence from food was their chief advice. Certainly the surest method to preserve constitutional health and strength is to eat less than we are in the habit of doing.

Cheyn said that if we would keep our stomachs clean, we should find our heads clear. The lamentable prevalence of brain diseases is more attributable to the overloading of the stomach, than to the overworking of the brain. The brain is weakened by the general prostration of the whole system, and first proclaims the misuse of its powers.

The ancient philosophers, from Pythagoras, all agree that it was needful to relieve the stomach by a careful abstemiousness, when they desired to make demands upon the imagination or reason for the exercise of all their forces.

Mr. Pitt, when he intended to deliver an oration before the House of Commons, dined on cold mutton.

Newton confined himself to a slight diet while he was composing his dissertation upon colors.

Boerhave remarked that the oppression of food on the stomach almost extinguishes the active powers of the mind.

A mathematician can resolve a problem before dinner, while after a full repast his mind would be too dull and inactive either to study or demonstrate. A blind man who had learned to distinguish colors by the touch, could do it only when fasting.

Law, the founder of paper credit, and a financier of great ability, was remarkable for his great abstemiousness, and ate the smallest possible amount to support life when engaged in subjects of deep calculation.

The newspapers of the day are filled with notices of sudden deaths, attributed to heart disease, when often the verdict should be, "Died of over-eating."

Habitual over-eating produces dyspepsia, nausea, headaches, colics and many of the other ills so common to mankind. The quality of our food and its preparation, are often of as much importance as its quantity. We all eat too much grease, condiments, rich sauces, and gravies.

When our country fails to produce so great an abundance of the luxuries of life, we shall learn that one half the substances we have been accustomed to waste in solid and liquid diet, are sufficient to support life, and will support more strength of body and vigor of intellect than the plethora of eating with which their fathers "obfusticated" all their powers of mind, plagued themselves with bile, and were clothed with melancholy in the midst of happiness, ease, luxury, and security.

Sir James Eyre, physician to Queen Victoria, says perhaps we might lay it down as a rule, that the majority of men eat twice as much as is really required for the support of health and strength; but in most cases, the error is to be referred to ignorance of the laws of health, rather than to the mere pleasure of over-indulgence. It is a common mistake among all classes, that the more we eat the stronger we shall be, and nothing is more fully believed than that our vigor depends upon the quantity as well as the quality of our food.—S. O. J., in Country Gentleman.

GOOD HUMOR.—It is not great calamities that embitter existence; it is the petty vexations, the small jealousies, the little disappointments, the "minor miseries," that make the heart heavy and the temper sour. Don't let them. Anger is a pure waste of vitality. It helps nobody, and hinders everybody. It is always foolish, and always disgraceful, except in some rare cases when it is kindled by seeing wrong done to another; and even that "noble rage" seldom mends the matter. No man does his best except when he is cheerful. A light heart makes nimble hands and keeps the mind free and alert. No misfortune is so great as one that sours the temper. Till cheerfulness is lost, nothing is lost.

The company of a good-humored man is a perpetual feast. He is welcome everywhere. Eyes glisten at his approach, and difficulties vanish in his cheering presence. Franklin's indomitable good humor did as much for his country in the old Congress as Adam's fire or Jefferson's wisdom. He clothed wisdom with smiles and softened contentious minds into acquiescence.

WARM BATHS FOR CHILDREN.—A physician, in a very sensible article upon bathing, says: For the 'wind in the stomach' children are thought to have, for their tiresome crying, and for the restlessness and worrying at night with which they are afflicted, if warm baths were resorted to oftener, and the dosing of soothing syrups and worse nostrums less, it would be better for the children."

"OUT OF THE DEPTHS."

L. A. BROWN.

The night is dark about me,
I cannot see;
The waves roll heavily around,
They cover me;
Yet through the gloom I lift my hands
Up unto thee.
Canst thou not bid the sunlight shine
Upon this darkened heart of mine?
Canst thou not bid these billows cease,
And calm these troubled waves to peace?

At thy command the darkest storm
At once was stayed;
And thou didst quell their troubled fears,
"Be not afraid."
And thou didst ever hear
When any prayed.
Art thou not still our God, and changing never?
Dost thou not kindly listen earthward ever?
And why must now thy children call in vain,
And blindly grope in darkness, storm, and pain?

Never a sorrow comes to us,
But He doth know;
And through the blackest night,
He wills it so;
And all these billows rage,
That he may show
How sweet will be the peaceful, happy rest,
Prepared within those mansions blest;
And the calm, crystal seas of the celestial shore,
After earth's stormy toss, and angry billows' roar.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.—No. 2.

GEO. THOMSON.

In entering upon the discussion of this part of the subject, we remark that we believe it to be a parable, not based upon any religious theory held by the Jews at that time, but upon precedents found in the Old Testament, to which we shall presently refer. We cannot endorse the views advanced by some, that our Savior took up a false religious theory, and used it for the purpose of instructing and warning the covetous and sinful Jews. It would be a somewhat similar movement for a Bible preacher to go into a community of orthodox sinners, and preach the doctrine of going to heaven or hell at death, as a motive to repentance; he would certainly be considered as either endorsing those views, or acting hypocritically. We cannot for one moment conceive the possibility of our Savior placing himself in such a position.

In the fourteenth chapter of Isaiah we have a parable of a similar character, of which the king of Babylon is the principal subject.

"Hell [sheol] from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming: it stirreth up the dead for thee, even all the chief ones of the earth; it has raised up from their thrones all the kings of the nations. All they shall speak and say unto thee, Art thou also become as weak as we? art thou become like unto us? thy pomp is brought down to the grave, and the noise of the viols, the worm is spread under thee, and the worms cover thee."

Here this migty conqueror and oppressor, who slew many kings, and sent them to sheol, the unconscious place of the dead (Eccl. 9: 10), is now represented as being laid low by death; and these dead kings are represented as rising up en masse from their thrones in hell, to greet this great king, and taunt him for the helplessness to which they had been reduced; for death lays all alike low, and makes great kings, conquerors and captives, all equal. The design of this parable is obvious. We find a similar one concerning Egypt, in Ezek. 32: 21—"The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell [sheol] with them that help him; they are gone down, they lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword." And verse twenty-seven speaks of those conquerors going down to hell (sheol) with their weapons of war, and having their swords laid under their heads; evidently alluding to the practice of burying the weapons with the warrior. Those who would argue the literality of these cases, must also admit the absurdity of ghosts carrying war weapons to hell.

We shall now proceed to examine the parable before us, hoping to discover its true design. In order to do so, it will be necessary to go back to the commencement of the discourse, and learn who were present, together with other attending circumstances. To isolate a portion of Scripture from its connections, for the purpose of building a theory thereon, is to wrest it from its true meaning and thereby pervert its teachings. This discourse opens at the beginning of the fifteenth chapter. The audience consisted of Scribes and Pharisees, publicans and sinners. It is necessary, in order to a correct understanding of the whole subject, that we have a knowledge of those different characters.

The Pharisees were the popular sect of the Jews at that time, because most numerous and influential. They were considered the real representatives of the Jewish economy, as is evident from what the Savior says in Matt. 23: 2—"The Scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat." Let us keep this fact in view, for it will aid us much in understanding all the parables in this discourse. The Scribes were not another sect, but were Pharisees also. The following from Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible, will explain:

"He who is called a doctor of the law in Matt. 22: 35, is called a scribe, or one of the scribes, in Mark 12: 28. As the knowledge of the Jews at that time chiefly consisted in pharisaical traditions, and applying them to explain Scripture, the greater number of the doctors of the law, or scribes, were Pharisees, and we almost always find them united in the Scripture. They all valued themselves on their knowledge of the law, and on their studying and teaching it. They had the key of knowledge, and sat in Moses' chair."

And we find the Savior in Matt. 23 pronouncing five distinct woes upon the Scribes and Pharisees. The Publicans were tax gatherers, or collectors of tribute-money assessed by the Roman government, and as a class were loathed and execrated by the Jews; and if, as was frequently the case, a Jew accepted that office, he would be excommunicated. See Matt. 18: 17. Sinners were the heathen, or Gentiles, and no doubt included all who were without the pale of the Jewish church. See Gal. 2: 11-16. We are not ignorant of the dis-esteem held by the Jews towards the heathen, or Gentile sinners. We find it evidenced on every occasion when they come in contact under the Savior's teaching.

Now we have obtained a knowledge of the characters composing the Savior's audience on this occasion, and their relative position toward each other. There are really but two classes—the Jews and the Gentiles—the popular church, and those considered by them outside of the favor of God. "And the Pharisees and Scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them." Chap. 15: 2. Here we have the groundwork, or text, if you please, of the Savior's whole discourse on this occasion.

From this standpoint we can readily discover the design of all the parables in the connection.

1. The hundred sheep, the lost one found again,—the sinners, or Gentiles, restored to God's favor. We have no objection to giving this a personal application, but we insist that it was designed primarily to apply to the Gentiles as a class.

1. The lost piece of silver has the same application.

3. The prodigal son. Most commentators, I believe, agree in applying this parable primarily to the return of the Gentiles to the favor of God; and this parable is more forcible on this point than the preceding ones. A close observer cannot fail to discover the rising inflection, if I may so call it, or increasing intensity of illustration exhibited in each succeeding parable, until the last, where the climax is reached.

4. The unjust steward. Here is a parable which has puzzled the most learned of our commentators, and the wisest of the doctors of divinity; and simply because they have severed it from its connections, and attempted to explain it as an isolated parable. In the three former ones Jesus had illustrated one great truth,—the return of the Gentiles to God's favor. In this he illustrates another great truth, in the same connection; namely, the cutting off of the Jews from the divine favor (chap. 16: 2)—"For thou mayest no longer be steward." See Rom. 11: 20—"Well, because of unbelief they were broken off." And so the Savior would teach them in the parable that it would be wise policy in them to conciliate rather than to murmur against the then "mammon of unrighteousness," the Gentiles, who were destined to become stewards in their stead, and whose "habitation" or stewardship was not to be a temporary one, but "everlasting." ver. 9. Compare what the Savior says in Mark 2: 22, about "putting new wine into new bottles." The Savior did not propose to engraft the new covenant religion on to the old covenant carcass. And what the Savior advised in this parable, was afterward carried out in the case of Paul and many other Jews, who were received into the "everlasting habitations," or the new covenant of everlasting righteousness. After charging them with unfaithfulness to their trust, as stewards of God, he reminds them that it is impossible for them still to remain in the service of God, while they are practising unrighteousness. "No servant can serve two masters. . . . Ye cannot serve God and mammon." That all this was applied to the Pharisees is evident from the fact that they received it as such, and derided him therefor. ver. 14.

Now mark what follows (v. 15)—"And he said unto them, Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts, for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." They were highly esteemed among men; they were popular; and in addition to the popular esteem, they had an abundance of self-esteem; they considered themselves thoroughly orthodox, and did not suppose that their status, religiously, should ever be changed. But the whole drift of the Savior's discourse bore directly on that point, namely, the reversing of the condition, religiously, of the two classes that were represented in his audience. See Rom. 9: 25—"I will call them my people which were not my people. And right here the Savior drops all figure and parabolic form of speech for a moment, for the purpose of informing the Jews that their economy was limited, and that the limitation had expired (v. 16)—"The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man [not the Jews only] presseth into [or towards] it." And yet he assures them that the law shall not fail, although he has intimated its abrogation. This is explained by Paul in Rom. 10: 4—"Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Christ having fulfilled the claims of the law, now stands in the place of the law.

The Savior's remark concerning divorce was contrary in the eighteenth verse the Jews well understood. They were charged with committing adultery when they forsook God and his law, and embraced other religious systems, while that law was in force, or alive. And although the Savior does not state the converse of the proposition, the Jews evidently understood it, as Paul did afterward. Rom. 7: 1-4—

"Know ye not, brethren, for I speak to them that know the law, how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth; for the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So then, if while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress; but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law, so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man. Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God."

Thus far we have seen the discourse to be an unbroken chain, and the parables used in illustration have revealed a harmony in design, which is indeed remarkable. With the light thus received, we are prepared to enter upon the investigation of the remaining parable—the rich man and Lazarus.

The first thing that claims our attention is the fact, that the two individuals are presented to us in condition, not in character.* Riches and poverty represent condition, but do not represent character. Good or bad character may stand identified with riches. Good or bad character may stand identified with poverty. This is a self-evident fact, and should need no argument to prove it. Vice lurks in hut or marble hall, and virtue with the high and lowly may be found. If this had been designed to teach what is popularly claimed for it, it would have commenced with—There was a certain wicked man, and there was a certain good man. But the fact that they are presented in condition, and not in character, proves the popular interpretation to be erroneous, and affords a key to the true interpretation; hence the "rich man" represents the Jews, who were indeed "rich" in the favor of God, in that they had been God's peculiar people, the depositaries of his grace, of the divine wisdom and laws. Through them, and in their behalf, God had displayed his power, and manifested all his attributes; they were the exclusive possessors of genuine history. Through their prophets and seers alone were revelations made of the purposes and plans of Deity concerning man; they were the only medium through which the heathen might obtain the favor of God. And so the Savior said to the woman of Samaria—"Salvation is of the Jews." Truly the term "rich" was an appropriate illustration of their condition religiously, and their priesthood literally clothed themselves in "purple and fine linen." And in the same proportion reversely were the Gentiles "poor" religiously, and were even "beggars." There was no provision made for them outside of the Jewish church; they were glad to receive the "crumbs" of divine favor which fell from "the rich man's table," for they had no table of their own. The dogs licking the beggar's sores, we consider as merely thrown in as a coloring, to intensify the poverty and distress of the Gentiles religiously.

* A similarity in the case of the prodigal son.

THE COMING OF JESUS.

F. W. THOMAS.

"I will come again."—John 14: 3.

Jesus is coming. This is certain. He never deceived his disciples when upon earth. He told them plainly that it was necessary for him to go away. He could not remain with them always. It behooved him to suffer and to enter into his glory, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled. But, said he, "I will come again." Blessed words. Comforting hope. He will not stay away for ever. No, he is coming again. The promise is sure. It cannot fail. The time of his absence may seem long, but it will be over by-and-by. "Yet a little while, and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry." "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly." Jesus is coming; then all men will be judged. The last great judgment has not yet occurred. Now is the day of probation. Salvation is offered freely to all who will accept it; but then the hour of mercy will be past. All nations will be summoned to give an account of their conduct before the judgment seat of Christ. Many do not believe it; nevertheless, it is so. God "hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." Solemn thought for the sinner.

Jesus is coming. Then the human family will be separated. All classes mingle together now. Saints and sinners all live in the same house, and attend the same church. But then the dividing line will be drawn. Parents and children, brothers and sisters, wives and husbands, ministers and people, friends and neighbors, will part to meet no more. On the Rock of ages, the inrolling tide of humanity will be separated and flow to the right and the left. On which side shall we be found? Shall we be borne upon that stream which lands safely in the city of God? or shall we be carried down the gulf-stream of despair that empties into the whirlpool of perdition? If we are in the family of God, it will be all right. Jesus is coming. Then he will save his people. They are saved now by faith, but this is not eternal salvation. They are subject to sorrow, pain, and affliction; but then they shall be gathered from every land and completely delivered from all the ills, burdens and dangers that attend this mortal state. When He appears the second time, it will be without sin unto salvation, to them who look for him. Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem, and we shall be forever saved.

Jesus is coming. Then he will raise the dead. Earth's history has been a long, dark night of weeping. Death has been filling homes with sorrow, and hearts with grief for nearly six thousand years. Who has not lost a friend? The air is full of farewells to the dying, and weepings for the dead. The heart of Rachel, for her children crying, will not be comforted. Thank God, this shall not always be. The morn will break in glory by-and-by. Our loved ones will come forth, clad in immortal beauty. Jesus is coming. Then earth will smile again. Now it groans beneath the curse. Thorns and thistles infect the soil. It is marred and bruised with earthquakes, volcanoes and hurricanes; but then the great Peace-maker will lift his voice and say Peace, be still, and the earth will be quiet. What fair and beautiful landscapes will greet the eye when the "wilderness shall blossom as the rose, and streams break out in the desert." The city of God will descend, and all things be made new.

THREE DAYS AND THREE NIGHTS. Matt. 11: 40.

J. H. COOK.

"The third day he shall rise again."—Matt. 20: 19.

Many have stumbled and been perplexed by the "three days and three nights." But a few facts and texts of "the law and the testimony," may make the matter plain to the believing and obedient.

1. The child was to be circumcised the eighth day, when eight days old. The birth day was counted one, and so on each successive day, till "the eighth," on which, at any convenient hour of that day, he might be circumcised. Luke 1: 59; 2: 21. John's circumcision was on the eighth day; but Jesus' "when eight days were accomplished." Thus the law. Gen. 17: 12; Lev. 12: 3.

2. "They pitched . . other seven days; and so it was that on the seventh day the battle was joined." 1 Kings 20: 29. Each day was counted one, including the first and the seventh—only five intervened.

3. "Go gather the Jews . . . fast ye for me; and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day." Esther 4: 16. Then, it is written, "Now it came to pass, on the third day, that Esther put on royal apparel" and approached the king. Esther 5: 1.

Many other examples are ready, if needed. But we all count the day of date to any document. The day a note is due is also one in the computation. Interest is never computed from the day after its date to the day before it is due.

Thus the day of the crucifixion was one day, by Bible record; and universal usage, by the law of the gospel; and the day of his resurrection was "the third day." Amen. The first day of every date is embraced, and also the last, in all computations, whether it be three days, seven days, eight days, or any other number of days.

4. The resurrection of Jesus is placed on "the third day" over ten times; quite enough for faith.

5. The Greeks had "nuthemeron" (night-day) to denote a day. Three times this term make "three days and three nights"; but they do not alter the Bible and common sense usage of counting the day of date one—the first or full day; nor do such terms alter "the third day" into a fourth, to secure three times twenty-four full hours to make out a needless point and confuse a plain case. No, no, not at all. The language of the Bible is the language of common life; and no one should array one text of seeming variation against both the Old and New Testament usage, as to the three days, seven days, eight days, and the like; for the record of the facts as to circumcision, resurrection, fasting and warring, make it certain that through all time, from Moses to Messiah, the first and last days were each counted as one, of whatever series.

But to crown the whole, we have the record of the fact confirming the prophecy, that Jesus "should rise [did rise] again the third day." Hence, no one, not acquainted with the laws of language, Bible usage, and the positive facts of the case, should venture to create a confusion between these texts where there is none; where there should be no show of one, save in a misapprehension of the subject, which involves doubt or discredit as to the whole truth of Christ.

Let us treat "the word" with reverence. take God's statements as harmonious, even against all counter appearances, and so cut off all occasion from those who desire to cavil against revealed truth. Three days and the third day, eight days and the eighth day, decide and demonstrate my point, that the first and third, the first and last, are embraced in the computation. Hence, Jesus did rise "the third day, according to the Scriptures."

TRUST IN THE LORD.

THERESA B. WEAVER.

How blessed it is to trust in Him who has all power in heaven or in earth, and can do for us more and better than we can ever ask or think. And I am glad too that I ever learned to trust in him. Perhaps you may think strange at my saying "learned to trust in God;" but it is even so. Fifteen years ago, I had heard people tell about trusting in the Lord, but I never knew what it was to really trust in the Lord until a few years since. I have been looking to the Lord for help and strength, and asked him to provide for me for years; but to really trust every thing, my all in the Lord, I cannot say that I have, only for the past five years. I can truly say, that during that time I have trusted in the Lord with all my heart, and have been to the Lord for every good thing that I have felt that I truly needed.

I think I know something too about trusting in the Lord for daily bread, and for all that I have had. Jesus taught his disciples to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread"; not to-morrow, or next week, but "this day"; and I am glad it was ever recorded; for how blessed it is, when so weighed down with cares and anxieties of different kinds, to carry it all to Jesus, and leave it there. I can say that, although many times it is dark to all outward sight, yet it is so blessed to trust in the Lord. When the blessing comes, we can rejoice with joy unspeakable.

I am glad Jesus has taught us to come to him for all things. I can truly say, and say it from the heart:—

"I am trusting, Lord, in thee;
Dear Lamb of Calvary."

Let us trust him more and more. Let us nestle close to his dear side, so close we can feel his dear loving arms around and underneath us. We know that we are wholly the Lord's. I am sure that if God's word is true, we must trust our all upon the Lord; lay our all upon the altar, and leave it there, and not take it back. No, never. We must be willing to trust God in the dark. How often have I, in the long years of my life of suffering and privation, toil and care, felt as if I could not go another step further; for, look which way I would, all seemed dark and dreary. Still I heard a sweet voice whispering, be still and trust, and all will be well. I have trusted, and in due time the blessing desired was gained, and I was encouraged to trust more, to trust him still. Now I know that I trust in God for all, for every thing that I have; and if I ask for what I ought not to have, and Father withholds it, I feel just as well as I should if he had given me the things I desired. I will know no will but the will of God. "Thy will be done." I can truly say, and feel it when I say it:

"My all to Christ I've given,
My talents, time and voice;
Myself, my reputation,
The lone way is my choice.
O Jesus, Jesus, Jesus,
My all-sufficient friend;
Come fold me to thy bosom,
E'en to my journey's end."

And then I can say also:

"The cross for Christ I'll cherish,
Its crucifixion bear:
All hail! reproach or sorrow,
If Jesus leads me there."

Blessed be the name of the Lord. I know whereof I affirm. I am not my own, but purchased by Jesus' precious blood. I am his to do, to bear, or suffer. Whatever he says do, I will do. Lord, help me in all things to be faithful. God bless each dear one in Jesus, and help us to trust him in the storm as in the calm, is my prayer.

North Dana, Mass.

A WORD ON CHEERFULNESS.

D. P. NEWTON.

"If self must be denied,
And sin no more caressed,
They rather choose the way that's wide,
And strive to think it best."

Be cheerful? Certainly; who questions it? Who is cheerful? the sinner in his sins? novel writers, publishers, readers, and puffers? Was Ahab cheerful, and his wife Jezebel? the bloody Manasseh? Baalam, the false prophet? Simon Magus, the sorcerer? Ananias, and Sapphira, who kept back part of the price? Alexander, the coppersmith? Is Satan cheerful? Friend, you talk about cheerfulness; what do you mean by it? serving the Lord? or Satan? Who is cheerful, and who has a right to cheerfulness? God's true servants, or Satan's? Cheerfulness is a christian grace, the fruit of the Holy Spirit, and is as far from levity, lightness of speech, foolish talking and jesting, as light is from darkness; as heaven is from hell. A man that has God in his soul, fire pentecostal, fire on fire, for doing good in imitation of his Lord and Master, does not trouble himself about being cheerful, or how he shall be amused. Nor does he go in for games, chess, checkers, nine-pins, billiards, dominoes, bagatelle, back-gammon, charades, conundrums, or the giddy dance, in the parlor or out of it.

These are Satan's implements to kill time and murder the soul. Nor does he go in for "tittle tattle," senseless gabble, and the fool's laughter. Furthermore, he does not encourage children to engage in romping, fun and frolic, vulgar and boisterous merriment, buffoonery, or monkeyisms. He has no idea of serving the Lord a little, and the old serpent, the devil, a good deal. Christ is his portion, his life, his heaven, his all in all, for time and eternity.

"Jesus—the name that calms our fears,
That bids our sorrows cease;
'Tis music to our ravished ears—
'Tis life, and health, and peace."

All the pleasure that is found in social parties or games of chance, for mere amusement, will prove in the end to have been too dearly purchased. Such pleasure-seeking on the part of christians distracts their attention from worthy objects, renders them barren of religious enjoyment, and destroys their christian influence with the impenitent. It is equivalent to acknowledging that there is not enough in the religion of the Bible to employ and satisfy the mind. This is an alarming inference, but there is no escape from it.

The religion of the Bible rejoices the soul, fills it with unspeakable delight. The word of God is sweeter to the taste than honey or the honey-comb. Those who most fully appreciate the magnitude of the duties of life—the work of living for eternity—will have the least concern about pleasure of any kind.

We kindly and respectfully say to that DD. in Brooklyn, who makes funny speeches at the weddings—Dear sir, when you and your family are seated around the table spread with fox and geese, chess, or checkers, and other games of chance (stepping-stones to the gambling-table, which you enjoin parents to introduce), whiling away precious, golden seasons, accompanied with lightness of speech and frivolity at your tongue's end; do you ever picture to yourself how Jesus would appear thus at the head of a table, and the twelve apostles around him?
